Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Braveheart"—Pro. Dist. Corp. Forum, Los Angeles

Examiner: "With enthusiastic applause all through the picture and with frank and unmistakable tears at the dramatic conclusion, 'Braveheart' made its world premiere at The Forum. The story has the same human elements which made the play so popular."

Times: "'Braveheart' is the most delightful entertainment in the world—full of thrills, beauty, romance and adventure. Alan Hale is to be congratulated on the strength, smoothness and vividness of its direction. Rod La Rocque gives a most ingratiating performance, full of fire and charm. Pictures like 'Braveheart' are going to be of inestimable value some day because of the Indian lore which they contain."

Record: "'Braveheart' is an excellent film! Rod La Rocque in the title role—bronze of skin and feathered of dress—is intensely gripping."

Herald: "Beaming with love, thrills and pathos, 'Braveheart' is different from average run of photoplays. Picture is full of action and has very clever love story. La Rocque gives one of best performances of his career."

Express: "Unlike many of De-Mille's productions, 'Braveheart' does not make its appeal in pageantry—rather in fundamental simplicity does it find its power. Love theme is a delightful forest idyl. Rod La Rocque is a splendid idealization of the Indian—not the stoic of pioneer days but the bronzed hero of modern romance."

"Soul Mates"—M-G-M., Capitol, N. Y.

Sun: "'Soul Mates' is capably done, and there are handsome settings, clothes, and actors, as well as a generous portion of what Elinor Glyn calls 'it.' It is better directed and acted than the usual program picture."

Graphic: "'Soul Mates' is an entertaining and amusing romance. It owes much of its success to the very good acting of Aileen Pringle and Edmund Lowe. Mr. Lowe presents just the right combination of ardent lover and determined caveman with a plentiful sense of humor. Miss Pringle can always be counted on to give an intelligent characterization, no matter what the role."

Telegraph: "'Soul Mates' is in Mrs. Glyn's lighter vein, and will be thought good entertainment by audiences at the Capitol and elsewhere for it combines those elements she knows well how to present in easily assimilated form—the aristocratic, well bred couple moving in an atmosphere of riches and refinement with flashes of daring in their impulses and actions when under the spell of amorous attraction."

WILL BE MAJOR EQUIPPED

Major "Spots" have years of service built in. They have 26 features. Over abuse is allowed for. Their up-keep is consequently less.

The Major Stage Lighting Line is one of completeness. "Everything Electrical For The Theatre."

Major Floodlights give the most efficient and economical interior or exterior floodlighting service obtainable. The most light at the least cost is the Major way. A special bulletin tells all about them.

No other lighting equipment would satisfy the demands of this experienced group of showmen in this, their finest and most up-to-date Moving Picture Palace.

Here dependable lighting was demanded. The most light available from a certain number of units was required. Up-keep costs were considered. And MAJOR Theatre Lighting Equipment was unanimously selected.

Wherever comparative tests are made, Major Equipment is always chosen for no chance can be taken on unproven and doubtful equipment in the modern theatre. And it is for just this kind of house Major Equipment is built. Each piece is of standardized construction—extra sturdy throughout. Each part is designed and built to give "the most efficient light at the least cost." As in the case with Major Spotlights—for example 26 Major features, many exclusive, govern its design—all of Major Equipment has exclusive points of superiority. You can not find them elsewhere.

Major Bulletins are yours for the asking.

the Last American Frontier!
the Ultimate in Great Thrillers!

A THRILLING, SPECTACULAR picture that every red-blooded American will want to see. The great hero scout and plainsman, General George Custer, lives again with his gallant comrades, the stirring battle scenes of the fight at The Little Big Horn, where Chief John Gall and his treacherous medicine man, Sitting Bull, surprised and massacred heroic Custer and his little band.

PRESIDENT GRANT, GENERAL Sherman, Red Cloud and Sitting Bull appear in thrilling scenes, as well as various tribes of Indians, several troops of cavalry and thousands of people. A beautiful love story is interwoven in this pulsing, stirring American epic. For every American theatre!

EXHIBITORS

Universal tested it at the box office and now

READ WHY THIS GREAT PICTURE IS BEING RE-RELEASED!

Hundreds of exhibitors repeatedly ask Universal to re-release "Outside the Law." In answer to an unprecedented demand Universal finally decides to re-release it.

A hard-boiled Universalite asks, "How about its box office power today?" And so Universal answers its own question by putting the picture to the hardest, the most exhaustive, the most conclusive test possible. Just to prove that the picture is all that any exhibitor could ask for—to prove that it is more than most exhibitors expect. Read what happened:

At the Cameo Theatre, in Pittsburgh, one of the toughest show towns in the country, without advance paper or advertising or exploitation, without special presentation or accompanying features, in the worst weather of the Winter (cold, wind, snow, sleet, rain) this picture HAS JUST BROKEN EVERY HOUSE RECORD FOR ATTENDANCE AND RECEIPTS—EXCEPT THOSE PREVIOUSLY ESTABLISHED BY "THE PHANTOM OF THE OPERA."

That's why one of the greatest box office successes the industry has ever produced is now ready to be re-released—now ready to clean-up again for every exhibitor everywhere.

EVERYTHING NEW—Prints—Paper Accessories—Press Books!

Everything is new on this picture—all the way from new prints to new accessories of all kinds. A line-up of powerful box office aids unsurpassed for color, action and every element of box office appeal.

Remember what this picture did in Pittsburgh, one of the most difficult show towns in the whole country, under conditions that were positively cruel—and yet "Outside the Law" came through with the second finest engagement that that theatre has ever had. And that without the new prints, new accessories, new everything that will be at your disposal when you play it!

It is the opportunity of a life-time for an extra clean-up; another tribute to Universal showmanship. Now booking at your Universal Exchange!

"THREE FACES EAST triumph for Jetta Goudal"

Los Angeles Examiner

HERE is a three-fold triumph—a box-office triumph, an artistic triumph and a triumph for Jetta Goudal, Cecil B. DeMille's exotic star.

Read the reviews and be convinced.

Book the picture—and turn this conviction into dollars at the box office!

"Should prove a winning box office card for any theatre." M. P. News

"Not for many years has there been a picture in which suspense is so uniformly maintained."

Harrison's Reports

"Jetta Goudal does some of the best work of her entire career."

Los Angeles Herald

"Holds the interest of the audience from the first foot of celluloid until the grand climax. A success? Well, one should say so!" Los Angeles Daily News

"The direction of Rupert Julian is of exceptionally good quality. Indeed, in many ways, he has done a more effective piece of work in this than in 'The Phantom of the Opera.' * * * The inscrutable appeal of Jetta Goudal which first brought her to the fore in 'The Bright Shawl' is used to considerable advantage."

You expected "THE SEA BEAST" to be a BIG picture; something unusual. You expected from JOHN BARRYMORE perfect acting and tremendous audience appeal.
BUT — Its enthusiastic reception at its opening on Broadway proves it BIGGER than big; appealing it almost without precedent; the HIT of HITS!

January 15th JOHN BARRYMORE in "THE SEA BEAST" smashed in on Broadway at the Warner theatre. And what a smash! A welcome back from Barrymore fans after the star's two year absence! A cheering theatreful of screen critics, thrilling to its storm scenes and the whale hunt, tender at the most powerful love story ever filmed, and stamping it by their enthusiasm the HIT of HITS of the season.

John Barrymore

"THE SEA BEAST" is big enough to change the Warner theatre from a continuous run to two-a-day. It's big enough to sell out at every performance at two dollar top and set a new record for advance sales. And that means big enough to take its place among the screen classics of all time and to be the biggest money maker available to exhibitors this season.

in "The Sea Beast"

John Barrymore's only stage or screen appearance this season is a performance that won unstinted praise from press and public. It is a new type of role;
a virile, forceful
characterization, that will live forever in screen history.

What the New York Critics Said:

"A tremendous victory for Warner Bros. It will doubtless crowd the house for weeks to come. Barrymore presents one of the most virile and powerful characters ever seen on the screen."

—Morning Telegraph.

"The final embrace of the lovers brought rousing applause such as is rarely evoked from an audience."

—Evening World.

"You may spend all the praises at your command and still feel that you haven't done the piece more than half justice."

—Daily News.

"One of the finest seascapes on record. You can't afford to miss seeing John Barrymore."

—Evening Telegram.

"Dolores Costello is one of the finest actresses of the screen. She has youth, beauty, individuality."

—New York American.

"A fine picture with drawing power, through itself and by virtue of the magic of the Barrymore name, as well as his performance. The picture without Barrymore would have stood up — with him it's that much stronger."

A PICTURE BIG THEATRES ARE PROUD TO PLAY!

A First National Picture

If I were an exhibitor I would put one item at the head of the slate this year for thoughtful business consideration—and that is the matter of short subjects. It's a business matter, plain and simple. . . . What do you, an exhibitor, intend to do about short subjects in 1926?

WM. A. JOHNSTON
in Motion Picture News.

Well, what's the answer? What do you intend to do?

To offer Short Features to your patrons as so much added entertainment "thrown in"—

Or to sell them to your patrons the same as you do the longer features—and make added profit out of them?

If you're going after added profit, of course you'll have to book GOOD Short Features to begin with—and then exploit them.

Apparently the answer to Mr. Johnston's question is that most showmen are going to do more about—and with—Short Features this year than ever before.

At any rate, right now there are one hundred exhibitors every week joining the thousands who are already showing Educational Pictures—the best Short Features that any exhibitor can get for entertainment and box-office value.

The Greatest Line-Up The Industry Ever Saw!

Motion Picture News

Volume XXXIII

ALBANY, N. Y., AND NEW YORK CITY, January 30, 1926

No. 5

The Public Decides

PLANS are moving along in the highways and byways of New York, and in another six months the present war map of the industry will have settled down into pretty definite lines.

Maybe it will take longer, maybe less time. One strategist hinted at four months. But, at any rate, we shall see in due time the present imaginary or indistinct lines in solid black.

And thus will be set another era in this fast plunging business. It will last for its due and appointed time—and then, of course, we'll get another era.

What will this forthcoming era be?

Well, there's but one, though a general, answer to that—general, but highly definite and important.

The era will be the result of what the public wants, just as every past era in the business has been determined and every future era will be determined.

What the public wants!

The kind of theatres we shall have and the kind of entertainment they will give will be decided by what the public wants and will pay for. And the men who will own the theatres and supply the entertainment will be the men with the courage and vision to see and foresee what the public wants and will pay for.

In the meantime a lot of slush will be printed—unconsciously or deliberately misinformative. We'll talk about plots, schemes, personalities, mergers, trusts, etc. We'll view the situation from every angle but the true one.

We'll talk about trade moves and trade objectives and forget all about the thing upon which the whole business rests and that which alone determines its big moves—and that is the public.

We who are vitally concerned will look at it all from our own business standpoint—from where the shoe pinches. If we're hurt we will yell out good and loud, whether or not we are in the right line of march and whether or not our own equipment is right, and in order. That of course, is natural, but it isn't going to change the march of events one bit.

The best theatres—best located, built and run, will win out. And many will line up in chains. Of course, that can't be prevented and it has its advantages. But, also, chains won't solve or control the situation. Their danger, like that of factory production, is the killing of initiative and individuality. The moment you standardize entertainment to the point that the audience hears the click of the gears—then the public won't respond. And the public, we repeat, is the key to the whole situation.

Pictures and stage acts will be the entertainment, and the best of each will win out—whether or not they come from concerns that own theatres. And whatever the stage acts are, and whatever their glitter and expense, the picture will be the supreme entertainment. Why? Simply because the public wants pictures, that's all. Good ones, of course.

A GOOD deal of interest centers in the presence here of J. D. Williams. He has brought with him and will endeavor to put in distribution here "Nell Gwynne," with Dorothy Gish, produced by Wilcox in England and purchased by his company, "British National." If he is successful, and perhaps also in contracting for the outlet here of more British pictures, he will prove his own contention and at the same time effect what seems the most practical and best solution of the British production problem.

Commenting upon the "quota" schemes to stimulate British production, The Kinematograph Weekly says:

"It need not be assumed, of course, that to this commercial problem a commercial solution cannot be found without Government interference. A big step has already been taken by J. D. Williams to prove the truth of his belief that the American market is already open to British films of the requisite quality. He will almost certainly sell 'Nell Gwynne' there, and sell it to advantage—and he has made plans to market in the U. S. any worth-while film made at the 'British National' studios at Boreham Wood.

"Those who believe that the solution of the British production problem is to be found in the American market, and in joint selling by British producers in that market—and they have weighty facts to support their opinion—should watch the 'British National' scheme closely. We have an idea that it is built on an idea which, properly understood and applied, would make a quota look ridiculous even to Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister."

We are frank to say that we not only hope, but believe, that J. D. Williams will succeed in the important undertaking he has tackled in England. He has the vision, courage, experience and determination to go through with what is obviously a big job and one of big consequences. We will say this, that no one in the entire film industry is better equipped or more likely to succeed.

The stills of "Nell Gwynne"—principally of Dorothy Gish in the title role—make fine promise for the picture, a special showing of which will be given Monday evening at eight-thirty at the Hotel Ritz-Carlton.

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE wrote us some time ago declining to sit upon a motion picture contest committee because he knew nothing about pictures. He had not, for instance, he said, ever seen Mary Pickford or Douglas Fairbanks on the screen. So, much as we admire the Sage of Emporia as a journalist, we can't get excited over his article in Collier's on "Are the Movies a Mess or Menace?" If they are one or the other or both, surely we won't get a solution from a man who doesn't see them. Perhaps, however, Blanco Bill has been sneaking into theatres, of late. A good many who look down upon the movies do this: but they don't seem to select the artistic pictures.

AN EDITOR

The Week in Review

EVERY so often someone does the thing that is widely talked about—and does it well. The First National publicity staff is to be congratulated upon the radio performance of "Too Much Money." This thirty-minute skit came over the air through WJZ and its big relay stations last week, and must have interested greatly millions of listeners. It was good. Music was cleverly brought in while the principal characters gave the lines of an interesting part of the play, selected so as to intimate what had gone before and what the play was about, but also to intrigue the listener to know more and especially the outcome—a teaser advertisement, in other words, like the scenes in a trailer. The idea is excellent; but now we have its actuality.

This same sort of thing, varied in treatment of course, will be done each week by First National. One picture a week will be represented just before the Sunday of release.

S. S. HUTCHINSON arrived in New York last week from Hollywood, with a print of "The Nut Cracker," which Associated Exhibitors will release as a comedy "special." The picture features Edward Horton, and the story was a Bobbs Merrill "best seller." It is well spoken of. The fact that it is made by a veteran producer, S. S. Hutchinson, speaks for its showmanship qualities.

A PICTURE that is already forecasted as a hit is "Three Faces East," a Producers Distributing Corporation release made from Anthony Paul Kelly's stage play of the same name.

It is an exceedingly fine Secret Service melodrama, presenting an enthralling conflict of wits between the German and British Intelligence departments during the World War, remarkably well directed and acted. The action takes place behind the lines, so that it cannot be rated as a battle picture, but the fighting thrill strikes home nevertheless, for there are shots of a Zeppelin attack on London, dropping flaming bombs, with the anti-aircraft guns repelling the assault, that register as the limit in spectacular appeal.

The narrative is strong in human interest, with Jetta Goudal giving a striking performance as a British girl in Government employ, who loves a German spy, but sacrifices her heart instincts to the impulses of loyalty. This "love versus duty" idea is really the big thing in the picture, as sentimentally effective as it is convincing. That old-time favorite, Henry Walthall, is seen in a role which, during one short situation, when he greets his wounded son, recalls his wonderfully affecting pantomime as the little Colonel in "The Birth of a Nation," a performance still lingering in old-timers' memories as an emotional masterpiece.

ON BROADWAY

By William A. Johnston

The picture certainly possesses audience appeal in the most thorough sense of the phrase, is superbly photographed and gives every indication of proving a big box office success.

The premiere performance of "Three Faces East" will be given at the Hotel Plaza, New York, under the direction of Hugo Riesenfeld as part of the Carnival staged by the Film Mutual Benefit Bureau.

WINFIELD R. SHEEHAN returned this week from the Fox studios at the Coast where he has been engaged in the exceedingly important work of speeding up production. Some of the biggest studio news of the year has come from the film colony as a result of Mr. Sheehan's visit there. As we have already pointed out editorially from time to time, the Fox organization is concentrating on very fine literary and play material with a view to continuing its record of outstanding pictures. Mr. Sheehan also enlisted the services of a group of excellent screen artists. Altogether, his stay at the Coast was productive of large results which have been and will continue to be shown on the screen.

PRODUCERS are turning more and more to the picturization of history. Universal announces this week that the life of George Washington will be brought to the screen; definite plans are already under way. The purpose will be to show the Father of His Country in a human light.

History is one of the richest sources for material from which pictures may be made, is the opinion of Jesse L. Lasky.

"Let us look back at the box office successes of the last few years," he says. "Many of the biggest pictures, the pictures which have had the widest popularity and in turn have made the most money for producers and exhibitors have been those productions based on historical themes.

"The fact that 'The Covered Wagon' is historical is the reason for its longevity. Pictures, for the most part, which deal with modern problems are in the theatres today and on the shelves tomorrow. But not so with historical productions. They are lasting for history itself is lasting.

"Take 'The Ten Commandments.' It is history—Biblical history. Although there is a modern sequence in this production I am convinced that, like 'The Covered Wagon' it will remain a popular attraction for years to come.

"More recently we have had 'The Pony Express' and 'The Vanishing American,' two attractions destined to follow the lead of their predecessors. One relates to that period in American history before the laying of the transcontinental railroad. The other is a vivid portrayal of the history of the Indian.

"So successful have these pictures been that Paramount is now planning to make screen records of two other important chapters in American history, the one a thrilling spectacle presenting a vivid story of the exploits of the frigate Constitution. The other will preserve on the screen the adventures of Theodore Roosevelt and his followers in the Spanish-American war.

"We have elaborate plans for both of these productions. James Cruze has just returned from Tripoli and other European locations where he gathered a world of data in connection with the activities of 'Old Ironsides' in its stand against piracy. A great volume of historical data also has been placed at the disposal of Paramount by the government."

THE acquisition of Emil Jannings for the American screen by Famous Players, as announced exclusively in this publication last week, is of more than passing importance. Virtually every important American company has angled for his services at one time or another, without success heretofore. When a representative of the NEWS was in Berlin last summer, Jannings expressed the fear that an American company would put him in stereotyped roles and not give him an opportunity for the expression of his versatility.

Evidently S. R. Kent convinced him that such would not be the case with Famous Players, since he is due to come here in April, according to our Berlin correspondent. Jannings is further protected by the fact that he will be permitted to return to Berlin each winter to make one picture for Ufa and to appear on the Berlin stage, where he is as popular as on the screen.

Jannings, curiously enough, was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., of American and German parentage. His father died when Jannings was but an infant, and his mother, alone and friendless, returned to her relatives in Germany. Young Emil was accordingly raised there, and in due time became an actor at the renowned Grosses Schauspielhaus, then presided over by Max Reinhardt, who staged "The Miracle."

Jannings achieved great popularity on the speaking stage for his pantomimic ability and vital performances. Pictures claimed him, though he continued to appear on the legitimate stage each winter with Reinhardt. When Famous Players formed a German production unit, a few years ago, under the name "Efa" Jannings was one of the contract players. These contracts were all bought off, however, when internal difficulties weakened the venture.

As an actor, Jannings is almost unbelievably versatile. Consider his roles in "Passion," as Henry VIII in "Deception," as "Othello;" in "One Arabian Night," as Pharaoh in "The Loves of Pharaoh," the doorman in "The Last Laugh," and more recently as the circus trapeze artist in "Variety" and in the title role of "Tartuffe"—and ask how many actors could run such a gamut of characters and make each a clear-cut, distinctive, individual performance—if any.

Speaking Editorially

ELSEWHERE in this issue will be found a very interesting article by H. M. Richey, General Manager of the Michigan M. P. T. O., on the plight of the small theatre owner. Summed up, Mr. Richey, as a result of a tour of 175 towns in his State, says that theatres in communities of 3,000 and under are facing extinction. He assigns several reasons for this situation; we advise reading of the whole article to gain complete grasp of the view which Mr. Richey forcefully presents.

What we are concerned with here is his conclusion, if we may call it that: namely, the industry should not permit these little houses to be closed up. Mr. Richey sees them as creators of the patrons of tomorrow in the exodus now in progress from country to city.

The whole subject is one of great interest. Two years ago, MOTION PICTURE NEWS began a survey of the theatre field; and the trend away from small houses has been evident throughout our investigation. There is, of course, a clearly marked swing toward the bigger theatre in the more populous center. No doubt about that. But Mr. Richey's article brings emphatically to the notice of everybody in the industry this outstanding consideration:

THEATRES in the smaller towns fulfil, beyond a shadow of question, a very definite mission. They ought for that reason, among others, to be preserved. But it ought also to be clear by this time that, in order for them to be preserved, in order that they may function properly, they should be given special consideration, special service, to fit their needs.

The president of the Black Cat club, daredevil flyers of Hollywood, pins the badge of membership on Reginald Denny, Universal star, who is a crack flyer. Like the other members, Denny's name has thirteen letters.

For our own part, we are striving to do that very thing. Some months ago, as a result of our theatre survey, we established MOTION PICTURE NEWS MID-WEEK, for the specific purpose of giving the smaller theatres a paper especially suited to their needs. The response has shown that our view was correct.

The small exhibitor, so-called, is important—very important—so much so that we believed he needed and would appreciate a paper of his own. The growth of MID-WEEK proves we were right.

So we say that this point may well be considered by all elements in the industry: special service for the small town theatre. Mr. Richey has opened up discussion of one of the industry's vital problems.

MR. HAYS, in a statement at Los Angeles, stresses the need for and development of man-power in the industry. Man-power and woman-power. Right. This is assuredly an industry and an art of personality, more so than any other activity in existence at the moment. Development of new talent all along the line stands at the top of the list of imperative necessities. Progress has been made, as Mr. Hays points out. More is needed.

FROM an exhibitor with a small store show Carl Laemmle has risen to a position of great influence in the screen world. All the industry will gladly join in the celebration of the twentieth anniversary of his association with it. His is a remarkable story—one of the great stories of ambition, enterprise and achievement in America.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

W KNEW WHAT HE WANTED, BUT—

WHEN Arthur Brisbane, prominent editor, sent a young man by the name of Clarence Thompson to Carl Laemmle with a letter of introduction, young Thompson was convinced that he wanted to be a scenario writer. A Harvard graduate and coming from a prominent Boston Back Bay family, he felt that there was a real opportunity in the scenario field. Laemmle talked with him and then and there decided that his clean-cut appearance and manner would get him ahead more rapidly on the screen than in the script department. He sent him to Universal City, where he put him in Laemmle University for tutelage. Recently, as a test, he was cast for a role in "Mavericks," and has acquitted himself more than creditably. You never can tell—in this industry.

"SIBERIA"

FOX wants absolute accuracy and realism in "Siberia," which is Victor Schertzinger's latest and most pretentious productions for that company. The director likewise agreed that anything save truth to the slightest detail would mar the picture. As a result, a staff was assembled which did not have to guess at any detail. Herman Bing, assistant to F. W. Murnau, the German directorial wizard, was appointed to "sit in" with Schertzinger. Dan Makarenko, Russian actor and former member of the Czar's military family, was made technical assistant, while Nicholas A. Dunaev, Russian director and playwright, aided with the script. In addition, scores of Russians were used in the various street and cafe scenes, and Russian children were photographed in the school sequences.

Olive Borden, whose rise has been meteoric, culminating in her signing a long-term contract with William Fox. She will star first in "Yellow Fingers" for that company.

Doris Kenyon as she appeared in character on location at Birmingham, Ala., for First National's forthcoming special, "Men of Steel," in which she is featured.

Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president in charge of production at Paramount, is sworn in as a major in the officers reserve of the signal corps by Major Stanley James and Colonel Edward Hartman.

Marcus Loew (right) and Fred Niblo, the director, were two mighty happy people the day after the opening in New York of "Ben-Hur" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer).

J SPEAKS ON FOREIGN FILMS

JOHN S. ROBERTSON, the director, spoke before the A.M.P. A. at its luncheon on Thursday, January 14th, and having recently returned from a tour of Europe his talk dealt principally with conditions abroad. He stressed the fact that the universal popularity of American films had created a wide market for other American products. He decried statements to the effect that America had boycotted foreign productions and said that it was simply a question of entertainment value, or lack of it.

"Dunhill pipes and Rolls-Royces," he declared, "are widely used in America. When England makes Dunhill and Rolls-Royce pictures they will enjoy just as great a popularity as these products."

He remarked that many remarkable backgrounds were to be obtained abroad, as well as government co-operation, and that many pictures would no doubt be produced abroad.

Four of the Universal feminine stars who made their start in Western drama stage a little tableau depicting the days when men were men and women were gun-toters. They are Virginia Valli, Mary Philbin, Laura La Plante and Marian Nixon.

F RING AROUND THE STUDIO

FOUND: the ideal author. So says Thomas Meighan, and the object of his praise is Ring Lardner, well known humorist, who has written the new Meighan vehicle, "The New Klondike," a tale of Florida water and land sharks. According to the Gaelic star, Mr. Lardner's estimable qualities are:

1. He admits he doesn't know anything about motion pictures.
2. He never hangs around the studio with a worried countenance.
3. He never says, "Here, let's try this," thereby suggesting some impractical and costly idea.
4. He has never tried to get any of his friends in the cast.
5. He wrote the story in less than a week.
6. He has never tried to change it since.

Now there should be an avalanche of hopeful producers descending upon Mr. Lardner.

I FLORIDA BREEZES

IRVIN WILLAT, the director, and Billie Dove, charming screen player and his wife, were recent sojourners at Boca Raton, the Florida development, en route to Havana and Mexico City between pictures. Florida is becoming the Mecca of film folks at the present time, and some interesting theatre deals seem to be pending, as well. The roster of executives down there from the theatre departments reads like a "Who's Who."

K WATCH MISS BORDON

KEEP your eye on Olive Borden—not that that should be at all difficult, for Miss Borden is a most decorative person and distinctly easy on the vision. MOTION PICTURE NEWS was one of the first to call attention to her remarkable beauty and potential ability, which should be fully realized under her new starring contract with Fox.

Associated Exhibitors shipped the first print of "Hearts and Fists" to the Rialto Theatre, Tacoma, by air mail. Postmaster Backus is here delivering it to H. T. Moore, president of the Moore Amusement Company.

T JUNIOR STARS BACK

THE Paramount Junior Stars, who are by way of becoming seasoned veterans after several weeks of uninterrupted work before the camera on "Glorious Youth" under the direction of Sam Wood, have returned to the Long Island studio after a three weeks' sojourn at Lake Placid Club, Essex county, N. Y. Byron Morgan, author, returned with them. They were due to leave late this week for Red Bank, N. J., to film the ice boat racing sequence.

T TWO BIG 'UNS

THE battle of the giants—long a catch phrase—will become an actuality in First National's "Men of Steel," for in this picture a fistic encounter of no mean proportions will be staged by Victor McLaglen and John Kolb. The former stands six feet three, while the latter measures no less than six feet seven inches.

Bradley Barker, who has appeared in the last four Johnny Hines pictures, including "Rainbow Riley" (First National), and is something of an artist in the bargain, sent this clever New Year card to C. C. Burr, the producer.

While Allene Ray was appearing in the leading role of the Pathe serial, "The Green Archer," at the Long Island studios, she made such a hit with families living thereabouts that several mothers named their offspring after her. Here are two of the lately christened "Allenes."

CASTING "WHAT PRICE GLORY?"

RAOUL WALSH, who will direct "What Price Glory?" for Fox, arrived in New York this week, to put the final touches on the script and to make screen tests prior to casting the leading roles. Many prominent players, it is understood, have applied for consideration for the parts of Capt. Flagg, Serg. Quirk and Charmaine. Walsh states that he is still of an open mind as regards these roles, and will still consider applications and make tests. He expects to be back on the lot in Hollywood at work by February 10.

CUSTOM MADE, NOT FACTORY

PICTURES must be custom made these days to be distinctive, says Louis B. Mayer, head of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, who asserts that the days of factory production have passed forever. "It is just the same analogy as the tailor," he says. "He can send his suits out to jobbers to finish up, because it makes no difference who does the stitches—but everything depends upon how the suit is cut. So with pictures, we apply the very acme of factory system to the mechanical labor and avoid it studiously in the creative labor."

MADGE JOINS FLAPPER RANKS

NO MORE proper, sedate and shy young lady has graced the screen than Madge Bellamy, who has ever been the embodiment of the innocent ingenue. It comes as something of a shock, therefore, to learn that Madge has abandoned the unsophisticated heroines and in "Sandy" will blossom forth as a rival of Colleen Moore, Clara Bow and Dorothy Mackaill. She has learned the Charleston; sacrificed her wealth of hair for a sleek bob; reduced 15 pounds via the lamb chop and pineapple route; and discarded crinolines for knee-lengths. Fox is making elaborate plans for "Sandy," and the metamorphosis of Miss Bellamy should lend added interest to an interesting picture.

Six of the fashion models in the style show sequence of "When Love Grows Cold" (F. B. O.), displaying elaborate fur wraps from Merle. Natacha Rambova (Mrs. Rudolph Valentino) is starred in the production.

BOX-OFFICE TITLES

MARIE CORELLI, author of "The Sorrows of Satan," had a most unusual flair for the creation of box-office titles, according to William LeBaron, associate producer in charge at the Paramount Long Island studio. In connection with plans for the Griffith production, LeBaron looked over her other works up to the time of her death in 1924, and found such titles as these: "Barabbas," "Boy," "Eyes of the Sea," "God's Good Man," "Holy Orders," "Innocent," "The Life Everlasting," "The Master Christian," "The Murder of Delicia," "My 'Little Bit,'" "The Secret Power," "The Treasure of Heaven," "Woman, or Suffragette" and "The Young Diana."

"ROCKING MOON" WINS

OUT of a long list of prominent features reviewed this week by the National Board, the only one selected to receive the little asterisk denoting excellence is the Producers Distributing Corp. release, "Rocking Moon." This picture was made with a great deal of care, and exteriors were actually filmed in Alaska at the silver fox farm with which the story deals. Location trips of this sort are getting so common as to cause little comment, but that this striving for accuracy and atmosphere pays is shown by the reception accorded "Rocking Moon."

BAR MEN AT STUDIO

MEMBERS of the American Bar Association, including some of the leading legal lights of the country, in convention at Los Angeles were the guests of Louis B. Mayer at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios last week. The attorneys and counsellors were shown about by the male stars and directors, while their wives were convoyed around by the feminine players. It would seem to us, offhand, that the jurists and their wives would have gotten more of a "kick" from the visit with this reversed, but we may be wrong.

Ruth Clifford, who will play the principal feminine role in "Brooding Eyes," starring Lionel Barrymore; a Banner production for release by Ginsberg Dist. Corp.

Laura La Plante, Universal star, brings a new loveliness to the screen in "The Midnight Sun," in which she plays the premiere ballerina of the Imperial Russian Ballet.

Lois Moran, leading lady in "Just Suppose," made by Inspiration for First National, photographed in a setting befitting her youthful charm.

Marceline Day, one of the most promising of the rising young players, will be seen as Necia in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of "The Barrier."

Mary Philbin, the charming Universal star, who has recently completed what is said to be one of her finest pictures, "Stella Maris."

Ricardo Cortez will hardly be recognized by his admirers as he appears in the closing sequences of "Ibáñez Torrent," a Cosmopolitan production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

RENEE'S ROLES

SO-CALLED "fat parts," the hope of every player, seem to have been coming the way of Renee Adoree lately. After struggling along for some time in mediocre productions, or indifferently cast in better ones, she was given the role of Melisande in "The Big Parade," and more than one critic has credited her with stealing the spotlight in that production. An important part in "La Boheme," the leading feminine role in "The Black Bird," and now the feminine lead in Phil Rosen's untitled picture for M-G-M have come her way since. An influenza attack kept her out of the studio for a short time but she has now returned. She will bear watching.

"WHISPERING SMITH" HELPS

ANOTHER instance of the striving after realism and accuracy which is replacing old slipshod methods is furnished by the production of "Whispering Smith," in which both Joe LeFors, the original of the name character, and Frank H. Spearman, the author, are assisting. LeFors' exploits as a U. S. Deputy Marshal served as the model for "Whispering Smith." He is assisting Director George Melford in all the exteriors and will help stage many episodes in which he himself figured. Spearman, the author, has assisted the studio forces both in the treatment of his story and in casting true to type.

UNIQUE TESTIMONIAL

WHEN Charles L. Eyton left Hollywood en route to Europe, after many years of service as general manager of the West Coast Famous Players-Lasky studio, he was presented with an impressive testimonial by the employes. The gift was an immense book of parchment; inscribed with the names of every employee of the studio and bearing the signatures of more than one thousand stars and featured players who were at one time or another associated with Paramount while he was at the studio. The presentation was made by Hugh McKenna, veteran caretaker, while Theodore Roberts voiced the appreciation of the personnel.

FRENCH TALENT

IF THE French atmosphere in "Paris at Midnight," which Frances Marion is making for P.D.C., isn't correct it won't be the fault of the personnel making it. To begin with, the story is adapted from Balzac's "Pere Goriot." Five members of the cast are French: Jetta Goudal, Emile Chautard, Mathilde Comont, Jean de Briac and Charles Raqua. Another member, Lionel Barrymore, also knows his Paris intimately, as does E. Mason Hopper, the director, who studied there as an art student. E. J. Babille, the assistant production manager, is as French as his name.

Vera Steadman, principal leading lady at the Christie studios, tunes up the Christie hydroplane for the winter races. She is the girl champion of the coast.

Small Town Theatres Facing Crisis, Richey Declares

Urges Industry to Save Them as Creators of Future?

By H. M. RICHEY

Detroit, January 19

(Special Telegram to Motion Picture News)

I HAVE been in the business nearly five years. During that time I have heard small town exhibitors called everything in the motion picture vocabulary from "thief, cheat, bicycler, sobber," and on down the line, but after visiting one hundred and seventy-five smaller theatre owners in their "own haunts," I want to add a new word—indispensable.

If I could have had every producer and every sales manager of every company with me on this trip, I think they would have opened their eyes. I did. I had heard so many times that the average small town theatre was a "dump;" that its proprietor spent most of his time on the strong end of a fish-pole, that he did not deserve any business. When I visited them and saw the other side of the story I was more than amazed. I was chagrined that I might have allowed myself to ever be sold such an idea.

Business conditions in the State generally are good but that does not go for the small towns. With good roads leading into big cities only twenty miles away, radios offering programs that keep hundreds home, abnormal protection being asked by bigger communities, the high cost of delivering a print to the theatre and the tactics of some salesmen, together with fifty-dollar minimums for big pictures, the future of the theatre owners in the towns under 3,000 is anything but promising.

Yet they are carrying on, and for the life of me I cannot see why. Unless there has come over them that rosy feeling that comes from being a servant to your fellowman. Most of them are engaged in some other business in order to make both ends meet. Most of them are proud of their little theatre and are sincere in their efforts to provide for the people of their community the very best they can, many times knowing they will have to take the profits from Saturday night to pay for the picture they ran Thursday and Friday and yet through it all they did not sob.

They have heard it said so often that it costs from $3.50 to $5.00 to lay a print down to them that they are resigned, hoping through some stroke of Providence things will be better tomorrow. The "dumps" I heard about dwindled to one out of ten and I found many little theatres that were a surprise for neatness and beautiful simplicity.

When the big brains of the industry start making more distribution plans, or plans to save money, the next plan should be a plan that will cut down distribution and production costs to the smaller theatres and here is the reason:

The patrons of that little theatre today are the young country folks of tomorrow who going to the city, will become the fathers and mothers of the theatre-going public in the next generation. It is the old story of the daily exodus to the city.

I do not care what you say; if it is true that they could not make a living if the films were given to them, this I do know: The motion picture industry cannot afford to see them closed up.

The initial interview with Mr. Richey on the crisis of the small town theatres appeared in The Film Daily. In response to a request from MOTION PICTURE NEWS Mr. Richey wired the above statement. Other points made by him in the Film Daily interview follow:

"If the producers of the United States, if every sales manager who sits behind a mahogany desk could have seen what I have during the past two months, could see the important place that motion pictures occupy in that community, see the effort the little fellow is putting forth to give his community the best he can afford, I believe all of them would agree that we cannot afford to have them closed, even if they have to give them the pictures. For the picture fan of tomorrow is the one who today is in the smaller community and who tomorrow will be attracted to the big cities, from which the major producers expect to get the bulk of their business.

"I did not find them 'sobbers,' I found most of them honest, worthwhile citizens, who though they live modestly, were facing the situation with an optimism that is uncanny, once you see their books as I have seen them.

"The $50 minimum on big pictures is a thing of the past for many of these smaller communities who, unless there is a change in the situation, cannot longer afford to buy and show the big pictures. The money is not there.

"Radios, of course, have hurt, and hurt badly. It is the old story of the daily exodus to the city. Just as the young people of the communities are leaving the farm and the smaller towns for the city, so the motion picture theatre-going public of these communities, motor clad, are spending a lot of their amusement money where they can get 'three acts and a feature' for a quarter.

"The situation for the smaller theatre owner in the smaller towns is certainly 'not so good'."

D. W. Griffith Picks Menjou for Satan Role in His Forthcoming Production

D. W. GRIFFITH has concluded a six weeks' search for an actor to fill the role of Satan in "The Sorrows of Satan," his next production for Paramount. He has decided upon Adolph Menjou as the one best qualified to portray this character from Marie Corelli's book.

Griffith decided several days ago that he wanted Menjou, but the latter is now completing "A Social Celebrity" under the direction of Mal St. Clair and was scheduled to start next month on "The Ace of Cads." The production schedule has been rearranged however, so that Menjou could first work in "The Sorrows of Satan."

The only other member of the cast chosen to date is Carol Dempster, who will play the part of Mavis Claire, the English Novelist. Griffith is now seeking a man suitable for the role of Godfrey Tempest, the young writer who comes under the influence of Prince Lucio Rimanez-Satan.

Farley Gets Schenectady House Lease

Just before leaving for Miami last week for a six weeks' stay, W. W. Farley, of Albany, took over the lease of the Van Curler theatre in Schenectady, which has been operated by the Berinstein brothers for the past year, or so. This gives Mr. Farley complete control of Schenectady, outside of the vaudeville field. He will make no change in the policy of the Van Curler, and road shows will be booked for the house. Dell Raechell, who has been handling the Van Curler, will be transferred to one of the other Berinstein houses, and in all probability, James Roach, who is handling the four Farley motion picture houses in Schenectady, will include the Van Curler with his other duties.

Fox Theatres Apply for Exchange Listing

Fox Theatres Corporation made application this week to the New York Stock Exchange for the listing of 800,000 shares of non-voting, no par value Class A common stock of the Fox Theatres Corporation.

Christy Cabanne has signed Eugene Borden, stage and screen actor for the role of Varvo in "Monte Carlo," which Cabanna is directing for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Borden has just finished a road engagement in "Little Kitty Kelly" to re-enter pictures.

Ottawa Theatre Adds Stage Orchestra as Attraction

Manager Pete Kehayes of the Capitol Theatre, Ottawa, a downtown house, has installed a 10-piece orchestra by way of special attraction, the band being placed on the stage for all performances. Manager Kehayes recently discontinued the presentation of vaudeville and replaced the five acts with another feature picture, giving two features for a show along with short subjects. Programs are changed twice weekly.

Eugene Borden Signs for "Monte Carlo" Cast

"Monte Carlo" is described as a satirical-comedy dealing with the actions of Americans abroad. Lew Cody and Gertrude Olmstead have the leading roles, while in the supporting cast are Roy D'Arcy, Harry Myers, Karl Dane, Cesare Gravina, Trixie Friganza, Zasu Pitts, Henri Lagarde and Arthur Hoyt.

Naked Truth Tickets Go Fast

Tremendous Success Already Assured Annual Dinner-Dance of A. M. P. A.

PREPARATIONS are now well under way and success is assured for the sixth annual Naked Truth dinner and dance of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers to be held at the Hotel Astor, New York, the night of February 6th. Celebrities of the picture industry and the Broadway legitimate stage have expressed their intention of being on hand for the occasion and they will be introduced to the guests by Nat G. Rothstein of F. B. O., who will serve as official announcer.

Among the usual features of the affair will be a burlesque news reel wherein the entire industry will be kidded. Some of the best laugh specialists in the business are lending their services to the preparing and editing of this picture. Victor Shapiro of the Samuel Goldwyn offices is editor-in-chief.

Among the biggest features of the occasion will be the presence of the "twelve immortals," composed of such universally known figures as Adolph Zukor, Sam L. Rothapfel (Roxy), D. W. Griffith, Mareus Loew, Sidney R. Kent, William Fox, Joseph M. Schenck, Will Hays, Richard A. Rowland, Carl Laemmle, Sam Katz and Jesse Lasky.

With the admission tickets limited to one thousand, indications are that the available supply will be exhausted well in advance of the date set for the dinner-dance. Those in the industry are warned to make their reservations early through Charles Einfeld of First National at 383 Madison Avenue, who is in charge of the sale.

Big Theatre Boom in Omaha

Building Plans Greatest Territory Has Known; Two $1,000,000 Houses in Program for 1926

ACCORDING to plans announced by individual theatre operators and circuit owners, the Omaha territory this year will witness the greatest building program it has ever known. Among the large operations in theatre construction which have been launched are two large cinema palaces, each to be erected at an estimated cost of $1,000,000. One of these is the A. H. Blank theatre now being built at 20th and Farnam Sts., and the World Realty Company's structure to be built at 16th and Douglas, Omaha.

Throughout the territory new suburban houses are under way or are planned for the near future. Epstein Bros., operators of the Orpheum and the Roseland in South Omaha, have plans for six more houses. At Grand Island there are two large houses being built, one by Universal and the other by Famous Players. The Universal project will cost in the neighborhood of $250,000 and Famous will spend over $300,000 on the theatre to be built on West Second St. there.

The Minne Lusa, now being built in Omaha, is scheduled to open about March 1. The house which Peter Bribilis and Henry E. Hower are building at 33d and California is also to be opened soon. Plans for a theatre at 49th and Military have been announced by Ernest A. Harms.

In addition to the Omaha theatre, A. H. Blank will build a new theatre in Des Moines. The theatre, which will seat about 3,000, will cost over a million dollars to build.

McNamee F. B. O. Sales Promotion Chief

F. B. O. has appointed Edward McNamee sales promotion director to succeed R. K. Bartlett, who recently resigned. McNamee is a veteran of the motion picture industry and has seen service in many capacities. For several years he was affiliated with First National and Fox Film Corporation as exploitation and publicity man. He is also a contributor to many of the national magazines.

Gus Edwards to Produce Acts for Publix

GUS EDWARDS, producer of musical revues, has signed a contract with the Publix Theatres Corporation to produce three stage revues to be presented in leading Publix theatres throughout the country.

The first production, called "The Garden of Girls," and including about thirty people, will have its first presentation at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, the week of February 14. Mr. Edwards will prepare the other two productions for presentation at intervals of about six weeks.

Industry to Observe Laemmle's Twentieth Anniversary

Entered Screen World in 1906 as Small Exhibitor

ONE of the most important events of the film year will be the celebration of Carl Laemmle's Twentieth Anniversary. He entered the film world February 26, 1906, as the proprietor of a small store show in Chicago. He is now a figure of world-wide importance as the head of one of the industry's biggest production, distribution and exhibition companies.

Twenty years ago, when Laemmle entered the motion picture business, it was struggling along in an infancy of store-front grind shows, short, split-reel pictures, mostly of the novelty variety, and erratic production and distribution. Much of the progress since that date has found Laemmle and the organization at his command, well to the forefront. His far-sightedness and consistent driving power and his progressive steps towards the advancement of the industry offer striking reasons for celebration, not only by the Universal organization, but by the entire industry.

Laemmle's twentieth anniversary celebration will not be limited to his Universal associates. His admirers and well-wishers of the entire industry and out of it will join with him.

Already he is receiving congratulatory wires and letters, felicitating him upon the approaching anniversary.

Will H. Hays, at the head of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, was one of the first to communicate with the Universal chief. George Eastman, head of the Eastman Kodak Company, was equally as ardent in his praise and congratulations. Other communications are pouring in from prominent exhibitors, from the heads of various film companies and other important figures in the industry.

The Universal chief is now in Europe, but will sail for America next week aboard the Steamship Olympic. He will arrive in New York February 2nd, to be on hand for the many activities which will take place in connection with the 20-year celebration.

Laemmle's entry into the film world was the opening of the White Front Theatre on Milwaukee Avenue in Chicago. It was a crude little affair with only 190 seats—camp chairs rented from a neighboring undertaker. No blare of trumpets in the daily papers heralded this enterprise; no electric marquee flashed its beckoning beacon to the crowds; no imposing front drew them in.

The crowds came, however, and it is fortunate for Carl Laemmle that they did, for the erstwhile clothing store manager of Oshkosh had invested every nickel he had in the world in that enterprise. His investment amounted to about $3600. In twenty years this modest sum has grown to millions and has evolved into a globe encircling institution employing many thousands of people.

The little White Front theatre did so well that Laemmle acquired another. Within a few months he was operating four in all. Exhibitors remembering the difficulty of getting film in those days realize why he finally took the bull by the horns and opened a small exchange, partly to acquire a sufficient supply of film for his own houses, and also to help out other exhibitors in similar circumstances.

Having a film distributing service, he next found difficulty in getting enough films to distribute. The next step for the present Universal chief, was to essay production on his own part, in a small way at first, but rapidly increasing. He never let go of his theatres, however, and although the original White Front Theatre and its humblebrothers not long since has been superseded by more pretentious houses, there or elsewhere, Laemmle has continued to retain his interests in the exhibiting end of the game.

Laemmle has an invigorating outlook on the motion picture business. In his recent letter to his Universal associates, in which he anticipated his approaching anniversary, he said:

"It's a wonderful business. It's a crazy business, not half so crazy as it was in the early days, but still a bit daft in spots. It's a business of big figures. It's a business of terrifically hard work. But I love it.

"It has a lure no one can resist. And it still has boundless possibilities. It has never been plumbed to the bottom. It will go on improving and improving with each year. You can't get away from it. I've seen many men leave it forever—only to come back to it.

"Standing off to one side and getting a better perspective view of these twenty years of ceaseless activity, I wonder how we have all weathered the innumerable gales and tempests we have struck. Attacks from within and attacks from without have all been met and overcome—and the old business goes smoothly, beautifully, triumphantly on its way.

"Twenty years of glorious friendships: All the money in the world could not induce me to give up the friendships I have found in this industry. Friendships in every possible walk of life, in every corner of the civilized globe—friendships among the rich and the poor, the high and the lowly.

"All the greed we have battled against—all the intolerance, all the hatred and envy and opposition of every description—all these are cast aside from the memory when faced with the goodness, the fineness, the sportsmanship and the friendships!

"Do you wonder I love it? Do you wonder that I view these twenty years with pride and joy and a softness of the heart?

"Well—here goes for another twenty years even better than the first twenty!"

Carl Laemmle's rise to fame and fortune from his humble beginnings twenty years ago is regarded as one of the most colorful stories of success in the entire business world. He, however, attributes his success in no small degree to the fact that he has always retained the exhibitor's point of view.

It is said of him on good authority that he often has passed up handsome profits in order to give small exhibitors the break. The best instance of this is his 1925 Complete Service Contract policy, by which he agreed to supply exhibitors with the entire Universal output at a nominal weekly rental. This move astounded the industry and was characterized as a throwback to the early days of film distribution. The thousands of letters of thanks and praise which have reached him from small exhibitors, who, without this Complete Service, might have been forced to the wall, is regarded by Laemmle as ample recompense for the move.

Alan Crosland Will Again Direct Barrymore

Alan Crosland, having completed the direction of "Don Juan" with John Barrymore, has been assigned by Warner Brothers to direct the same star in "The Tavern Knight," which will follow "Don Juan" on the 1926-27 schedule of Warners.

MIKE LEEVEE NOW PRODUCER

Plans Three Specials a Year

WITH the transfer of the United Studios to Famous Players last week, Mike Levee, president of the United, and the man who built those studios from a series of ramshackle bungalows will hereafter devote his time to producing.

According to present plans, Levee will make from two to three special productions per year, and will produce as an independent unit, his first production going through First National. This initial picture will be a comedy adaptation of the novel, "Buccaneers of the Bahamas" which ran serially in the Saturday Evening Post. The screen version will be exhibited under the title of "Molasses."

In the cast will be such prominent players as George Sidney, Charlie Murray, Mary Carr, Kate Price and others. Al Santell will make the picture for Levee.

For the present Levee will work at United, and it is planned to finish the picture before Paramount takes possession of the studios early in May. Each of the M. C. Levee productions will be backed by extensive advertising and exploitation campaigns. Camera work on "Molasses" will start early next month.

M. C. Levee

Sarasohn, New York.

R. E. Pritchard Dies Suddenly

Prominent Member of Industry Meets Tragic End—Fire in Hotel Room

FLAMMES originating presumably from a cigarette accidentally dropped on the floor of his room caused the death of Robert E. Pritchard, a former employee of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and a prominent member of the motion picture industry, Monday morning, January 18th.

Mr. Pritchard had resided at the Richmond Hotel, New York for several years. Monday morning at 3 o'clock he rang for ice water which was delivered immediately. At that time he was sitting in an easy chair, partially attired, smoking a cigarette. Scattered around the chair were the Sunday papers.

Fifteen minutes later, employees of the hotel smelled smoke and upon investigation found Mr. Pritchard's room in flames. The hotel fire apparatus was used in combating the blaze and the city fire department called. After the fire was extinguished, Mr. Pritchard's body was found still in the chair. He had evidently made no attempt to escape and was suffocated by smoke, presumably while asleep.

After the regulations of the city authorities had been complied with the body was prepared for burial and shipped to Chattanooga, Tenn., where Mr. Pritchard's relatives reside. A sister, Miss Margaret Pritchard, was seriously ill at the time of her brother's tragic death and had not been informed of her bereavement at the time this was written.

Robert E. Pritchard was born at Madisonville, Tenn., the son of Robert Pritchard, a former prominent attorney of Chattanooga. He entered newspaper work early in life and served on the staffs of Chattanooga and New Orleans papers.

While on the New Orleans Item, he took charge of the motion picture department and in 1916 came to MOTION PICTURE NEWS where he inaugurated the Exhibitors' Service Bureau. At this post he was remarkably successful, attracting wide attention to himself and the NEWS by his handling of the department. In 1919 he accepted an attractive offer from the Adlen Circuit at Toronto and a year later returned to New York to become Advertising Manager for Educational Pictures Corporation. For the past three years, he has been with First National, doing sales promotion and exploitation work in the First National studios both in New York and on the Coast.

At the time of his death, Mr. Pritchard was unemployed, having left First National just prior to January 1st. He had not been in the best of health for several months and for the past two weeks had been ill enough to keep him confined to his room the greater part of the time. His illness however had nothing to do with his untimely death. All evidence points to the theory that immediately after the bell boy's visit with the water, Mr. Pritchard fell asleep in his chair, the cigarette dropping to the floor among the loose papers scattered about. He evidently had been reading up to the time he called the bell boy as his bed was undisturbed.

The deceased who was 47 years of age, is survived by his sister, and several cousins, all residing in Tennessee. Mr. Pritchard's father, his last surviving parent, died about 12 years ago.

Fred Martin Passes Away in Chattanooga

Fred Martin, well known in southeastern film circles, passed away on January 15th in Chattanooga, Tenn., after a lingering illness following a series of operations. He had a varied career in the film industry, having been for many years connected with the Jake Wells chain and later with Albert Sottile. During the past several years he has traveled the southeast with several major companies, including Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Fox. Martin leaves no relatives.

K. C. Manager Bandit Victim for Third Time

W. O. Lenhart, manager of the Linwood theatre, large suburban house of Kansas City, for the third time in three months was the victim of bandits this week. Monday two bandits entered the theatre through an alley door about noon, rushed into the door of the office in the front part of the building and, with several persons in the street looking on, not knowing it was a hold-up, took $985.05, the receipts of Saturday and Sunday, which Mr. Lenhart just had taken from the safe. About $100 in the safe was overlooked by the bandits. The loss was covered only up to $300 by insurance.

Kansas House Destroyed by Fire

Fire destroyed the Royal Theatre, Bonner Springs, Kas., Monday night, the loss being estimated at $30,000. The house was owned by Charles German. The blaze at one time threatened the entire block.

M. P. T. O. Issues Convention Itinerary Booklet

AN elaborate thirty-page booklet, prepared by the New York Central Railroad under the personal supervision of George F. Stanton, which describes in detail the itinerary of the National M. P. T. O. Convention to be held in Los Angeles in the Spring, is on hand at the National Headquarters of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, 745 Seventh Avenue, New York City.

Hourly details of the trip, from the time the train pulls out, at three-five P. M. on May 23, until the return at eleven A. M. June 23, the places the conventioners will tour and the places they will be entertained are all included in this prospectus of the trip which may be procured at National Headquarters.

Sam Sonin, Chairman of the expedition urges all in the East who are contemplating the trip to make reservations early. It is claimed the prices are unusually low for a trip of this type.

Bill Would End News Reel Censoring

Republican Measure Introduced in New York; Governor Smith Appoints Walrath, But Says Attitude is Unchanged

THE first bill pertaining to the motion picture industry to be introduced at the present session of the New York state Legislature, made its appearance in the Senate on Wednesday, January 20, being introduced by Senator J. Griswold Webb, a Republican from Dutchess county. The bill modifies the provision of the present censorship law in New York state, to the extent that it exempts news reels from examination. In some quarters the bill is viewed as the opening wedge of a movement calling for the abolishment of the commission, the bill being introduced by a Republican, naturally being accorded support from members of that party.

Governor Alfred E. Smith named John H. Walrath, former Mayor of Syracuse, to the New York State Motion Picture Commission on Monday night of this week. Mr. Walrath will succeed George H. Cobb, of Watertown, who has been chairman of the commission since it began to function in August, 1921. Mr. Cobb will return to his home in Watertown and take up the practice of law. The position pays $7,500 but there is a possibility that the commission will be wiped out of existence this year by either Governor Smith or the reorganization plans.

All three heads of the commission are now Democratic politicians and leaders in their respective cities. Mr. Walrath was for many years a leading business man in Syracuse and served as Mayor for several terms, being defeated last fall. Mrs. Elizabeth V. Colbert, also one of the heads of the commission, is Democratic vice-chairman of Albany county, while Arthur Levy, secretary of the commission is a Democratic politician of New York.

Although Governor Smith has named a person to succeed Mr. Cobb, he let it be known that he is firmly convinced that censorship should go and that he was still standing on the same policy of years past in declaring that motion picture censorship was absolutely unnecessary. When Mr. Walrath was selected for the position, he was acquainted with the situation and the possibility of the position being little more than a temporary one.

Riesenfeld to Direct Carnival Benefit

HUGO RIESENFELD will have complete charge of the premiere showing of "Three Faces East," which will feature the entertainment at the Motion Picture Carnival of the Film Mutual Benefit Bureau to be staged at the Hotel Plaza, New York, February 3rd. In addition to directing the performance, Riesenfeld will write the music score and direct the orchestra.

The picture is a Rupert Julian production based on the stage success written by Anthony Paul Kelley. Jetta Goudal, Robert Ames, Henry B. Walthall and Clive Brook are in the cast.

Members of the motion picture industry and the society world are expected to attend the carnival, the proceeds of which are to be turned over to charity. In addition to the preview the entertainment will include a midnight ball and carnival features in which debutantes will impersonate film stars.

Washington Censorship Bill Killed

QUICK action by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington, and the Northwest Film Board of Trade of Seattle, effectively eliminated the censorship bugaboo that cropped up for its annual breathing spell recently in the State of Washington legislature's yearly session. The bill was killed in committee, due primarily to the efforts of J. M. Hone, executive secretary of the M. P. T. O. W., assisted by part of the association's legislative committee, including F. J. Talabere of Walla Walla, C. E. Farrell of Ellensburg and J. A. Quimby of Bellingham, as well as L. A. Drinkwine of Tacoma, president of the body.

The plan as outlined by the leading Republican majority in the Assembly as well as the Senate according to the best authorities is that no action will be taken or the Republican attitude on censorship will not be known until the Charles E. Hughes non-partisan reorganization committee files its report with the Legislature.

The proposition is to see what this committee decides relative to the consolidation of the state departments. It is reported that the Hughes committee will not recommend the abolition of the commission entirely, but will recommend that the functions of the censor board be transferred to the State Department of Education.

The report of the New York State Motion Picture Commission, just submitted to Governor Smith, outlining the work of the commission during the last twelve months, there were 4,236 eliminations made by the commission during the last twelve months, these consisting of 3,868 scenes and 368 titles. All told the Commission examined 8,949 reels. Eliminations were made from 712 films, while 2,598 films were approved by the commission without elimination. There were 592 permits granted without examination and 3,310 original licenses issued, while duplicates were issued to the extent of 36,039.

Twelve features were condemned in their entirety by the commission. Eliminations were made on the following grounds, in some cases eliminations being made on more than one ground: Indecent, 656; inhuman, 1,438; tending to incite to crime, 1,804; tending to corrupt morals, 318; sacrilegious, 20.

Of the eliminations made by the Commission, 428 came from dramas; 149 from comedies; 61 from comedy dramas; 65 from serials, two from news reels, two from educational; one from cartoons and 13 from miscellaneous. During the year 32 appeals from decisions of the Commission were made by producers seeking a review by the entire commission.

The report of the commission to the Governor stresses the fact that it is a revenue-producing body and calls attention to the fact that during the period of its existence from August, 1921, to January 1, last, the receipts of the censoring body amounted to $853,986.85 and that its running expenses over the same period amounted to $373,927.97, leaving a profit to the state of $480,058.88. During the past year receipts amounted to $197,049.34, the largest in the history of the commission, but its operating expenses of $89,956.33 were also the largest.

In connection with the Commission's report, a portion is devoted to the aid that has been given the commission by state troopers who visit the theatres in the smaller communities and who report directly back to their head, on any violations of the law. The same recommendations were made by the Commission as a year ago, which include one giving the Commission power to stop the showing of pictures in which criminals or persons of a debased character appear.

The commission also calls attention to a question as to the power of municipalities to prevent the exhibition of films that have been licensed by the state. It appears that there have been one or two complaints of this sort coming from the municipality which has a censoring board of its own, and where persons in charge insist that different eliminations be made from the picture other than deemed necessary by the Commission.

According to the Commission pictures have shown great improvement since the censorship became effective in New York state, the report closing with a declaration to the effect that on account of the millions invested in motion picture theatres, that there is even greater need of censorship and clean, wholesome pictures than ever before, not only to protect the public, but also to protect those whose fortunes are invested in the theatres.

Lawrence, Mass., House to Show Films and Sketches

The Cosmopolitan Theatre at Lawrence, Mass., is closed for minor alterations and improvements and is to reopen with a program of pictures supplemented by short plays or sketches in Italian.

K. C. Censors Handle 366 Miles of Film

ACCORDING to Miss Emma Viets, chairman of the Kansas State Board of Motion Picture Review in Kansas City, Kas., 366 miles of film passed through the board's office during the year 1925, statistics compiled by her show.

The censors reviewed 1,801 pictures. There were 4,013 other pictures, duplicate copies, which went through the board's hands, but were not reviewed unless eliminations had been ordered. Only five pictures were rejected entirely. Eliminations were made on 338 pictures. Under a ruling authorized by the state legislature at its last session, news reels were exempt from censorship and the fee for censoring educational and scenic reels was cut from $1 to 25 cents.

Fees received during the year totaled $23,454.50. Of this, 10 per cent was transferred to the general fund of the state and the remainder used to pay salaries and maintain the board.

Coal Strike Closes or Curtails Fifty Theatres in Mining Territory

NEVER in the history of the motion picture industry in the territory comprising Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, has there been such a violent reaction against the exhibitor as has been experienced as an outcome of the anthracite coal strike.

Following the declaration of the strike in September, business showed a decided improvement, due to the fact that the idle miners, flush with earnings, patronized the motion pictures liberally. As time wore on, however, the attendance has gradually diminished until at the present time more than fifty theatres in the territory have been obliged to either close their doors or curtail their shows. Upwards of fifty houses have reduced their shows from six to four days a week and almost as many that have been running a fewer number of days a week have shut down entirely.

Philadelphia exchanges are daily receiving notices of cancellation from exhibitors in the coal belt and it is predicted that within another month more than one hundred theatres will have either closed down or curtailed their shows.

To add to the troubles of the exhibitors in Wilkes-Barre and Tunkhannock, public health officials have issued orders forbidding children under sixteen years of age at attend motion picture theatres. The quarantine in the former place is the result of an epidemic of measles, while in Tunkhannock, scarlet fever is very prevalent.

The general slump in the coal section has been so pronounced the last three weeks that Philadelphia exchanges are severely hit by loss of rental.

Kansas-Missouri Fix Problems

Admit Producer-Owner Theatre Managers and Decide Arbitration Matter

THE admittance as members of managers of producer-owned theatres into the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri and the decision not to represent in any way exhibitors, who are non-members of the exhibitor body, in joint board of arbitration cases were two important developments in the meeting of the board of directors of the M. P. T. O. K.-M. in Kansas City Tuesday.

The date of the next convention, which probably will be in Topeka, Kas., or Wichita, Kas., in April, was left to a committee composed of A. F. Baker, Electric Theatre, Kansas City, Kas.; Jay Means, Murray and Prospect Theatres, Kansas City, Mo.; R. R. Biechele, Osage Theatre, Kansas City, Kas., and C. E. Cook, business manager of the exhibitor organization. The last convention having been held in Kansas City, Mo., the next one naturally will be in the state of Kansas.

While the resolution adopted, favoring the admittance into the organization of managers of producer-owned theatres, does not become effective until the by-laws are changed at the next convention, the work remaining to be done is little more than routine. As to voting power, producer-managers will be on the same basis as all members, virtually the only exception being that no producer-manager will be eligible to hold office.

The arbitration board stand is the outgrowth of long agitation. John Coreoran, Midway theatre, Kansas City, Kas.; F. Amos, Westport theatre, Kansas City, Mo., and L. J. Lenhart, Roanoke theatre, Kansas City, Mo., exhibitor members of the arbitration board, will continue to sit on the board in hearing cases of non-members, but that is all. There will be no advance investigation of the cases and, to bare the facts, no interest whatever displayed in cases except where exhibitors are M. P. T. O. K.-M. members. Also, the exhibitor body will urge a revision of the rules of the arbitration board to harmonize with existing conditions in the Kansas City territory, ignoring altogether the procedure of similar boards in other cities, unless such procedure should be deemed beneficial to Kansas City.

It also was decided at the meeting that the association will obtain an attorney, who will act as counselor to represent the M. P. T. O. K.-M. in all legal matters, to be retained on an annual retainer fee basis. R. R. Biechele, president, and A. F. Baker, member of the board of directors, were appointed to select the attorney.

Approval in no uncertain tone was voiced at the meeting of the tie-up with P. D. C. last month, known locally as "Exhibitors' Month," in which the M. P. T. O. K.-M. received a percentage of all P. D. C. product sold during the month, the exhibitors aiding in obtaining bookings.

Paramount Manager Heads Milwaukee Board

George Smith, Milwaukee manager for Paramount, was elected president of the Milwaukee Film Board of Trade at the annual election held Monday. Frank De Lorenzo, branch manager for the Producers Distributing Corporation, was named vice president; Max Stahl, Educational branch manager, secretary and treasurer, and John Ludwig of the Ludwig Film Exchange, sergeant-at-arms. Ben Koenig, legal advisor of the Board, was re-elected as executive secretary. All the officials for the coming year rank very high in the esteem of local filmdom, and under their guidance the Board expects to go through a very useful year.

Quirk Acquires Photoplay and Opportunity

James R. Quirk has completed arrangements with R. M. Eastman and E. M. Colvin, all joint owners of Photoplay and Opportunity Magazines, whereby Quirk will purchase both publications. Quirk has held a large minority interest in the magazines and has been editor and publisher of Photoplay since 1914. It is announced there will be no changes in any department of the publications.

Plan Provides Income for Kansas-Missouri

A plan, whereby a permanent monthly income will be obtained for the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, is being worked out by C. E. Cook, business manager, and unofficially has been approved by the exhibitor body.

The plan consists of a permanent tie-up of the M. P. T. O. K.-M., and an exchange, the name of which was not divulged, due to the fact that the plan is in embryonic stage, in which the exhibitor body will do all the booking of a certain short subject in the Kansas City territory and reap a percentage income on the earnings of the product. The short subject is a weekly issue product and the stability of the project has so appealed to Mr. Cook that a contract may be entered into within the next ten days.

Child Welfare Committee Stages Showing

The Child Welfare Committee of the Woman's Literary Union of Portland, Me., has arranged a series of motion picture entertainments for children, the first of which was given at Keith's Theatre, Portland, Saturday morning. They will be continued from time to time. "Big Game Hunting in Africa" was the feature with a comedy and news reel completing the program.

For these specials admission of 10 cents only is charged, the theatre management and the Union cooperating to bring the series of pictures within the reach of all children of the city.

Gordon's Olympia Returns to 3 Shows Daily

Gordon's Washington Street Olympia Theatre, Boston, has returned to its former policy of three shows daily after trying out a four-show policy for several months. There are now shows at two, five and eight o'clock with vaudeville only at the last two shows and an extra picture in place of the vaudeville at the first show, giving two feature films at the first show and one feature film, comedy and news with vaudeville at the other two.

M. P. T. O. A. Establishes Honor Roll

FOR the first time in its history, National Headquarters of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America is establishing for its affiliated units an Honor Roll. Only State Organizations which are 100% paid up in their dues to the National Organization will be eligible for placement on this roll, which will occupy a permanent and conspicuous place in the Official Bulletin of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

The announcement in the Official Bulletin of this Honor Roll has already created spirited competition among the States Units affiliated with the present organization, the headquarters of which are at 745 Seventh Avenue, New York City. Western Pennsylvania, Maryland and New Jersey already head this list. There are a number of other State Units which are 95% and 98% paid up in their contribution for the maintenance of their National Organization.

$2,000,000 Detroit House for Fox

Many New Theatre Transactions are Also Reported From the Mid-West and West Coast Theatres Organization

AMONG the news items with regard to theatre expansion and the building of new houses in various parts of the United States is one announcing that Fox will start construction immediately on a two million dollar house in Detroit. The site is on the west side of Woodward Avenue, between Columbia and Montclair, according to Walter Shafer, manager of Fox Washington theatre in Detroit. The new house will have a seating capacity of five thousand. It is expected to open in September, 1927.

St. Louis film circles have been informed that Balaban & Katz have taken over the Washington Square theatre in Quincy, Ill. The price paid has not been revealed, but it is said to have run well into six figures. It is anticipated that Joseph Desberger will continue as manager of the theatre.

Grand boulevard in St. Louis is to have a 3000-seat independently operated first run picture palace. Confirmation of rumors to this effect has been obtained, but for the present the identity of the operating company is being withheld.

The new theatre will be a part of a large office building structure to be erected at the northwest corner of Grand boulevard and Delmar boulevards by the Knights of Pythias.

The American Bond and Mortgage Co., Inc., is floating a $1,250,000 issue of 6½ per cent first mortgage serial gold bonds to finance four theatres planned on the East Side, New York, by the Delancey-Clinton Realty Co., Inc. The bonds will mature in from two to fifteen years, will carry interest payable twice a year and are being sold in denominations of $1,000, $500 and $100.

The theatres are: A combination theatre and commercial building at 180-186 Suffolk Street, running through to 11 Clinton Street; the theatre proper will seat 1,220. The storehouse building at 195 Rivington Street, will be remodeled to contain an exit for a theatre to be built on the remainder of the plot; the house will seat 600. A 1,700-seat theatre will be built at 126-128 Clinton Street with a roof garden seating 1,000; there will be a commercial building in connection with it. The fourth will be at 185-191 Avenue B and 602 E. 12th Street and will seat 600.

The officers and directors of the company are also majority stockholders of the Bijou Holding Corp. which guarantees the completion of these various projects.

That the city of Hawthorne, California, will soon be graced by a $150,000 theatre and store building is the announcement issued by Abe Gore of the Venice Investment Co., and vice president of West Coast Theatres, Inc.

Gore states that construction work will start immediately on a lot 150 by 175 feet on Hawthorne Boulevard, 300 feet north of Broadway. The theatre will be known as "The Roosevelt."

Plans and specifications executed by John Paxton Perrinne, architectural engineer, were approved by Gore Brothers, and Sol Lesser, Adolph Ramish and D. B. Vanderlip. Lew Zuckerman, realtor and one of the principal owners of the Commercial Exchange building of Los Angeles, handled the purchase of the new property.

According to D. B. Vanderlip, one of the executives who also was interested in the closing of the deal, the theatre will seat over 1000. It will contain a stage large enough for any road show as well as for the perfect staging of West Coast Theatres presentations, produced by Fanchon and Marco.

The East Coast Theatres Company, of which Oscar Neufeld and Sam Stiefel are the principal stockholders, recently acquired the Roxborough theatre, Roxborough, Pa.; the Karlton theatre, Pleasantville, N. J.; the Embassy, Swedesboro, N. J.; the Fire Hall, National Park, N. J., and the Palace theatre, Glassboro, N. J. The Palace, Glassboro; the Fire Hall, National Park, and the Karlton, Pleasantville, N. J., have been acquired on leases from the Stiefel Amusement Co., Inc.

Incorporation papers for a state wide theatrical circuit were granted last week in Columbus. The papers name as incorporators the Coshoc-ton-Cinderella Theatre Company, Dover-Webber Theatre Company, Logan-Ruble Theatre Company, Muskingum Theatre Company, and the Sidney-Majestic Theatre Company, Lawrence M. Rich, Max L. Fishel, J. C. Luckay, L. Clark and L. London of Cleveland. Rich states that the company would include the operation of a number of Ohio theatres other than those named.

From Minneapolis comes word that F. and R. through William Hamm, one of the wealthiest and most powerful figures in that section are pushing much building activity. L. J. Johnson, an architect, has been hired to devote all of his time to the planning of new theatres. The company is reported dickering for a site at Minot, N. D., with a number of other deals under consideration. While there has been some discussion of Minneapolis suburban theatres to be erected by the circuit, no decision has yet been made.

The World Realty Corp. of Omaha is out after a chain of combination houses in 15 Nebraska cities, starting with Columbus and Fremont. The Columbus theatre will cost $100,000 and Fremont, $150,000. All new theatres are to seat 1,000, except in the case of Hastings and Grand Island where the capacities will be larger.

A theatre and office building to cost $150,000 will be erected at once in Montabello, California, according to the announcement of Harry M. Sugarman, general manager and secretary of the West Coast Junior Theatre Circuit. Papers have been signed by Oliver P. Justie, whereby his lot with a 75 foot frontage on Whittier Boulevard, and 150 feet on Spruce will be covered by a theatre building seating 900, and contain offices and stores.

Plans for the structure are being executed by Richard M. Bates, Los Angeles architect. West Coast Junior Theatre Circuit has signed a long term lease with Justie for an aggregate rental of $200,000.

According to Sugarman, the location is ideal, inasmuch as Spruce Street is to be cut through at once, opening northerly and crossing over Whittier Boulevard. This street opening will place the theatre on the northeast corner of Whittier Boulevard. Michael Rosenberg, vice president of West Coast Junior theatres will shortly announce a plan to award $150 in cash to the person suggesting the best name for the theatre; a name that will be fitting and proper in keeping with the fast growing town of Montabello.

This marks the opening of a gigantic building plan on the part of the West Coast Junior Theatre Circuit which will mean that several other leading Southern California towns, such as Whittier, Ventura and Santa Maria will be accorded new theatres, said Sugarman.

Ground Broken for New Warner House

WITH more than a thousand persons in attendance, including many city officials, Warner Brothers broke ground last week for their Hollywood Theatre, which is to be one of the finest in California. Fitting ceremonies marked the occasion.

Motley H. Flint, vice-president of the Pacific Southwest Trust & Savings Bank, of Los Angeles, turned the first shovelful of earth and ground was broken also by Harry M. Warner, Jack L. Warner, Bennie Zeidman and all the Warner Bros. stars and directors who were on the west coast at the time.

All the events on the program were broadcast by the new Warner Bros. portable radio station 6XBR as they took place.

The new theatre is to be in the heart of Hollywood, at Hollywood Boulevard and Wilcox Avenue, and will cost two million dollars. It will be six stories in height, with a frontage of 196 feet on Hollywood Boulevard and 223 feet on Wilcox Avenue.

Chicago Referendum On Daylight Saving

DAYLIGHT saving which for five years has worked a handicap on Chicago Moving Picture Theatres during the summer months, will be put to a referendum vote for the second time in five years at the November election. This decision was arrived at by the City Council following a hearing by the Committee on Judiciary at which organized labor demanded a repeal of the present law.

The decision of the City Council means that daylight saving will be in effect during the coming summer starting the last Sunday in April and continuing to the last Sunday in September.

Craver Sells 35% of First National Franchise to Sams, of Winston-Salem

R. D. CRAVER, prominent figure in Southern exhibition circles, informed MOTION PICTURE NEWS this week that he had disposed of a thirty-five per cent interest in his First National franchise to A. F. Sams of Winston-Salem, N. C., lawyer, State Senator from Forsyth County, and owner of the Capitol Theatre in the Carolina city.

Mr. Craver is engaging in the real estate business in Florida. He had previously sold his theatres to Warner Brothers.

This means Mr. Craver's virtual withdrawal from active participation in the film industry, although he of course still holds the controlling interest in the First National franchise, for his territory, which is included in the Charlotte exchange district.

Slump Hits St. Louis Houses

With One Seat to Every 7.05
Persons Business Shows Falling Off

AN average of one seat for every 7.05 persons may be causing a slump in St. Louis, of which exhibitors of that city are complaining, but at the other end of the state in Kansas City an entirely different situation exists.

A check up of about a year ago in Kansas City revealed that there was a seat for every 4.05 persons. Since that time approximately 8,000 seats have been added to the total, with more than 6,000 more—not plans, but actual construction—to come by the middle of next summer. And business is good, not theoretically, but in physical fact, as the lobby of any down town first run house will prove almost any night. Kansas City has a field to draw from which includes a population of about 600,000.

Important announcements were made this week concerning the new 4,000 seat Midland Theatre, construction on which starts in a few weeks. Herbert M. Woolf, president of the Midland Theatre and Realty Company, which is constructing the house at Thirteenth and Main streets, announced that M. B. Shanberg, president of the Shanberg Poster Advertising Company, would manage the new theatre. Mr. Shanberg manages 12 other theatres of the Midland chain.

There no longer exists any doubt concerning the fact that the new theatre's booking will be controlled by Metro-Goldwyn, although the actual financial interest which Metro-Goldwyn has in the house has not been disclosed. Thomas O. Lamb of New York City, theatre architect, and Robert Boller of Kansas City are preparing plans for the new house.

With the removal of all doubt concerning the building of the Midland theatre and the affiliation with Metro-Goldwyn, comes the announcement from Harry Warner of Warner Brothers, who was in Kansas City this week, that the proposed plans of Warner Brothers, to build a large first run house in Kansas City have been abandoned. Mr. Warner was on his way from Los Angeles to Europe, being accompanied by Motley Flint, executive vice-president of the Pacific Southwest Trust and Savings Company of Los Angeles.

Haas is Named Paramount's Colorado Circuit Manager

Jay A. Haas has been appointed the Circuit Manager of Paramount theatres in Colorado. Mr. Haas, for the past two years, has been Exploitation Manager for Famous Players in Portland, Oregon. He has been in the show game for many years, having managed Levey's Orpheum in Seattle; The Orpheum in Butte, Montana; The Grand Theatre in Portland, and a number of other amusement houses. Mr. Haas will assume his new duties immediately with headquarters at the Rialto Theatre, Denver. The Paramount theatres of Colorado are located at Denver, Greeley, Colorado Springs and Pueblo.

Kansas City Globe Suffers Big Fire Loss

Fire starting back-stage in the Globe theatre, first run motion picture and vaudeville house of Kansas City, early Sunday morning resulted in $15,000 damage, as well as the loss of $12,000 in receipts for the week, according to William and N. J. Flynn, managers. It was necessary to close the house for a week.

Albany Film Clubs Hold Annual Ball

The first annual ball of the Associated Film Clubs of Albany, held at the Hotel Ten Eyck last Friday night, attracted fifty or more couples and proved both enjoyable and successful. The proceeds of the affair are to be used in establishing a fund which can be used in case of emergency such as sickness or unemployment.

The programs were furnished by G. A. Woodard, former manager for Fox in Albany, and who is now running a printing and advertising establishment. Six acts of vaudeville from one of the local theatres were featured during the evening. The committee in charge of the affair consisted of J. H. MacIntyre as chairman, Ted O'Shea, H. C. Bissell, Herman Stern, F. T. Lawlor, Ray Smith, Arthur Goldsmith and C. Eastman.

Overheated Furnace Causes Theatre Fire

The Grand theatre Duquoin, Ill., was destroyed by fire on January 14. An overheated furnace is believed to have been the cause. The fire started about 5:15 p. m., an hour before the usual opening for the evening show.

The theatre was the property of the Redd-Yemm-Hayes Circuit and seated approximately 1200 persons on two floors. It was erected but a few years ago at an estimated cost of $150,000.

Hoosick Falls Exhibitor Passes Away

Charles A. McCarthy, of Hoosick Falls, N. Y., one of the oldest and best known exhibitors in this part of the state, died at his home last week, following an illness of several months. He was a familiar figure along Film Row up until a year or so ago, when he leased his house to Lew Fischer, of Fort Edward, and announced that he intended to take life a bit easier.

New York Village Votes For Sunday Pictures

The residents of Canastota, N. Y., recently voted in favor of Sunday motion pictures. There is but one theatre in town, this being run by M. J. Kallet, who also has a house in the neighboring city of Oneida.

Zanft on Directors Board of Ascher Bros.

COMMISSIONER John Zanft, vice-president and general manager of the Fox Circuit of Theatres, has been elected a member of the board of directors of the Ascher Bros. circuit in Chicago.

Mr. Zanft, who has been the ostensible head of the Fox theatre circuit for many years, has taken an active part in directing the expansion program of that organization from a local string to one of national importance. In addition to his theatrical activities Mr. Zanft takes an active interest in local and state affairs. He holds the honorary title of Commissioner by appointment of Gov. Smith to the Board of Managers of the New York State Reformatory at Elmira, N. Y.

John Zanft, Director of Theatres for Fox, elected to the Board of Directors of Ascher Brothers, Chicago.

Selig Studios Bought by P. A. Powers

Will Be Known as Associated Studios, Inc.; Two Producers Now Working on Productions for Associated Release

P. A. POWERS, Chairman of the Board of Directors of Associated Exhibitors, has purchased the Selig Studios on Mission Road, Los Angeles. Final details of the transaction were consummated last week, and the plant, now undergoing a thorough rejuvenation will henceforth be known as the Associated Studios, Inc.

The property, comprising ten acres in addition to which Powers has secured the use of Luna Park, giving the studio a total of thirty acres, was purchased by him to house the production activities of the various West Coast units making pictures for Associated Exhibitors release. In addition to these units it is likely space will be available for leasing companies Powers' plan being to maintain an institution that will give producers an opportunity to make pictures without an exorbitant overcharge.

Considering the space and the equipment at hand no studio in Los Angeles has better facilities for economical production than the Associated it is claimed. There are four immense stages with a total of approximately 100,000 feet of stage space. The mill, carpenter shop and paint shop are the last word in modern construction.

There are dressing rooms sufficient to accommodate all the principals and extras of the largest production. In the administration building there are 30 offices in addition to the executive offices. Besides the dressing rooms there are modern bungalows of

"U" Opposes Change in City Name

OFFICIALS and employees of Universal City are opposing a move on the part of the Chamber of Commerce outside of the plant to change the name of that community to Cahuenga. The name Cahuenga was decided upon partly because of the proximity to Cahuenga Pass, and partly in commemoration of the signing of the Treaty of Cahuenga some seventy-five years ago, in which General Pio Pico formally surrendered California to General John C. Fremont on a spot just opposite the main entrance to the studio.

The Universal Corporation and its employees are opposing the movement with a lively enthusiasm, and officials of the studio point out that if the big plant had not been built there there would be no Universal City.

three rooms and bath each for the use of stars.

There are six cutting rooms, four film vaults, two projection rooms, in addition to camera vaults, still rooms, portrait gallery, etc.

In the electrical department there are four generators, 5 G. E. rotaries and two sun arcs. Included in the smaller equipment are 120 breads, 120 spots and a practically unlimited number of banks.

Already making their production headquarters at the Associated Studio are A. A. Hutchinson, who has just completed "The Nut Cracker," starring Edward Everett Horton and Mae Busch; Bert D. Carber, who is to make a series of western features starring Bill Cody, and Thomas L. Griffith, who is to co-star two well known players as yet unnamed. The product of all of these will be distributed by Associated Exhibitors. Several other producers are making arrangements now toward the transferring of their activities to the Associated.

Emil Offeman, West Coast representative of the Associated Exhibitors, is in complete charge of the new studios as general manager. W. I. Heywood is studio manager while others of the executive force are George Morris, comptroller; Fred Stark, superintendent of construction; Harry Campbell, chief electrician; Ed Forrest, scenario editor; W. J. Finn, head of the photographic department; Henry Stahl, head of the paint shop and Ben Estland, director of publicity.

M. P. T. O. of Texas Calls Meeting for Feb. 5

W. S. Waid, manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association of Texas has called a meeting of the Board of Directors for February fifth, to be held at Dallas, Texas.

Universal Completes Research Work For George Washington Special

PRELIMINARY research work has been completed by Universal for the forthcoming super production to be built around the great national figure, George Washington. Much of this work has been conducted by Edward Moffat, will known novelist now at Universal City.

Moffat has sought out many interesting diaries touching upon Washington's various character phases, and has drawn material from a vast number of sources of information. A thorough search of early Americans has been made in preparation for this picture, which will reach the screen as a Universal super-production.

Actual production work will be started as soon as Carl Laemmle arrives in Universal City. The Universal chief is now in Europe and will return to this country within the next few weeks.

Shea Opens New Buffalo House

Gala Occasion Marks Opening Performance of New $2,000,000 Theatre

MICHAEL SHEA'S new theatre in Buffalo, Shea's Buffalo, was formally opened last Friday night with every one of the 4,000 seats occupied. It was a gala occasion which brought out Buffalo's "400," civic representatives, and representatives of the motion picture industry, the stage and the press.

The performance was scheduled for 8 o'clock, but as early as 7 the streets adjoining the house were lined with automobiles. One of the early arrivals was Adolph Zukor.

At 8:30 Daniel J. Sweeney, deputy superintendent of education, came upon the stage and after thanking Mr. Shea in behalf of the business men in the vicinity in whose behalf he presented a loving cup, introduced Mayor Frank Schwab who complimented Mr. Shea on behalf of the people of Buffalo.

The program was opened with the playing of The Star Spangled Banner by the orchestra of 50 pieces under direction of Harry Wallace who for several years has been wielding the baton at Shea's Hippodrome. The orchestra is on a platform which is raised and lowered at will. Tschaikowsky's "1812" overture followed and was played in masterful manner. Then came the news reels and later the organ console was raised into view on a platform just like the orchestra and the soloist played a number to demonstrate that the big Wurlitzer can do anything—even talk.

Then came the John Murray Anderson presentation, "The Melting Pot," which went over big with the audience. Gorgeously costumed and snapped up it was enthusiastically applauded. Nathaniel Finston conducted the orchestra during the revue. Then followed "The King on Main Street," an appropriate title for the opening picture. "Laughing Ladies," a comedy closed the bill and as the folks departed, the orchestra played "Shea's Buffalo Theatre March," composed by M. I. Gordon, solo cellist and dedicated to Mr. Shea.

Shea's Buffalo was built at a cost of $2,000,000 of which over $350,000 was spent in furnishings and interior decorations. On January 14, 1925, just a day from the opening date a year later, the first sod was turned by Mr. Shea in preparation for the erection of the house. Since the beginning an army of workmen has been engaged 24 hours a day in rushing the house to completion.

Pommer Resigns as Ufa Chief

E. A. Dupont Sails; First Three Famous-Ufa Releases Are Announced

ERICH POMMER, one of the directors of Ufa, with charge of production and of distribution outside of Germany, has resigned from that company, according to a cablegram received this week from the Berlin correspondent of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

This was not unexpected, and was forecast in the NEWS some time ago as the necessary outcome of internal differences as to policy. It is regarded as unlikely, however, that Dr. Felix Kalman will return to his former position at the head of the company, owing to his advanced age.

Pommer, one of the best known production executives in Europe, although still a young man, started in the film industry in Paris 16 years ago. From cutting and editing he rapidly progressed to important studio executive work. Returning to Germany, he rose during the war to a commanding position at the head of Decla-Bioscop, then Ufa's chief rival. A consolidation of the two companies was brought about, and Pommer amalgamated the resources of the firm, including the studio properties at Tempelhof and Babelsberg, respectively.

The cablegram also stated that E. A. Dupont, Hanns Winter, Mae Murray and Rudolph Valentino were sailing on the Leviathan for New York. This might indicate that Dupont, a leading German director, will take up his work with Universal, or it may merely mean that he will bring a print of "Variety," his latest production.

A story in the Berliner-Zeitung-am-Mittag states that Famous Players will release as its first three Ufa pictures in America: "The Waltz Dream," "Variety" and "The Farmer from Texas," the last named having been made by Joe May with Edward Burns and Pauline Garon in the cast. The story also states that Famous will distribute these in all other countries throughout the world where Ufa has no distribution machinery of its own.

Motion Pictures Great Aid to Navy

Motion pictures contribute 42.6 per cent of the recreation, contentment, amusement and comfort of enlisted men in the Navy, the House committee on appropriations was told by Rear Admiral William R. Shoemaker, Chief of the Bureau of Navigation, during its hearings on the Navy appropriation bill for the fiscal year beginning July 1, next.

So interested are the men about this form of entertainment that they have voluntarily contributed $322,000 from the profit made by the ships' stores in order that the supply of films might be unobstructed.

The Navy buys the output of four large concerns and also secures pictures through twelve independent producers, getting a rate of 6½ cents a foot. So extensive are the two circuits maintained by the Navy, the committee was told, that it requires three years for a picture to make the rounds.

Warners Will Sell Three Theatres in N. C.

Ed Turner, president of the Carolina Theatres, Inc., has announced that his organization will take over the Warner theatres in Concord, Lexington and Columbia, effective February 1st. On this same date they will take over the theatres at Elizabeth City, Statesville, Rock Hill and the beautiful suburban theatre at West Asheville. They also operate the theatres at Hickory, Lincolntown and Newton. The home office of the Carolina Theatres, Inc., is located in Ashville.

At the Warner Bros. home office in New York it was stated that final papers had not been signed but that a representative was now on his way south to do so.

Universal of India Formed as Delaware Corporation

An incorporation of the week in Delaware was Universal Pictures of India, capital $10,000. The attorney was the Corporation Trust Company of Wilmington. It was stated at Universal that this represented no change whatever in that company's distribution in India, or in the personnel there, but simply involved the formation of a separate corporation for its handling.

Schad Again Heads East Penn. Exhibitors

HJ. Schad, head of the Carr & Schad theatres operating in Reading, Pa. and vicinity, was re-elected president of the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Penna., Southern N. J. and Delaware at the annual meeting of the organization held in the rooms of the joint arbitration board.

Wm. E. Cohen, M. E. Comerford and Floyd Hopkins were elected vice-presidents; M. Lessey treasurer and Jack Rosanfeld, Jay Emanuel and George Kline members of the board of managers. The next meeting of the Board will be held on January 28th, at which time the question of percentage bookings will come up for a large share of the discussion.

European Situation is Discussed

Fraenkel Tells of Low Standard of Houses and Showmanship in Exhibiting Business in Central Europe

By Heinrich Fraenkel

Berlin Correspondent, M. P. News

IN dealing with the general European trade situation the crux of the whole problem must necessarily be seen in the state and development of the exhibiting business. It goes without saying that satisfactory receipts can only be extracted out of a market, the theatres of which are playing to capacity and at good prices. I am sorry to say that, from this point of view, things are leaving rather much to be desired on these fields, the fault lying entirely with the, generally speaking, deplorably low standard of the exhibiting business.

In all the European territories, apart of Great Britain, Germany seems to be the only notable exception to the rule; anyhow she has, undoubtedly, made considerable strides within the last two years. As shortly back as that—any American showman who ventured into the country at that time will remember it—even Germany seemed to be hopeless in that respect, the exhibiting business averaging on a standard where it ought to have been 10 years ago. Since that time, however, or rather within the very last year, things have considerably improved in Berlin and in some others of the country's larger cities. Although exploitation is not nearly yet where it ought to be, there are still some few halls built and run on more or less modern lines of exploitation—which shows that the thing can be done and that more improvements can be reasonably expected within the near future. In the provinces, it is of course much worse. I have, within the last 18 months seen about 300 German theatres in 3 dozen cities and towns of every size. And most of what I saw—of the halls as well as of exhibitors' personalities—was not very encouraging. Still, there seems to be springing up a new generation of exhibitors with the right knack for exploitation methods; and if they are well taught they will, in due time, get acquainted with that far from easy art of putting over a film and catering to their public.

Things are much worse in most of the other European countries and especially so in the eastern territories of Central Europe. I have lately toured several of those countries in order to organize First National Publicity in Czecho-Slovakia, Austria, Hungary and Poland. Having, incidentally, closely studied the exhibiting situation and seen about 30 different halls in Prague, Vienna, Budapest, Warsaw, I am bound to admit that, what I saw, did not even come up to my rather pessimistic expectations. In some of these places the exhibiting business is not even where it should have been 10 years ago; it's still in the very infancy of the trade.

As for as quantity goes it's quite sufficient. There are 800 halls in Czecho-Slovakia and 500 in a relatively small country like Hungary. Its the quality which makes the thing so appalling. In Vienna, which can proudly boast of being one of the world's most famous capitals there is not a single theatre which could claim to be run on even the faintest modern lines or which would even look like what patrons can rightly expect of a modern provincial house. The worst thing, however, even worse than the state of the very houses, is the fact that exhibitors, on these fields, do not seem to have the slightest understanding for modern showmanship.

I am expecting quite a lot of an all round improvement from the new First National policy of starting press-sheets on these territories, even if, for the time being, results should not come up to the e pense. It seems to be necessary, however, for the simple reason that, somehow or other, a start must be made in educating exhibitors on these fields and making them understand that the renter does not only sell him his goods, but also his ideas for putting them over and making the most out of them. I feel confident that such a policy must ultimately do a lot of good to the whole American trade which, in spite of "dominating" those markets to a rather great extent cannot, so far, make out of them nearly as much as they should yield, for the simple reason that exhibitors do not know how to sell their goods to the public.

They are, so far, quite content to sit tight and whine about rotten business instead of trying to show some initiative and to cater to the public. As a matter of fact, even an exhibitor showing all the capabilities and experience of Sam Katz, Roxy and Riesenfeld rolled into one, would be up against a tough job if he were to sit at the place of one of those wretched "colleagues" of his and try to use his showmanship. The first thing for him to do would probably be to burn down the whole place and build a new theatre. Provided he had the capital. Which is rather scarce in these territories.

Under these circumstances, it seems to be quite an obvious question why American companies, instead of going in for more or less problematic "educational" jobs, do not start theatres of their own in these fields, in order to see to it that, at least in the first run houses, their goods are exploited properly. The question seems obvious. But the answer is still more so:

Taxation is so absurdly high in these fields that it must necessarily nip in the bud any enterprise in the exhibiting field. In Vienna it's more than 40 per cent of the gross takings, and in Warsaw around 50 plus some smaller items bringing the whole up to nearly 60 per cent of what the exhibitor takes at his box office. Authorities, in these fields, have evidently not yet grasped the fact that one cannot eat a cake and have it and that it would be rather more their job to further trade instead of hampering it.

This will suffice to show that under the present circumstances it would be out of the question for American business men to go in for exhibiting on these fields.

British to Develop Own Film Talent

American Sees Move on Foot to Encourage Native Directors, Writers and Actors to Build Up Production

(Note: The following article has been written especially for MOTION PICTURE NEWS by William Parker, American film man who has joined the Gaumont Company in England as supervising Editor, and presents an interesting survey of the British situation as seen from the inside through American eyes.)

IT IS likely that something will be done to encourage the production of motion pictures for and by the British, but the government and the cinema trade are as far from agreement as they were when the subject was first broached. Everybody, meaning the newspapers, government officials and the few British producers now at work are emphatic in their declaration that something must and something will be done, but just what that something is no individual seems able to determine.

The suggested quota system as a sure means of getting British-made pictures on British screens is receiving, oddly enough, little support in cinema circles. The exhibitors rejected it by a majority vote, and the British film producers point out that a quota system would only serve to bring a flood of "dud" films to the screen, with the evil effect of driving patrons from the "cinema palaces."

The last word from the government on the subject came in the form of an ultimatum to the cinema trade, an ultimatum in effect that if the trade could not make up its mind then the government would make up the cinema trade's mind for it. From the British Board of Trade came a statement, quoted in the newspapers, that proposed legislation will be "designed to protect the cinema exhibitor against his American masters."

The Briton is a shrewd politician, and if I were asked my personal opinion—founded on a study of the situation—I would say that the Briton is far more anxious to get his pictures into American theatres than he is to keep American pictures out of British theatres. The present agitation is, in my opinion, the logical outcome of the futile efforts of British producers to get releases in America.

A happy solution to the perplexing problem would be a spirit of co-operation wherein some sort of exchange system of stars and directors would be worked out, with an assured American release for worth-while British pictures.

Unless a co-operative plan is adopted the American film producers undoubtedly will lose ten per cent of their present business in the United Kingdom, that being the generally understood quota the British government is said to have in mind. Once the

M.G.M. Reach Midwinter Peak

Every Production Unit at Culver City Plant Will be Busy Within Two Weeks

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER will reach the peak of Midwinter production within the next two or three weeks, when every unit of the vast organization will be busy. More activity is promised than ever before in the history of the Culver City plant.

The first two directors to get under way will be Jack Conway, with "Brown of Harvard," and Archie Mayo, with the Rupert Hughes story, "Money Talks." The Rida Johnson Young story was adapted by Dorothy Farnum with continuity by A. P. Younger. Conway is now lining up his cast with no names announced as yet. Claire Windsor and Owen Moore have been cast for the leads in "Money Talks," the scenario for which was prepared by Frederic and Fanny Hatton.

Tod Browning will soon start on "The Four Stragglers," by Frank L. Packard, author of "The Miracle Man." Leon Abrams is scheduled to begin "Nocturne," by Frank Swinnerton. Both directors are now casting.

Victor Seastrom is preparing to begin filming "The Scarlet Letter" with Lillian Gish starred. King Vidor starts "Bardleys the Magnificent," starring John Gilbert, in two weeks. This will be filmed in Technicolor and Dorothy Farnum prepared the scenario from Sabatini's story.

Marcel DeSano soon will start on "In Praise of James Carabine," by Donn Byrne, and Mauritz Stiller is ready to begin on the Cosmopolitan production of "The Temp-tress," by Vicente Blasco Ibanez. Antonio Moreno will play the male lead.

John M. Stahl is scheduled to start his initial production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, within a short time. It will be "King Toto" with Lew Cody. Hobart Henley and Al Raboch are both trying to decide between several potential vehicles. Robert Z. Leonard will be back on the M-G-M lot to begin another picture as soon as he completes the production of Corinne Griffith in "Mme. Modiste."

Monta Bell is fast completing his preliminary plans for the production of "Charm," adapted from the play by John Alexander Kirkpatrick by Alice D. G. Miller.

It is expected that Edmund Goulding will return to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios within a short time to do an original.

Educational February Releases

Six Two-Reel Comedies and Six Single Reelers Due Exhibitors During Month

SIX two-reel comedies in which the leading stars of both the Christie and Educational studios will appear, feature the February release schedule of Educational. One each will feature Lloyd Hamilton, Lupino Lane, Al St. John, "Big Boy" and Bobby Vernon. There will also be a Christie two-reeler in which Neal Burns and Vera Steadman will co-star.

Lloyd Hamilton's offering will be "Careful, Please." It is said to be of the thriller type and replete with the usual Hamilton variety of humor. The Lupino Lane comedy will be "Time Flies," the third of the series of Lupino Lane comedies.

Al St. John will be seen in the new Mermaid comedy, "Hold Your Hat," in which the comedian will have on display all of his well known athletic ability. The new Educational-Juvenile comedy, featuring "Big Boy" is titled "Sea Scamps," and it is said will show this baby comedian off to splendid advantage.

From the Christie studios the two-reelers contributed to the February Educational lineup will be "Page Me," a Bobby Vernon vehicle, and "Run Tin Can," in which Neal Burns and Vera Steadman appear.

Six one-reel subjects are also on the release chart for the month. Two are of the Cameo variety in which Cliff Bowes appears. They are titled "Keep Trying" and "Don't Stop."

The Hope Hampton special is "Colorful Fashions from Paris," second of the McCall Color Fashion News series. "Felix the Cat in Blunderland" and "Felix the Cat Fans the Flames" are the cartoon contributions, while the Hodge-Podge will be "A Criss Cross Cruise." The customary two issues of Kinograms will also be released each week during February.

Lois Moran Gets Leading "Padlocked" Role

Lois Moran has been awarded one of the biggest roles in the Paramount production schedule for next season. She is to have the leading feminine part in "Padlocked" the Rex Beach story now running in Cosmopolitan Magazine and shortly to be published in book form. The picture will go into production under the direction of Allan Dwan at the Lasky studio in Hollywood on January 25th.

Former Cameraman Given Player Contract

Maurice Kains, who until a few months ago was a second cameraman has been signed as a player by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Six months ago he was used as a subject to test a new camera. The test revealed his possibilities as a screen subject and he was given small parts. His success has been rapid and the contract is the result.

British Will Develop Own Film Talent

British government acts there will be similar, if not more drastic legislation in the Colonies, there being a movement on foot in Australia to bar all but domestic films from the Australian theatres.

It is possible to make good box-office pictures in England, there is every factor here for good pictures, but most of the producing companies have been devoting their energies to making weak imitations of American films. I have found, however, in my talks with the more alert and intelligent British producers a definite movement to begin now to develop a school of writers, actors and directors. There are in England, according to a newspaper authority, only three capable directors. There is, I am told, no such thing as a scenario writer who can be depended upon to submit a workable continuity.

The British producers would like, and have tried in the past, to benefit by the experience of American directors and writers by employing them, but their experiments in this regard have been very unfortunate. The stories I have heard here of what some of the American directors and actors have done to British producers have put the American film industry as a whole in a very bad light. Why these directors and actors think they should do things abroad which would subject them to discipline and discharge in an American studio is a question for them to answer.

In lieu of importing these people, the British producers will look to their own field for talent. A definite move toward this objective is the announcement of the Daily Express, Lord Beaverbrook's influential newspaper, that it will at once proceed to produce an all-British film, with $250,000 set aside for this purpose.

Colleen Moore Completes Work in "Irene"

Colleen Moore has completed her work in "Irene," the first of three First National Specials for the coming season. The other two are to be "The Viennese Medley" and "Men of Steel," both of which are now in preparation.

In order to give exhibitors an opportunity to arrange early showings for "Irene," orders have been issued for prints to be rushed to exchanges at the earliest possible date. According to the present schedule all branches will be supplied before the end of January. The release date is set for February 21st.

Marlboro Pictures Ready to Start Production

O. A. Peters, president of Marlboro Pictures, Inc., a recently formed New York corporation with a capitalization of $75,000, is at present considering several stories offered for production.

Walter Fried, named special representative by Peters, has left for Florida to look over studio facilities both in Miami and Jacksonville.

In a statement issued last week Peters said: "We expect to have our first feature production launched about February first. The cast and director will be announced shortly."

Columbia Has Completed "Lure of Wild"

FRANK R. STRAYER, only recently promoted to the directorial ranks by Columbia Pictures Corporation, has completed "Lure of the Wild" for that company. The picture features the marvel dog, Lightening, and has a cast which includes Jane Novak, Al Roscoe, Richard Tucker, Pat Harmon, Mario Carillo and Billie Jean. Among other productions directed by Strayer were "Enemy of Men" and "Steppin' Out."

Man Power Growth Year's Feature

"Picture Business is Built Largely Upon Personnel," Says Hays
in Statement Issued in Los Angeles

"THE most significant feature of the year is the rapid development of man and woman power in the motion picture industry," said Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, Inc., in a statement issued upon his arrival in Los Angeles this week.

"Our business is built largely upon personnel. Take away our directors, our actors, our writers and we have nothing left but a highly organized production, distribution and exhibition machine with nothing to keep it running.

"The studio is the chief source of usefulness, prestige, profit, success and failure in motion pictures. And the studio is only a body of men and women gathered to record upon reels of celluloid definite images which when projected upon a screen will tell a good story.

"The motion picture is only twenty-nine years old. Its progress as an art or a business is without analogy in either field. When dramatic art was a thousand years old its players were bedded in barns and said their lines in stable yards. Twelve years ago producers were startling the public by giving them their first views of stories that were more than two reels long.

"The quickest development has been in those phases more easily adaptable to the motion picture—photography, costuming, staging, lighting, construction of scenery, and acting.

"Nearly any unprejudiced student of the drama will say that the best acting in the theatre today is found in motion pictures. The camera is pitiless. The actor cannot imitate—he must be. The greatest actors are appearing in motion pictures. Not only

Missouri Governor For 10 Percent Tax

FOLLOWING a conference at Jefferson City, Missouri, between Governor Baker and State officers it was agreed to add 10 percent tax on amusements to the proposed constitutional amendment to be voted upon in November. The amendment would be used to raise added revenue for the state school system. Important educators have been invited by Governor Baker to discuss the measure on January 26th.

the stars, but the player who has the smallest bit—they are actors in the fullest sense of the word. They cast their spell by their actions—not by words nor by a beautiful voice.

"The greatest difficulty in progress has been in those phases of the art in which it has been necessary to develop the talent completely. And here has been the most significant development. It is as if in twelve years from the time man first began to construct buildings the architect who designed the Woolworth building had been created; as if twelve years after the invention of the violin we had produced Kreisler, Kubelik and Mischa Elman.

"In the late months have come forward so many fine directors, skilled writers and talented actors that the motion picture is producing at least once a week a story that compares favorably with the best in art, in the drama and in literature.

"The only reason the six hundred motion pictures produced within the year are not all of the quality of the two hundred outstanding ones is for the same reason that we do not have six hundred great novels or six hundred great plays in a twelve-month. The necessary man power does not exist.

"It is merely a question of finding men and women who have the talent necessary to make always the very best. Motion picture producers are trying to employ only the directors and writers who have that ability. They are doing their utmost to develop them. Directing and scenario writing are two great professions that are a part of this and no other enterprise. Applications by the thousands come from persons who want to write scenarios or direct pictures. In most cases they are persons who are not qualified to pass even the first test.

"Producing companies are taking experienced writers into the studios and teaching them the technique of motion picture composition. Many of them have learned and have prospered. Actors, newspaper men, dramatists, stage directors, artists, photographers—men whose training would best make them adaptable for motion picture directing are being given every opportunity to learn this new art. Schools for these purposes have been established by producers.

"These efforts are succeeding. Every few weeks the public is shown a picture directed by a person whose name they have never seen on the screen, with a scenario written by one of whom they have never heard; and great pictures by those they know are doing finer things than ever before.

"It is the development of men and women with the ability to tell a story well on the screen that has been the year's most important progress—this, and the growing appreciation and support of the public for the truly good."

F. P.-L. Foreign Expansion is Shown

Wall Street Journal Outlines Growth in Export Business and Theatre Building in London, Paris and Brussels

AN interesting and comprehensive survey of the growth of Famous Players abroad, both as regards export business and theatre construction, is presented in the following article appearing in a recent issue of The Wall Street Journal:

Famous Players-Lasky Corp. is engaging in a program of expansion in Great Britain and on the Continent that is expected to result in a substantial increase in foreign business. Four large theatres with a seating capacity ranging from 2,500 to 3,500 are being built in capital cities.

First of these to be finished will be the Plaza, in Picadilly Circus, London, which it is hoped will open February 22. The Carlton, another large house in Haymarket, London, has just been started.

In Paris, a large theatre on the Boulevard des Italiens, is under way and will probably be finished next fall. This will be the first large moving picture theatre of the Times Square type in Paris. Another large theatre will be started soon in Brussels.

Famous Players export business in 1925 was the largest in its history and gross is estimated at over $10,000,000. Foreign sales in 1925 were 25 per cent ahead of 1923 and more than double 1921. Foreign business of American moving picture companies is rapidly growing and now accounts for a considerable proportion of earnings.

It is felt the real development of the moving picture in Europe has only begun. Most of Europe is still in the "nickelodeon" stage and there are few theatres of the modern American type. Most moving picture houses, particularly in the less important towns, are converted stores and small halls. Construction of new and more attractive houses are expected to bring larger audiences. It will then automatically follow that film rentals can be increased in proportion to the size of the theatre audiences, even without greatly increasing admissions.

Average moving picture admission in England is 2/6 to 3/6 (about 60 to 85 cents) and in France is six francs or about 21 cents at current exchange.

Purpose of Famous Players in erecting its own theatres in the capital cities is to furnish examples and incentives for other theatre owners to follow which it is hoped will lead to a general improvement of theatre facilities in Europe with resultant larger revenues to both domestic and American film producers.

Famous Players has also important expansion plans under way in the United States. The foremost of these is the Paramount Building in course of construction in Broadway between 43rd and 44th Streets. It will have 31 stories of office space and a theatre with a seating capacity of 3,700. It is being financed by $10,000,000 5½% real estate mortgage bonds recently offered to the public.

Operation of the sinking fund will reduce the loan at maturity to $4,500,000 which is substantially less than the present value of the land. In this property as well as in many other parcels of its real estate, Famous Players has a large profit. The building will be completed by January, 1927.

A new theatre in Miami, Fla., will be opened in February, 1926, one in St. Petersburg, Fla., in April or May and one in Birmingham, Ala., later on this year.

Will Picturize Barnum's Life

Paramount Will Make Big Production of "The Greatest Show On Earth"

THE life of P. T. Barnum, reputed the greatest of all showmen, is to be made into a picture by Paramount under the title of "The Greatest Show on Earth." After two years of research work, Monte Katterjohn has written a screen version of a story on Barnum and put into scenario form the amazing episodes in the career of the great showman.

To supplement the Katterjohn story, Paramount has purchased the screen rights to W. L. Werner's biography, "Barnum," published two years ago. Equally interesting with the announcement of the production is the fact that Wallace Beery has been chosen to bring to the screen the personality of Barnum and that he would arrive in New York this week to discuss the part with Jesse Lasky and Katterjohn.

In discussing the coming production, Lasky said:

"Having spent most of my life in the show business I naturally have always been interested in the personality and exploits of the greatest showman that ever lived. For a number of years I have had the idea of making a picture around Barnum's life.

"'The Greatest Show On Earth' will be one of the biggest pictures we will bring to the screen next season. Naturally it will contain many scenes of circus life, but it will not be a circus picture, it will be the picture biography of an amazing personality, one of the outstanding figures of the American seen in the last half of the last century."

Production of "The Greatest Show On Earth" will begin in the very near future. Material to be used in the picture is now being assembled at the Lasky studio, and one of the best known directors in the business will handle the production.

Milt Gross Will Remain With Chaplin

Despite printed reports to the contrary, word comes from the Charlie Chaplin studio announcing that Milt Gross, clever young New York cartoonist will remain with the comedian. The engagement of Gross is to continue for United Artists Corporation as planned, in connection with Chaplin's new production, "The Circus." The cartoonist is collaborating on a number of whimsical situations which are being devised for the comedy.

Reginald Denny Cast is Completed

Director William A. Soiter has completed the cast and started production on the Reginald Denny starring vehicle for Universal, "Rolling Home." Marian Nixon has the feminine lead opposite the star, while others in supporting roles are Ben Hendricks Jr., E. J. Ratcliffe, Anton Vaverka, Margaret Seddon, George Nicholl, George Marion, Alfred Knott and C. E. Thurston.

Jack Pickford Signs for "Brown of Harvard"

Jack Pickford has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to play the role of Doolittle in "Brown of Harvard," an Irving Whalberg production of the Rida Johnson Young novel and stage play. Jack Conway will direct. An elaborate production is planned.

Fleming Augments "Blind Goddess" Cast

Victor Fleming has made two additions to the cast for "The Blind Goddess," which he will direct for Paramount. They are Ward Crane and Louise Payne. Featured players in the cast are Ernest Torrence, Jack Holt, Esther Ralston and Louise Dresser.

Letter Shows Duplication in Mailing Lists

Motion Picture News,
New York, N. Y.
Gentlemen:

It costs me an extra janitor's fee to have my two bushel waste basket emptied twice a week instead of the regulation once. Our company at its office gets the mail addressed to the following theatres:

Olympic theatre, Liforama theatre, Majestic theatre, Temple theatre, Elk Grand theatre, Star theatre.

The Majestic, the Liforama, the Star and the Elk Grand are off the map. One piece of mail addressed to the Olympic theatre, Spragg Amusement Co., Bellaire, O., would cover. The other operating theatres here are the Capitol theatre and the Roma theatre. This was formerly the Strand and also gets a duplication of mail. We get three and four copies of the Universal Weekly every week, all of which hits the big basket except one. Same way on most other mailed circulars.

The only theatres in Bellaire, Ohio, are Olympic, Temple (same management), Capitol theatre, Roma theatre.

Very respectfully,
The Spragg Amusement Co.

Mexico Strong for U. S. Films

Customs House Report Shows Vast Increase in Importations During the Past Year

ACCORDING to a story in the Los Angeles Times in the form of a dispatch from Mexico City the last Customs House report of imports from the United States to Mexico shows the ever growing popularity of American pictures in Mexico.

During the nine months ending with September, 1924, theatres in Mexico bought from American producers 3,052,955 ft. and during the same time last year, 5,389,915 ft., 1,436,690 ft. more or about 1,500 more pictures.

Nearly 90 per cent of the pictures shown in Mexican theatres come from the United States, 6 per cent from Germany and 4 per cent from France, Spain and Italy. There are none from England and only now and then one made in Mexico by some special company.

There are 44 picture houses in the City of Mexico, and 700 in the country. American producing companies all have Mexican offices to distribute their pictures. The managers are combined into a Film Board of Trade, the president of which is Gen. Olvera. The owners of the theatres are also organized.

The import duty on films from abroad is very high—5 pesos ($2.50) a kilo. That makes the duty on a picture of average length about 60 pesos ($30).

O'Keefe Laugh Month Pioneer

Atlantic City Exhibitor Inaugurated All-Comedy Bills Way Back in 1912

EDWARD J. O'KEEFE of the City Square Theatre, Atlantic City, N. J., is the real Laugh Month pioneer, according to information gleaned from a vast amount of material from all parts of the country, by the Pathe exploitation department.

Mr. O'Keefe is chairman of the Laugh Month campaign for Atlantic City and he was also general manager of the Greater Movie campaign in that territory.

Early in 1912, O'Keefe went to the City Square Theatre from the vaudeville field, and there he met with little success with the two-a-day. Pictures were just starting to attract attention and Mr. O'Keefe hiked to Philadelphia to look them over. He had a tough time finding many available films, but in the single reels put out by the old-time Mutual Company, he saw a ray of light in the dark clouds that rolled by slowly. The General Film output was tied up in Atlantic City by a fellow exhibitor. O'Keefe contracted for all the single reelers he could get from Mutual and one or two other film concerns. It meant a weekly cost to him of $65, but they immediately, to his own words, "made the vaudeville look sick."

Mr. O'Keefe and vaudeville parted and were never company in that house again.

Early in 1913 the Keystone Comedies came in, with Mack Sennett and Ford Sterling in the leading roles. In the two comedians O'Keefe got the idea for a strictly all-comedy bill, and he promptly decided to introduce a program of five reels to contain nothing but Keystone comedies—four repeats and one first-run film, of the custard pie and dizzy-stick vintage.

Showmen with whom O'Keefe conferred about the plan told him he was crazy and that nobody would sit through five reels of comedy except a few kids.

"Well," says O'Keefe, "I decided to try it out anyhow—and from the first day until now it has been a real success." The all-comedy bills are now run twice a month.

Alma Rubens Signs New Fox Contract

FOX has signed Alma Rubens, to a new contract and she will play the feminine lead in some of the biggest productions made by that company during 1926. The first of these will be in "Siberia," now in production.

Miss Rubens has been with the Fox organizations for more than a year and has had prominent roles in some of the most pretentious pictures filmed at the west coast studios. Her more recent releases include "East Lynne," "The Winding Stair" and "The Gilded Butterfly."

In "Siberia," directed by Victor Schertzinger, Miss Rubens is surrounded by a cast which includes Edmund Lowe, Lou Tellegen, Paul Panzer, Lilyan Tashman, Tom Santschi, Henel d'Algy, James Marcus, Daniel Makarenko and Samuel Blum.

Cruze Back, Ready to Start "Old Ironsides"

James Cruze arrived in New York from Tripoli last week and almost immediately departed for Hollywood, where he will produce "Old Ironsides," an historical film of the early American navy for Paramount. Accompanying Cruze were his wife, Betty Compson, and Laurence Stallings, author of "The Big Parade" and "What Price Glory," who will prepare the dramatic treatment of "Old Ironsides."

Cruze spent a month in Tripoli making location photographs and securing local color for the coming production. In New York he conferred with Jesse L. Lasky and it was decided to start production on the picture at once.

Louise Brooks is Opposite W. C. Fields

When W. C. Fields makes his first starring vehicle for Paramount he will have as his leading lady Louise Brooks. The Fields picture is entitled "It's the Old Army Game." Clara Bow was originally slated for the leading feminine role but will be unable to assume it because of a previous engagement in a West Coast Paramount production. "It's the Old Army Game" was adapted to the screen by Luther Reed and will be directed by Edward Sutherland.

"She" to be Shown in New York Territory

"She," the picturization of Sir Rider Haggard's novel, which has been widely read, has been secured by Unique Foto Film of 729 7th Avenue, for the New York territory. It is claimed that the production, which stars Betty Blythe, is faithful, in every way to the author's story.

Edna May Oliver Again in Dix Cast

Paramount has added Edna May Oliver to the cast of the new Richard Dix picture, "Let's Get Married," which is being photographed at the Long Island studio. Others prominent in the cast with Dix are Lois Wilson and "Gunboat" Smith, ex-prize fighter.

Highlights from Johnny Hines' latest feature comedy released through First National, titled "Rainbow Riley."

11 From F. B. O. Next Month

Four Feature Productions and Seven Short Subjects on Release Schedule

F. B. O. has scheduled eleven releases for the month of February. Four of these are feature productions and seven short subjects. Heading the list is "The Tough Guy," starring Fred Thomson and his famous horse, Silver King. Lola Todd appears opposite Thomson and Robert McKim has the heavy role. David Kirkland directed. The picture is scheduled for release February 1st.

"Beyond the Rockies" is listed for release on February 21st. It is an Independent Pictures Corporation release starring Rob Custer and was made from an original story by J. Edward Leithhead. Jack Nelson is directing the cast which includes Eugenie Gilbert, David Dunbar, Bruce Gordon, Milton Ross, Eddie Harris, Max Holcomb, Ray Laidlaw and Max Asher.

"The King of the Turf," ninth of the current season's Gold Bond productions, is listed for February 28th distribution. It is a racing melodrama by Louis Joseph Vance and was directed by James Hogan. Principals in the cast are Kenneth Harlan, Patsy Ruth Miller, and Mary Carr. Others included are George Irving, Al Roscoe, Kathleen Kirkham, David Torrence, Dave Kirby, William Franey and Ed Phillips. A Harry Garson production, still untitled, and starring Lefty Flynn is also scheduled for release on the 28th.

The first of the seven short subjects to be released are "The Giraffe's Long Neck" and "Alice Blues," both set for February 7th. The former is a one-reel cartoon from the Bray studios, and the latter a two-reel Blue Ribbon comedy produced by Joe Rock and starring Alice Ardell.

On February 14th, "Mazie's Married," last of the twelve "Adventures of Mazie" series will be distributed. Alberta Vaughn is starred with Larry Kent, Al Cooke and Kit Guard in support. Ralph Ceder directed the entire series.

"Here Comes the Bride," No. 2 of the new "Fighting Hearts" series also listed for February 14th release. The stories are by Sam Hellman and Alberta Vaughn is starred.

Two are scheduled for release February 21st. They are "Uncle Tom's Cabin," a one-reeler from the Bray studios, and "Heavy Love," a two-reel Standard Fat Men comedy produced by Joe Rock with "Fat" Karr, "Tiny" Alexander and "Fatty" Ross featured.

"Read 'Em and Leap," third episode of the "Fighting Hearts" series will be released February 28th.

China Encouraging U. S. Films

Government Representative Seeks to Interest Americans in Developing Field There

CHINA, which now has a total of about eighty motion picture theatres, wants more American films and a greater number of playhouses in which to present them. In an effort to interest American film men in developing the field in China, the Chinese Government has sent Sum Nung Au-Young of Peking, Commissioner of Social and Economic Research in America and Europe for the Chinese Government, to confer with leading distributors regarding the possibilities of the film market of China.

Au-Young spent several weeks in Hollywood and then went to New York to confer with Will H. Hays and with various distributors. In outlining his mission he said: "At present there are less than 80 theatres in all of China and these are heavily patronized. The Chinese like best the comedies and the so-called society dramas. They are very fond of Charlie Chaplin and Harold Lloyd.

"The Chinese are progressing rapidly in production of pictures. There are 15 studios in China, many of them quite small.

Extra people are paid 50 cents a day and the stars get $6 a day. Now and then one of our stars from the speaking stage makes a picture and receives as much as $10,000 for one picture.

"The chief factor in retarding the popularity of American motion pictures has been the fact that few of them are captioned Chinese. The theaters print the story in Chinese in the program so the spectators can understand the plot. I believe that with more extensive distribution through the building of more theatres, the American producers will find it worth while to insert Chinese titles. The production of Chinese pictures for the Chinese is a thing to be encouraged. I hope that American producers can be interested in aiding us in this. At present, the Chinese outside the cities do not understand American costumes and American ways and will be most interested first in pictures about their own people. Later, however, they will welcome American pictures just as they are now welcomed in the cities."

May Modify Jersey Blue Laws

Drastic Modification is Recommended in Message of Governor Silzer

THE "Blue Laws" which were adopted when New Jersey had no motion picture theatres, 127 years ago, are again in the limelight as evidenced by Governor Silzer's latest message in his capacity as Chief of that State.

In this message, Governor Silzer places himself on record as recommending a drastic modification of these "blue laws."

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey have been diligent in their attacks on these antiquated statutes—in fact those familiar with the situation largely attribute to this fact the Governor's favorable position toward the group of theatre owners affiliated with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. Men outside the film industry in New Jersey credit the New Jersey Motion Picture Theatre Owners with this particular success chiefly because they have presented logical reasons, and at no time have they resorted to "mud slinging" in their anti-blue campaign.

That the fight is won is not conceded by any member of the New Jersey Organization, least of all by their President, Joseph M. Seider. Mr. Seider, although he has maintained a reticence so far as that crusade, the most important in the history of the Organization, is concerned, feels particularly encouraged by the reception by the Republican Legislature of the organization's argument in favor of legalized Sunday pictures through local option.

The sources of information cognizant with the situation are inclined to credit Governor Silzer's successor on January 19th, who will be Governor Harry A. Moore, with an attitude similar to the one now possessed by the present chief executive. It is further gathered from the channels running close to the legislative body that should the "Blue Laws" be changed in any way, one of the first revisions will be to greatly increase the latitude of the theatre owners' rights in New Jersey.

Paramount Busy With Roosevelt Data

PARAMOUNT has detailed Hermann Hagedorn, director of the Roosevelt Memorial Association, to the south west to gather material for a motion picture production dealing with Roosevelt and the Rough Riders. The cooperation of the press has been sought to get into touch with former members of the famous regiment and to find someone to impersonate Roosevelt in the film.

Hagedorn goes directly to San Antonio, Texas, where the Rough Riders gathered and were trained. From there he will go to El Paso to see ex-Governor Curry of New Mexico and other men who were in the famous regiment. Later Hagedorn will assist in the production of the picture, which presumably will be filmed in Southern California.

Hearing Denied by Supreme Court on Conn. Tax

The appeal of the American Feature Film company of Boston to the Supreme Court of the United States to review the Connecticut film tax law was denied this week in a mandate signed by Chief Justice William Howard Taft.

The case is dismissed without costs to either party. Originally Fox Film corporation of New York was a party to this action, but withdrew at the time the exchanges were reopened in New Haven after an agreement had been reached with state leaders.

"Skyrocket" Opens in Providence

THE SKYROCKET," the Peggy Hopkins Joyce starring vehicle for Associated Exhibitors opened at Providence Monday, December 18th, and despite inclement weather was enthusiastically received by capacity audiences. Receipts for the day at the Victory Theatre are said to have been far in excess of the daily average for the house.

The picture lends itself to numerous tie-ups and all of the larger stores carried Peggy Hopkins Joyce windows. Large newspaper space was also given the star's Providence screen debut.

P. D. C. Lists Music for "The Volga Boatman"

An advance list of the musical numbers which will be used in the final cue sheet for "The Volga Boatman" will be issued by Producers Distributing Corporation in order to facilitate the work of orchestra leaders and theatre organists in preparing the accompaniment of the Cecil B. De Mille production.

Rudolph Berliner, musical director for Cecil B. De Mille, claims the production lends itself to a striking setting. "Of course," says Berliner, "The central strain of our completed score will be 'The Song of the Volga Boatman,' which inspired the photoplay, but with this great folk piece will be a splendid grouping of those much-desired chances to 'cut loose' and give the public something really fine."

Sax Engages Space at F. B. O. Studios

In order to speed up production, Sam Sax, president of Gotham Productions, has contracted for additional space at the Film Booking Offices studio. A second Gotham unit, in addition to the one at the Metropolitan Studios, will start production there in February.

By the middle of February Sax will have four units at work at the same time. The first company will finish "Hearts and Spangles," "Racing Blood" and "The Sign of the Claw," the three remaining subjects of the twelve on the 1925-26 Gotham program.

The second unit at the F.B.O. plant will start "The Golden Web," an E. Phillips Oppenheim story, first of the Greater Gotham Productions. William Fairbanks will be starred in the third company in a new series of "thrillodramas," while the fourth unit will be an all-comedy company featuring Lloyd Hamilton in a series of twelve two-reel comedies.

Meighan Supports Junior Paramount Stars

When the Paramount Junior Stars make their film debut in "Glorious Youth," the Byron Morgan story which Sam Wood is directing, they will have in the supporting cast Thomas Meighan, Lila Lee and Chester Conklin, this trio having been added in the past week.

Previously it was announced that Adolphe Menjou, Clara Bow, Percy Marmont, Lois Wilson and Richard Dix were filmed in scenes of the Juniors' picture. All of these senior stars have minor supporting parts, with the leading roles played by the juniors, supported in addition by Ralph Lewis, Joseph Burke and James Bradbury Sr. in character roles.

Moreno Will Play Lead in "The Temptress"

The leading male role in "The Temptress," Cosmopolitan's forthcoming production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release, has been assigned to Antonio Moreno. The picture will be directed by Mauritz Stiller, Swedish director, who recently was brought to this country by M-G-M.

Schenck, Goldwyn Unite for Big Picture

"THE Garden of Allah" will be made into a mammoth production by the combined production forces of Joseph M. Schenck and Samuel Goldwyn, with Norma Talmadge in the starring role and Ronald Colman from the Goldwyn organization playing opposite her. Henry King will direct the picture from a scenario prepared by Frances Marion.

The picture rights to the Robert Hichens novel are owned by Schenck and he and Goldwyn will produce the picture in Egypt and Northern Africa, the exact locale of the story. The production will start in September with Biskra the center of operations. When completed it will be distributed by United Artists as a special.

Calls Round Table Sessions

Ray Rockett Will Conduct Weekly Discussions of First National Problems

WITH production humming at the eastern studios of First National, Ray Rockett, studio manager, has inaugurated a weekly round table discussion by all department heads of all annoyances and difficulties that have come up in the course of picture production. It is thought these discussions will bring about a closer cooperation and a better general understanding all around of department heads.

It is Rockett's idea that these heads of departments should meet weekly and lunch together to frankly discuss any problem of production for the efficiency and welfare of the organization.

In discussing the weekly conferences, Rockett said:

"In any studio you will always find many little troubles that are often too small to warrant a department head carrying them to the general manager. But sometimes if left to develop some of these grow into annoyances that in the end will be big ones and perhaps cause ill feeling or retard production and make themselves felt generally. There is no place where they may be brought up and discussed so satisfactorily as over the lunch table."

Among the latest stories to go into production at the eastern plant is "The Savage," with Ben Lyon and May McAvoy in the featured roles, and Sam Hardy and Philo McCullough in the cast. Fred Newmeyer is directing the picture under the supervision of Earl Hudson.

Shooting on "Men of Steel" is now in its twelfth week, with approximately four or five weeks more to go before it is completed. On the completion of "Men of Steel," A. L. Rockett will start his first production under the First National banner. It will be "Puppets" from the stage play by Frances Lightner. Milton Sills will be starred and George Archainbaud will direct.

First National to Broadcast

In Arrangement With Station WJZ will Radio Specially Treated Scenes of Pictures

FOLLOWING the good reception accorded the broadcasting of a specially treated scene from "Too Much Money," one of the current First National attractions, the company has arranged with Radio Station WJZ to put on the air on Thursday evening of each week a scene from the production to be released the following week. This arrangement will give first run exhibitors full benefit of the publicity for their Sunday openings.

"Just Suppose," starring Richard Barthelmess, was broadcast last Thursday evening at 8:30 p. m., which time has been set as the regular period for this novel idea every week. Next week "Memory Lane" is scheduled.

A dress rehearsal of the broadcasting of "Too Much Money," held at the Hotel Astor, New York, on Wednesday evening, January 13th, was attended by prominent representatives of magazines and newspapers and executives of the Radio Corporation, as well as First National Pictures and allied producers. Following an informal dinner, at which addresses explaining the scope and purpose of the innovation were delivered by Colonel C. F. Davis, Harold T. Melhuish of the Radio Corporation and Samuel Spring, representing First National.

"Too Much Money" was broadcast for the benefit of the diners. An impromptu radio studio has been erected in an adjoining room of the hotel in which the broadcasters enacted the roles before a microphone that sent the sound waves only across the hall into a loud speaker in the dining room.

In the treatment accorded "Too Much Money," an adaptation of the play of the same title by Israel Zangwill in which Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson are co-featured, four characters were introduced in a scene with which the story starts and which affords the impetus for subsequent action. The dialogue was cleverly devised to give an idea of the characters concerned and to build up a dramatic situation, leaving the audience in doubt, however, as to the outcome.

The radioized version of "Too Much Money" carried the appeal of a one-act dramatic sketch, but care was taken to pique the interest in order that listeners-in would want to follow the story in its complete form on the screen. Orchestra music was made a natural background for the dialogue.

No special form will be followed in the handling of subsequent stories, the idea being to find a treatment most suitable to each. The greatest care is being taken in the preparation of the scripts, which will be presented by actors skilled in talking over the radio.

According to a conservative estimate WJZ reaches an audience of fifteen million.

Barrymore Supporting Cast is Selected

Banner Productions is selecting a cast to support Lionel Barrymore in "Brooding Eyes," to be released by the Henry Ginsberg Distributing Corporation. The players so far signed include Ruth Clifford, Montague Love, William V. Mong, Lucien Littlefield, John Miljan and Alma Bennett. The two roles still to be filled will be cast this week.

Production has already started at the Banner studio in Hollywood under the direction of Edward Le Saint.

Universal Appoints Two New Directors

Universal has added two new names to the directorial staff. They are Ernst Loemmle and William Wyler. Loemmle has been an assistant at the studio for a number of years. He is preparing a western feature in which he will direct Jack Hoxie. Wyler, also an assistant director who made a series of two-reel westerns with Jack Mower some months ago, will direct Art Acord in "Lazy Lighting" as his first feature production.

F. B. O. Buys "Her Honor The Governor"

Film Booking Offices has purchased screen rights to an original story titled "Her Honor the Governor," which dramatizes the American woman in politics. It is the work of Hyatt Dabb and Weed Dickinson. The story will be put into production immediately and is announced as one of the outstanding features of the new season's program.

Vajda Completes Original for Paramount

Ernest Vajda, Hungarian novelist, has completed his second original story for the screen. It was written especially for Betty Bronson and Ricardo Cortez and is still untitled. William Wellman will direct the picture which will go into production within a few days. Arlette Marchal, French actress, has been signed for an important role.

De Mille Ready to Start "Silence"

The De Mille production department will start work within the next few days on "Silence," the screen adaptation of Max Mercin's mystery melodrama with H. B. Warner in the same role he portrayed on the speaking stage. Rupert Julian will direct. The supporting cast has not yet been decided upon.

Robert Kane Buys Current Stringer Serial

Screen rights to "The Wilderness Woman," a serial by Arthur Stringer, now running in the Saturday Evening Post, have been purchased by Robert T. Kane, who will put the story into production at an early date at the Cosmopolitan studio. It will be a First National release.

Lubitsch Will Produce "The Door Mat"

AN adaptation of "The Door Mat," a successful stage play, will be the next Ernst Lubitsch picture for Warner Brothers. Screen rights to the story were only recently purchased. Lubitsch and his assistants are starting work on the script at once.

"The Door Mat" is by Ethel Clifton and Brenda Flower and is not to be confused with "The Doormat," which had its premiere at the Punch and Judy Theatre in New York in 1922. This will be the last comedy-drama Lubitsch will produce before making his long-promised big spectacle.

Owen Moore is Given Long Term M-G-M Contract

Owen Moore, at present playing the role of West End Bertie in "The Black Bird" the Lon Chaney starring vehicle, has been signed to a long term contract according to an announcement made on the coast by Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. By the terms of the contract Moore becomes a featured player and he will rank with Lew Cody, Eleanor Boardman, etc.

This member of the Moore trio, the other two being Tom and Matt, has been in pictures since the early days having appeared before the camera in Biograph productions, previous to which he played in the "Legitimate."

He will be assigned a big leading role for his initial appearance as a featured contract player.

"U" Signs Matt Moore for Lead in Feature

Universal has signed Matt Moore to play the featured leading role in "The Mystery Club," which will shortly go into production under the direction of Herbert Blache. The story was written by Arthur Somers Roche. A strong cast will support Moore. In the principal roles will be Charles Puffy, Edith Roberts, Mildred Harris, Charles Lane, Warner Oland, Fred Herbert, Alphonse Martel, Finch Smiles, Earl Metcalfe, Nat Carr, Jed Prouty and Alfred Green.

Crozier After Material for Meighan

William Le Baron, associate producer for Paramount has assigned Emmet Crozier to search for material for Thomas Meighan's next series of pictures to start early in April. Crozier, a former newspaper man had an active share in the preparation of "Irish Luck" and "The New Klondike."

Gertrude Olmstead Signs New M-G-M Contract

Gertrude Olmstead, who has been playing in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions for over a year has been signed to a new contract. At present she is playing in "Monte Carlo" opposite Lew Cody under the direction of Christy Cabanne.

Larger Productions for Fred Thomson

FRED THOMSON'S western features are to be made on a bigger scale than ever according to announcement from F.B.O., the distributing company. The first of the larger Thomson pictures will be "The Tough Guy," his next release.

Thomson's popularity has been so constantly on the increase during the past season and the demand for his pictures so insistent, that it has been decided to increase the production budget for all future attractions in which the big Western hero is to be starred.

Under the supervision of Milton Gardner, production manager for Thomson, a corps of writers is at work on stories for future productions.

Pictures to Display Raw Life

Denver African Expedition Will Show Death Duels of Wild Jungle Denizens

HUMAN nerve and the kill instinct of savage beasts are strangely contrasted in a thrilling moving picture record of Raw Life which is being made in southwestern Africa by the Denver African expedition.

Financed by H. E. Ellison and a group of Denver business men who are interested both in the scientific and pictorial phases of the enterprise, the party is headed by Dr. C. Ernest Cadle, internationally famed scientist and big game hunter.

Dr. Cadle is known in southwestern Africa as "the Man without Fear." His job in stage-managing the duels to the death among the wildest denizens of the African jungles demands nerves of steel as well as intimate knowledge of animal life. Under his direction, Paul Hoefler, Denver cameraman, is filming a series of battles between natural enemies in the jungle world. These elemental and deadly struggles which stress the savagery of Raw Life run the gamut from the lowest to the highest in the animal kingdom.

Combining the film record of the fight instinct in animals with a scientific study of a form of human life, which is only a scant step above the wild beast, the Denver African party is making a sensational picture of the mysterious Bushmen.

One of the primary objects of the expedition is to determine whether or not these wild people of the sandveld and the bushveld are the long sought missing link of the evolutionists. Scientists already have decided they are the oldest people living in Africa. And they are so close to being animals themselves they may provide the conclusive proof of the evolutionary theory.

Domestic scenes of Bushmen life, weird tribal ceremonies, grotesque animal dances and even thrilling incidents of the hunt are portrayed in the film already made. The Bushmen are still in the savage state in which they have existed for hundreds or thousands of years.

Official representatives from the British government in South Africa and from the Cape town university accompanied the expedition on its trek into the Kalahari desert country where the first Bushmen were found.

Plans For "What Price Glory"

Director Raoul Walsh Arrives From Coast to Confer With Laurence Stallings

DEFINITE plans are shaping for the Fox production of "What Price Glory" which they will adopt for the screen from the tremendously popular Broadway stage success. With the purpose in view of getting production activities definitely launched Raoul Walsh, who has been assigned to the direction of the picture, has come in from the West coast.

While in New York, Walsh will confer with Laurence Stallings, co-author of the stage play, who also wrote the screen adaptation.

Actors have not yet been selected for the parts of Captain Flagg, Sergeant Quirt and the French girl, Charmaine, according to the dispatch announcing Walsh's present visit to New York. He will seek any actors who believe they are qualified to portray the various roles. He expects to complete his conferences with Captain Stallings and secure players in time to begin filming on the Fox lot in Hollywood by February 10.

"What Price Glory," based on the stage play which is duplicating its sensational New York success with road companies throughout the country, will be Walsh's first picture for Fox under his new contract. Since he made "The Honor System" for Fox several years ago, Mr. Walsh has directed several successes, including Douglas Fairbanks in "The Thief of Bagdad." His most recent picture was "The Wanderer."

Metropolitan Studios Active

Five Features in Actual Production and Six Others Ready for Filming

WITH five features in actual production and six others in the final stages of preparation, Metropolitan studios are in the midst of their heaviest production schedule. The pictures now being produced include "Paris at Midnight," "Whispering Smith," "Forbidden Waters," "The Unknown Soldier" and "The Prince of Pilsen." All are to be released through Producers Distributing Corporation.

E. Mason Hopper is directing "Paris at Midnight," which is Frances Marion's second Metropolitan production. The story was adapted by Miss Marion from Balzac's "Pere Goriot" and features Jetta Goudal, Lionel Barrymore, Mary Brian, Edmund Burns and Emile Chautard.

"Whispering Smith" is George Melford's

current picture. It is the screen version of Frank H. Spearman's novel of the man who modernized the railroads across the Rockies. The company, headed by H. B. Warner, Lillian Rich, John Bowers and Lilyan Tashman, is now on location at Mojave.

"Forbidden Waters" is the second priscilla Dean Metropolitan feature, written especially for the star by Percy Heath, Alan Hale is directing and the cast includes Walter McGrail, Casson Ferguson, De Sazia Mooers and Dan Mason.

Renaud Hoffman has started filming "The Unknown Soldier," and A. H. Sebastian has "The Prince of Pilsen" well under way with Paul Powell directing Anita Stewart and George Sidney in the leading roles.

E. Richard Shayer Joins M-G-M Staff

E. Richard Shayer, author and playwright has signed a contract to join the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer writing staff. Shayer first caught the attention of the studios when he staged a war sketch before the members of the Writer's Club at which Irving Thalberg was present. Following a conference with Lewis B. Mayer the contract was signed.

Universal Stock Company Signs Dancer

Joan Warner, professional dancer, who has danced in many musical comedy hits and in vaudeville, has been signed by Paul Kohner, Universal casting supervisor, as a member of the Universal stock company. Miss Warner is eighteen years old and a graduate of Los Angeles high school. She has had little screen experience.

Sam Hardy Joins Cast of "The Savage"

Director Fred Newmeyer has added Sam Hardy to the cast of "The Savage," which went into production at the New York studios of First National this week. Philo McCullough has also arrived from Hollywood to play one of the principal roles. Ben Lyon and May McAvoy are featured in the picture.

Bennett Adds Mack Swain to Fox Cast

Director Chester Bennett has added Mack Swain to the cast of "Dangers of a Great City," a crook melodrama which has just gone into production on the Fox lot. Pauline Starke and Rockcliffe Fellowes have the leading roles, with Grace Darmond, Johnnie Walker and Mickey Bennett in support.

Philo McCullough Signs Five Year Contract

Philo McCullough signed a five-year contract with First National in Hollywood last week and immediately left for the east to assume a leading role in the Earl Hudson production of "The Savage," which Fred Newmeyer is directing with Ben Lyon and May McAvoy in the featured roles.

Semon Pathe Comedy is Due January 31

IN THE release of "Stop, Look and Listen," scheduled for January 31st, Larry Semon will make his screen debut as a star under the Pathe banner. The comedian departs from his previous characterizations and plays "straight" in conventional clothes in this latest comedy.

Semon is supported by a cast which includes Mary Carr, William Gillespie, Lionel Belmore, B. F. Blinn, Bull Montana, "Babe" Hardy, Curtis McHenry and Josef Swickard. John Adams presents "Stop, Look and Listen," which was adapted by Semon from the musical comedy by Harry B. Smith. The comedian also directed the picture, which is in six reels.

Skate Derby to Advertise First National Month

FIRST NATIONAL exploitation chiefs have affected a tie up with several leading dailies in the Middle West to promote an ice skate derby in furtherance of the First National Month campaign. Newspapers which have joined the move include the Minneapolis Star, the Milwaukee Sentinel, and Detroit Times.

The Star is confining the derby to school children of Minneapolis and St. Paul. The Sentinel will hold the finals of the derby at Milwaukee's municipal rink.

Six pairs of Alfred's Ice King skates with shoes have been offered the contenders in the names of six of First National's stars—Norma Talmadge, Colleen Moore, Milton Sills, Richard Barthelmess, Constance Talmadge and Corinne Griffith. The skates have the stars' autographs etched on their blades.

Buster Keaton Starts Work on "Battling Butler"

According to an announcement from Joseph M. Schenck, Buster Keaton started work on "Battling Butler," an adaptation of the stage play written by Brightman, Milford, Furber and McDonald, and the production will be completed for Spring release through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Sally O'Neill will appear opposite Keaton.

Al Boasberg, Paul Gerard Smith, Charles Smith and Lex Neal, who worked on "Go West," are the 'gag' men signed by Schenck for the new production.

"Rough Riders" Research Work Completed

With research work about completed, John Russell, well known motion picture writer, departed for Hollywood last week to collaborate with Hermain Hagedorn on the story of "The Rough Riders" for Paramount. It is the story of Theodore Roosevelt and the Spanish-American war and is to be produced as a roadshow.

A nation-wide search is now on for a comparatively unknown actor to play the role of Roosevelt.

Fox Adds Four to "Yellow Fingers" Cast

Fox has added four players to the cast of "Yellow Fingers," which has just been started at the west coast studios with Olive Borden in the leading role. The new additions are May Foster, John Wallace, Josephine Crowell and Charles Newton. Emmett Flynn is directing the production which is an adaptation of the Gene Wright novel of the same name.

"Because I Love You" New Negri Picture Title

Paramount has decided upon "Because I Love You" as the final releasing title for Pola Negri's next picture, which previously had been titled "The Peacock Parade" and "The Pasteboard Queen." It is a Dimitri Buchowetzki production from an original story by Ernest Vajda.

Many Fox February Releases

Four Supreme Attractions and Tom Mix Starring Vehicle Included in List

FOX has arranged a very extensive releasing schedule for the month of February, which will include four Supreme Attractions, a Tom Mix starring vehicle, two Imperial Comedies, the fifth of the O. Henry two-reelers, the fifth of the Married Life of Helen and Warren series, two one-reel Fox varieties and the usual Fox News issues.

The initial Supreme Attraction on February 7th will be "The Road to Glory," directed by Howard Hawks. The cast includes May McAvoy, Leslie Fenton, Rockliffe Fellowes, Ford Sterling, Milla Davenport and John MacSweeney.

"The Johnstown Flood" will be released February 14th. It will bring to the screen the happenings of one of America's greatest disasters. Irving Cummings directed. George O'Brien heads the cast which includes Florence Gilbert, Janet Gaynor, Anders Randolph, Paul Nicholson, Walter Perry, Paul Panzer, Max Davidson, Georgie Harris and Sid Jordan.

"Dangers of a Great City," a crook melodrama is set for release February 21st. It was directed by Chester Bennett and has Rockliffe Fellowes and Pauline Starke in the leading roles. In the principal supporting roles are Johnny Walker, Grace Darmond and Mickey Bennett.

Two big features are scheduled for release February 28th. Tom Mix will be seen in "My Own Pal" and the other is a rural comedy drama directed by Frank Borzage and titled "The Dixie Merchant."

Olive Borden will play the leading role opposite Mix and little Virginia Marshall will also be seen to advantage in the production. Madge Bellamy and Jack Mulhall have the leading roles in "The Dixie Merchant," adapted from the Barry Benfield novel, "The Chicken Wagon Family." In the supporting cast are J. Farrell MacDonald, Claire McDowell, Harvey Clark, Onest Conly, Evelyn Arden and Edward Martin-dale.

The release schedule also contains many attractive short subjects. First of these, on February 7th, are "Egypt Today," a one-reel Variety, and "A Bankrupt Honeymoon," an Imperial two-reeler.

On February 14th will come "A Woman of Letters," of the Helen and Warren series. This will be followed on the 21st with "Elsie in New York," an O. Henry, "Officer of the Day," an Imperial, and "Sawdust and Spangles," a Variety.

Leon Abrams Will Direct "Nocturne"

Leon Abrams former Parisian writer and director, who produced Sarah Bernhardt's last screen play, is at work on a new story soon to go into production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, to whom he is now under contract. Following that Abram will direct "Nocturne," an adaptation from the novel by Frank Swinnerton.

De Sano to Direct Prize Ring Story

The first directorial assignment for Marcel de Sano since he signed a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract will be "In Praise of James Carabine," a story of the prize ring, by Donn Byrne. The scenario is now being prepared. Details of the cast have not yet been announced.

Allan Dwan to Direct "Padlocked"

"PADLOCKED" by Rex Beach will be one of Paramount's biggest productions for next Fall, according to announcement by B. P. Schulberg, associate producer, who has already assigned Allan Dwan to direct.

The Beach story was purchased by Paramount before its publication. It is at present running in Cosmopolitan Magazine in serial form. Dwan expresses it as his belief that it is the best motion picture material he has ever seen. "Not only is it out of the rut," he said, "but it is also the most colorful and dramatic story ever placed before me."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Buys Conrad's "Romance"

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has purchased "Romance," a novel written by the late Joseph Conrad in collaboration with Ford Maddox Hueffer, and it will be given a most elaborate production. The story attracted considerable attention at the time of its publication and has been widely read. It will be made by one of the company's best directors in the near future.

Sun and Spiegelberg Merge Tabloid Organizations

It is reported that Gus Sun and the Spiegelberg interests, operators of theatres in Charlotte, have consolidated their tabloid organizations. The move eliminates a very keen competitive struggle formerly existing between these two companies the report states.

Trio of scenes from "Western Pluck," a Universal production.

'Beau Geste' to be Made in America

PARAMOUNT is to make "Beau Geste" in America instead of in Algeria as originally planned. The change was made because of the preoccupation of the Foreign Legion and other branches of the French army with the Riffians in Morocco and their consequent inability to cooperate in the making of the picture.

Herbert Brenon, who is to direct, was to have sailed on January 16th and his plans were changed at the last moment. As a result production work on the English sequences will be started immediately at the Long Island studio and it is probable the desert scenes will be made in California.

Charles Rogers, a member of the Paramount Picture School has been cast for an important role in this picture despite the fact that his picture experience covers a period of only six months. Wallace Beery and Neil Hamilton have also been assigned to important parts.

Raboch Renews Contract With M-G-M

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have renewed the directorial contract of Al Raboch. Though one of the younger directors in the industry he has to his credit several important achievements. He was art director for Rankin Drew's "The Girl Philips" and not only designed the settings, but appeared in the picture as well. Later he became associated with Charles Brabin and wrote the scenario for "Driven." He also assisted Fred Niblo in the direction of "Ben Hur."

von Stroheim is Preparing "Wedding March"

Erich von Stroheim, accompanied by his secretary, Betty Mason, and his assistant, Louis Germonprez, is in the San Bernardino mountains preparing the continuity for "The Wedding March," his initial production for P. A. Powers, which is to be released through Paramount. It is an original story by von Stroheim and he will also play a leading role in it. Production will be started about February 15th.

Beauty Contest Winner is Signed by "U"

Another beauty contest winner has been signed to a five year contract by Universal. She is Adrienne Dore, winner of the Los Angeles Examiner "Miss Los Angeles" contest, and second place winner in the "Miss America" contest at Atlantic City. Miss Dore's first role is in Herbert Blache's production of "The Mystery Club," from Arthur Somers Roche's "Crimes of the Arm-Chair Club."

Seena Owen Will Star in "Shipwrecked"

Seena Owen has not withdrawn from her contract with Metropolitan Pictures, despite reports to the contrary. In fact she is to make her initial appearance under the Metropolitan banner in "Shipwrecked" an adaptation from the stage play by Langdon McCormick. Actual production is scheduled to start within ten days, though the director and supporting cast have not yet been announced.

M.G.M. to Have 4 in February

"Auction Block," "Money Talks" "Devilkin" and "Ibanez Torrent" Due Next Month

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER has scheduled four features for release early in February. They are "The Auction Block," "The Devilkin," "Money Talks" and "Ibanez Torrent." "The Auction Block" was adapted by Frederic and Fanny Hatton from the Rex Beach novel of the same name and was directed by Hobart Hanley. Charles Ray and Eleanor Boardman have the leading roles. The supporting cast includes Ernest Gillen, James Corrigan, Sally O'Neil, David Torrence, Forrest Seabury, Ned Sparkes and Charles Clary.

"Money Talks" is a Rupert Hughes story directed by Archie Mayo. Claire Windsor and Owen Moore have the leading roles. The story was adapted by Frederic and Fanny Hatton.

"The Devilkin" will be Benjamin Christianson's first American production. Norma

Shearer is the star, with Ernest Gillen in the juvenile lead. Others prominently cast are Carmel Myers, Claire McDowell, Joyee Coad and John Miljan.

Blasco Ibanez's novel, "The Torrent" was made by Monta Bell into a fine screen drama, entitled "Ibanez Torrent." Greta Garbo and Ricardo Cortez have the leads. Other players of importance are: Gertrude Olmsted, Edward Connelly, Maurice Kains, Lucien Littlefield and Mario Carillo. The continuity is from the pen of Dorothy Farnum.

De Mille Has Completed "Volga Boatman"

CECILE B. DEMILLE has completed "The Volga Boatman," his second personally directed production for Producers Distributing Corporation release, and it is now in the cutting room. The picture tells a story of the Russian revolution and DeMille claims it is the greatest production he ever made.

Lenore Coffee made the screen adaptation from the original story by Konrad Barcovi. William Boyd heads the cast, which also includes in the main supporting roles, Elinor Fair, Victor Varconi, Theodore Kosloff and Julia Faye.

Keen Contest in Sales Drive

First National Branch Managers Making Whirlwind Finish in the Competition

THIRTY-EIGHT branches of First National are staging a whirlwind finish in the sales campaign which concludes January 30th with $8,000 at stake to be awarded successful managers and their employees. Reports indicate heavy bookings of First National product.

The standing of the branches according to the latest returns was as follows: Oklahoma City, New Jersey, Washington, Atlanta, Dallas, San Francisco, Detroit, Des Moines, St. Louis, Vancouver, Charlotte, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Boston, New Orleans, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles, Buffalo, Omaha, New Haven, Toronto, Calgary, Philadelphia, Portland, Albany, Chicago, Louisville, New York, Cleveland, Seattle, Milwaukee, Denver, Winnipeg, Montreal and St. John.

After all the returns are in the first, second and third branches will share in the distribution of prize money. The manager, assistant manager, salesmen, head booker and head cashier or bookkeeper all will receive substantial remuneration. In addition each employee in the first branch will receive a sum equal to three weeks' salary; in the second branch two weeks' salary and in the third branch one week's salary.

In connection with the sales drive another feature of First National Month is the exploitation contest open to exhibitors of houses of all classes. Entries will be received up to February 21st. Prizes will be awarded exhibitors submitting the best exhibits. In the event of two or more contributions being deemed of equal merit, the prize tied for will be awarded to each entrant. The prizes in this event total $2,000.

Dolores Costello Warner Star

Harry M. Warner Announces Elevation of Player Before Sailing for Europe

BEFORE sailing for Europe last Saturday with Motley H. Flint, Los Angeles banker, for a six weeks tour of the Warner exchanges in England and the continent, Harry M. Warner, who, arriving from the coast only stayed in New York long enough to witness the premiere of "The Sea Beast," announced that there would be several new faces in the Warner pictures for the coming season and that he had elevated Dolores Costello to the rank of star.

Warner's trip abroad, he stated, was to see that Warner pictures were being given the best possible distribution in Europe and to arrange for the super-specials that are to be part of the company's product scheduled for next season. This schedule is about ready, he said, and an announcement would be made in a few days.

Another reason for his going abroad, he stated, was to study the problem of the internationalization of pictures but not to acquire foreign theatres. Warner will return from Europe on March 2nd and will spend most of his time on the coast.

Bessie Love to Play Lead in "Lovey Mary"

LOUIS B. MAYER has signed Bessie Love for the leading role in "Lovey Mary" which will be directed by Harry Millarde from a continuity written by Agnes Christine Johnson. Members of the supporting cast for this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production have not been chosen as yet.

Miss Love was chosen for the part after a thorough canvas of the actresses available, competition being keen as the role was coveted due to its sympathetic character and excellent name.

De Mille Signs Sullivan to Long Contract

Cecil B. De Mille has signed C. Gardner Sullivan to a long term contract and the writer's first work under the new document will be the continuity of "Bachelor Brides," Rod La Roque's next starring vehicle for Producers Distributing Corporation release.

Lucien Littlefield to Support Tom Mix

Lucien Littlefield will have one of the leading supporting roles to Tom Mix in the star's new vehicle for Fox titled, "Tony Runs Wild." The picture will be directed by Thomas Buckingham, with Tony, the Mix horse also featured.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Stunt For Pathe Comedy Scores

Contest to Find Young America's Best Scenarist Echoes Through New England

THE vast possibilities open to exhibitors to exploit short comedies is pointedly illustrated in a big exploitation stunt just concluded wherein Manager Crull of the Albee Theatre, Providence, R. I., in conjunction with the Providence News, S. Barret McCormick, exploitation manager for Pathe, and Tom North, special representative for Pathe, staged a contest for the children of New England.

Through this contest, Providence, R. I., gave the motion picture industry the world's youngest and most talented scenario writer, Edna Sedgwick, aged 9. After being received and complimented by Mayor Gainer of Providence, this little Miss marched on the State Capitol of Rhode Island to meet Governor Aram J. Pothier. Then the little 9-year-old Edna turned south to Broadway and was feted on the Great White Way.

Edna was the winner of the contest in which a prize of $200—and 40 other prizes of lesser amounts—was awarded to the New England youngster between 5 and 14 years of age who wrote the most adaptable ideas for a scenario for the Pathe-Hal Roach "Our Gang" Comedians. The big contest was announced at the Albee Theatre, Providence, two months ago.

Fifteen hundred scenarios poured in from embryo writers following front-page announcements and daily stories in the Providence News. Jack Sullivan, motion picture critic of the Providence News, used 300 columns of reading matter and 75 photographs. Motion pictures of Edna meeting the Mayor and Governor were shown in the Keith-Albee theatres, while the talented little writer, who is a toe dancer as well, entertained crowds at the theatre at a special show when the award was made to her.

In New York she was met at the Grand Central by the Keith Boys Band, companies of Girl and Boy Scouts, Singer's Midgets, animals from the Hippodrome, including three elephants, four reindeer hitched to a sleigh with Santa Claus driving, newspaper reporters and photographers. A special police escort was provided by the city. Park Avenue was roped off for two blocks while pictures were made for the New York dailies and Pathe News. A parade then led to the office of Pathe Exchange, Inc., 35 W. 45th St.

37 Days Publicity on Stunt for 'Phantom of the Opera'

The Amateur Critics Contest conducted by the Philadelphia Daily News in connection with "The Phantom of the Opera" engagement at the Aldine Theatre, has the "long distance" record for a newspaper publicity stunt in the Quaker City.

Starting on October 12th, it continued through November 16th, bringing the total number of days up to 37. Each day an important announcement bearing on the contest appeared in the columns of the Daily News thereby creating an uninterrupted stream of publicity on behalf of the picture which was reflected in added returns at the Aldine box-office.

The rules of the contest stipulated that one amateur dramatic criticism on the "Phantom" be published each day of the picture's run and that the three prizes for the best ones be awarded at its close.

Newsies Ballyhoo "Last Edition" in Seattle

Newsboys and carriers of the Seattle Union Record, formed in line and carried banners ballyhooing the engagement of "The Last Edition" at the Columbia theatre in that city. The demonstration was staged at small cost by Manager Robert Bender, who invited the newsies to a special matinee performance. They marched to the theatre with banners flying and distributing on the way the herald reproductions of newspapers.

"Phantom" in Person Gives Advance Announcement

Manager Ray Brown of the Strand Theatre, Altoona, Pa., has the "Phantom" in person announce the coming to his house of the Universal spectacle "The Phantom of the Opera."

At the end of the feature at the Strand theatre, in Altoona, Pa., the theatre was darkened some for a spotlight which travelled slowly from the left side of the house to the right lower box while the drums kept up an incessant roar ending with a bang when the spotlight reached the box. In an instant, up jumped a robed figure with a large hat decorated with a flowing feather, and a "Phantom" mask hiding his face, the robed figure began: "I am the Phantom. I hide in cellars and commit terrible deeds. I come to you next week with five thousand and fifty others including Lon Chaney, Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry. Come next week and I will thrill you and again I will make you laugh. I am 'The Phantom of the Opera.' "

At the word "Opera," the spotlight went off and the balance of the performance continued.

Society Girls Aid Drive for "Kiss For Cinderella"

The biggest single unit of Manager G. E. Brown's campaign on "A Kiss for Cinderella" was the appearance of fifty Memphis society girls on the Palace stage at the Saturday matinee.

The young ladies appeared in the original costumes they wore at the Annual New Year's Cabaret held at the Peabody Hotel for the benefit of charity. The event was outstanding because of the fact that no girl in the group could have been paid to make an appearance, while their social standing drew a capacity house. Because of its unusual success, the event will be repeated next year on a more elaborate scale.

A lovely young girl in an old-fashioned costume appeared in the lobby of the theatre a week prior to play date and also during first two days of showing. She distributed thousands of "Kisses for Cinderella," a candy Kiss obtained gratis from a leading confectioner.

The Strand-Pathe News plane which made scenes of a big local football match for special showing at the Strand Theatre, Memphis. The stunt was one of several used in a special drive for the Newsreel features at the Strand.

Capitalizes Scarcity of Giants for "Unholy 3"

Having three men, a giant, a dwarf, and an impersonator of Lon Chaney, pose as the ill starred trio of "The Unholy Three," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle for Lon Chaney, was the main feature of a campaign waged by Exploiteer Larry Jacobs for the benefit of Loew's Regent Theatre at Harrisburg, Penn.

An advertisement in the want ad column of the paper calling for the services of a giant and a dwarf, ran for two days without any response. So Jacobs called up the paper and gave the idea of writing an article on the scarcity of dwarfs and giants. On the third day a giant and a dwarf applied and were accepted at the theatre. The paper ran a special story on this occurrence.

Further activities of the campaign consisted of a shadow box in the lobby in which was placed a head of Chaney illuminated by a green light, two hundred window cards, four thousand cards for the radiators of automobiles bearing a welcome to a visiting football team, and on the reverse side an advertisement of the picture, teaser ads in the newspapers, and a trailer two weeks ahead of play date.

Special Show of "Ancient Mariner" for Old Salts

An "old salts" matinee performance of "The Ancient Mariner" proved one of the outstanding items of a successful exploitation campaign on that picture at the Strand theatre in Seattle. The matinee was conducted in co-operation with the Seattle Star.

The Star not only invited Seattle's ancient mariners, but it ran each day as well, pictures and biographies of the old sailors, together with some very spirited depositions from them, as to whom had been the longest voyager on the Seven Seas. Most of the old fellows seemed to be rather contemptuous of any mariner who had put in less than fifty years before the mast, and dubbed such tyros as "boys." The tie-up earned many inches of free space.

Manager H. C. Farley of the Empire, Montgomery, Ala., let old dobbie pull the Dinosaur and thereby heightened the effect of this ballyhoo for "The Lost World" (First National).

One of a pair of "ballyhoo wagons" which the Midwest Film Exchange is using in Oklahoma City to exploit showings of "Down Upon the Suwanee River," a Lee-Bradford feature. The trucks are equipped with caliopes.

Booms "The Man On The Box"

Washington Campaign Supported By Newspapers; Three Main Units In Metropolitan's Drive

THREE main units, two of which were heartily backed by newspapers, comprised the backbone of an efficient exploitation campaign for the presentation of "The Man on the Box" at the Metropolitan theatre.

The Washington Evening Star, in co-operation with the Crandall Enterprises, gave a special morning party to 800 boys and girls from the various orphanages and children's homes in the District of Columbia. For this event the Crandalls offered the use of the Ambassador Theatre and the newspaper transported the youngsters in buses.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of the District of Columbia schools, gave official sanction to the event and waived the operation of the compulsory school attendance act.

There was a taxi war on at the national capital during the run of the picture and the Independents took advantage of the situation by displaying on their cars placards reading:

"Independent Taxi. 'The Man on the Box' Wants to Earn His Living and Obey the Law."

The campaign was executed by Bert Adler, engaged on special campaigns for Warner Bros., and the exploitation staff of the Crandall theatres.

"Smile" Contest Puts Over "Go West" in Portland

A "Smile" Contest tie-up with the Portland Telegram exploited the run of Buster Keaton's "Go West" at the Liberty theatre of Portland, Oregon.

The "Smile" Contest was taken from the press book, and consists of a drawing contest, the drawings to show what kind of a smile Buster Keaton would have—if he smiled. A two column drawing was run in the Portland Telegram for a week in advance of showing with appropriate stories on the contest and on the picture. The prizes for the winners were ten dollars in gold, a monthly pass to the Liberty theatre, and eight double passes for "Go West."

Kiddies Exploit "Below The Line" in Edmonton

The manager of the Monarch Theatre, in Edmonton, Alberta province, Canada, put over a good stunt during the recent run there of "Below The Line," when he invited the school children of the town to draw pictures of "Rinty," and offered three cash prizes, of three dollars, two dollars and one dollar, respectively.

The competition aroused deep interest and helped to pack the theatre at every showing, as Rin-Tin-Tin was already a prime favorite with the kiddies as well as their elders.

Publishers Tie Up For "Joanna" Drive

First National Pictures has tied up with Barse and Hopkins, the publishers, on a two dollar cloth edition of "Joanna," the novel by H. L. Gates which has been produced on the screen by Edwin Carewe with Dorothy Mackaill in the leading role.

So far as is known "Joanna" is the first heroine of a serial story written especially for newspapers to win lasting place in a first grade book publication. It is announced by the publishers as the most fascinating and startling novel of the year, and in its construction and presentation, the most original. It is estimated that already "Joanna" has had more than 3,000,000 readers in the United States through newspaper publication in almost every important city in the country. That she was a heroine of a new kind is evident from the requests for her in permanent form from those who watched her, day after day, through her newspaper publication.

With window cards, circulars, stickers and other exploitation accessories, Barse and Hopkins are giving the book the strongest sort of promotion with the retail sellers. Book store window displays are being arranged in conjunction with the showing of the picture at local theatres.

"U" Stars Features in National Contest

In cooperation with Hugh McNair and Duke Murta of Display Topics, official publication of Drug Topics' display department, Joe Weil, Director of Exploitation for Universal, has designed a movie star contest which will be displayed nationally during January and February in over 1,000 of the country's leading drug stores.

Five photos of Universal stars, with a white band on which has been printed "What Star is This?" covering part of the face of each copy below giving the titles of the latest productions the star has appeared in, have been mounted on special cards and will be used as centers of window displays.

The lavish and effective arrangement of cut-outs shown in the photo above of the Strand theatre, Tampa, Fla., made a compelling display and forcibly proclaimed the presence of Charlie Chaplin in his new United Artists feature "The Gold Rush."

Tillson's Laugh Month Drive

Complete Campaign For Lupino Lane Comedy at Kalamazoo Cited as Model For Short Feature

ROY TILLSON staged one of the greatest Short Feature newspaper advertising, publicity and exploitation campaigns that was ever accorded a two-reeler in the State of Michigan, when the Educational-Lupino Lane Comedy "The Fighting Dude" played the Fuller Theatre which he manages at Kalamazoo, Mich., January 3d to 6th.

The Lupino Lane Comedy served as the principal feature in a great Laugh Month Exploitation campaign.

That he succeeded admirably may best be ascertained by a summary of what was used to exploit the comedy and what the campaign accomplished.

Short Feature and Laugh Month "Ad" space dominated the three column by seventeen inch newspaper layout used in the Kalamazoo Gazette as an opening announcement, and likewise the smaller "ads" that succeeded it.

Laugh Month secured a succession of humorous references from the pen of "Penn. E. Wise," of the Kalamazoo Gazette.

Besides the special Laugh Month accessories, including a banner, posters and pennants, Mr. Tillson used a trailer on "The Fighting Dude," a slide, 11 x 14 lobby cards, 50 one-sheets, and two three-sheets on this comedy.

Several window displays were arranged for and a shadow-box was used in the lobby in which a cut-out of Lane was placed.

Type-set one-sheets displayed on front of all street-cars passing the theatre, featured the Short Feature and Laugh Month program. Special Laugh Month date strips were used as well, with the Educational-Lupino Lane one-sheets.

For a street bally, a rough looking man togged out as a prize fight trainer carried a banner reading "I am the trainer of THE FIGHTING DUDE—See me at The Fuller."

Three-sheet lobby display boards, lobby and marquee hangers, electric signs and display frames all carried the Laugh message in a featured and forceful manner.

Cards in Swedish Exploit "The Tower of Lies"

Postal cards addressed to the Swedish residents of Everett, Wash., played up the Swedish angle on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "The Tower of Lies," by the Swedish authoress, Selma Lagerlof, and directed by Victor Seastrom, the Swedish director.

The postal cards were printed in Swedish and sent out to twenty-five thousand Scandinavian patrons of the Everett theatre. The results were most gratifying.

"The Merry Widow" (M.G.M.) at the Capitol, Little Rock. Manager R. T. Newton designed the arrangement which features cutouts of the famous waltz scene behind window frames. The strip of carpet painted on the base of the displays gave depth to the scenes.

Gives Plan of Thorough Drive

Creamer's Campaign For "The Spaniard" Employed Wide Variety of Publicity Angles

OUTLINING a campaign which he used for "The Spaniard," and which proved most successful from every standard of measurement for picture exploitation, John W. Creamer, of the Strand Theatre, Chillicothe, Mo., gives the working plan of a drive which was admirably thorough. As will be seen from the following account of the methods he employed, Creamer went down the calendar of publicity mediums available to the average theatre. Mr. Creamer outlines the campaign as follows:

"Set of six teaser slides run for two weeks in advance, copy changed at end of first week. These slides run while organist played 'Spain.'

"Two one-sheets, one on each side of proscenium arch, hit by small spots while teaser slides were run.

"One thousand rotos distributed house to house, space on back sold, paying for rotos and printing.

"Hand painted banner used in rear of auditorium for two weeks in advance, illuminated as audience passed out.

"Painted lobby mirrors 10 days in advance.

"Special built lattice work lobby display used for week in advance. This was built in one end of lobby, and between shows, while audience passed out a Victrola concealed back of display played a late Spanish record. This caused every one to look for the source of the music, incidentally selling them 'The Spaniard.'

"Tie-up with fashionable ladies ready-to-wear store. The first time they ever permitted foreign advertising in their windows.

"Tie-up with Spanish classes at local high school. Passes offered to the boy and girl in each making the greatest effort to get their Spanish lessons. Photos and rotos displayed on bulletin board in teacher's room. Contest extended into letting the Spanish Club pick the winners of the passes. Passes presented by president of Spanish Club. All Spanish students urged by teacher to see the picture and report on it. Letter received from Spanish Club thanking me for co-operating with them. Arrangements made to use Spanish students on stage as a chorus, singing popular songs in Spanish as a prologue.

"Mounted one-sheet on rear of my coupe for one week in advance.

"Teaser ad run two times in Constitution two weeks in advance: 'Wanted—I will put on a Spanish bull fight in Chillicothe soon and will be interested in finding a place to exhibit same. Address me, Senor Cortez, "B," care of Chillicothe Constitution.

"Teaser ad run several days following previous ad: 'A Public Statement. In regard to adv. stating that a bull fight would be held here, we wish to state that while it is the national sport of the Spaniard, we would rather not have a real live bull fight held in Chillicothe. What do you say? Committee of Citizens.'

"Ad used in answer to previous advertisements: 'Senors and Senoritas—Since you object to a live bull fight being held in Chillicothe, permit me to say that you can see me as the matador in two bull fights in the Paramount picture, 'The Spaniard,' coming to the Strand, Thursday and Friday. (Signed) Ricardo Cortez.'

"A dozen letters actually received protesting against holding of the bull fight."

New Twist on Radio Tie Up for "Ancient Mariner"

Another angle of the radio tie up for theatre exploitation purposes was evolved in San Antonio, Texas, recently by Ben Gersdorff, manager of the Majestic theatre, in connection with "The Ancient Mariner." Gersdorff hooked up with the San Antonio Daily Light to broadcast every night for seven nights one or two verses from the "Rime of the Ancient Mariner." Announcements then invited listeners to send in short essays on the meaning of the particular verse read, with prizes offered for the best essays.

Horse Race on Main Street Boosts "Kentucky Pride"

Through a cooperative tie-up with a Crippled Children's Fund in Youngstown, Ohio, the Liberty theatre obtained permission to stage a horse race over a course on a main thoroughfare as an advertising stunt for "Kentucky Pride." The event was well built up the charity angle appealing to groups and individuals.

The Youngstown Vindicator and the Rotary Club sponsored the stunt. The race was started by the Chief of Police. Every effort was exerted to get a big crowd out to witness the race, as the Rotary Club took the occasion to launch a drive for the Crippled Children.

The horse that won—it was a fixed race—was called "Kentucky Pride." The stable colors of the winning jockey consisted principally of large multi-colored sign on his back, counselling everybody to see "Kentucky Pride" at the Liberty, as he always won, etc.

Exploits "Fighting Heart" Before Fight Fans

A special drive to interest the pugilistic fans of Youngstown, O., is the Hippodrome Theatre's presentation of "The Fighting Heart," was included as part of a thorough general campaign for that picture. A broadside devised after the fashion of paper used by clubs announcing bouts, was prepared. A scare-head caption directed attention to the "World's Championship Fight," that George O'Brien would indulge in at the Hippodrome Theatre. These broadsides were distributed to the crowds assembled at two local fight events, and were also given a heavy distribution in pool rooms, barber shops and other places where men usually congregate.

The lobby of the theatre—in addition to its regular selling aids—displayed a three-sheet board carrying large photos in opposite corners, of Champion Jack Dempsey and George O'Brien—the star of the picture—both in fighting trim.

Logs, constructed of papier mache and used as frame material for poster and still displays, indicated the atmosphere of First National's "Winds of Chance" in the lobby display for that picture at the Majestic Theatre, Portland, Ore.

"A Flaming Affair"

(Fox—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

BREEZY farce comedy, a compilation of comic absurdities that get the laughs and speed along at a clipping rate. Sid Smith in a mirth-arousing characterization of a gent who wants to be a hero in girl's eyes and succeeds by passing himself off as a dauntless fire-fighter, with the assistance of a battalion-chief's helmet atop of a street car conductor's uniform. An irresistibly funny role to which the star does full justice. Consuela Dawn gives a vivacious portrayal of the girl, with Rodney Hildebrand and Joseph Belmont furnishing adequate support. Fire scenes good, photography excellent, film well directed. Likely entertainment for average audience.

The Cast

The Boy.....Sid Smith
The Girl.....Consuela Dawn
Fireman.....Rodney Hildebrand
Fire Chief.....Joseph Belmont

The Story—When girl shows liking for heroic firemen, her admirer sends her photo of himself in uniform. It's really a street conductor's garb, but she falls for it. He obtains possession of a fire-chief's helmet and girl finds him wearing it. He shows her around firehouse and hooks himself to ladder in demonstrating use of apparatus. Alarm sounds, he is carried off and shoved up to window of burning house, finds two Frenchmen inside, lowers them to street with rope, follows himself, is universally congratulated for bravery and wins the girl.

Summary—Good farce stuff with burlesque romance, well directed and acted. Sidney Smith at his best in lead. Action fast. An amusing comedy that should be welcome addition to any program.

"Parisian Modes in Color"

(Educational-Kodachrome—One Reel)

AFTER the fair ladies have looked this one over—and they will all want to—many a bank account is apt to receive a bad dent for Hope Hampton has never appeared to better advantage than she does in these latest Parisian creations that are reproduced in Kodachrome color.

Being a model without looking a little bit foolish is a rather difficult task but Miss Hampton certainly possesses the necessary poise for a role of this sort. In addition, she particularly lends herself to color film subjects as any one will testify after witnessing her work in this picture.

Dazzling creations from the leading fashion shops are displayed by Miss Hampton which include models from Phillipe et Gaston, Charlotte, Poirer, Worth, Martial et Armand, Drescoll, Lenvin, Jean Patou, Cheruit and Boue Souers.

The "Kodachrome" color process used in this picture also deserves a mention for the different hues and difficult shading of some of the models, stand out with fine effect.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"For Sadie's Sake"

(Educational-Christie—Two Reels)

AJIMMIE ADAMS comedy out of the Christie studios and directed by Harold Beaudine that promises to register as good entertainment. "Tillie" the trick mule or jackass, figures conspicuously throughout the two reels and shows her heels to very good advantage in several instances. Molly Malone "fresh from the farm" is most attractive and Eddie Baker looks the part of the hard boiled stage manager. The story concerns a trip that Jimmie makes to the city in order to deliver a number of animals and fowls to a theatre.

Story by Frank Rowland Conklin, directed by Harold Beaudine, photography by William Wheeler and Fred Jacquemin. Produced by the Christie Film Co.

The Cast

The Farmer.....Jimmie Adams
The Actress.....Mollie Malone
Stage Manager.....Eddie Baker

The Story—Jimmie is engaged in a "back to the farm" enterprise and has been engaged by a show playing in one of the theatres of a near by city, to bring in some of farm animals and fowls to be used in one of the acts. To begin with considerable difficulty is experienced by Jimmie when he endeavors to hitch "Tillie" the mule to a cart. Tillie kicks several of them apart before she is placed in front of one heavy enough to withstand the effects of her heels. As the caravan passes thru the city the geese escape from their crate—furnishing a number of amusing situations when Jimmie attempts to capture them. Reaching the theatre, he meets Molly Malone who is being mistreated by a hard boiled stage manager and immediately becomes her protector. Pursued by the stage manager who resents interference with his love making, Jimmie becomes mixed up in the act that is going on and his antics are received with much applause by the audience. The end of the reel shows Jimmie, Molly and "Tillie" en route to the farm in their strange conveyance.

Summary—Good, pleasing entertainment that is suitable for all theatres.

"Lighter Than Air"

(Pathe-Aesop Fable—One Reel)

HERE is one of the funniest that cartoonist Paul Terry has turned out in several weeks. The bubble craze has taken all the animals by storm. These are most extraordinary bubbles—in fact they carry passengers while floating in the air and a large flock of mice with a chief bubble blower in charge, are having a great time joy-riding thru the ether until the wily old cat gets aboard another bubble and chases them. This one is full of laughs. EDW. G. JOHNSON.

"Good Cheer"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

THIS time Hal Roach has provided a real holiday number for his assorted "Gang" and this two reeler should pull exceptionally good at this time of the year. Most every member of the Gang is in this one and they all get an excellent chance to show their wares. Robert McGowan did the directing.

THE CAST

Mary Kornman, Farina, Mickey Daniels, Fatty Joe Cobb, Jackie Condon, Johnny Downs and Jay Smith.

The Story—The first scene opens with all the Gang assembled in front of a big store window where a Santa Claus is doing his stuff. With the exception of two of the older members of the Gang who are entirely disillusioned as to the reality of the benevolent Old Man, the rest of the youngsters are very much impressed with the performance. Then the curtain is pulled down but after a few minutes—accidentally flies up again—disclosing the fake Santa Claus. The kids disperse, muttering, "there ain't no Santa Claus." However, Micky and his pal decide to attempt the restoration of their faith but are handicapped by lack of funds. They hit on the scheme of selling hot bricks to all who happen to be out in the terrific storm and manage to get a pocket full of money. Xmas presents are manufactured and they start out on a midnight trip down the chimneys. At the same time a big bootlegging plot is being carried out and the conspirators are all disguised in Santa Claus costumes. The Gang assist in their capture and everything turns out well for them.

"Whispering Whiskers"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

THIS one gets away to a poor start and drags almost all the way thru the first reel but about mid-way begins to find its legs and comes down the stretch a winner. So, if your patrons do not mind a lack of action for a short time—the latter part is bound to send them away satisfied. It's a Mack Sennett production with an exceptionally good cast. Billy Bevan and Andy Clyde are in the leading roles. Del Lord did the directing.

The Cast

Billy Bevan, Andy Clyde, Madeline Hurlock and Kewpie Morgan.

The Story—Charley Brush and Pete Porter are a couple of laborers in an office building where a detective agency happens to be a tenant. During the course of their duty one day, Charley puts on one of the several sets of whiskers that are hanging around the room and as his disguise serves to hide his identity from Pete, he at once aspires to become a sleuth. About this time a turbaned individual from the Far East pokes his head in the door and thinking that Charley is the chief detective informs him that a famous ruby is hidden in the house of Don Peruna. They enlist the aid of Madame Murino who is a clairvoyant, believing that she can tell them how to locate the lost jewel. There is another party also looking for the ruby and he attempts to impersonate the clairvoyant in order to secure Charley's information. A big affair is put on at the home of Don Peruna with both factions in attendance and they do as fine a job of house wrecking in their efforts to locate the gem, as any one will want to see.

Summary—Slow at the start but gathers speed toward the middle of the picture and the second reel is very much better. O. K. for a not too critical audience.

"Be Careful, Dearie"

(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

PLENTY of complicated domestic troubles in this amusing single reeler and with a theme of this kind, a generous number of laughs can always be looked for. The story concerns a shrewish wife who is ever nagging her docile husband to demand a raise from his boss. Difficulties arise in the home when the wife becomes jealous of the attractive maid who manages to place the male member of the household in many embarrassing positions. The maid is "fired" and after going to the office to get her back pay, makes such a splendid impression on the boss that he decides to come thru with the raise in salary, thinking that she is his wife. The boss then invites himself to lunch at the home and this necessitates the re-engagement of the maid in order to carry out the fraud. Many complications result before matters are ironed out. The cast includes Joe Moore, Chrystine Francis, Fay Holderness and Wallace Lupino. Zion Myers did the directing.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Tight Cargo"

(Universal-Blue Bird—One Reel)

THIS is another of the series of short comedies in which Charles Puffy, the rotund comedian is featured. It affords Puffy a better opportunity than most of those stories in which he has been seen in the past. A silk hat salesman in Africa, he is attacked by a crocodile, from which he makes his escape to a cannibal camp, where he is destined for the boiling pot. An exhibition of magic saves him and wins for him the princess who has been betrothed to the cook. The latter and his henchmen waylay Puffy and place him in the stew kettle, from which fate he is saved by the Princess. There is some real good comedy in this one and it should be appreciated.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Charley, My Boy"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

IT will be an unusual kind of audience that this one will miss fire on, for in the opinion of this reviewer, here is one of the snappiest two reel comedies that has come out of the Hal Roach studios in some time. Charley Chase is starred and Katherine Grant plays the opposite lead and it's not so easy to find a combination which will provide a merrier entertainment. With the strides that Charley Chase has taken in the past couple of years, the Motion Picture industry can well afford to keep their eyes on him for its a certainty that this clever fellow will not stop at being a comedy star. And—Katherine Grant is right along in the running. Leo McCarey directed.

The Cast

Charley Chase, Katherine Grant, Walter James, William Courtright, Fred Kelsey and Sidney D'Albrook.

The Story—Katherine's papa who is a successful business man has a mate picked out for his attractive daughter—in the person of "Old Charley"—who, "though rather old, bald and passe," happens to be a valuable business friend. Katherine meets him and after one look, is not overjoyed at the prospect. In the meantime "Young Charley"—stone broke—is out scouting for a job in his only suit of clothes. An introduction is effected between Young Charley and Katherine when the latter's car splashes mud over the only suit. However, Charley does not mind, for its love at first sight. He then pursues his quest for a job and answering an ad, horns his way into an office—not knowing that it is part of his prospective father-in-law's establishment. The chief executive is a stickler for neatness in personal attire and when he walks into the office, Charley mistakes him for another applicant and attempts to show him the way out—calling attention to the poor taste displayed in several articles of clothing that he wears. "Old Charley" and Katherine also appear at the office and a lot of good comedy follows with "Young Charley" finally running away with the prize.

Summary—A fast steering, merry comedy with Charley Chase and Katherine Grant in the leading roles. Is suitable for all theatres.

"Film Facts No. 1"

(Red Seal—One Reel)

MAX FLEISCHER has made up an instructive single reel subject that shows the complete evolution of the harvesting industry. Scenes go back to the primitive and show the different methods that finally lead to the speedy machines that are in use today. A silk worm nursery in Japan and the manufacture of the silk thread, what time means to man in the matter of the different things that take up his life, complete the reel.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"The Man With the Scar"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

SOME fairly good comedy is interspersed with the usual western stuff in this two-reeler which features Fred Humes. There is just enough of the comedy to relieve the usual effort at tenseness which dominates these pictures. Humes has a rather pleasing personality and this is among the best pictures he has done. The story is simply and directly told without the many complications of the western and therefor is an improvement.

The comedy relief comes when Humes in his effort to track down a much wanted bandit and win the reward first captures a middleweight boxing champion doing his roadwork and proceeds to mix it with him, and then halts a college professor, who is on the trail of some rare insect specimens.

The Story—"Cold Cash" Harding will not permit his daughter, Bubbles, to marry any man who is not possessed of one thousand dollars. Jerry Evans is enamoured of Bubbles and has the necessary amount with the exception of $965. At the height of his distress he reads a placard announcing a reward of a thousand dollars for the capture of a desperate bandit. He proceeds to capture everyone he encounters and eventually runs into the bandit disguised as an old man. Jerry takes pity on the latter, offers him a lift into town on his horse and purchases a square meal for him. Following the meal Jerry discovers the identifying scar and gives chase, overtaking the bandit just this side of the Mexican border, where he holds him until the arrival of the posse. He wins the reward and with it the girl.

Summary—A good short western in that it is relieved by some comedy above the average in pictures of this type. The story is simply and well told and should prove attractive in the neighborhood houses.

"Animated Hair Cartoon"

(Red Seal—One Reel)

MARCUS, "Times" artist, has again turned out an interesting exhibition of his skill with the pen and brush and this time he transforms some hard looking characters into the well known countenances of Snub Pollard, Jack Holt, Charles Chaplin, Rudolph Valentino, Charles Murray, Mabel Normand, Irvin Cobb, and Harold Lloyd. Hair, moustaches, ears, etc., fly around at an amazing rate.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Her Lucky Leap"

(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

WANDA WILEY is again seen in one of her typical action comedies in which she is called upon to take many a hard knock and to go through evolutions suitable to her somewhat unique talents. There is scarcely another girl on the screen compelled to take the punishment Miss Wiley does in these comedies.

In "Her Lucky Leap" Miss Wiley is made the unwilling and unknowing accomplice of a trio of jewelry crooks, which fact brings about all of her daring exploits in dashing cabs and motorcycles and eventually wins for her a reward which she has long sought. There is an abundance of good comedy material in this two-reeler and it is brimful of good fast action.

The Story—Three slick jewelry thieves on shipboard take advantage of an epidemic of seasickness to ply their trade, but they make the mistake of dropping a diamond necklace down the neck of Wanda instead of that of their female accomplice. Wanda inadvertently bumps the latter into the deep blue sea as the crooks realize their mistake. The chase starts on shipboard and continues after the landing and is also taken up by a detective. Wanda eludes them all by dashing from one cab to another and eventually skims across a telephone wire into a home which proves that of her aunt, a jewelry fancier. The crooks succeed in getting into the house as Wanda makes her getaway on a motorcycle and dashes into the police station, where she is followed by her pursuers. The two latter are captured and Wanda rewarded with all the insignia of the police department.

Summary—This is an extremely fast moving picture with some good situations and knock-about comedy cleverly executed by the star. It should make many new admirers for Miss Wiley.

"All Astride"

(Pathe Spotlight—One Reel.)

ALTHOUGH the automobile has certainly replaced the horse in the matter of fast transportation, Grantland Rice shows in this interesting "Spotlight" how thoroughly indispensable they are in some parts of the country, such as among the cattle ranches, rough mountain roads, swamps and on the polo field and race track. A fine description is given in each instance.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"The Hero of Piperock"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

COMEDY predominates this series of two-reelers which feature Pewee Holmes as Magpie Simpkins and Ben Corbett as Dirtyshirt Jones. They are western of an entirely different type than the usual run. This one offers some crude comedy whose main element of humor is the substitution of a skunk for a Thanksgiving turkey.

The Story—The town of Piperock is preparing for a Thanksgiving celebration and is much distressed by the fact that Paradise, the rival town has secured possession of the only turkey available in the county. Volunteers are called for to secure the turk for Piperock and Magpie and Dirtyshirt offer their services. After a series of adventures they succeed in getting the bird and Dirtyshirt returns with it, spreading the tale that Magpie was yellow and had failed. Magpie gets his revenge when at the opera house Dirtyshirt is being lauded for his courage and success. He substitutes a skunk for the turkey and in the resultant excitement obtains possession of the bird and wins the admiration of the women as he later presents it to them.

Summary—This comedy western offers a fairly good story, whose humor is somewhat crude. It will doubtless be good for some laughs however, in the neighborhood houses.

"Badly Broke"

(Universal-Blue Bird—One Reel)

CHARLES PUFFY, featured in this single reeler, and his pal, the runt, a bit out of luck discover a fat wallet on the sidewalk, but they hesitate too long in picking it up and it goes to another. In endeavoring to get a match from a milkman who has rung a doorbell the milk vendor makes a hasty escape and the housekeeper passes them two dollars, with which they repair to a lunch counter built on a construction elevator. Becoming enamoured of the waitress they do not realize they are being hoisted to the roof or that they have the company of a husky street cleaner, who proceeds to call the waitress down, following which she announces he is her husband. Puffy and the runt fall into a vat of plaster below. There is not much to recommend in this one.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Felix the Cat Spots the Spook"

(Educational-Cartoon—One Reel)

HERE is a very good Pat Sullivan cartoon in which Felix is shown seeking a little slumber after a round of nocturnal visits. Felix spys a comfortable looking nest in a tree top and climbs in for a snooze only to be ousted by a bouncing big bird. Next, he tries a pig yard where three full grown porkers are asleep and even they don't want him for a bed companion. However, thru a trick he gains possession of a key to a house and after disposing of the mice inmates and a spook, Felix is rewarded by being given a place in the bed of the owner on his return.—EDW. Marshall Speeds Up Production

Supervisor of Fox Comedies is Rushing Many Pictures to Their Completion

GEORGE E. MARSHALL, supervisor of comedy production at the Fox west coast studio is continuously speeding up production activities, with the result that an exception amount of product is being turned out regularly. Last week he finished the sixth of the "Helen and Warren" married life series titled, "Cheaper to Move," and he has already started the seventh of the series, "Too Many Relations." Hallam Cooley and Kathryn Perry play the leading roles in the series.

Work has been started on the sixth of the Van Bibber series under the title of "The Reporter," with Earle Foxe in the role of Van Bibber and Florence Gilbert as his leading woman. Lew Seifer is directing.

"From the Cabby's Seat," sixth of the O. Henry comedy series was finished January 15th and will be released April 4th. The next of the series, "A Social Triangle" will be started at once and is scheduled for release May 16th.

Number 4 of the "East Side, West Side" series, "A Number One Society," went into production January 17th under the direction of James Gruen, a newcomer on the Fox directorial staff. The story and scenario are by Sidney Lanfield and J. Walter Ribens.

Lloyd Bacon, son of Frank Bacon, is an other new director on the Fox lot. His first production will be "The Garden of Edam," with Edna Marian playing the feminine lead opposite Arthur Houseman. Edward Jamison is also in the cast.

Joe Rock Completes Second Two-Reel Drama

Joe Rock has just completed the second two-reel detective drama starring "Fearless" a police dog, which is entitled "His Pal." Chesterfield Motion Pictures Corporation is distributing these subjects which comprises a series of twelve, each being a complete story in itself.

The cast, for this second release comprises, in addition to the dog-star, Jack Mower, Grace Cunard, Bruce Gordon, Florence Ulric and others.

Neeley Edwards Starts New Comedy for "U"

Neeley Edwards has started work on a new comedy vehicle for Universal written by Scott Darling, supervisor of comedies for the company. The story is said to have a French setting with Neeley as an innocent American tourist. Dick Smith is directing.

Three Sennett Comedies are Started

Mack Sennett has started production on three new comedies and has just completed another two-reeler. Eddie Cline is directing a racing two-reeler with Alice Day in the starring role. She is supported by Danny O'Shea, Ruth Taylor, Eddie Quillan and Joseph Young.

Gil Pratt is making good progress with a new comedy of the "Smith Family" series with Ruth Hiatt and Raymond McKee in the roles of Mr. and Mrs. Smith. The supporting cast includes Mary Ann Jackson, Sunshine Hart and Cap, the canine.

Del Lord is directing an unnamed comedy with a cast that includes Billy Bevan, Andy Clyde, Madeline Hurlock and Vernon Dent, while Lloyd Bacon has completed a two-reeler starring Ralph Graves and as yet untitled. Thelma Parr is Graves' leading lady.

McKenzie Named Scenario Chief for Rock

Joe Rock Productions has appointed Bob McKenzie head of the scenario department. He is well known as a screen writer and gag man and will pass on all story material submitted by free lance writers. Before joining Rock, McKenzie was identified with Universal for a number of years. The Rock productions are distributed by F.B.O.

Scenes from "His Own Lawyer," one of the "Married Life of Helen and Warren" series being made by Fox.

Studios Broadcast Laugh Month Program

RADIO this week was added to the screen and the press as a medium for publicizing National Laugh Month. Special radio programs were sent over the air from stations in the East and West by picture studios.

The West Coast broadcasting was done from Station KNX, known as "The Voice of Hollywood." A "Laugh Month" program was broadcast, including short addresses on the subject by Larry Semon, Dorothy Dwan and Walter Wessling of Pathe's Los Angeles office. A special three-hour "Laugh Month" program was scheduled for Saturday, January 2nd, with such well-known screen personalities as Harry Langdon, Charley Chase, and the famous "Our Gang" troupe on the program.

In the East the message of "Laugh Month" was broadcast on Wednesday, January 6th, from Station WJZ, New York City, by "Pete" Woodhull, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Pathe Drafts Two Members of "Our Gang"

Pathe has drafted two members of "Our Gang" for roles in the new Charley Chase comedy which Leo McCarey is directing. These youngsters are Johnny Downs and "Husky" Hanes. The latter is not only appearing with Chase, but is also supporting Glenn Tryon in a comedy being directed by Robert McGowan.

Comedy highlights from the Educational release titled "Brotherly Love."

Langdon Comedy on Pathe List

Company's Schedule of Subjects for Fifth Week of Laugh Month Shows Good Variety

FOUR comedies, including the Harry Langdon special three-reeler, "Saturday Afternoon," a chapter of the Pathe-serial "The Green Goddess" an issue of Pathe Review and two numbers of Pathe News make up this company's contribution for the fifth week of Laugh Month.

"Saturday Afternoon," a three reel comedy special produced by Mack Sennett with Harry Langdon starred shows Harry in the role of the dutiful husband of a domineering wife who demands and receives each Saturday most of his pay. Harry manages to hold out a few pennies, but is discovered doing the hold-out act on the particular Saturday he had arranged a big date with a young lady. He is ordered to stay at home but persuades the wife to relent and she gives him a nickel with which he departs for his "spree." Langdon's supporting cast comprises Vernon Dent, Ruth Hiatt and Peggy Montgomery. Harry Edwards directed.

"Long Pants," a Hal Roach comedy, starring Glenn Tryon shows Tryon as a male "flapper" who has acquired his first pair of long trousers, they being of the "collegiate" cut but not unshrinkable around which fact the comedy revolves. Vivian Oakland, Cissy Fitzgerald, Jack "Rube" Clifford and Sue O'Neill appear in support of Tryon in this production which Fred L. Guiol directed. It is a two-reeler.

Paul Parrott is featured in the one reel comedy "Soft Pedal," also produced by Hal Roach. It is built along the usual lines of the comedies Parrott has been turning out.

The ninth chapter of "The Green Goddess" the Patheserial starring Allene Ray and Walter Miller is titled "The Battle Starts." In this chapter the state troopers surround Bellamy Castle and are fired on by Bellamy and his cohorts. Excitement reigns high in every scene. Spencor Bennet directed this production of Edgar Wallace's novel from a scenario by Frank Leon Smith.

Pathe Review presents another chapter of "Plundering the Sea," a camera record of the Octurus Oceanographic Expedition led by William Beebe, which is released in cooperation with the New York Zoological Society.

"A June Bride" is the latest of the "Aesop's Fables." Every issue of "Topics of the Day" during Laugh Month contains special fun material.

Titling is Completed on Painting Series

Cranfield and Clarke have completed the titling of the new series of two-reelers they will release, based upon internationally celebrated paintings. The first subject is titled "The Angelus," by Jean Francois Millet, and is to be followed by "The Doctor," by Sir Luke Fildes, R. A., England's foremost artist.

These old-time paintings have been transposed into modern surroundings and a story has been woven around each of them, acted by carefully selected casts.

Pembroke to Direct New Joe Rock Comedy

Pere Pembroke has been signed by Joe Rock to direct "Heavy Love," a forthcoming Standard fun film featuring "Fatty" Alexander, "Kewpie" Ross and "Fat" Karr, which goes into production next week. Pembroke is well known as a comedy producer, his last engagement having been with First National in the production of feature length comedies. Lois Boyd has the feminine lead opposite the trio of fat comedians. The picture will be distributed by F.B.O.

Christie Offers Strong Casts

Company Boasts Established Comedians
Appearing in Support of Leading Stars

THE Christie organization, releasing its comedies through Educational Film Exchanges is laying particular stress on the character of the cast supporting its regular starred comedians. While many strong players are not featured the company points out the fact that in practically all the new comedies there are comedians filling the minor roles who have themselves been comedy stars.

Appearing in the Vernon, Hiers, Adams and Christie current series are such comedians as Bill Irving, Jack Duffy, Hank Mann, Kalla Pasha, Eddie Baker, Billy Engle, Lincoln Plumer, Eddie Barry, George Hall, Billy Blatcher, Jay Belasco, Fred Peters, Gus Leonard, George French, Ward Caulfield, Bill Blaisdell and Victor Rodman.

Among the girls familiar to picture-goers are Molly Malone, Vera Steadman, Frances Lee, Duane Thompson, Natalie Joyce, Yola D'Avril, Jean Lorraine, Marian Audre, Aileen Lopez, Amber Norman and Anita Garvin.

Regarding the Christie players, Al Christie says:

"In offering star series of comedies such as the Bobby Vernon, Walter Hiers and Jimmy Adams comedies and in featuring the names of such comedians as Billy Dooley and Neal Burns in the Christie series of two-reelers the advertising is necessarily placed heaviest on those names which have come to be recognized as the greatest box-office value, but one should not lose sight alone, but are surrounded with players who of the fact that those stars are not offered can contribute largely to the success of the whole picture."

Roberson Theatre Repeats Comedy Program

An all comedy bill having proved successful at the Robertson Theatre, Dierks, Arkansas on last Christmas day, the management followed up with another 'comedy-circus' on New Year's day, just a week later, Pathe subjects playing a dominating part on both bills.

The management used a circus dodger to advertise the second comedy show which read "Our Christmas show proved such a success that we are giving one the first day of the great coming year, with our best wishes." Numerous cartoon cuts were used to add attractiveness to the dodgers.

On the first comedy showing Harry Langdon's "The First Hundred Years," Charles Chase in "Position Wanted" and and at the second circus "Luck O' The Foolish," with Harry Langdon, Hal Roach's "Our Gang," in "High Society" and another Aesop's Film Fable," all Pathe subjects.

A Six Shootin' Romance

(Universal—4837 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

TO A CERTAIN extent this follows the usual Western plot trail but as the love affair develops it is given some new curves, and the net result is a film that will surely please Jack Hoxie's admirers and find favor wherever quick action melodrama with ranch and rolling country settings is in demand. In the picture's early stages some timely comedy relief has been skillfully injected, the last three reels are pretty well crowded up with serious love-making, desultory scrapping; and the finale sees the guns cracking in earnest with all hands joining in. Jack Hoxie is as vigorous and wholesome as ever, his stalwart figure always to the fore when there's fighting to be done; Olive Hasbrouck carries off the dramatic honors by a very appealing and natural portrayal of the wilful girl whom Hoxie eventually wins. The support is capable all through.

THEME. Western melodrama. Chance makes cowboy Jack halfowner of a ranch with girl partner. Latter dislikes him at start, but he eventually wins her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Snappy brisk action, good direction, neatly developed love affair, comedy relief, fight episodes and big general gun battle at close.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as Hoxie's most lively Westerner to date. Feature star and Olive Hasbrouck. Safe to promise lots of action and thrills.

DRAWING POWER. Good at any house where Westerners are favored by patrons.

SUMMARY. A bright Jack Hoxie Westerner. Has all the usual melodramatic thrills combined with a love story a bit out of the ordinary, good comedy relief, is cleverly acted and well directed.

THE CAST

Lightnin' Jack	Jack Hoxie
Donaldeen Travis	Olive Hasbrouck
Currier King	William A. Steele
Mrs. King	Carmen Phillips
Ricketts	Bob McKenzie
Mammy	Mattie Peters
Muriel Travis	Virginia Bradford

Adapted from Story by Ruth Comfort Mitchell. Director, Cliff Smith. Photographed by William Nobles.

SYNOPSIS. Cowboy Jack, left a half share in ranch, finds other owner is Donaldeen Travis. He admires her, but she is prejudiced against him. Currier King, neighboring ranchman and a bad egg, makes love to Donaldeen. Jack thrashes him, but the intrigue continues until it turns out that King has a wife living. Donaldeen is made captive by King but rescued by Jack and his men after a gun battle. Donaldeen admits her love for Jack.

A Six Shootin' Romance

(Universal)

PRESS NOTICE

JACK HOXIE in another of his vigorous, breezy Western melodramas, "A Six Shootin' Romance," will be the chief screen attraction at the Theatre on ——. A fine outdoors picture with plenty of hard riding, gun battles, beautiful photography, with Hoxie as a gallant cowboy who is left half share of a ranch, finds his partner to be a girl with a strong dislike for him. She is wooed by an unworthy suitor, taken captive, rescued by the man she despised and finally acknowledges that she loves the latter.

Besides Hoxie's fine work in the hero role, that of Olive Hasbrouck as the girl commands admiration. A strong supporting cast is in evidence.

CATCH LINES

A real red-blood Western melodrama, packed with thrills vibrating with romance!

Moana

(Paramount—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

ROBERT FLAHERTY, who gave us "Nanook of the North," now contributes another remarkable film for the entertainment of the world. It is "Moana," which shows us life as it is lived in the Samoan Islands. Surmounting difficulties which would have discouraged most men, Mr. Flaherty "carried on" and as a result has achieved a moving panorama of South Sea customs that is as entertaining as it is instructive.

With the members of a family as the principal characters we are shown their daily fight for existence, their sports, their method of obtaining food in the jungle, on land and in the sea; their colorful dances, their primitive rites, their love-making. It is all decidedly worth while. The backgrounds, of course, are treats for the eye, being beautiful shots of tropical foliage, landscapes and seas. Real thrills are supplied in the capture of the wild boar, the giant turtles and crabs, the climbs up towering trees for coconuts and the photographing of the entire ordeal of tattooing through which Moana goes so that he may sit with the leaders of his people.

The characters are all beautiful physical specimens of man and womanhood. Nothing more unusual, off the beaten path and novel has been seen on the silver sheet in years.

THEME. A true story of the love and life of a native man of Savaii in British Samoa and his betrothed.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The capture of the boar, the giant turtle and the mammoth crab. The preparation of the family garments and food, all supplied by nature. The tattooing of Moana. The dances. The shooting of the quaint canoes into the trough of the waves.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Go after the schools heavy on this one. Put on a preview for civic officials, the press, teachers, etc. Decorate lobby in South Sea style. Put on prologue of South Sea dances if possible.

DRAWING POWER. The novelty of this one should attract business if you exploit it a bit. O. K. for best houses and would be great as one of the features on a double bill.

THE CAST

Moana Tu'ungaita Fa'angase Pe'a and tribesmen

Directed, photographed and produced by Robert Flaherty, assisted by Mrs. Flaherty and a brother, David Flaherty.

SYNOPSIS. Moana, son of a tribal chief of Savaii, with members of his family, are shown in their daily pursuits of hunting, fishing, obtaining foods of various kinds, preparing them over crude ovens; in their dances and tattooing ordeal and finally Moana's wooing of the maid of his heart. According to Samoan custom and law, no boy can become a man till all sorts of fantastic forms have been pierced into his body with hard bone needles.

Robert Flaherty, producer of "Moana" a Paramount release.

Moana (Paramount)

PRESS NOTICE

ROBERT FLAHERTY, who produced "Nanook of the North," has, after twenty months in British Samoa, finished his remarkable picture of South Sea life, "Moana," which comes to the Theatre, commencing ——. The cast is composed entirely of the members of a Samoan family, Moana, Tu'ungaita, Fa'angase and Pe'a. We are shown in a stirring manner their grim battle for existence which faces them each day, we go with them on hunting and fishing trips, sit in with them at their tribal councils, see Moana woo his lady fair and watch him go through the ordeal of tattooing which is the open sesame to manhood in the tribe.

CATCH LINES

A real romance of life and love! The intoxicating charm of the South Seas as never before depicted in words or pictures. A hero handsome as a god; a new kind of beauty as a heroine!

The Ancient Mariner

(Fox—5548 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A BEAUTIFUL fantasy ingeniously interwoven with a modern love story, this production registers as a charming example of screen artistry. Henry Otto directed the sequence illustrating the weird adventures of the hero in Coleridge's classical poem and has succeeded in conveying the subtle sense of its bizarre mystery and supernatural lure in a series of scenes that are remarkable for superb lighting effects and magical appeal. The modern tale, directed by Chester Bennet, serves very well as an introduction and windup to the allegory, in fact the poem presentation alone wouldn't do for the average fans whose reaction to its darkling majesty might be expressed in the phrase—"what's it all about?" But the combination of the past and present ought to hold them and prove a fine educational factor as well as interesting entertainment. The outstanding dramatic performances are those of Paul Panzer and Nigel De Brullier, cast respectively as the ancient and modern mariners. Support O. K.

THEME. Poem Fantasy and Modern Story. Visualization of Ancient Mariner's adventures induces wealthy roue to abandon designs on innocent girl, who returns to man who really loves her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Enthralling beauty of views depicting Ancient Mariner's voyage. Episodes of Phantom Ship and shooting of albatross. Clever interpolation of modern narrative. Fine work of cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tieups with schools and educational boards. Stress film's mystery, romance and wonderful scenic beauty. Feature principals.

DRAWING POWER. Depends on your patronage. Should win if properly exploited.

SUMMARY. An interesting love story combined with a fantasy of rare beauty, has both scenic and romantic appeal. A decidedly unique and highly artistic film.

The Song and Dance Man

(Paramount—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

NEVER was a role so made to order for a star than the George M. Cohan creation of "Happy" Farrell, the song and dance man. And Paramount made a fortunate selection when they chose Tom Moore for the part. Tom is "Happy" to a capital T. He has achieved in his interpretation of the appealing character something that is exceptionally fine. Herbert Brenon has done his work so well that the picture eclipses the stage play from every angle. The "back stage" shots are the last word in pep and realism, while the "first night" and farewell performance of "The Girl from The Bronx," are new notes in gorgeous investiture. Our Stetson is off to Bessie Love, who in the principal feminine role also registers 100 per cent and when the folk see her strut the Charleston they're going to talk all over town. The plot is one filled with human interest. There are heart tugs galore, but the comedy element has not been overlooked. Much fun is furnished by Josephine Drake as the landlady.

THEME. Comedy drama dealing with trials and tribulations of song and dance man, who after succeeding in business, returns to first love—the stage.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Death of "Happy's" partner, attempted hold-up. Try-outs for places in revue. Bessie Love's Charleston. First night of show. Happy's return.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Great names to deal with: George M. Cohan, Tom Moore, Bessie Love, Harrison Ford, Herbert Brenon. Play them up big in your ads. Put on Song and Dance Amateur contest. Or Charleston prologue.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for the finest houses, big and small.

SUMMARY. You can't go wrong on this one. It is good all through in acting, direction, setting, photography. A great story, fine cast, box office hit!

THE CAST

Happy Farrell.....	Tom Moore
Miss Lane.....	Bessie Love
Joseph Murlock.....	Harrison Ford
Charles Nelson.....	Norman Trevor
Fred Carroll.....	Bobby Watson
Inspector Craig.....	George Nash
Jane Rosamond.....	Josephine Drake

Adapted from George M. Cohan's stage play. Directed by Herbert Brenon. Photographed by James Howe.

SYNOPSIS. "Happy" Farrell, song and dance man, broke in New York, holds up Joseph Murlock, is caught but given another chance. Nelson, theatrical man, stars Miss Lane, in whom Happy is interested. He goes West, makes a fortune, returns to New York, finds girl about to wed Murlock. After advising all that happiness for those of the theatre can only be found in the theatre, he returns to tanks as a song and dance man.

Tom Moore, star of "The Song and Dance Man" a Paramount production.

The Song and Dance Man (Paramount) PRESS NOTICE

THERE never was a better show than "The Song and Dance Man," which was written by George M. Cohan and in which he starred. Paramount has made the play into an even better picture and it will be shown at the _____ Theatre, commencing _____. Tom Moore appears in the role made famous by Cohan and he is supported by Bessie Love, who again struts the Charleston as she did in "The King on Main Street," Harrison Ford, Norman Trevor, Josephine Drake, Helen Lindroth and others. Moore never had a part that suited him better than this. The plot deals with the trials and tribulations of a song and dance man.

CATCH LINES

Tears and laughs mingle in this George M. Cohan comedy that shows life "back-stage," as it never has been shown before. Herbert Brenon who gave us "A Kiss For Cinderella," has eclipsed his former efforts!

The Million Dollar Handicap

(Producers Distributing Corp.—6117 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A SURE-FIRE audience picture! While the fiery little Southern heroine who dons jockey silks and pilots a horse to victory in the face of seemingly unconquerable odds has frequently "done her stuff" for the screen, she has never put it over with such reckless abandon and startling effect as registered in this case. The big race event on which the plot hinges is a wonder of perfect camera technique. Usually such scenes present a rapidly moving, blurred effect of riders and horses, and you can only catch glimpses of them here and there. But this time the race can be followed by the spectators from start to finish in every detail, closeups and long shots are alike clear and distinct and the finish is superb. Sheer frank melodrama, but a cracking good one, with great heart interest and a couple of corking fine fights. Vera Reynolds, a magnetic, dashing heroine and real dare-devil rider. Support capital, Ed Burns an attractive lover, Clarence Burton a realistically sinister villain. Direction excellent.

THEME. Turfman buys supposedly worthless horse which is ridden to victory by his daughter in a big race. She also clears reputation of unjustly accused lover.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Colorful atmosphere, beautiful photography. Fast melodramatic action, romantic development. Big racing scene. Vera Reynold's work.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost story to limit, play up melodramatic thrills, love interest and go the limit on the racing stuff as the most realistic and exciting ever filmed. Feature Vera Reynolds, Edmund Burns, Clarence Burton, Ward Crane.

DRAWING POWER. Will win wherever first-class melodrama is popular.

SUMMARY. Has big audience appeal, snappy, colorful melodrama with good romantic pull, forceful punches and a horse race that's the limit in vivid realism.

The Little Giant

(Universal Jewel—6850 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

O FFERS pleasing entertainment. The plot is of light construction but contains a good many human touches with strong heart appeal, there are many amusing situations and taken as a whole this comedy drama ought to do very well from the box office standpoint. It gets off to a good start, maintains a lively pace until the fifth reel, when the crowding in of a lot of somewhat unnecessary detail slows the action down. But the speed picks up again and there is no slackening until a satisfactory and well-turned climax is reached. Glenn Hunter is at his best in the role of the young salesman who suffers temporarily from an undue sense of his own cleverness but makes good on the end. Edna Murphy shares dramatic honors with the star, in fact her natural, appealing performance as the young wife is easily one of the best things about the picture, while David Higgins furnishes a capital character sketch as the old peddler. The support is adequate. Photography O. K., pretty long shots, lighting effective, interiors well filmed.

THEME. Youth appointed sales manager of big firm is failure at first, but redeems himself and makes good with aid of old uncle.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Development of human interest factor. Snappy comedy scenes. Stormy interview between Elmer and wife. Good finale.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tie up with washing machines company on store window displays. Bill as breezy comedy with strong human interest appeal. Feature principals.

DRAWING POWER. Good attraction for any house.

SUMMARY. Combines sympathetic appeal with amusing comedy situations. Acting high grade all the way through, work of Glenn Hunter and Edna Murphy being particularly effective. Has general audience lure and likely box office possibilities.

Flaming Waters

(F. B. O.—5700 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THEY put over a sure-enough thriller in this sensational yarn of the oil fields, which also looms up strong from the sentimental and comedy angles, offers as exciting entertainment as the most avid admirer of punch melodrama could desire and registers as a bully box office attraction. There's no getting away from the fact that the big wallop scene which shows the great flood of waters topped with blazing oil, sweeping everything before it and threatening the lives of hero, mother and heroine, is a fine bit of camera work bound to jar the most blasé onlooker into shivers of anticipation. Apart from which, the human interest note is clearly sounded, the characters are life-like and the story carries conviction despite its melodramatic grandiloquence. Malcolm McGregor, Pauline Garon and Mary Carr are excellent in the principal roles and well supported. F. Harmon Weight, who directed "Drusilla With a Million," scores again.

THEME. Melodrama. Danny O'Neil bests swindling promoter, makes fortune in oil fields, saves his mother and sweetheart from burning oil flood.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Clever development of romance and comedy relief. Sustained swift action. Good atmosphere. Big rescue scene when burning flood breaks.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Safe to boost this as a melodrama that hasn't a dull moment in it. Dwell on story's romantic and humorous touches and big thrills, Danny thrashing the swindler; and above all, the tremendous episode of flaming flood.

DRAWING POWER. Has universal audience appeal, should please anywhere.

SUMMARY. A crashing melo with unusual heart appeal and bright comedy relief. Offers sensational oil field story, with blazing flood climax that's a wonder.

THE CAST

Dan O'Neil.....	Malcolm McGregor
Doris Laidlaw.....	Pauline Garon
Mrs. O'Neil.....	Mary Carr
Jasper Thorne.....	John Miljan
Midge.....	Johnny Gough
Mrs. Rutherford.....	Mayme Kelso

Author, E. Lloyd Sheldon. Director, F. Harmon Weight.

SYNOPSIS. Danny O'Neil goes to Oil City with his mother, seeking Jasper Thorne, who has swindled her. He gets the better of Thorne in an oil deal and buys a well than turns out a "gusher," its overflow surrounding the ranch they live on. A lamp thrown by Thorne ignites the oil. Danny's foolish friend Midge opens the reservoir gates, a flaming flood results. Danny rescues his mother and Doris. He wins the girl.

Malcolm McGregor, appearing in "Flaming Waters" an F. B. O. production.

Flaming Waters (F. B. O.) PRESS NOTICE

A THRILLING melodrama of the oil country, with one of the greatest "fiery flood" scenes ever photographed, "Flaming Waters," is the big attraction listed for the Theatre on _____. This story, as strong in human interest as it is in exciting situations, treats of the adventures of Danny O'Neil in getting even with a crooked promoter who swindled his mother, the means by which he makes a fortune and gains a beautiful wife.

A whirlwind of action from first to last, with Malcolm McGregor, Pauline Garon and Mary Carr in the principal roles, it is a film no regular movie-goer can afford to miss. John Miljan, Johnny Gough, Mayme Kelso and others in support.

CATCH LINES

A tidal wave of fire, sweeping over the doomed house in the ravine, rushing to envelope girl and mother; a deluge of destiny, a flaming fate, as the glowing river of burning oil boils on!

Enemy of Men

(Columbia Pictures Corp.—5508 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AN excellent program attraction that possesses unlimited mass appeal, is handsomely photographed, skillfully directed and combines melodramatic force with considerable human interest. Also, the picture provides Dorothy Revier with a role suitable in every way to her talents. Miss Revier is not only good to look at, but registers as an emotional actress of marked ability. She doesn't overdo matters, her pantomime, forcible and appealing as it is, never goes beyond the natural limits of expression and holds an audience's attention through sheer artistry. Cullen Landis is a likeable hero. Here and there a shot of comedy for which Leo White and Cesare Gravina are jointly responsible, leavens the melo action nicely. Credit must be given Frank Strayer for having directed the film not only with an eye on the box office possibilities, but a strong leaning to the artistic side as well. It isn't often you get a straight melodrama with heart touches and pathetic values so skillfully nourished and effective.

THEME. Girl whose sister is betrayed vows vengeance on all men, becomes cabaret favorite, but eventually is wooed and won by worthy suitor.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Splendid work of Dorothy Revier in lead. Deft balancing of melodramatic punches and heart interest values. Cabaret shooting scene.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title has pulling power. Bill as thrilling melodrama, with great heart lure. Play up idea of girl's war against men on account of sister's betrayal and death. Feature Dorothy Revier and Cullen Landis.

DRAWING POWER. First-class card for neighborhood houses and towns.

SUMMARY. Has general audience appeal. Puts over melo punches forcibly but discreetly, strong on human touches. Well acted and skillfully directed, stars work particularly effective.

THE CAST

Norma Bennett.....	Dorothy Revier
Dr. Phil Ordway.....	Cullen Landis
Tony.....	Cesare Gravina
John Hurd.....	Charles Clary
Roberti.....	Leo White
Janet Bennett.....	Barbara Luddy
Miss Ordway.....	Margaret Landis

Author, Douglas Bronston. Director, Frank Strayer. Photographed by Frank Good.

SYNOPSIS. Because of her sister's betrayal and subsequent death Norma Bennett takes a vow to make all men pay. She becomes a night club favorite and is courted by Hurd, the man who ruined her sister. Dr. Phil Ordway is in love with her, but she refuses marriage. Discovering Hurd's identity with that of her sister's betrayer she goes to a cabaret to shoot him, but he is slain by another hand. Dr. Phil finally weds her.

Enemy of Men (Columbia Pics.) PRESS NOTICE

BEAUTIFUL Dorothy Revier is the star of "Enemy of Men," the great romantic melodrama which will be given its local premiere at the Theatre on _____. This is the story of a girl whose loved sister's betrayal turned her into a siren with a mission of vengeance to be wreaked on all men. A true lover beckoned, but she pursued her path until she discovered the man who ruined her sister. On the verge of killing him, a bullet from another avenging hand cut his life short. And happiness came her way at last.

Miss Revier's performance is a revelation in emotional appeal, with Cullen Landis scoring as the faithful lover.

CATCH LINES

For years he wondered what had become of the little shop girl, and found her a notorious woman in a great city! She was the enemy of men because of the terrible crime one had committed!

Stella Maris

(Universal-Jewel—5786 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A NOTABLE addition to the list of Jewel features, "Stella Maris" reflects credit on all concerned in its production. Mary Philbin distinguishes herself by wonderful work in the dual role. A sharper type contrast than that presented by Unity, the faithful, devoted drudge, and Stella, an exquisitely charming, unsophisticated "daughter of the gods" can scarcely be imagined, yet both characterizations stand out with cameo-like clearness, as natural as life and a lasting tribute to Miss Philbin's dramatic versatility. She is capably supported by all hands, with Gladys Brockwell scoring in a peculiarly venomous portrayal of the vicious wife. The double exposure effects are a veritable triumph of camera technique, in fact the photography throughout is an artistic treat. Pathos and melodramatic urge are combined in masterly style, the story's interest never slackens. Splendidly directed and acted, this film should win everywhere.

THEME. Drama. Details life stories of two girls in high and low social stratas, one finding happiness, the other sacrificing herself for man she loves.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Star's fine work in dual role, all around good acting. Double exposure effects. Emotional stress. Scene where Unity kills Louisa and self.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as heart-moving drama alive with suspense and pathos. Feature Mary Philbin's great portrayals of Stella and Unity. You can praise story's dramatic power to limit without any fear of a comeback.

DRAWING POWER. Should give satisfaction at all houses, large and small.

SUMMARY. Intensely pathetic, dramatically effective, beautifully photographed, well directed. Has some of finest double exposures ever shown. A sure box office hit.

THE CAST

SYNOPSIS. Stella Maris, invalid, lives in a fairyland of fancy created for her by her great friends, John Risca and Walter Herold. John is separated from his vicious wife, Louisa. Latter is imprisoned for torturing slavey Unity Blake. John adopts Unity, who adores him. Stella is cured. John confesses his love for her. Louisa, released, horrifies Stella with lies about John and Unity. Unity proves her devotion by killing Louisa and herself. Stella turns to Herold, whom she really loves.

Mary Philbin, starred in "Stella Maris" a Universal production.

Stella Maris (Universal Jewel) PRESS NOTICE

MARY PHILBIN'S latest starring vehicle, Stella Maris, adapted from the novel by William J. Locke, is hailed by critics as one of the finest emotional dramas ever screened.

It will be shown at the Theatre on ———.

Miss Philbin plays a dual role, that of Stella, an invalid girl of rare beauty who is cured by an operation and finds the real world so different from the fairyland she thought it was and Unity, a little slavey, who gives her life for the man she loves.

It is a wonderful performance, aided by marvelous double exposure effects. The support includes such stellar players as Elliot Dexter, Jason Robards, Gladys Brockwell.

CATCH LINES

A story of rare human interest, irresistible emotional appeal, with beautiful Mary Philbin doing the greatest work of her career in a dual role.

No sacrifice too bitter for unselfish love; she took the only way!

The Sea Beast

(Warner Brothers—6393 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

WHATEVER may be said for or against its savage realism, there can be no denying the magnificently spectacular lure of this ocean epic of the old whaling days. Nor can the most hard-boiled critic fail to voice admiration of John Barrymore's wonderful acting, equally wonderful makeup, and the alluring grace and beauty of the heroine, Dolores Costello. The scene where Ahab loses his leg and the cauterizing of the bloody stump with the white-hot irons is a horribly effective bit of melodrama, mighty well done, but pretty sure to rack some folks' nerves, and most feminine patrons won't like it. There are many other strenuous episodes; Ahab driving his vessel through stormy seas in his mad hunt for vengeance on the white whale, the battle to the death with his treacherous brother, all emphasized by Barrymore's masterly portrayal of anguish and insanity. But sweetness and light triumph at the close, with the lovers united, which is a welcome set-off to the stark tragedy of the earlier portion of the picture.

THEME. Young whaling captain loses leg in a battle with huge whale, devotes life to its extinction, is finally successful, regains mental balance and sweetheart.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Barrymore's splendid acting. The marvelous marine photography. Fine work of Dolores Costello and support. Scenes where Ahab loses leg, ship driving through storm, fight between brothers, slaying of Moby Dick.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature John Barrymore and Dolores Costello. Play up the magnificent ocean scenes, the battles with Moby Dick. Bill as greatest sensational marine melodrama of season.

DRAWING POWER. A great card anywhere, if patrons' nerves can stand its realism.

SUMMARY. A "big" production in every sense of the word. Magnificent photography, crammed with sensational melo incident, moves swiftly, is fiercely realistic.

THE CAST

Ahab Ceeley	John Barrymore
Esther Wiscasset	Dolores Costello
Derek Ceeley	George O'Hara
Flask	Mike Donlin
Queequeg	Sam Baker
Perth	George Burrell
Reverend Wiscasset	James Barrows
Pip	Vadin Uranoff

Adapted from Herman Melville's Novel, "Moby Dick." Director, Millard Webb.

SYNOPSIS. Ahab and Derek Ceeley, harpooners, are in love with Esther Wiscasset. Ahab wins her. While hunting the great whale, Moby Dick, Derek pushes his brother overboard and the big fish bites off his leg. Ahab devotes his life to the pursuit of Moby Dick. Five years later he learns of Derek's treachery, who is drowned in a fight. Esther and her father are wrecked and picked up by Ahab's vessel. Moby Dick is killed. The lovers are reunited.

The Sea Beast (Warner Bros.) PRESS NOTICE

THE greatest marine and whaling epic of the age has reached the screen in the picturization of Herman Melville's world-famous novel, "Moby Dick," filmed under the titled of "The Sea Beast." This marvelous production, starring John Barrymore, will be given its local premiere at the ——— Theatre on ———. Moby Dick is a monstrous whale on whom the hero vows vengeance for having lost a leg while pursuing him. Fortune favors him in the end.

For spectacular thrills and wonderful marine photography nothing has ever equalled this feature, in which Mr. Barrymore adds fresh lustre to his laurels.

CATCH LINES

An epic of deep waters, a startling melodrama of the old whaling days, palpitating with suspense and thrills, that prince of actors, John Barrymore, in the leading role! A picture that once seen, you will never forget!

Stop, Look and Listen

(Pathe—5305 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

IN this picture Larry Semon makes his first appearance as a star under Pathe's banner, offering a fast-gaited, amusing combination of melodrama and comedy that should win high favor with a majority of the fans and register as a likely box office attraction. Adapted from a musical comedy, the plot is of light construction, but merry gags, thrilling stunt work and the necessary bit of romance are in evidence all through the production which develops interest early and holds it to the end. There's a whimsical stage burlesque touch showing the stage-struck heroine getting all muddled up in her initial footlight appearance that is distinctly funny and Larry gets the laughs in plenty when in company with the colored porter he dodges an angry mob, and as for the thrills stuff, it comes thick and heavy, with the star indulging in some extraordinary acrobatics. It's the sort of role that suits Semon in every detail and he does it full justice, with Dorothy Dwan and other players supporting him gaily.

THEME. Stage struck girl persuades sweetheart to back her in show, which fails. Bank is robbed, hero captures thieves, recovers money, weds girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Star's amazing acrobatic angles and clowning. Neat balancing of thrills and comedy. Chase scenes, train wreck, burlesque windup.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Semon's clown stunts, play up diverse thrills. Bill as combination melodrama and comedy crammed with exciting situations and unexpectedly funny punches. Mention prominent players in cast.

DRAWING POWER. Will please wherever they want fast melo and farcical fooling.

SUMMARY. A good Larry Semon vehicle. Gives star fine opportunities to display agility and clowning talent, has plenty of melodramatic thrills and physical suspense mingled with side-splitting comedy.

THE CAST

Luther Meek.....	Larry Semon
Dorothy.....	Dorothy Dwan
Mother.....	Mary Carr
Bill.....	William Gillespie
Sheriff.....	Lionel Belmore
Strong Man.....	Bull Montana
Strong Man.....	Joseph Swickard

Adapted from Henry B. Smith's Musical Comedy. Director, Larry Semon.

SYNOPSIS. Luther Meek, well behaved young citizen of a small town, has a sweetheart named Dorothy who pines for footlight fame and coaxes him into backing a traveling show in which she is starred. On the opening night the show manager and Luther's graceless step-brother rob a bank. Luther is blamed, escapes from pursuers and follows the thieves, finally catching them and recovering the money. Dorothy renounces the stage forever and weds him.

Stop, Look and Listen (Pathe) PRESS NOTICE

LAUGHS, thrills, amazing stunt work, melodrama and romance, suspense and excitement, you'll find them all in Larry Semon's latest picture, "Stop, Look and Listen," billed as the chief attraction at the Theatre on ———. Semon's wonderful clowning abilities were never shown to such advantage as in this film, in which he portrays a youth with a stage-struck sweetheart, whose ambitions lead him into all kinds of wild adventures, before she is finally tamed.

Dorothy Dwan gives a great performance as the heroine, supported by Mary Carr, William Gillespie, Lionel Belmore, Bull Montana, Joseph Swickard Babe Hardy, Curtis McHenry.

CATCH LINES

He was a fast stepper as a banker, but the chorus girls made him look as if he were standing still! Larry Semon at his best, a three ring comedy circus, smiles, acrobatic thrills and romance!

The Outsider

(Fox—5424 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

SINCE the far-off days of "The Miracle Man" pictures with a faith-cure slant have come along with considerable regularity, the theme seems a popular one when romantically developed, as in the present instance, and this feature gives promise of rolling up a respectable box office score. It isn't propaganda for or against the medical profession, though prominent surgeons are shown as failing to achieve a cure where the magnetic hero succeeds. Because, in the final analysis you discover that the gypsy-gent healer's power over the girl was due to the fact that she reciprocated his affection, which doesn't say much for his chances with ordinary patients who couldn't all be expected to love him. But the story will please the average movie-goer all the more by its reliance on the tender passion as opposed to mere science. Lou Tellegen is sufficiently impressive and dignified in the hero role, Jacqueline Logan emotionally effective as the girl, support well balanced and photography first-class.

THEME. Drama. Crippled girl dancer pronounced incurable by surgeons is restored to health by will-power and love of Hungarian gypsy mystic.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Acting of Lou Tellegen and Jacqueline Logan. Emotional urge. Dancing scenes. Episode where girl recovers use of limbs.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Stress idea of love's power over mental and physical ills. Bill as touching and fervidly emotional heart drama. Dwell on fine work of Lou Tellegen and Jacqueline Logan in leading roles. Play up faith-cure theory.

DRAWING POWER. Should do well in average house.

SUMMARY. Has some good dramatic sequences, awakens sympathy for heroine. Is well directed, cleverly acted by principals and support. Offers no particular argument for faith-healing, but by mixing romance with idea, develops appeal.

THE CAST

Leontine Sturdee.....	Jacqueline Logan
Anton Ragatzky.....	Lou Tellegen
Basil Owen.....	Walter Pidgeon
Sir Jasper Sturdee.....	Charles Lane
Pritchard.....	Joan Standing
Shadow.....	Gibson Gowland
Doctor Todd.....	Craford Kent

Adapted from Dorothy Brandon's Stage Play. Director, Roland V. Lee.

SYNOPSIS. Leontine Sturdee and dancing partner, Basil Owen tour Hungary. They meet Anton Ragatzky, mystic faith-healer who falls in love with the girl. She is injured in an acrobatic dance, taken back to London and pronounced incurable. Ragatzky follows, offers aid, is denounced by doctors. Finally he obtains admission to Leontine. After several failures she rises and walks at his command. Leontine realizes that it was their mutual love that wrought the cure.

Lou Tellegen, featured in "The Outsider" a Fox production.

The Outsider (Fox) PRESS NOTICE

ALL the magic of gypsy lore and atmosphere, the power of faith-healing when aided by love is set forth in the story told on the screen by "The Outsider" which comes to the Theatre on ———. Lou Tellegen and Jacqueline Logan are the featured layers. The former is cast as a Hungarian mystic who undertakes to cure an English girl he loves, given up by noted surgeons as a hopeless cripple. How he succeeds, despite hostile influences in a series of vividly dramatic sequences that strike right home to the hearts of the spectators.

CATCH LINES

She was an internationally famous dancer who scorned a Hungarian gypsy's devotion. But when an accident crippled her and surgeons failed to aid, it was the gypsy's love and mystic power that wrought a cure!

Just Suppose

(First National—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THE most interesting thing about this screen version of the A. E. Thomas play is the appearance of Lois Moran, the charming little star who was introduced to us in "Stella Dallas," and who in "Just Suppose," is refreshing as a Spring zephyr. There isn't the least doubt about Miss Moran's genius for pantomime. She doesn't act; she lives her part. As for the feature, well it is just fair entertainment and certainly not worthy of the talents of a Barthelmess. This mythical kingdom-costume material isn't especially suitable for Dick. Fortunately the plot gets him to America for part of the story and these sequences have the greatest appeal. The picture has been exceptionally well mounted, some of the exteriors being made on the Widener estate in Philadelphia. There is an exciting polo game. The supporting cast has been well selected as to type. But it is all rather tame stuff for an artist who gave us "Classmates," and "Shore Leave."

THEME. Modern romantic drama of a prince who falls in love with an American girl whom he wins after surmounting many obstacles in this and his native land.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Comedy introduced at dedication of orphan's home. The meeting between the prince and the girl in America. The polo game. The sequence in which the prince pretends "heart trouble."

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Barthelmess and emphasize fact that he has a beautiful new leading lady, Lois Moran. Advertise it as a stirring romance of dashing prince chap and beautiful American society girl.

DRAWING POWER. Popularity of star should draw. Suitable for any house.

SUMMARY. Not the best thing Barthelmess has done by any means, but may provide mild entertainment for admirers of this star. Artistic mounting and new leading lady help to camouflage a rather weak story.

THE CAST

Prince Rupert.....	Richard Barthelmess
Linda Lee Stafford.....	Lois Moran
Count Pechy (Toni).....	Geoffrey Kerr
General Karnaby.....	Henry Vibart
The King.....	George Spelvin
The Crown Prince.....	Harry Short
Mrs. Stafford.....	Bijou Fernandez

Adapted from play by A. E. Thomas. Director, Kenneth Webb. Photographed by Stuart Kelson.

SYNOPSIS. Rupert, second son of King of Koronia, goes to America, meets Linda Stafford, with whom he became acquainted at home, and tells her of his love. She also confesses she is in love with him. Then Rupert is called home because of death of crown prince. But twins are born to the widow. Rupert, free to wed whom he will, rushes to Linda who has returned to Europe on a visit.

Richard Barthelmess, who is starred in "Just Suppose" a First National Picture.

Just Suppose (First National) PRESS NOTICE

RICHARD BARTHELMLESS in "Just Suppose," an adaptation of the play by A. E. Thomas, comes to the Theatre, commencing ———, when patrons will see Dick's new leading lady, beautiful Lois Moran, who, although only 16 years old, has a genius for pantomime. The story opens in the mythical kingdom of Koronia, where Prince Rupert meets and falls in love with Linda Stafford. But the death of an elder brother suddenly places him in direct line of regal inheritance, and his country supersedes his love. However, all is rearranged at the end of which the Prince and his American Princess "living happily ever after." It is all done in an atmosphere of modern magnificence.

CATCH LINES

The love story of a Prince who defies a nation, and dashes to freedom and love. When a boy would rather be a peasant in the kingdom of love than emperor of a nation—that's romance.

Driftin' Thru

(Pathe—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

HOUSES catering to the western fans will find in this first of the new Charles R. Rogers series of Harry Carey productions a safe bet. While there is nothing startlingly new in this one, and who could expect it in a western, there is evidence throughout of expert handling of the scenario, direction, photography and settings. The story depicting how the fair owner of a ranch saves a "drifter's" life and in return having her property saved for her by the latter, who beats up the supposed friendly foreman, runs smoothly from beginning to end. The plot is laid against a series of beautiful natural backgrounds in the plains country. Carey has an appealing role as a hobo of the western wastes and some real human interest is introduced by his love for "Kentuck," a diminutive donkey. Real action is introduced when Carey is framed on a murder charge, but makes his get-away by leaping from horseback to speeding train and hiding in the heroine's stateroom until the sheriff departs.

THEME. Western melodrama in which "drifter" saves the ranch of a beautiful girl from plotters, after girl saves drifter from the noose.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The opening scenes as Carey and the donkey board the freight and meet with some rough handling. The getaway after he is framed for murder. The meeting between Carey and the girl, fight at the climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost the name of Harry Carey. He is a prime favorite with the western fans. Play this one up as one filled with thrills and action.

DRAWING POWER. Popularity of star makes this one O. K. for program house.

SUMMARY. This one meets all the requirements of a good outdoors feature. And it is much better produced than most pictures of this type. Good acting thruout.

THE CAST

Daniel Brown.....	Harry Carey
"Bull" Dunn.....	Stanton Heck
Stella, his wife.....	Ruth King
Joe Walters.....	Raymond Nye
Sheriff.....	Joseph Girard
The Girl.....	Harriet Hammond

Get J. Gordon Reid, managing director of Fabian's Mosque Theatre, to tell you the story that he told over at the Pathe exchange this week. It's a good one—and Mr. Reid knows how to tell them. He gets plenty of practice during "Reid's Half Hours" over the radio.

Harry Hecht, of the Hecht Circuit of New Jersey, was an exchange visitor this week. Mr. Hecht was accompanied by his well known "Four Horsemen."

Faulkner's New Roslyn Theatre at Roselle, N. J., recently held its opening and many prominent exhibitors and exchange men were in attendance. This adds another link to the fast growing Faulkner circuit.

It is reported that Marcus Loew is to take over the Levy Brothers Theatre, located at Lincoln Road and Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn. This house has recently been nearing completion and the seating capacity is about 2500. Sam Sonin's Lincoln Theatre is just across the way. With the Bedford, Kameo, Fulton and the Levy Bros. house under the Loew banner, this section of Brooklyn comes pretty well under single control.

The opening date of the Embassy Theatre, East Orange, N. J., has been set for February 1st. This house has recently been under construction by Pollack and Bratter.

Pelham Lynton, dapper and energetic salesman who specializes on two reel comedies for Pathe in this territory, has a brand new "iron hat."

Theatre openings, transfer of ownership and changes in management are still active in this zone.

Irving Lesser, who operates the Great Neck Playhouse and several other theatres, has recently taken over the Strand Theatre at Rockville Centre and will take possession about January 21st.

The Drury Lane Theatre at 167th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, New York City, which has been closed for the past three years, will reopen in the near future, according to a report.

Another opening is that of the Little Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., and the date is set for January 21st. This house was originally called the Sylvia and located at 50th Street and 5th Avenue.

Matthew Chrystmos' New Parkside Theatre at Yonkers, N. Y., which was to have opened on January 15th, will not hold its premiere until the early part of February, probably about the 8th. The delay is due to a strike made by the plasterers.

Other February openings include two theatres at Portchester, N. Y. One of them is the Capitol which will add another in the Jack Ungerfeld circuit and the other one is the Ambassador, controlled by Rogowsky Brothers. It is reported that both theatres will be completed by February 15th.

It is rumored that the Hughes Theatre, 187th Street and Hughes Avenue, Bronx, New York City, will soon reopen under new management. This house was disposed of by one of the local theatre circuits some little time ago.

The owner of the Windsor Terrace Theatre property at 1224 Prospect Avenue, Brooklyn—and a new comer as an exhibitor—will assume the management of that house. The former manager gave up the lease.

The Palace Theatre at Keyport, N. J., formerly called the Armory will go on a six-day schedule, according to report. This house has recently undergone extensive overhauling.

The Prospect Palace, Bronx, is reported as having definitely closed its doors.

Arron Sacks, of the Associated Exhibitors sales organization has returned to his duties after a serious siege of illness.

The brother of Betty Schmeterer—of Pathe booking office—recently met with a very bad accident. It was found necessary to amputate Mr. Schmeterer's leg.

Theatres recently equipped by Joe Hornstein of Howell's include Pollack and Bratter's Embassy at East Orange, The Palace Theatre, Staten Island, The Ambassador and Capitol Theatres at Portchester. Joe expects to move into his new quarters about February 1st and those who are favored with an invitation to the official opening may expect the kind of hospitality that Mr. Hornstein generally serves.

William McChesney has lost his travelling companion in the person of George Faulkner, Jr., Mr. Faulkner has moved to East Fred Faulkner, Sr. is also making Orange and Fred Faulkner, Sr., is also making his residence at the same address.

Jack Withers, formerly manager of the Pittsburg branch of Associated Exhibitors, is filling Ed Carroll's old position in the New York branch of that company.

Chicago

The lease of the Family Theatre at Mount Carroll, Illinois, formerly owned by C. L. Bishop, has been taken over by Miss Barter who was in Chicago this week, lining up her bookings.

Manager William Brumberg of Universal has completed the rearrangement of the exchange which presents a handsome and business-like appearance. The individual booths for salesmen is a decided improvement.

Wilbur Robinson is again connected with Pathe and is selling two reels in north side territory. Mr. Robinson, some months ago, received severe injuries in an automobile accident but is now entirely recovered and full of the old time pep.

The Star Theatre at Clinton, Iowa, has been sold by Manager Wilson to Ramsey & Alger, circuit operators.

It is reported that James T. Dvorak and Vincent T. Lynch, have purchased a site on Main Street, Downers Grove and will erect a twelve hundred seat de luxe house in that city. According to Architect Elmer F. Behrens, who is drawing the plans, a completely equipped stage and large organ will be features of the house, which will be of Spanish design.

Rudolph Wurlitzer & Sons, manufacturers of musical instruments, including theatre organs, are planning big expansion in Chicago. According to Howard Wurlitzer, the firm plans the establishment of twenty branch stores in outlying territories.

It is reported that the big new Balaban & Katz Theatre on Randolph Street, which will be part of the twenty-two story Masonic Temple, nearing completion on the site of the old Colonial Theatre, will be named the Oriental, which fits in with the treatment given it by C. W. and George L. Rapp, architects.

Jack Ryder, for ten years sales manager of Paramount's Detroit exchange, has been appointed city sales manager for Chicago, and has already assumed his new duties.

Abe Ostrowsky, who operates the White Palace at Kedzie and Ogden Avenues, has bought out

Louis Brecka and taken over the California and Pilsen Theatres on West 26th Street.

Chet Bell, Paramount salesman, has been transferred from Chicago to the Detroit Exchange. The west side territory which he has been covering, has been taken over by Louis Goldberg.

It is reported that the north side is to have another two thousand-seat motion picture theatre which will be part of the business block to be erected at the northeast corner of Addison Street and Southport Avenue. The building will be owned by the Addison Building Corporation and Gumbiner Brothers have leased and will operate the theatre.

Salt Lake City

DAVID T. McELHENNEY, formerly Idaho sales representative here for Fox, has resigned and has joined the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer forces.

L. J. Schlaifer, division manager for Universal, will be in this city this week from Denver, and will remain for a few days.

Universal has added a new salesman to the local salesforce in the person of George Ekre.

Louis Marx, complete service man for Universal, is here from New York, working out in the territory with the salesmen.

John Ruger, owner of the American and Orpheum Theatres at Park City, was visiting the row this week, as were the Peery Brothers of the Egyptian Theatre at Ogden, Utah.

Lee Marcus, General sales manager for F. B. O., spent one day in Salt Lake on his way to Los Angeles last week.

Joe K. Soloman, salesman out of the local F. B. O. office, is leaving for a trip into Wyoming. W. T. Withers is traveling the Yellowstone branch in Idaho out of this office.

L. A. Davis, branch manager here for F. B. O., is leaving for a two weeks' trip into Montana some time next week.

W. F. Gordon, who has charge of the Associated First National exchange in this city, has left for Butte, Montana. Vete Stewart is now covering Idaho and Claude Hawkes is in Southern Utah for a short trip. Manager Gordon intends to hold a conference with John Harrington, sales representative out of the Butte exchange.

W. H. Rankin, Warner Brothers local exchange manager, is on his way to Butte, Montana. J. P. Connors of this exchange has also left for an extended trip into Montana.

George Jensen is now selling for Pathe here. Jensen was formerly covering the Montana territory for Warner Brothers.

James R. Keitz has left his managerial chair at the local Greater Features exchange for a two weeks' trip into Idaho.

M. Stringman, operating the Colonial Theatre at Ogden, and T. M. Chestler of the Princess and Gem Theatres at Bingham, Utah, were exhibitor visitors this week.

The Paramount Empress Theatre here has a new change of policy becoming effective next week. The admission prices are to be reduced to popular prices again.

Dave Frazer, district representative for Producers Distributing Corporation, is here for several days.

Harry Kreiter, new salesman for Producers Distributing Corporation, just finished a highly successful trip in Nevada, and is now making his first trip into the Idaho territory with equal success.

The new Orpheum Theatre at Milford, Utah, is being opened by McDermond and Thornberg, January 15th.

Messrs. McDermond and Thornberg have also taken over the theatres in Parowan and Minersville, formerly operated by Clark Kessler. Upon the advent of McDermond and Thornberg into Milford with the new Orpheum, Kessler closed his Victory Theatre there.

Dave Schayer, formerly Idaho representative for Producers Distributing Corporation, is now managing the American Dansante in this city, which is operated in conjunction with the American Theatre.

The month of February has been designated as Producers month by Branch Manager C. E. Parr of the local exchange.

Milton Cohn, United Artist sales representative, left the first part of this week on a trip to Montana and will be out in the territory for several weeks. Joe

Dowd, who was formerly connected with the United Artists exchange in this city as salesman until several weeks ago when he resigned, is again back in the harness, and will cover his old territory in the Utah and Nevada section.

R. D. Carruthers, owner of the Orpheum and Strand Theatres in Pocatello, Idaho, has provided a set of new wicker furniture for his houses for the benefit of the film salesmen who call upon him. It has been placed at the back of the theatre so that they might watch the programs while waiting for conference.

Clyde H. Messinger, Educational exchange manager here, has just returned from a successful ten-day trip into Idaho.

Paul F. Berger, executive from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer home office in New York, is now visiting the local exchange.

S. B. Steck, owner of the Cozy Theatre at Ogden, Utah, was in checking over contracts this week.

Frank White of the Real Art Theatre at American Fork, Utah, was also lining up new business.

L. P. McGinley, manager of the Famous Players-Lasky local exchange in this city, returned recently from a trek in Blackfoot and Pocatello, Idaho.

Albany

NO larger than the proverbial pint of cider, but with the same old infectious smile, the cigar and the white carnation, Julius Singer, sales director of the complete service department for Universal, arrived in Albany last week, and remained a half day or so at the Universal exchange before going on to Utica. Mr. Singer received a royal welcome from Film Row.

Harry Brooks, of Utica, is building a nine hundred seat house in that city, which will be managed by S. L. Wolf, who formerly acted as manager of the Orpheum in the same city.

"Pop" Linton, of Utica, one of the veteran exhibitors of central New York, who is erecting a theatre replacing the one burned about a year ago, was in Albany during the past week, and announced that he expected to open his house about March 15. Mr. Linton plans to use a seven-piece orchestra and also an organ, the house being a first-run affair.

George T. Ames, local manager for Pathe, made his first trip last week to the Lake Placid section and now looks forward to the time when he will again be called on business to the famous Adirondack winter resort. Amos Leonard, district serial sales representative for Pathe, left here on Monday for New Haven, where he will remain for a week or so in looking after business in that territory.

Ackerman Gill, resident manager of Proctor's Theatre in Schenectady, lost his father last week, through death and the funeral was largely attended by attaches of the theatre and others. Floral wreaths were received from F. F. Proctor, as well as the house employees. The honorary pall bearers were from the city's police force.

Austin Interrante, local manager for Warner brothers, returned last week from a swing through northern New York. Herman Stern, local manager for F. B. O., is on a week's trip through the same territory at the present time.

Leon Medem was so tickled one day last week, while in town, in receiving his final naturalization papers, that he invited all the young ladies in the Pathe exchange, to a luncheon. Needless to say they accepted. Mr. Medem formerly handled Pathe's affairs in Albany, but is now associated with the company's Newark office.

Frank Hopkins, former manager for Universal here, but now district manager for Associated Exhibitors in Toronto, was back in town last week, renewing old acquaintances. Ben Smith of Warner Brothers' exchange, is ill with the grippe. Ted Myers, special feature representative for Pathe, left Albany last week for Chicago.

Robert Wagner, former manager of the Gateway Theatre in Little Falls, and Nicholas Servatius, who was connected with the Majestic in Utica, are now road showing pictures in several of the small places through the Mohawk valley.

The condition of Harold Filkins, a salesman in the local F. B. O. exchange, remains practically unchanged. Mr. Filkins has been ill at his home for two or three weeks past. I. M. Brown has been named as salesman in the F. B. O. office, and will cover Mr. Filkins' territory until such time as he is able to return.

The motion picture machine operators of Schenectady met last week and elected the following officers: President, John T. Saurboin; Vice-President, Alexander Roth; Treasurer, Edward O'Donnell; Secretary, Charles Travis.

A new theatre has been opened in Mayfield by Louis Jerome, who resides in the village. The house will be known as "The Jerome."

Mrs. Alex Herman, wife of the manager of First National in Albany, was in New York the past week, attending a dinner given her brother before he sailed on a pleasure trip on Saturday, for Spain.

No more junior movies will be given at the State Theatre in Schenectady, although the orphans of the city will be entertained once a month as in the past. It was said that the children littered up the theatre so badly that it was almost impossible to clean the huge house in time for the afternoon show.

Workmen are busily engaged these days in restoring the Broadway Theatre in Schenectady, a neighborhood house, which will be run by Frank Hickey and James Roach. Mr. Roach is the manager of the Farash Theatres and his present venture is solely his own, with Mr. Hickey as his associate.

There is a probability that the forty-five or more employees of the Farash Theatres in Schenectady, may shortly form themselves into a mutual benefit association. The matter will come up at a get-together meeting which will be held in the basement of the Barclay Theatre in the near future.

Motion picture operators in Albany have decided to charge one dollar per reel, instead of fifty cents, for all work following the usual show. This came about as the result of trade screenings that have been shown at the Colonial Theatre by one of the local exchanges on Sunday nights.

Cleveland

FOR the first time in five years, the Union Theatre, Cleveland is open on Tuesday evening. For five years, all the time it was owned and operated by Frank and Yara Ptelka, the Union Theatre was closed on Tuesday evenings. That was the Ptelka brothers' night off. But recently they sold the house to George Uher. And now the house is open every night in the week.

Yeggs celebrated New Year's eve by breaking into the safe of the Euclid Theatre. They got the day's receipts. The Euclid Theatre is owned by Max Lefkowitz and his associates who have a chain of local picture houses.

Managers Burton and Crockett had the laugh on burglars who attempted to break into the money box at the Lincoln Theatre recently. They got the safe open all right. But they couldn't get the strong box open which contained the money.

Sam Stein has once again opened the Columbia Theatre, St. Clair Ave., Cleveland. The house has been closed for the past few weeks.

Ray Wallace, manager of the Ohio Theatre, Alliance, is reported to be in a local hospital, seriously ill.

George Settos, who has the Lyric Theatre at Lima, has purchased the Orpheum, also in Lima, from Bob Shaw. Shaw is out of the picture business entirely for the time being.

Jack Bates is still being pursued by the jinx. He had just gotten back into harness selling films after being sick for almost three years, when he collided with an automobile. He has been laid up for three weeks, but is now recuperating.

W. A. V. Mack, Pathe short subject sales manager, was in Cleveland last Sunday and held a sales meeting.

Found; Billy Exton. At the Temple Theatre, Toledo. Exton was last seen in Florida, where he was severely attacked by the real estate germ. He has been divorced from motion pictures for about a year. Now he appears on the scene once more, this time as manager for the house owned by E. Mandelbaum. Exton succeeds

Jack O'Connell who recently resigned.

Max Schagrin, twin brother of Joe, who runs the Park Theatre, Youngstown, and himself a former theatre owner, has gone to California for the winter.

Christy Deibel, manager of the Liberty Theatre, Youngstown, is recovering from a recent operation for appendicitis. With that useless organ out of the way, there won't be anything to stop Deibel from winning another one of those golf tournament cups that he is collecting.

Morris Kaplan owns and runs the Camera Theatre. Of course, it's a business proposition, and Kaplan wants it to be a paying investment. At the same time, he wants his theatre to be the community centre of his neighborhood. He has always catered to his audiences, giving them the pictures they ask for, and donating the use of his house when a person is required. But last week he won the love and respect of the entire neighborhood when he pensioned three little children whose father was killed recently in an accident. Kaplan has given the three youngsters passes to the show, and has promised them passes as long as they are neighbors. Good deeds like good news, travels fast.

J. B. Gardner has joined the local Associated Exhibitors sales force, and is covering the western Ohio territory. He was formerly with Metro-Goldwyn.

Robert Cotton, division manager for Producers Distributing Corporation, made a round of his exchanges last week, covering Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Detroit. This was Cotton's first round trip this year.

The Film Bldg. register showed the following out-of-town exhibitor guests for the past week: F. C. Reinecke, Paramount Theatre, Akron; George Manos, Rex, Toronto; E. F. Allman, Pike, Dover; John Pekras, Rivoli, Dreamland and Capitol Theatres, Elyria; H. T. Palmer, Lyric, Fairport Harbor; W. P. James, Ohio, Shadyside; T. J. Fowles, Idol, Lodi; Nat Charnas, who has a string of houses in Toledo; Tim Roberts, White Way, Mansfield, and J. R. Freeman and Mrs. Freeman of the Academy, Conneaut.

Seattle

A H. Huot, manager of the Film Booking Offices exchange in this city, last week announced the acquisition of W. K. Bloom to his local sales staff. Mr. Bloom is well-versed in the F. B. O. field, having come to this city from that organization's office in Salt Lake City.

Ned Edris, manager of John Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre in Tacoma was elected president of the Tacoma Theatre Managers organization at that body's monthly meeting held last week, and he will hold office for the ensuing year. Other officers elected were H. H. Berg of the Shell Theatre, vice president; Bob McKinnell of the Paramount Theatre, secretary; and Walter McNeish, of the Bijou Theatre, treasurer. Mr. McNeish's selection for the treasurer's office marks his third term in that capacity for the organization.

H. M. Glanfield last week announced his resignation from Manager W. H. Drummond's local Producers' Distributing Corporation exchange sales staff, in order to take up new connections in a similar capacity with Associated Exhibitors, under the direction of their new local manager R. S. Stackhouse.

The entire Seattle Film Row joined together last week in expressing to J. A. Gage, Educational Pictures Exchange manager, and Mrs. Gage their deep sorrow at the passing of Mrs. Gage's father, after an illness of only a few weeks.

Reports from Moscow, Idaho, received this week, indicated that the recent opening of the Kenworthy Theatre in that city early this month had been a tremendous success. The house is an entirely new and modern structure, built by M. Kenworthy to replace the former Kenworthy Theatre, used for several years as the leading photoplay house in that territory.

Among the changes in ownership and management in this territory recently is the sale of the Columbia Theatre in Columbia

City, a suburb of Seattle, by J. W. Burke to A. J. Miller. Mr. Miller came here recently from Santa Ana, California, but is a former Seattle resident and was welcomed back into this territory by many former friends.

Frank Harris, Western division manager of the Pathe organization, spent the better part of the last week in this city, in conference with Manager L. A. Samuelson of the local Pathe office. From here he was scheduled to visit the Portland office and then return to headquarters in California.

The proudest day in the history of motion pictures in Tacoma was achieved last week when H. T. Moore, manager of the Rialto Theatre, had the pleasure of presenting to packed houses the world premiere of "Hearts and Fists," the film made at the H. C. Weaver Company studios in Tacoma. R. S. Stackhouse, manager of the Associated Exhibitors office in this city, under whose banner the film is being distributed, was among the members of the trade who attended the premiere. Delay in finishing prints necessitated the expenditure of more than one hundred dollars to get the film from New York to Tacoma by Air Mail, by the distributors, but the show went on "on time."

W. C. Gowen, former assistant manager of the C. M. Dunn Theatre in Renton, last week rejoined the sales staff of Western Film Corporation, with whom he was associated up to a few months ago.

Don Kesler's new Bethell Theatre in Helena, Montana, opened to packed houses a few weeks ago, and since that time has been the talk of the trade in this territory. Unlimited praise is accorded Mr. Kesler for the manner in which he has transformed an old opera house into a beautiful and modern motion picture theatre, ranking second to none in the Montana territory. J. H. Warren of Associated Exhibitors, and Walter K. Miller of Greater Features, both of Eutte, represented the industry at the opening.

Philadelphia

WILLIAM G. HUMPHRIES, Philadelphia branch manager for Producers Distributing Company, is receiving congratulations from his friends upon being one of the three winning branch managers in the United States in a recent sales and collections drive. Mr. Humphries' prize for being one of the first three managers in United States will be a trip to the company's studios at Hollywood.

He will leave about the first of March.

Norman J. Ayers, who was formerly Philadelphia and Washington branch manager for the Independent Film Corporation, has recently joined the Warner Exchange in Washington as sales manager. J. S. Hebrew, district manager, with headquarters in Philadelphia appointed Mr. Ayers.

Upon his return from a rest cure at Hot Springs, Va., Edgar Moss, manager of the Philadelphia Fox Exchange, was greeted with a huge basket of flowers, an expression of good will and welcome from his employees.

During the absence of Harry Knapp, chairman of the Penna. Board of Motion Picture Censors, who has been visiting in California, Henry Starr Richardson, secretary of the Board, is acting in a supervisory capacity.

Vincent McKnight, a member of the staff of the Atlantic City Press Union, has been made publicity director for the Stanley Company of America in its Atlantic City Theatre. The general publicity, however, will be supervised from the Philadelphia office by Abe L. Einstein.

Kansas City

MORE zero weather descended upon Kansas City's film row this week, but if there was any depression in business among the exchanges it was not noticeable. Business during the last eleven months has more than doubled the expectations of E. C. Rhoden, manager of Midwest Film Distributors, Inc., of Kansas City, while First National Month, which will last throughout January, is proving more than gratifying to that company according to W. A. Burke, assistant branch manager.

Charles Knickerbocker, R. R. Thompson and Charles Russell have been added to the sales force of the Kansas City Associated Exhibitors force, according to Frank Cassil, branch manager.

R. S. Ballantyne, Pathe district manager, after a short visit in Kansas City, departed for a three-weeks trip through the Southern territory.

Grave concern was caused by the unexpected illness of Tom O. Byerle, First National branch manager, who is confined in Research hospital, ill of typhoid fever. W. E. Callaway of New Orleans, southern district manager for First National, is in charge of the Kansas City branch during Mr. Byerle's illness.

The new F. B. O. building in Kansas City, which will include 5,000 square feet, will be completed for occupancy by February 1st, it was announced. The building is located at 1713-15 Wyandotte street.

Howard Butler, formerly with Warner Bros., in Kansas City, has joined the Pathe force in San Francisco. Eddie Green, Metro-Goldwyn salesman who has been basking in the sunshine on the West Coast during the holidays, is back again plodding through Kansas City's snow.

O. H. Bogart, formerly with Paramount in Oklahoma City, has joined the First National sales force in Kansas City.

W. B. Bishop, Metro-Goldwyn district exploiteer, drove through Kansas City this week from Oklahoma City for St. Louis, accompanied by his family, where he will make his home.

Dan B. Lederman, Associated Exhibitors district manager, was a Kansas City visitor this week.

Roy Churchill, F. B. O. branch manager, was out in the territory this week aiding in putting over "Laugh Month."

M. C. Seneft, formerly with Associated Exhibitors, has been added to the Warner Bros., sales force in Kansas City, as has Fred A. Rohrs, also formerly of Associated Exhibitors. Jerry Curran of First National doesn't oppose the number "13" any more. That is his ranking among F. N. salesman in the national check-up for the last quarter of 1925.

W. E. Truog, assistant Universal divisional manager, and Charles Sears, in charge of Universal theatres in the Kansas City territory, dropped everything the other day to make a hurried trip to New York.

E. C. Rhoden, manager of Midwest Film Distributors, Inc., of Kansas City is hustling out in the territory.

The boys who wear the eyeshades continued to work at a speedy pace in exchanges along Kansas City's movie row this week. Bob Withers, branch manager for Enterprise, reports a marked increase in the business of that exchange for 1925 over 1924, while Jack Langon of the Standard Film Company exchange, makes a similar assertion concerning his company. C. E. Reynolds, Universal representative, is displaying pride in a new Elgin watch, which was a gift from his company, P. D. C. branch manager, is back at his desk again after a visit with his Parents at Lester Prairie, Minn. Louis Reichert, Warner Bros., branch manager returned from an eastern Christmas trip, rolled up his sleeves and "dug in." It is with high anticipation that Russell Borg, Educational booker, is looking forward to the last week of this month, which will be Bookers' Week, in conjunction with a national drive on the part of his company. In all movie row stores this week there was much evidence of $10 gold pieces. Did not two dozen employees of Kansas City receive one "gold man" each from their company? K. L.

Eagon, who formerly was a Paramount representative in the Kansas City territory, has been added to the Kansas City Pathe force, according to J. A. Epperson, branch manager. Just to "rub it in," Eddie Green, Metro-Goldwyn representative who is spending the holidays on the West Coast, sent back one of those "the water's fine" cards to shivering Kansas City friends. R. S. Ballantyne, district Pathe Chief, has returned from a trip to Oklahoma City and Kansas key towns.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: G. L. Hooper, Orpheum, Topeka, Kan.; L. Brenning, Cozy, Crystal and Best theatres Topeka, Kas.; M. G. Weary, Farris, Richmond, Mo.; W. P. Cuff, Strand, Chillicothe, Mo.; Roy Spurlock, Star, St. Joseph, Mo.; Edward Peskay, Penn. theatre, St. Joseph, Mo.; M. W. Hubble, Hubble theatre, Trenton Mo.; Myers Brothers Auditorium, Slater, Mo.; H. Milliss, Photatorium, Smithville, Mo.; Charles Sears, Universal theatres, Missouri and Kansas.

William Mueller, Sedalia, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Christian, Byers theatre, Excelsior Springs, Mo.; G. L. Hooper, Orpheum, Topeka, Kas.; Walter Wallace, Orpheum, Leavenworth, Kas.; M. B. Shanberg, Midland Circuit of Theatres, Kansas and Missouri; Ben Levy, Hippodrome, Joplin, Mo.

Central Penn

MEN prominent in the motion picture industry throughout Pennsylvania attended the formal opening of the new Capital Theatre, Lancaster, Pa., on the night of December 21. This is the new 1,300 capacity house erected by Mr. and Mrs. George M. Krupa to replace the Krupas' Aldine Theatre which was destroyed by fire. It is now being operated as a combined picture and vaudeville house, with two changes of bill a week. C. H. Goodwin, representing the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' organization and others. John Creswell was master of ceremonies and introduced from the stage the builders of the theatre and members of the Krupa executive force. There were many floral gifts for Mr. and Mrs. Krupa, including a horseshoe from the Lancaster Kiwanis Club, of which Mr. Krupa is a member. An interesting part of the program was a recital on the large Robert Morton organ which has been installed in the theatre. After the exercises in the theatre the guests from out-of-town and the members of the Krupa organization were entertained at a supper dance in the Stevens House.

The Colonial Theatre, Harrisburg, which was closed for almost two weeks to permit the completion of $40,000 worth of improvements and renovations, reopened on Christmas eve, one day sooner than had been planned.

The Industrial Board of the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry, which is revising the building regulations governing the showing of non-theatrical motion pictures, on the basis of suggestions made at the recent public hearing on the subject, announced at its meeting held at the capitol in Harrisburg on January 8 that the revisions will not be finally announced until the meeting on February 10.

The dressing rooms of the American Theatre, Pittston, Pa., devoted to pictures and vaudeville, were robbed on New Year's eve, by thieves who gained entrance to the building by removing the screen from a rear window. They ransacked the dressing room of one of the performers and escaped with $40 and several other articles. Manager Claude Westley, of the theatre, reported to the police that several other robberies have taken place in the American in recent months.

A new theatre was opened on Christmas Day at Forty-Fort, Pa., by Frank Pepe, of Pittston. The equipment of the house includes a Marr & Colton organ.

Mahanov City, in the hard coal mining belt of Pennsylvania, where the coal strike has temporarily handicapped municipal enterprise of all sorts, seemed to be without its usual community Christmas Tree until Manager Ascough, of the Victoria picture theatre, came to the rescue. Mr.

Ascough got in touch with Boyd Chamberlain, of the Chamberlain amusement enterprises, which controls the Victoria and numerous other picture houses in the coal regions, and Mr. Chamberlain saw to it that the tree was provided.

J. F. DAVIS, former manager of the Westland Theatre, Portsmouth, O., spent several days in the city looking over the present film situation. He has no immediate plans for the future but has several propositions, he announced.

Kermit Freck, football player de luxe and manager of the Eastern and Grand Theatres, Ironton, O., came into film row last week making arrangements for the improvement of the Southside Theatre in Ironton which he has recently acquired.

The Universal Joy Club gave a party last week at which ice cream and cake were served a la Volstead.

W. Lasance, Universal salesman is the proud owner of the Universal Mustang Championship medal. This shows that he acquired third place in the 1925 sales drive. This is the seventh consecutive time that Bill has won this prize in the last three years that he has been with the firm.

Ned De Pinet, sales director for First National, spent several days at the local branch conferring with Roy Haines, local manager.

George Kirby, booker for Associated Exhibitors, has been ill at home for several days.

Hugh Nesbit, salesman for F. B. O., in the coal regions of W. Va., committed the extreme traveling man's error, that by getting on the wrong train and traveling for hours before discovering same. Nesbit, however, got even for this mistake when he prevailed upon Roy Calloway to purchase a box of candy for the telephone operator of the Corten Hotel at Welsh, W. Va.

Hugh Owens, former manager for Famous Players at Charlotte, N. C., has been transferred to the local offices of the same firm in the same capacity taking the place of C. E. Peppiatt, who has re-

Atlanta

A NEWCOMER to the Atlanta film colony is C. L. Peavey, whom Sidney Katz installed as manager of the Atlanta Exchange of Film Booking Offices last week. Although new to Atlanta and the Southeast Mr. Peavey is a veteran film man, with a record dating back something more than ten years, the past two years on the sales force of F. B. O. in Cleveland.

Paul Whiteman's engagement in Atlanta, where the king of jazz and syncopation has a legion of followers, brought two talented musicians from Montgomery who have more interest in Mr. Whiteman's visit than that of enjoying his concert. They are Frank Woodruff, leader of the orchestra of the Empire Theatre of Montgomery, and George L. Hodge, organist at the Empire. Their mission is concerned with the ballad "For You" that was featured recently at the Metropolitan Theatre here. Mr. Woodruff wrote the words and Mr. Hodge set them to music—and now they are seeking to interest Mr. Whiteman in the composition. It is a tuneful number with a singing rhythm and seems destined for wide and increasing popularity.

C. T. (Shag) Jordan, salesman for Universal in the South Georgia and Alabama territory, was in Atlanta over the last week-end.

The Universal Force in Atlanta is in receipt of a beautiful letter of thanks from Mr. and Mrs. Ralph B. Williams for a wedding present sent them recently, and each member of the force is invited to New York as a special guest of the former Atlanta branch manager and his bride.

F. A. Leatherman, was among the first of Mike Coyne's Atlanta friends to learn of Mr. Coyne's appointment to the managerial post of United Artists' San Francisco exchange, and we are indebted to Mr. Leatherman for the item.

Walter Green, vice-president International Projection Corporation, was here last week to visit Arthur Lucas and Mr. McIlheran.

Sig and Sol Samuels have leased the Alpha Theatre to Louis B. Bach. The Alpha is one of Atlanta's smaller houses and is located on Whitehall street. Its programs in the past have been made up largely of Westerns, serials, and repeats of bigger features that have proved popular on their first runs in some major house.

Minneapolis

A RADIO broadcasting station, WCCO, Minneapolis, St. Paul, participated in the opening ceremonies for the New State Theatre at Eau Claire, Wis., opened last week by Finkelstein & Ruben, owners of nearly 100 Northwest theatres.

It broadcast from 10:30 p. m. to 11:15 p. m. Monday the entertainment given by special artists at the grand opening the following evening (Jan. 18) in the Wisconsin city.

The broadcasting program was arranged by the Eau Claire civic and commerce association and the Minneapolis Civic & Commerce association and by the owners of the theatre and the Gold Medal radio organization.

A short talk was given by Knute Anderson, president of the Eau Claire association.

Sigurd Rishovd, former violin soloist of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra played several numbers and there followed selections from the revue which opened the Eau Claire State the next evening.

The new theatre is a de luxe house complete in every detail and designed and handled with as great attention to beauty as are the State and Capitol theatres of this same company in the Twin Cities. It cost $315,000 and seats 1,300 persons.

It is located on Eau Claire street half a block from Barstow street, the city's main thoroughfare. Across the street is the brand new Eau Claire hotel and union bus depot.

It has a $20,000 organ and a seven piece orchestra and for the convenience of special parties it has a mezzanine floor which adds greatly to the beauty of the theatre. About 20 employees are required to handle the house.

Mike Deglman is the orchestra leader and Richard Bach is organist. Arthur Molestad is assistant manager.

In order that the new State may get off to the most auspicious possible start, F. & R. have prevailed upon V. B. Valleeau, a retired theatre owner, formerly of Albert Lea, to conduct it and to establish the policy for it.

The program will call for three changes a week with vaudeville units added to the films on Friday and Saturday. Incidentally Eau Claire will be the first stop for vaudeville artists coming out of Chicago for the new F. & R. north-west circuit.

Among those who went to Eau Claire from the Twin City headquarters for the event were I. H. Ruben, Theodore Hays, Eddie Ruben, Harold Finkelstein, Ben Ferris.

Mr. Hays, veteran theatre owner and director of the Northwest, supervised the location, building and decoration and outfitting of the new theatre.

This is the second theatre opening in Eau Claire within a few weeks and gives the thriving little Wisconsin city of 25,000 inhabitants six handsome houses. Of these the New Wisconsin recently opened by Herman Schwahn and the Grand Opera House are the most pretentious, aside from the New State.

The engagement of Harold Finkelstein, one of the rising juniors in the Finkelstein & Ruben organization, was announced last week. He will marry Miss Gladys Jacobs Feb. 2. Harold Finkelstein is the musical genius of the F. & R. organization. He handles the selection of music for the 90 theatres controlled by the company and works with C. P. Murphy, production manager, on some of the productions. Under the name of Harry Fink he has written several popular songs of recent publication. He also has charge of the personnel.

Charles Andrews of the Aster theatre, St. Paul, has been celebrating the arrival of a great grandchild.

Smiling Lew Epstein, theatre orchestra leader of St. Paul, got quite a kick out of the fact that the saxophone was used recently by the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra at one of its concerts. "The saxophone is getting respectable," he said.

Joe Maitland, new manager of the Tower theatre, has things running as smoothly as if the St. Paul theatre hadn't changed managers three times in the last six months.

R. E. Quale, manager of the St. Paul Strand, declares that the open winter about the Twin Cities has caused a decided pickup in business within the last few weeks.

Hal Daigler, manager of the Capitol theatre in St. Paul, owned by Finkelstein & Ruben, is back from a recent trip to Chicago with Harold Finkelstein, personnel and musical director of the circuit.

A chain of small houses all in Grand Rapids, Mich., previously owned by Beecher, Inc., have been sold to Messrs. C. Glen Fleiser, E. N. Brown and C. J. Callahan, also of this city.

A new member of the Detroit Film Board of Trade is H. R. Pfeifle, of the Priscilla Theatre, who with J. C. Ritter of the Rialto and Chairman Ed. E. Kirchner of the Family Theatre, represent the exhibitors. The exchanges are represented by all new members as follows: Lester Sturm, manager of Metro; Jim Minter, manager of A. B. C., and M. Star of Educational.

Phil Selznick, former film salesman in Cleveland, and Jimmie Kilbane, brother of the fighter, have purchased the Silver Slipper, a well known cabaret in Detroit.

George A. Roberts, special representative from the Fox home office, was in Detroit for the past week.

Among the visitors along film row last week were: Mrs. Signor, who formerly operated the Martha Washington Theatre in Ypsilanti, Mich. She is engaged in the real estate business now and reports business very good. Ed. Reeves, from the Idle Hour in Paw Paw, Mich., also made his appearance.

Bob Sheehan, that eminent little showman out in Hamtramack, thought of another good stunt, and this time its a radio tie up. Bob really has one of the best organists in the country playing at his theatre. He is Reginald Webb, whose organ selections will be broadcasted from station WJR in Pontiac, a powerful station, every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday at 11.30 p. m.

About a year and a half ago, a young man came to Detroit to seek a position in the motor city. He came all the way from Omaha and brought with him a diploma from the University of Nebraska. Automobiles did not interest him very much, but motion pictures did, and so he started at the bottom of the ladder in the Pathe office as a poster clerk. Holding this job only a short time when he was promoted to the shipping department. His next move was assistant to the booker and here his talents were discovered because of the amount of film he sold over the counter and the many friends he made. Wonder what that boy could do if given a chance, thought the manager and soon came the opportunity for him to be a salesman. He then traveled in the state doing very good, and a few weeks ago he was transferred to the city covering the east side. He has made good so far and more will be heard about him as time goes on. Now that's the story about Benjamin Fred Silbee, a city salesman today for Pathe.

W. S. Stanton, who has been salesman for Paramount for some time, resigned last week. Chet J.

Bell has been again transferred from Chicago to take his position.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Butterfield, expect to leave early in February for Florida, where they will spend a month.

Malcom C. MacInnes, manager of the John H. Kunsky's new State Theatre, was presented not so long ago with a six-pound daughter. Mother and daughter reported as doing nicely.

Buffalo

PATRONS in the Franklin Theatre, Syracuse, were obliged to leave the other afternoon when a strip of film in the projection booth caught fire and filled the house with smoke. Although there was a hurried rush for exits, there was no panic and none of the patrons was injured. The operators fought the blaze with hand extinguishers until firemen arrived. The fire was confined to the projection booth and the damage amounted to only $100. The Rev. Arthur B. Merriman is lessee of the theatre. He quit the theatre business to enter the ministry two years ago. His brother, R. P. Merriman, 1122 Euclid avenue, is manager. The owner is Henry P. Hallenback, 122 Stolp avenue.

Billy Leyser, director of publicity for Metropolitan Pictures corporation, writes that he wishes to be remembered to all his old friends in Buffalo, where Billy at one time was an exhibitor, managing several community theatres. That was way back in the old General Film days, before Billy went to new triumphs in Cleveland and later on the West Coast.

Genial Al Beckerich, manager of Loew's State Theatre, Buffalo, has been elected a director of the Greater Buffalo Advertising Club. Al now is engrossed in putting over a campaign in Buffalo in co-operation of the Evening Times.

evening of January 14. The house boasts a ten-piece orchestra.

George E. Williams, former Buffalo Paramount exploiteer, has arrived in Atlanta, Ga., to take over his duties of publicity director at the Howard Theatre. George says it is a great theatre and a great country.

Harry T. Dixon, manager, and Elmer Lux, booker, both broke into the columns of the F. B. O. Accelerator the other day. The Buffalo office is at the top of the list of exchanges for collections, while Lux is third in the country on dates obtained by bookers. They're some hustlers at the Buffalo F. B. O. exchange.

Ed Flynn has resigned as manager of the Buffalo office of United Artists. Pending the appointment of a new manager, Jack von Tiller is in charge.

Mell R. Edwards has been engaged as a member of the sales staff at the office of Warner Brothers. Mell is a veteran and has covered most all the territories in the past decade or so.

Marvin Kempner, Paramount manager and his staff were greeted by President Adolph Zukor and accompanying officials who came to town for the Shea Buffalo opening on Friday, January 15. Mr. Zukor shook hands with every member of the office force and congratulated Mr. Kempner on the showing being made by the exchange. Paramount, by the way, will soon be in its new exchange, one of the finest in the country.

Denver

J. F. LYNCH, president of the Wyoming Theatre Managers Association, arrived in Denver last Thursday on a combined business and pleasure trip. Mr. Lynch announced that the next annual meeting of the Wyoming Theatre Managers Association will be held during the Cheyenne Frontier Days celebration in Cheyenne, Wyoming, the exact time during the week to be announced later. He extended an invitation to the Denver Film Board of Trade to have a representative present at this meeting. He is the owner and manager of theatres in Laramie, the home of the University of Wyoming.

Paul Duane, a new son, arrived at the home of Joseph H. Askby, local branch manager of First National and the president of the Denver Film Board of Trade, on Sunday, January 10, 1926. The new son, the third child of the family, weighs 7¼ pounds. Mother and son are reported doing fine.

Joseph Robins, father of Sam and Fred Robins, orchestra conductors of the Century and Garden Roofs, respectively, has gone to Virginia Beach, Va., to talk over concessions at that resort for the summer. Mr. Robins, formerly operated a film exchange in Baltimore.

An orchestral organ has been installed in the Central Theatre, Martinsburg, W. Va., of which A.

C. Irons is manager. The Berkeley Theatre Company, Inc., C. W. Boyer, president, operates the playhouse. F. Henry Vanderherchen, formerly conductor of the Vanderherchen Conservatory of Music, Norfolk, Va., has been engaged to operate the instrument.

The Opera House Theatre, Frederick, Md., owned by the city, will have its roof made leak-proof and other improvements made, it is understood.

Weinberg and Sachs, Lexington, Va., have leased the New Virginia Theatre, Harrisonburg, Va., from the Virginia Amusement Company for ten years. About $22,000 has been spent for improvements.

True Southern appreciation was shown by the firemen of Richmond, Va., when they had a committee present the management of the Bluebird Theatre in that city with a handsome silver cup, on Christmas morning. The cup was presented as an appreciation of the courtesies which the theatre had shown the firemen throughout 1925.

JOHN CALLAHAN, who came to Boston only a short time ago from the Middle West to become exploitation manager for Paramount, and who won friends everywhere his work has carried him, gains another promotion by becoming exploitation manager not only for the Boston territory but for New Haven and Maine as well.

Rhode Island State police have started a rigid inspection of all motion picture theatres in the smaller cities and towns and as a result of the campaign at least one house has been closed until extensive changes are made. Superintendent Chaffee said that in the course of patrolling, one theatre in a rural section was found where the fire hazard was extreme, and the playhouse was promptly closed. This resulted in an order for an inspection of all theatres in the smaller communities. "The inspectors have reported a number of minor defects as well as some decidedly serious conditions in four theatres inspected," Supt. Chaffee declared, and added that proprietors and managers had been ordered to make necessary changes. "Names of theatres, owners and managers will not be given out unless it becomes necessary to prosecute," said the superintendent.

Jack S. Eaton, who recently joined Loew's executive staff and who has been at Loew's State Theatre in Boston for the past three weeks, has been recalled to New York.

A group of Hartford men headed by Joseph Walsh of the Rialto Theatre, Hartford, Conn., are planning the erection of a new theatre on Farmington avenue, corner of Evergreen avenue.

Plans have not advanced sufficiently to give details. It is understood, however, that it will be one of the largest theatres in the state.

P. Vartigian of Somerville is to build a theatre at 303 Broadway, Somerville, for which Architect James Tuck of Boston has drawn plans. The proposed theatre will be 80 by 50 feet, with one balcony. It is expected that contracts will be awarded within a month so that construction work may start early in the spring.

Extensive alterations and improvements are being made at Loew's State Theatre, Boston. The entire interior is being redecorated. The former rather severe treatment of the lobby and foyer in imitation stone is to be panelled with silk hangings and the color scheme of the interior is being made lighter with a soft buff combination. The stage has been completely reequipped; in fact it is practically an entire new stage, with soft drapes and complete new equipment including all lighting fixtures and the addition of a hundred spotlights. The dressing rooms back stage have also been refinished and refurnished.

Fire starting in the projection booth of the Central Theatre at Manville, R. I., Monday night, resulted in damage of about $900 and caused the audience to hurriedly leave the theatre. One woman was slightly injured. The fire started at 8.40, soon after the show had started, a section of film taking fire. There were about 400 in the theatre at the time. Napoleon Trahan of Centredale, R. I., is owner of the playhouse and Albert Levesque was operator in the booth.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT EQUIPMENT CONSTRUCTION OPERATION

Publix Theatre Managers School Graduates First Students

All Will Be Assigned To Posts With Company

THE members of the first class of the Publix Theatre Managers Training School (formerly the Paramount Theatre Managers Training School) completed last week the six months course at the School. At the Hotel Roosevelt, a dinner was tended by Publix Theatres Corporation to the members of the class as a tribute to their work during the intensive training of the course which they followed. Present at the dinner were executives of the Publix Theatres Corporation and of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Mr. A. M. Botsford, Director of Advertising of the Publix Theatres Corporation acted as toastmaster. Mr. Sam Katz, Mr. Harold B. Franklin, Mr. Harry Marx, Mr. George Weeks, and Mr. John F. Barry, Director of the Managers School spoke at the dinner.

Mr. Sam Katz, President of the Publix Theatres Corporation in addressing the class developed the following statement, which is carried in the School Catalog for the coming session.

"The Paramount Theatre Managers Training School, which has just completed its first term, has proved itself of inestimable value in its work of providing a definite, specialized and complete course of practical motion picture theatre managership training.

"I have watched the work of this School with the greatest interest, in its scope and its possibilities of service, both to the student who desires to become an efficient theatre manager, and to the theatre where he eventually will be placed. Its position in a program for the constructive and continual raising of the standards of motion picture theatre entertainment is of the utmost importance.

"The Paramount Theatre Managers Training School now becomes the training school of the Publix Theatres Corporation and is one of the most important divisions in the organization of Publix Theatres.

"I have great hopes in the future of the Publix Theatre Managers Training School, both because of the splendid record of the past year, and because we can all see through it, the means of adequately providing the high type of educated, intelligent and thoroughly trained theatre managers that this great business has now come to demand."

Many of the men have already taken over their assignments in the field. One member of the class is now managing the Fenway Theatre, Boston, others have been assigned to New Haven, Scollay Square Theatre, Boston, Haverhill, New Bedford, Washington Street Olympia Theatre and the Fields Corner Theatre, Boston. One member of the class has been assigned to West Palm Beach, one is assigned to the Home Office Advertising Department of the Corporation and one to the Statistical Department at the Home Office. One member leaves for a Paramount Exchange for training in exploitation before he leaves for an assignment in South America.

Eight graduates are now at the Metropolitan Theatre, Boston, and nine graduates are at the Chicago Theatres operated by Balaban & Katz for two weeks of training in the operation of de luxe houses.

Over two hundred experts visited the School to give instruction during the period of training. Some of this training took place at the auditorium of the School where a miniature stage and other equipment was used in instruction. The Rivoli Theatre was also used extensively during the period of training. The class visited laboratories and factories in and near New York to supplement training in the maintenance of equipment. A week was spent at the Edison Lighting Institute, Harrison, New Jersey, whose experts conducted a course in Theatre and Stage lighting. Under the guidance of experts the class prepared advertising and exploitation campaigns for current productions and visited over one hundred theatres in New York City and the vicinity on different assignments. A course in Organ Maintenance and Organ Music for Motion Picture Theatres was given at the Wuritzer Auditorium. Mechanics of Newspaper Work was studied at the plant of the Western Newspaper Union. Certain effects in presentation were studied at the Inter-Theatre Artists School.

During the full course of training the Motion Picture Trade Papers, Advertising Magazines, Window Display Magazine, and Management Periodicals served to supplement the formal instruction. The amusement pages of thirty representative American Newspapers were

NEW FIELDS

PROHIBITION and motion picture theatre equipment seem about as remotely connected as any two objects imaginable. Yet one does have its effects felt by the other.

We were an interested listener this morning while a manufacturer of stage lighting equipment told of new fields conquered by his company—and their unusually rich profits. His story went something like this: Since prohibition enforcement has acquired some semblance of seriousness in its application to Broadway the mortality among the numerous supper clubs, cafes, etc. is extremely high. A new club opening now may or may not be operating three weeks hence.

But each club must have its cabaret and effective lighting—and that means that every club is fully equipped with spots and the like—a very respectable order if only a one timer. However, this order is often repeated. The club is padlocked and the owners open up again a few doors away. Then our equipment manufacturer makes another complete installation. This added cost isn't, however, a great worry to the club owners as they usually make theirs.

These club proprietors are uninitiated in the buying of theatre equipment and they pay just what is asked by the manufacturer or dealer. Maybe only twice the actual list price or again perhaps four or five hundred percent in excess.

Poor business methods and only a few motion picture concerns are involved. In this instance however we refuse to severely condemn these companies for pirating as we've often attempted to enjoy evenings at these same night clubs and we pay as we are billed—and these charges are not only a modest four or five hundred percent in excess.

studied each week as part of the course in Newspaper Advertising. The Department Heads of the Publix Theatres Corporation instructed the class in the organization and operation of their respective departments, explaining the procedure of Home Office control and explaining the different forms that are used by the Corporation in its operation of theatres. For one month the class served as ushers at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, where they followed the regular training given the staff.

The next session of the Publix Theatre Managers Training School will start February 20th. At this time applications are being received for enrollment at the School. These applications will be sifted and the successful candidates notified during the coming month. The total of five hundred applications received for the first session of the School will be surpassed. In the next class of the Publix Theatre Managers Training School will be represented twelve theatre managers now on the circuit of the Publix Theatres Corporation. These men will attend the Managers School for three months at a time. For the new session of the School, a laboratory or practice room will be equipped with miniature stages for practice in stage lighting and stage effects, with miniature window display forms for practice in arranging window displays for cooperative advertising, and with cut-out machines for practice in the construction of decorative advertising devices.

During the six months of training the members of the class devoted their time to the following subjects in the schedule—

Dear Sirs:

The Pasadena Community Playhouse Association feels a great deal of gratification in the fact that you have installed in our new Playhouse and more than pleased with the satisfactory manner in which the installation was handled.

Inasmuch as the Playhouse is one of the finest buildings devoted to community drama in the United States, we were interested in the fact that you, while packing the quality of the building and some of its unique features, never fail to remark about the comfort and beauty of the seats.

So, you see, we are grateful to you for your assistance in making our building the pride of the community. If a word from us will bear any conviction with a prospective purchaser, we shall feel pleased to give that word, for "one good turn deserves another."

Yours very truly,

Putting Benefit Performances on A Paying Business Basis

Finkelstein & Ruben Develop a New Branch of Patronage Building

By Earle R. Buell

FINKELSTEIN & RUBEN, operators of several theatres in Minneapolis and St. Paul and one of the largest chains in the Northwest, are blazing another trail through the wilderness of theatre management.

And two young Twin City women have found a new field of activity in motion pictures.

The women are Mrs. Harry David Warner of St. Paul and Miss Grace Harris of Minneapolis.

The new trail leads through the tangled byways known as organization benefits.

For the first time in the history of the Northwest's largest theatre chain and for the first time, so far as information is at hand, in the history of the theatre business a theatre company is going out actively to persuade civic organizations, clubs, societies and lodges to give benefit nights at the theatres.

There have been benefits and benefits in the history of theatredom in the Northwest but they just happened.

A club or lodge would go to the theatre manager and ask for the theatre for a night, putting its ticket-selling strength behind the project and drawing down a share of the proceeds.

Various methods of handling this sort of thing were tried but—as many another theatre man can testify—it was generally a nuisance.

Ben Ferris, director of advertising, or somebody in the F. & R. organization, spent a few moments contemplating the situation and evolved a thought.

If there must be benefits, why not make them amount to something?

That, in a nutshell, was the idea.

And the result was that the portly grand vortex chief mogul of the Ancient Order

As a means of turning club benefits and drives from detrimental into profitable channels for the box office, the Finkelstein & Ruben houses in Minneapolis and St. Paul have created a special bureau to solicit this business, and the response, according to Ben Ferris, to the many experiments so far have been far beyond expectations.

Two young women spend their entire time in arranging performances to promote funds for clubs, lodges and other social and civic organizations. The club assumes no financial responsibility but gives an active service in the sale of tickets. This feature is proving a means of reaching persons who ordinarily do not go to the theatre, and thus is working as a force for developing additional theatre patronage.

One of the main advantages of the plan as worked out by this organization is the fact that it tends to reduce to an appreciable degree the competition of amateur shows and performances.

of Organized Organizers, seated one day at his un-roll-top desk, was approached by a personable young woman.

"Kind sir," she remarked, or words to that effect, "could your organization use a little of the coin of the realm?"

"Don't ask foolish questions," responded the p. g. w. c. m. "If you are selling something, go into your prologue and hasten through to the final dance steps and the smiling exit."

"I represent Finkelstein & Ruben and we have a lot of theatres with plenty of seats in them," said Mrs. Warner, for it was none other. "You have a lot of members that would like to have a theatre party and sell their own tickets to each other and their friends and make a little money for the A. O. O. O. Am I correct?"

"You have been from the first," said the p. g. w. c. m., turning to the wall the framed motto: "This is my busy day."

"I will not conceal from you the undeniable fact that the theatre doesn't mind the added revenue," Mrs. Warner went on. "But there are other factors entering into the equation. We like good will and we like to get into touch with people who are not regular patrons of our theatres and so we will make you this proposition." And she made it.

"Very well, what is the catch? How much will it cost us?" came the inquiry at length.

"In the words of the old ballyhoo man, it costs you nothing but your time and attention," said the lady.

"At that price anything is cheap and you have sold something," the chief mogul said, signing on the dotted line.

And so a lot of members of his organization took tickets furnished by the theatre without expense to the lodge and divided them up and bought some and sold the rest to their friends and made it a big night with a good show and much social commingling.

WHEN it was all over, the theatre checked a goodly net, the lodge banked a neat nest-egg. And then Finkelstein & Ruben figured up the rest of the proceeds.

Item. One small army of ticket sellers become apostles of good will for F. & R. and that particular show.

Item. One lodge became permanent boosters for F. & R.

Item. New faces began to appear regularly in the theatre and many of them were members of the friendly organization who had got the habit.

Percentages of the admission prices were worked out for each theatre.

Regular forms of agreement were prepared so that misunderstandings might be minimized.

And Miss Harris was put on the job in Minneapolis to give her full time to the same work inaugurated by Mrs. Warner in St. Paul.

The big selling argument was that the beneficiary need not invest a nickel in the project. Settlements were made on total number of tickets sold and both theatre and beneficiary made a profit out of the transaction.

The scheme has been working successfully now for a considerable period and everybody is happy.

Mrs. Warner and Miss Harris work with the advertising departments in their respective cities and their activities are held responsible for many new friends the F. & R. organization has made.

Miss Grace Harris, in charge of the Minneapolis Bureau of Finkelstein & Ruben benefits.

Several Acts To Be Sent Over Theatre Chain in Northwest

THE stage spectacle and the atmospheric prologue have become such a factor in the business of Finkelstein & Ruben's 90 or 100 theatres in the Northwest that five or six of the best will be handled through a dozen or more cities of the circuit very much after the manner of the regular road show.

This announcement was made after the managers convention held in Minneapolis recently at which the slogan "Always the Best Entertainment" was drummed into the managers by practically all the speakers.

It was also announced that a strong vaudeville circuit would be operated by the company although it is primarily a motion picture firm.

The musical and scenic stage shows will be sent to every theatre of the string that has stage facilities to handle them, according to Theodore Hays, general manager. They will go to Rochester, St. Cloud, Mangato, Austin, Aberdeen, Sioux Falls, Grand Forks, Bismarck and the like.

The vaudeville circuits will include Duluth, Superior, Brainerd, Virginia, Hibbing, St. Cloud, Mankato, Rochester, Austin, Winona, Fargo, Grand Forks, Mandan, Eau Claire, Aberdeen, Sioux Falls, Huron and Mitchell.

F. & R. have maintained for some time a production department arranging spectacles and musical numbers for the State and Capital Theatres in the Twin Cities. It is under the direction of C. P. Murphy with Harold D. Finkelstein, supervisor of music and personnel, working in close cooperation with it.

Stage Productions Added at Loew's State, Boston

Loew's State theatre, Boston, will change its policy starting January 25. Instead of the straight motion picture program, there will be added a stage production at each of the three performances daily, somewhat after the plan of the new Metropolitan theatre. The first stage production will be "White's Collegians." Some time ago the theatre staged occasional stage productions in connection with its films and these are now to become a regular part of the program.

Lou Sidney, general manager of the Western houses on the Loew circuit, is in Boston preparing for the first stage production under the new policy.

Johnstown, Pa. Theatre Presents "Home Talent"

The Cambria theatre, Johnstown, has adopted the policy of presenting musical "home talent" in connection with its regular picture programs. The custom was inaugurated with the week of January 11 with the appearance of Charlotte Dunkel, a 15-year-old girl of Southmont, a suburb, who is skillful as a pianist. The management announced that in the future promising local talent, instrumental or vocal, will be given engagements in connection with the picture programs.

The MANAGER'S OFFICE

STANLEY BROWN has been promoted by the Saxe Amusement Enterprises to the managing directorship of the Strand, Merrill and Modjeska Theatres, the three largest Saxe houses in Milwaukee. Previously Brown managed the Strand. Elmer Hall, formerly assistant manager of the Strand and one of the oldest Saxe employees in point of service, will become house manager of that theatre. Franklin Dow, present assistant manager at the Strand, will take a similar position at the Merrill, where he will work under the house management of Jack Plant, who is being imported from Green Bay, Wis.

HAROLD LEVALLEY, formerly assistant manager of the Palace, Lockport, N. Y., has been appointed house manager of the Hi-Art Theatre in that city. The Hi-Art was recently taken over by Publix Theatres Corporation, which also operates the Palace.

J. FRED MILLER, associated in the advertising departments and managerial positions with several large eastern theatres, has been named manager of the Visalia Theatre, San Francisco, operated by the Golden State Theatre and Realty Corp.

WALTER J. NELSON is now manager of the National Theatre, Boston, recently purchased by Frank Cronin. Nelson was formerly manager of the Cameo in Pittsburgh.

ABBOTT LEACH has been selected by Albert J. Locatelli, managing director of Locatelli's Circuit in Suburban Boston, to manage the new Capitol Theatre in Arlington, Mass. This is Mr. Leach's first association in the theatrical business. He was formerly a manufacturer.

Supply of Amateur Talent Exhausted in These Towns

Some of the theatre managers in Schenectady and Troy, N. Y., are complaining these days that it is becoming harder and harder to secure local amateur talent, for the one evening each week given over to such acts with the picture program. The supply has become exhausted and it may be necessary for local managers to work in conjunction with William Smalley of Cooperstown, who employs a man to scout over the territory and dig up these acts for his various houses.

Stage of Shea's Hippodrome Enlarged Overnight

Between closing time Friday night and Saturday morning, January 16 the stage of Shea's Hippodrome in Buffalo was enlarged by a corps of workmen. The old orchestra pit has been entirely covered to give place to a large stage. New settings have been installed and the orchestra has been moved out into the audience where a new pit has been constructed. The stage now is large enough for production purposes. A new curtain using 700 yards of golden brown satin replaces the old one.

Old Fiddlers Contests Gaining Popularity

Many Theatres Feature New Fad

Capacity audiences at the Strand theatre, Portland, Maine, were the rule recently when Manager William E. Reeves engaged an old time fiddler and six old fashioned dancers for the intermission period. The attraction gave him one of his biggest weeks ever. John Grant, the fiddler, accompanied by a young lady on an old organ sawed off several of the old time dance melodies after which three couples went through the Lady of The Lake.

As a contrast Manager Reeves had two couples give the modern waltz, fox trot and Charleston. The act went over big but the Charleston got a bit the louder hand when it came to applause.

If the craze for old time fiddlers and dances is sweeping other parts of the country as it is Maine, theatres can cash in on a similar act.

Joe Saperstein, manager of Harmanus-Bleecker Hall in Albany, N. Y., is arranging for an old fiddlers' contest in the near future, that will be open to all fiddlers of fifty years or more in that part of the state. After the winner has been decided, Mr. Saperstein will endeavor to bring Mellie Dunham to Albany. Mr. Saperstein is putting on several innovations each week in connection with his program of double features, and is playing to very good business.

The Strand theatre, Altoona, staged a fiddling contest at the night performances throughout the week of January 18. Ancient fiddlers of Altoona and vicinity were lured from their retreats with offers of three generous cash prizes and each night, through competition, eliminations were made. Some of the tunes which were used in the competition were "Turkey in the Straw," "Fisher's Hornpipe," "Pop Goes the Weasel," "Nellie Grey," "Mississippi Sawyer" and "Soapsuds on the Fence."

Two or three of the veteran fiddlers appeared on the stage each night, and the winner each night became eligible to complete in the finals, the date for which was fixed for the following week.

"Old Fiddlers" of Toledo and vicinity had their day in the theatre recently when the Temple, Toledo, Ohio, featured a contest for the local Mellie Dunhams as a presentation number with "Thunder Mountain." There were twelve fiddlers entered in the competition, which it is reported scored a hit in Toledo.

The old fiddlers contest being conducted throughout the Finkelstein & Ruben theatre chain is beginning to hog the newspaper space in St. Paul where it has come down from the suburban houses to the downtown Astor, says a report from that city.

Lubliner & Trinz Alternate Musical Directors

Lubliner & Trinz, of Chicago, have inaugurated a new policy of alternating their two most popular musical leaders, Art Kuhn and Ben Paley, between the Senate and Harding theatres. Both leaders will take their entire orchestras with them.

Ascher Brothers new Terminal theatre, Chicago, which was recently opened. This house is very elaborately equipped and has a seating capacity of 3,000.

Ascher's Terminal Marks Another Step In Expansion Program

THE opening of Ascher Brothers splendid 3000 seat Terminal theatre on January 7th, marked another step in the great expansion program of this important Chicago firm, and added another notable cinema palace to the list of neighborhood houses catering to the pleasure of Chicago's amusement lovers.

J. E. O. Pridmore, the architect, has given the new house a real Spanish atmosphere and nothing modernistic has been omitted from its practical equipment. A magnetic switchboard, counterbalanced stage lifts, organ elevators, and a most complete ventilating system make the theatre up to date in every respect. An adequate orchestra and a Wurlitzer organ furnish the music, and the booth is equipped with Simplex projectors.

The Terminal will be operated on a policy of four shows every week, a complete change of stage and screen programs being made on Sunday, Monday, Wednesday and Friday. The prices for the evening shows will be forty cents and matinee twenty-five cents.

The opening day celebration was made a civic event in Albany Park, where the Terminal is located, civic organizations and business men staging a big parade and other events in honor of the new theatre.

Ed. Nikodem, who has been connected with the Ascher organization for ten years, and who was manager of the old Terminal, is in charge of the new house.

Credit is due Harry Ascher, who supervised the construction, for getting the theatre opened on time. In order to do this he spent the last three days without sleep, and when the doors were opened he was hurried in an exhausted condition to the home of Manager Nikodem, where he slept for twenty-four hours.

George Laing is in charge of the film bookings for the Terminal and Harry Beaumont is looking after the stage talent.

Ralph Kettering's advertising campaign and four page section in the Chicago Evening American, which announced the opening, received much favorable comment from Chicago theatre men.

The next two houses which are scheduled to open under Ascher's new theatre a month program, are the Highland, a fine 3000 seat house at 79th and Ashland Avenue, and the Colony, of 3200 seat capacity, at 59th and Kedzie. Both are rapidly nearing completion and it is possible they may be ready to receive the public February 10th.

Spanish Type Theatre for Newark, N. J.

Plans are being prepared by Frank Grad, architect, for erection of theatre building on South Orange Avenue, Newark, N. J. The atmosphere of the theatre will be of a Spanish or Italian garden. The seating capacity will be for 1,200 persons and the building will cost approximately $350,000. The owner of the new structure will be George Furst.

Greenfield Theatres Order Simplex Equipment

The Louis R. Greenfield Theatres of the West Coast have placed orders for new Simplex Projectors to be equipped with Peerless Lamps for installation in all of their theatres.

Syracuse, N. Y. to Have New $500,000 Playhouse

Development of the O'Brien property at Warren and Harrison streets, Syracuse, with construction of a motion picture theatre, entailing an expenditure of $500,000 or more is announced through the Eagan Real Estate company of the Salt City. Plans have been completed for remodeling the Kathryn apartments with the theatre, seating 2,200, to be erected at the south end facing Warren street. Work is expected to start early in the spring. The O'Brien estate, with Donald, William and Anna O'Brien, Mrs. McCaville and Mrs. Matthews, acquired the site to be developed about a year ago. It includes the Kathryn apartments, the Winter block at 102 Madison street, Lane property at 104-106 Madison street and the Campbell property, 108-110 Madison street. The theatre will be modern in all aspects, with facilities to change it for use by legitimate companies. Mr. Eagan says his clients have long felt the need of a new theatre in the down-town section and decided on lower Warren street as the most desirable site.

Earns Title of "Special Projectionist to President"

Arthur J. Smith, chief projectionist of the Capitol theatre, who ran "The Big Parade" for President and Mrs. Coolidge at the White House recently, may now be referred to as the "special projectionist to the President." This is the fourth time that Smith has presided over the projection booth at special performances in the East Room of the White House. The three other occasions were the running of "Dante's Inferno" for Roosevelt; the showing of "Birth of a Nation," and on a subsequent occasion, "Intolerance," to President Wilson.

David Mendoza, conductor of the Capitol Grand Orchestra, with an orchestra of picked men, also made the trip to Washington to play the score to "The Big Parade" which was written by him and Dr. William Axt.

Robbins' Little Theatre at Ithaca is Unique

Something unique in motion picture theatres has been given Ithaca, N. Y., in the Robbins' Little Theatre which is the remodeled Conservatory of Music. In the comparatively small auditorium which seats only 500 has been built in an atmosphere and artistry found but seldom in larger theatres. Albert Robbins of Syracuse is operating the Little Theatre which also boasts an orchestra directed by Patrick Conway, the noted bandmaster. Edith Kimple, Ithaca pianist, who took high honors for her art in Paris last summer, was this week's fine added music attraction. The interior has been redecorated in attractive fashion, with beautiful lighting effects and draperies.

Special Wurlitzer Added to Cleveland Theatre

Loew's Park theatre, Cleveland, has a new Wurlitzer organ. It was dedicated last Sunday with a special organ recital, in addition to the regular symphony overture number, which will continue to be a leading feature of the Park program. Harold Krell is organist. He will offer a special organ number each week.

Inquiries and Comments

Dissolving Change-Overs

A SHORT while ago a Wheeling, W. Va., projectionist by the name of Aschenfelter requested of us some information anent change-overs, at which time we suggested using an iris diaphragm in front of the objective lens to secure a smooth dissolving action from one picture to the second.

Two possible locations for this iris dissolver were pointed out—one at the condenser lens and the other at the objective lens, with the latter location receiving first choice due, primarily, to the fact that at this place, dual control over the projection beams could be obtained without obstructing the projectionist's movements around the projectors.

Criticism Evoked

It seems that some indirect criticism was evoked in certain quarters over the above recommendation; not as far as the use of an iris dissolver itself was concerned, but rather regarding the practicability of its placement in front of the objective lens.

This criticism took the form of a rather lengthy and involved discussion, based purely upon theory, which purported to describe the true conditions of screen illumination resulting from the placement of such an iris diaphragm at the condenser and objective lens locations.

We say that this discussion was based upon abstract theory for the reason that test data of our own and the investigations of other persons who know motion picture projection leave us no other alternative in the matter.

We Test It Out

After becoming familiar with the arguments which endeavored to prove our recommendations wrong, we entertained very tortuous fears as to the correctness of our statements and forthwith set about obtaining honest data which would reflect favorably on our statements.

To this end we conducted a simple test—it was very simple and we admit it. Prompted by an honest desire to learn the naked truth and by certain egotistical considerations dear to the heart of every normal man, we obtained an iris diaphragm, placed it alternately before the condenser and objective lenses and closely observed the screen results when the opening in the diaphragm was varied over a certain range.

Our worthy opponents had held that the logical location for such a dissolving diaphragm was at the condenser lens and that if placed anywhere else, particularly before the objective lens, such dire things would occur to the screen illumination as would render it entirely unfit for service in any self-respecting theatre.

Test Versus Theory

Our resentment at this palpable attempt to destroy the confidence of our readers in our recommendations was overcome only when we found that the results of our test showed that no such a thing happened at all.

Indeed we found that the logical place for a dissolving diaphragm is at the objective lens position and not at the condenser lens; either before or behind it.

It is true that when placed at the latter location, a dissolving action of sorts can be obtained but the screen illumination during the period of dissolving is nothing of which to be proud. Furthermore, it cannot compare with that obtained when the diaphragm is placed before the objective lens.

The results of our simple test are shown in the accompanying table and it should be apparent to anyone that the objective lens location is the most favorable as far as a dissolving diaphragm is concerned.

Corroboration

While this test may not be much as far as tests go and could undoubtedly be improved upon and expanded to include more data, still it can be taken as indicating the condition of the screen illumination resulting from placing a diaphragm at the described locations.

It appears that this argument was settled in an indirect manner some ten or eleven years ago when another investigator observed the results of varying the condenser angle by progressively moving the condenser farther from the aperture.

Starting with a condenser as large as could be used (to secure maximum illumination) the screen was then of desirable evenness. As the condenser (which was about six inches from the aperture) was moved farther away from the aperture, the corners of the screen became dark and the center remained even; then the center and edges gradually decreased in the brightness, the edges still being dark; gradually the screen grew more even and at a distance of about 15 inches the screen was quite even; beyond at this point the screen remained even for a short distance while the intensity only changed, but still further reduction in the condenser opening resulted in screen conditions essentially as described in our table.

This investigation, therefore, offers some corroboration of our results and makes us firm in our belief that the best location for an iris dissolver is in front of the objective lens and not at the condenser.

TABLE
Screen Appearance When Dissolving Iris is Placed at Condenser and Objective Lens Locations

Free Opening of Diaphragm	Screen Appearance with Diaphragm at: Condenser	Screen Appearance with Diaphragm at: Objective Lens
1½ inch.	Very bad light source images which were noticeable when picture was projected to screen.	Faint images of light source which were unnoticeable when picture was projected to screen.

Biehler's Palace Theatre at Hamburg, N. Y., One of the Finest in State

THE new Palace theatre was opened in Hamburg, N. Y., by George Biehler on the evening of January 14 and the people of this thriving western New York town were introduced to one of the finest motion picture houses to be found in a town of this size anywhere. The front of the Palace is of tapestry brick. A brilliantly decorated and lighted marquee covered the entire sidewalk in front of the house. Entrance is gained to the lobby through six mahogany swinging doors of high finish. As one passes into the lobby which is finished in mahogany, tile and marble, one observes four inset display frames of gold with velvet backgrounds. At the end of the lobby are six more heavy mahogany doors inset with heavy bevel plate glass mirrors. In the center of the lobby ceiling are three chandeliers of pyramided crystals which when illuminated cast all the colors of the prism on the surrounding decorations. The lobby also contains a number of highly illuminated coves which lend an added richness to the color effects.

Going through the main entrance one passes beneath the balcony which may be reserved for private parties and which accommodates 200 persons. The balcony floor contains the projection room which is the latest word in motion picturedom and which is equipped with two Powers machines equipped with Powerlite low intensity lamps. There is also a Hertner transverter and a Brenkert spotlight. A Dalite screen is used. This equipment was installed by the Becker Theatre Supply company of Buffalo. The house has four double-door automatic fire exits which are draped in heavy velvet. Fourteen six foot radiators furnish heat for the main floor which is supplied with 1000 air-cushion seats. A mushroom ventilation system is used. The stage opening is 30 feet wide and has a depth of 24 feet, clear of the screen. The stage has a heavy, deep red velvet draw curtain. There are stores on either side of the entrance. Five offices including that of Mr. Biehler are on the second floor front. Mr. Biehler has been operating the old Palace theatre in Hamburg for many years.

Mezzanine of the Capitol theatre, Taylorville, Ill. This house, was recently opened.

Many Buffalo exhibitors and exchange men journeyed to the town for the opening. The lobby was jammed with floral offerings on opening night.

Albany Exhibitor Plans Neighborhood Theatre

Abe Stone, who is operating the Arbor Hill theatre in Albany, bought a large site last week on which he plans to erect a 1,500-seat house next spring. The site is located in the residential section and according to Mr. Stone the theatre will be one of the best neighborhood houses in New York state. Mr. Stone was in Syracuse for several years before coming to Schenectady, where in 1921 he took over the Rialto which he sold a year or so ago, later on leasing the Arbor Hill and the Delaware theatres in this city, but relinquishing his lease on the latter house last fall.

Attractive promenade of the remodelled Keith-Albee house, Boston.

An Amazing Difference!

Pictures that on the average screen are dull, shadowy and tiresome, snap out clear, lively and bright on a Super-Lite Screen.

That is because practically all the light that falls on the silvery surface of a Super-Lite Screen is reflected.

Super-Lite Screens give the equivalent of higher intensity light sources at a fraction of their cost. They are made from fine, sturdy material and last for years.

You Can't Have Good Pictures Without It

THE success of a house often depends upon a thing comparatively insignificant in cost—a good projection system. For only with a fine lens and scientifically related parts can you have good pictures.

The Bausch & Lomb Cinephor Optical System gives strong illumination, evenly distributed over the whole screen. It defines the images with strong contrasts of black and white. It makes pictures convincingly real and helps to bring crowds back again. Ask your projection man.

McAuley Co. Utilize Modern Methods in Building Peerless Lamps

OUR Chicago representative reports great activity after a visit to the factory of The J. E. McAuley Mfg. Co., manufacturers of the Peerless Reflector Arc Lamp. In fact the general manager, Mr. Hahn, advised him that the demand for Peerless Lamps has made necessary considerable night operation of the factory to keep up production.

The Peerless Reflector Arc Lamp factory is indeed a notable example of the ultimate result of building a quality product on a quantity scale. The factory equipment is the most modern obtainable; jigs, gauges, special tools and fixtures being used wherever possible to insure uniformity of every lamp they manufacture.

A rigid inspection is maintained of every advancing assembly as it proceeds from man to man until it is ready for the final test under regular operating conditions just before passage to stock for shipment. A very complete record is kept on the "factory performance" of every Peerless lamp.

Every part of the Peerless Reflector Arc Lamp is as the saying goes "Made under the same roof" from the drilling of the castings as they are received from the foundry until it leaves completely built ready for shipment to the purchaser.

In the drilling department a long line of gang drill presses are used operating under the direct supervision of a drilling foreman, and it is here that every casting, bracket, and part of the Peerless Reflector Arc Lamp is fitted into its individual drill jig for drilling, making all parts of the lamp interchangeable when completed. The same applies to the milling department where this process is practically repeated by placing each part to be machined in its individual milling fixture or jig.

It is very interesting to note the process of manufacture and follow every operation from the milling machines, gang drill presses, shapers, and automatic screw machines and thence on to the assembly benches and note how every item gradually becomes a finished product.

Pursuant with the policy of service we were advised by Mr. Hahn that Mr. McAuley spends the greatest part of his time "out in the field" in direct touch with every distributor of their lamp, rendering his able assistance and as one might say, directing operations from the field.

C. A. Hahn, during our visit, explained the reason for maintenance of their experimental department as a requisite to assure their customers of new developments in reflector arc lamp engineering and stated that at the present time they had some new additions to the Peerless line under process of development.

Reports in general indicate a bigger year for 1926; recent installations of Peerless Reflector Arc Lamps in the Chicago territory are Ascher Bros. Midway theatre, Biba Bros. Ritz theatre, Miller Simansky Lindo theatre and the Milo theatre. The Peerless Reflector Arc Lamp has been adopted by the Precision Machine Co., as standard reflector arc lamp equipment on Simplex Projectors.

Large Outdoor Theatre for Cleveland, Ohio

Cleveland Heights will have an outdoor theatre which will be large enough to take care of several thousand people. Plans for the theatre are now being drawn, and work will be started early in the spring, according to an announcement made by City Manager Harry H. Canfield. It will be located on the site of the new Cleveland Heights municipal park, at Mayfield and Cumberland roads. The theatre will have a complete stage, with dressing rooms and regular stage equipment.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Mike" — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Capitol, New York

Mirror: "Mike" is dedicated to those who enjoy a laugh. Neilan's latest is very entertaining. Miss O'Neil is petite, brunette, with a face that lends itself easily to comedy grimaces and pertness. One of the comedy highlights is a delightful drunk sequence with Charlie Murray and Ford Sterling howlingly funny. William Haines is a sympathetic hero, and the three youngsters—Frankie Darro, Junior Coughlan, and Muriel Frances Dana are cunning, and the remainder of the cast adequate."

Times: "Marshall Neilan who wrote and directed this conglomeration of humor and excitement inserts some good fun, and an exciting ending. Mr. Murray's expressions and gestures are bound to arouse laughter."

World: "Saturday baths, a mail robbery, a runaway caboose, the capture of the robbers by an aviation squad, the rescue of 'Mike' and the children by means of a steam shovel, and the family mourning over a goose thought to have been butchered for dinner are high spots in a film of more than average interest."

Journal: "Sally O'Neil, has a distinct screen personality, and the story gives her plenty of opportunity to romp about and display it."

"The Golden Strain" — Fox, Monroe, Chicago

Tribune: "Without a doubt 'The Golden Strain' will please the average fan—the fellow who goes to a show to be entertained."

Herald-Examiner: "Rich in romance, in action, in color—and photographed superbly — 'The Golden Strain' is one of the best pictures the Monroe has unreel for months. Schertzing's direction and attention to detail are excellent and really all star cast takes equally good of its roles. Madge Bellamy is a beauty as the heroine; Kenneth Harlan stalwart; and Ann Pennington has a chance to show her dimpled knees."

WHAT IS

(No. 471 Straight from the Shoulder
Talk by Carl Laemmle, President Universal Pictures Corporation.)

WHAT IS AN EPIC?

I HAVE FORGOTTEN, IF I EVER KNEW. MY DICTIONARY is missing from its accustomed place. Maybe the advertising department is using it, digging up new words to describe "THE FLAMING FRONTIER."

EVERYBODY WHO HAS SEEN "THE FLAMING FRONTIER" says it is epic!

SO AGAIN, I ASK, WHAT IS AN EPIC?

WHEN I FIRST HEARD THE WORD EPIC USED IN connection with "THE FLAMING FRONTIER" I thought maybe it was something to eat because the sales staff said, "It's an epic. They'll eat it up."

THEN I IMAGINED IT MIGHT BE A Mallet OR Hammer of some sort, because the exploitation crowd said, "It'll knock 'em dead!"

IF A PICTURE WHICH SENDS WILD THRILLS OF EXcitement chasing up and down your spine is an epic, then "THE FLAMING FRONTIER" is an epic.

IF A PICTURE IN WHICH SEEMINGLY COUNTLESS hordes of soldiers and Indians stage a mad battle seen before your very eyes is an epic, "THE FLAMING FRONTIER" is an epic.

AN EPIC?

IF A PICTURE WHICH GIVES A TRUE REPRODUCTION of the vital things in American life in the early seventies is an epic, then "THE FLAMING FRONTIER" is an epic.

THIS PICTURE IS THE DADDY OF ALL BIG WESTERNS. With all due respect for big westerns of the past—including epics, whatever they are—here is THE GREATEST OF ALL THE GREAT!

IT'S BIGGER THAN WE DARED HOPE IT WOULD BE—and our hopes were big at that. It is going to be the talk of the world. It is going to give new significance to the slogan, "Universal has the pictures."

THAT SOUNDS LIKE A BIG ORDER TO FILL, BUT YOU can take my word for it that "THE FLAMING FRONTIER" will do all I have said, and more.

JUST WAIT TILL YOU SEE THE WILD RIDING! JUST wait till you see the stupendous scale on which this wonderful tale has been told. Just wait till you see one of the most amazing chapters of American history unfold before you on the screen. You're going to have something to yell about.

TREAT IT AS AN EPIC. GIVE IT EPIC ADVERTISING. Epic it all over the place and make an epic profit.

WHAT IS AN EPIC? DARNED IF I KNOW THE DICTIONARY definition, but in a short time you'll agree that the right definition of epic is "THE FLAMING FRONTIER."

The fragilely white and internationally provocative Miss Peggy Hopkins Joyce, one-time show girl and married so importantly and so often as to have engaged the envy of the whole world of femininity, is being seen (and by large and eager crowds) this week at the Colony in a motion picture called "The Skyrocket," which is a story about a motion picture extra girl in Hollywood.

more than a little enlightening, and generally sensible piece of Cinderella construction. It is better than dozens of films which have passed down the road this season. It is good enough to have held this reviewer through to the end without a struggle.

As for Miss Joyce (I forget for the moment what her real or entire name is) this young woman appears in the film a lovely person of extreme blonde coloring. I see no reason for denying the beauty which is so richly hers. In closeups she seems even more delightful to look upon, although one is willing to add that with the employment of the merciful diffusing disc now so much in favor with the ladies who would fudge a little, the effect of the Joyce facial perfection may very well have been enhanced. This, however, is a part of our art, and is by no means to be despised.

Miss Joyce is now, and the statement is made without fear of any contradiction whatsoever, as well equipped in screen acting as are four out of five of the old timers, and furthermore, she gives promise of a fine future. Especially, I thought, did she seem gifted with the ability to perform her serious scenes with effect. Of course she wore her suits and her dresses with great good grace. The girl is stylish beyond words.

QUINN MARTIN.

"Sandy" is the answer to a real showman's prayer — for a sure-fire box-office mop-up!

Fox Film Corporation.

"SANDY" is a story of America and its people

"Sandy", herself, is average and typical, just like millions of girls met everywhere.

She is a creature of our changing times; fair of face, ambitious, attracted by life and and pleasure, "temperamental" as thousands of young women are, and the enigma of her parents, who wish only well for her, but do not comprehend her at all.

So they marry her to a "suitable" husband whose money and secure position, as they see it, will "protect her" — and the inevitable happens in due course. She flings away the safeguards they have set up around her in their unwisdom and embarks on the perilous enterprise of "living her own life in her own way."

Book "Sandy" today—for big profits tomorrow!

Exhibitor's Idea Exchange

According to
J. C. Carpenter

Manager of the Park theatre, Cobleskill, N. Y., he used with eminent success a "gold nugget" exploitation stunt for "The Gold Rush." The stunt which Mr. Carpenter reports has had at least one outstanding novel angle—that being the contest twist which offered prizes to the youngster who collected the greatest number of the heralds (an envelope containing a "nugget") and which were distributed from door to door. This repeat solicitation in which an article is carried into the home and later requested by another ambassador of "The Gold Rush" seems a valuable addition to a very old and very effective form of exploitation.

The "nuggets" which Carpenter distributed were bits of crushed stone, dipped in gilt and enclosed in a small envelope with billing for the picture and an added line requesting people to retain the nugget, in order to help some boy or girl win a prize. Another line used the teaser idea in announcing the contest, saying that the rules would be announced later.

"The envelopes" writes Mr. Carpenter "containing the nuggets I distributed to every house in the town two days before the opening date of 'The Gold Rush.' Then on the opening date I went to the schools and gave out the herald announcing that prizes of a two-weeks pass to the theatre would be awarded the boy or girl who brought to the theatre the greatest number of nuggets. The herald urged the youngsters to go from door to door and ask for the 'Gold Rush Nuggets.'

"The result was that every house had a visit from one or more children asking for Gold Rush Nuggets, you can readily see how direct this contest advertising was, as surely after anyone answers the doorbell several times and is asked each time for Gold Rush Nuggets they are going to know that the Gold Rush is playing in the town. The children here returned 640 nuggets out of a possible 800."

According to
Hugh Gardner

Manager of the Orpheum, Neosho, Mo., the theatre manager should "go it strong"

on pictures which in his judgment are outstanding examples of the type of attraction his patrons favor. As a specimen of Gardner's work along these lines, we have high regard for his handling of publicity on "Havoc," one of the recent productions which he singled out for special endorsement on his part.

On the editorial page of his monthly house organ—a very neatly printed folder, done on pink paper and listing the attractions for the coming month at the Orpheum—Hugh says, that "we get sold on certain pictures. Naturally we look forward to the showing of some of our attractions more than we do some of the others, it couldn't be otherwise it seems. One of these is the international stage success 'Havoc,'" and he goes on to describe the theme of that picture and point out its pictorial and dramatic superiority.

As a follow up to the advance notice given in this editorial comment, Gardner went in for "flash" newspaper advertising. He carried a full page spread in the Neosho Daily Democrat. Gardner's ad had singular force and vigor. He used three of the press book cuts—each of two-column size—in the layout, and featured quotations from newspaper reviews by New York newspaper critics, in a center panel set in between the two press book cuts at the bottom of the page.

According to
J. G. Caldwell

Manager of the Princess theatre, Aurora, Mo., exhibitors who have never tried the amateur ad writing contest, would do well to consider this exploitation device, since in his experience it costs little and arouses lots of interest. Caldwell used the ad writing contest recently in connection with "That Royle Girl." He writes "The results were very good—causing quite a bit of talk—every one read the prize ads—some even calling the theatre to find out who was the winner." Prizes, consisting of passes to the show, were offered for the ads accepted for reproduction. The ads used carried at the top the name of the writer—another inducement to action on the part of the townspeople. It is a stunt which makes ready appeal to newspapers, for it is a promotional proposition for their business and hearty cooperation generally goes along with the stunt proposed by the theatre manager.

According to
M. Rosenthal

Manager, Majestic theatre, Bridgeport, Conn., in addition to obtaining immediate box office results, the prestige and goodwill of the theatre was advanced greatly by the stunt which he used to exploit "Phantom of the Opera" and gain funds for the Christmas Basket Fund of the Bridgeport Star.

The stunt was used during Christmas week and was based on the printing of a special extra edition of the Star. The paper was sold on the streets by "Phantom Newsettes." It was called the "Star Santa Claus Extra" and the price of the paper was "what you will pay." A streamer head featured the line "Phantom Newsettes Sell Santa Claus Extras Bringing Happiness of Toys to the Poor Children of Bridgeport." Proceeds from the sale, which netted a handsome sum, were turned over to the Star's Basket Fund. The expense of the extra edition, printed on pink paper, was borne by the newspaper.

"This item," writes Rosenthal, "was only one of many used in the campaign, including the touring of the city of the Phantom Girls, the use of all restaurant menus with our ad and a terrific advance billboard and newspaper campaign, sniping every available inch of open space."

According to
Charles Lee Hyde

Manager of the Grand theatre, Pierre, South Dakota, the claim that the small town exhibitor is satisfied to stick out a one sheet and expects the town to come to his show because of it, was never less justified than at present. And as proof conclusive, Hyde sends us a photo showing some 24-sheeting he does for his shows and which would make a big town palace envious.

The stand which he uses to bill his week's program is of the so-called de luxe type. There is a twenty-four on every picture he has booked for the week. These appear in a row, reading from left to right in the order of play dates, and follow a three which announces "Grand Theatre. This Week." Pierre is a town of 3,200 and, adds Hyde "They all can see this and they come to the theatre too"—a convincing statement on the testimony of the photo showing the live-wire billing which this enterprising showman uses for his attractions.

According to
Gus Metzger

Of the Rivoli theatre, Portland, Ore., the Charleston dance contest offers exhibitors an excellent drawing card and the means of innumerable tie ups which pave the way for future cooperative stunts that will prove advantageous. Metzger negotiated a Charleston contest recently and on the box office receipts stands by the stunt as a very profitable one. His exploitation was in a hook up with the Portland News, which sponsored the affair and gave it the widest publicity. The prize was a loving cup and cash awards amounting to a total of $35 for the runners-up in the competition. As the feature picture used with the contest, "The King on Main Street" has a stirring Charleston scene performed by Bessie Love, the paper announced that the cup was presented by Miss Love, a publicity feature which gave added zest to the publicity notices.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Dearth's Seattle Campaign for "Best Bad Man"

J. Lloyd Dearth, formerly of Memphis, Tenn., and now manager of the Pantages theatre in Seattle, has been celebrating his entry to the latter city with many exceptional exploitation stunts. Among the outstanding campaigns he has put on is the drive he used for Tom Mix in "The Best Bad Man."

Dearth increased his newspaper space and made an extraordinary poster flash with the use of fifty-five 24-sheets—a more extensive outdoor display than has been made hitherto in Seattle by a picture theatre. As a lobby display he obtained a saddle and a Tom Mix sombrero, through the courtesy of local dealers, and as well installed a Postal Telegraph messenger and telegraph instrument in the lobby. The latter stunt was used as an advance announcer of "The Best Bad Man." The messenger delivered messages from Tom Mix to patrons, inviting them to attend "The Best Bad Man" when it played the following week at the Pantages.

Testimonial Ads Sell "A Kiss From Cinderella"

The list of testimonial ads on "A Kiss for Cinderella," printed in both of Spartanburg's daily papers, was the result of a special morning showing Manager J. H. Stelling held at the Rex theatre for the ministers, school teachers, representatives of women's clubs, and prominent citizens of the town. These personal endorsements of well-known men and women proved extremely valuable from a publicity standpoint.

To interest the collegiate element of Spartanburg, arrangements were made with the Dean of Converse College, whereby an announcement of the picture was made in the dining room of the college, the night before showing.

Unsolicited publicity was given the picture three days prior to opening by a well-known Presbyterian minister, who used the thermometer scene in the photoplay to illustrate his sermon, which ended with praiseworthy comments on the picture at the Rex.

Wanamaker's 'Sea Beast' Show

Whaling Relics, Sea Chanteys and Lecture in Auditorium Tie Up With Warner Feature

ONE of the most striking and dignified exploitation stunts staged in conjunction with a motion picture is on view this week in the auditorium of Wanamaker's where a "Moby Dick Week" is being celebrated in connection with the run in the Warner Theatre of "The Sea Beast."

The picture, based upon Herman Melville's whaling story, lends itself admirably to an exhibit of relics which bring back all the romance and glamor of a great American industry now living only in tradition.

The stunt was the result of conferences between Wanamaker advertising officials and members of the Exploitation Department of Warner Bros. And the whole cost to Warner's was the loan of some shots from the picture. In short, Wanamaker's agreed to play the part of an exhibition pot for a glorified trailer of "The Sea Beast," and proof of the effectiveness of this trailer is had in the announced intention of hundreds of persons to see the feature after they had seen these few selected scenes.

Advertisements announcing the exhibit and its surrounding features are appearing in all the metropolitan dailies—in some instances they are as large as 100 lines over two columns—and throw-aways are being sent to their mailing lists.

Representatives of the store were sent to New Bedford, New London and Washington, D. C., to gather whaling relics, and the Ritz Quartette, which recently won the Wanamaker Close Harmony Contest, is rendering a repertory of Sea Chanteys. These are being broadcast.

In addition to this, A. K. Dawson delivers a lecture daily on "Moby Dick Adventure Land," in which he tells of old whaling days.

Theatre 'Broadcasts' Game in "The Freshman"

As a theatre ballyhoo for "The Freshman" the Robbins' Avon theatre, Utica, N. Y., installed a broadcasting unit through which the exciting moments of the "game" were put on the air. A loud speaker and a sign announcing the stunt was placed on a busy corner of the city and crowds collected to tune in on the progress of the game and the laughs and cheers of the audience.

The play by play football action kept the crowds outside the theatre laughing and a cheer went up from the street when Harold broke through for the long run that brought fame for himself and Tate College.

Troop of Boy Scouts attending in a body a performance of "As No Man Has Loved" (Fox) at the Peoples theatre, Portland, Ore., where there was a big response to the latter recommending the picture to Scout Masters sent out by Chief Scout Executive James E. West.

Invites Cops to Solve Plot of "The Green Archer"

Manager Sidney Larsehan of the Meserole theatre, Greenpoint, L. I., is conducting a lively campaign to exploit his presentations of episodes in "The Green Archer," the Pathe serial. In addition to a strong billing campaign, which includes 1-sheets used as snipes, Larsehan has invited the police and the patrons of the theatre to take a hand in solving the mystery of who the Green Archer is.

In two-column space in the Greenpoint Weekly Star, Mr. Larsehan has addressed an open letter to Police Captain Charles E. Lee, which reads:

"The mysterious Green Archer appears at the Meserole theatre every Saturday afternoon. Who is the Green Archer? A deep mystery requiring the service of the entire force under your command. You are invited to dispatch the most competent detectives on your staff to the Meserole theatre every Saturday afternoon to help solve the greatest mystery of modern times."

On the opening day of the Pathe serial, Mr. Larsehan gave to each of 500 children a "Green Archer" novelty.

Individual Service by Mail Offered by Fox Staff

Individual exploitation service is a new feature installed by the Fox exploitation staff. Exploiters at the exchanges, in between times when they are personally executing campaigns for theatres, now send out to exhibitors a service by mail well in advance of play date.

A press book is sent to the exhibitor together with a letter outlining a complete campaign designed for the individual uses of the theatre addressed. The letter stresses the strong points and selling angles of the picture and calls particular attention to those features of the press book that will best aid in executing a successful campaign.

Next follows a complete set of newspaper display advertising laid out to suit the individual requirements of the theatre, and which shows how best to use the cuts furnished by the exchange. Then, depending of course upon the picture and the opportunities offered, follows a description of several ballyhoos, merchants' cooperation and store window tie-ups, contests of various kinds, special matinees, practical suggestions for lobby display, and atmospheric prologues.

The "Radiobile"—a new type of ballyhoo introduced in New York by F. B. O. to broadcast entertainment picked up by F. B. O. feature productions, "The Keeper of the Bees," "Flaming Waters," "Heads Up," "The Midnight Flyer" and "The Last Edition."

F.B.O. Invents the 'Radiobile'

New Form of Ballyhoo Wagon Tours Streets of New York—Barker Speaks into Microphone

THE microphone has been added to the "barker's" equipment and the attractions of radio combined with the flamboyant colors of the circus wagon to promote the interest of the motion picture ballyhoo wagon. An innovation employing these elements of showmanship recently made its appearance on the streets of New York as an exploitation device for the F.B.O. Gold Bond productions.

This vehicle carries twelve one sheets covering the twelve F.B.O. Gold Bond productions. Above these sheets in bright red letters on a background of gold are the words: "Broadcasting to the World News of F.B.O. Pictures." A radio has been installed in the inside of the wagon and the horns, wires, and other radio apparatus are visible above the top of the vehicle. An announcer in a booth alongside the driver's seat speaks into a microphone, and the news concerning F.B.O. stars and productions is broadcast.

News items about "Drusilla With a Million," "If Marriage Fails?" "Parisian Nights," "The Keeper of the Bees," "The Last Edition," "The Midnight Flyer,"

"Flaming Waters," "When Love Grows Cold," "A Poor Girl's Romance," "The Non-Stop Flight," "The Isle of Retribution" and "The King of the Turf" are wafted on the cold January breezes. A fifteen minute talk is given every half hour, and news of F.B.O. stars is interspersed with news of productions.

This new form of exploitation which was invented and executed by the advertising department of F.B.O. will, in all probability, be utilized in other cities. As soon as the radiobile has covered New York City it will be sent to Pennsylvania, New Jersey and the New England States.

Stunts Feature Atlanta Campaign for "Phantom"

A series of publicity stunts, among which was a tie up with the police department which allowed the theatre four men, dressed in red costumes to direct sidewalk traffic, featured the "Phantom of the Opera" campaign executed by the Howard Theatre in Atlanta.

The campaign opened with a pre-view for 200 men and women prominent in film circles.

A ballyhoo which attracted attention was an old carriage drawn by two white Arabian horses. This equipage was driven by a masked man in a red robe and carried on the back seat a young girl dressed as Mary Philbin's Christine in "The Phantom." "Christine" was bound with heavy cord.

The Atlanta Constitution tied up with the picture on a "Phantom Voice" which called several hundred homes on New Year's Eve, saying: "Happy New Year. This is 'The Phantom of the Opera'."

The Howard's lobby was dressed with oils two weeks in advance of the showing and a 6-sheet cut-out was stationed on the lobby stairway. Fifteen thousand heralds were distributed from house to house. One department store conducted a sale of "Phantom Red" hats and another with a sale of dresses.

Roy Tillson's frontal display and ballyhoo for "The Fighting Dude," Educational comedy starring Lupino Lane, for its showing at the Fuller Theatre, Kalamazoo, Mich., which he manages.

Exploitation For Short Features

Showing the mysterious Green Archer who exploited the Pathe Serial "The Green Archer" for the Family Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. The girl rode about the city and launched feather-weight arrows bearing handbills for the theatre.

A scene outside the Strand Theatre, Emporia, Kans., previous to the special matinee at which Manager Harry McClure launched his "Buster Brown" Club to exploit the comedies of that title offered by Universal. Seven hundred kiddies signed membership cards in the organization.

Reginald Ford, who is flashing a superior brand of American showmanship at the Canteo Theatre, Paris, France, places due emphasis on the "Felix" cartoon reels released by Educational, in his lobby display—illustrated above—and sets an example which may be profitably emulated "over here."

Lupino Lane's Educational comedy "Maid In Morocco" was featured in the electrical frontal display at Shear's Hippodrome, Buffalo, N. Y., as the above photo indicates.

Liberal marquee space was accorded Educational's novelty reel "Marionettes" at the Newman Theatre, Kansas City. The photo shows that the short features can be played up as an important program attraction without detracting from the feature offering.

Judge Vincent M. Brennan is a true modern Solomon.

He not only showed wisdom in planning the means by which he could render a just decision, BUT

He selected the most famous motion picture in the world, the one in which the public reposes its affection and confidence, to carry out his idea.

Movie in Court is Test Of Mother Love For Baby

KING SOLOMON'S method of deciding which of two mothers was most devoted to a child they both claimed was adopted in modern form by Judge Vincent M. Brennan in the Circuit Court Saturday at the hearing of a writ of habeas corpus obtained by Mr. Julia Przybyla, 11570 Waltham avenue, natural mother of a three-year-old daughter Irene, in her fight to wrest the child from Mrs. Irene Goosen, 12599 Flanders avenue, foster-mother of Irene and formerly Mrs. Przybyla's sister-in-law.

Instead of threatening to dismember the child with a sword, as did King Solomon to study the emotions of the two mothers, Judge Brennan announced that he would award the child to neither Mrs. Przybyla nor Mrs. Goosen, but would commit her to an institution. At the very instant the announcement was made a movie man under Judge Brennan's direction trained his camera on the two women to record their emotional reactions on a film.

Judge Brennan said he would employ the aid of psychologists in studying the film and award the child to the claimant whose features show the greatest expression of grief. His decision will be announced Wednesday, he said.

After the hearing of testimony, which consumed the afternoon, Judge Brennan ordered the two women before him and directed court attaches to place the child, who is now living with Mrs. Goosen, between them on a chair. Behind the judge stood the motion picture operator with a camera and his lights.

"In view of the fact that the Court has heard much testimony against both parties in this action, I have decided to commit the child to an institution," announced the Judge.

As the "movie" lights were flashed on the women and the operator started grinding on his camera, Mrs. Goosen burst into tears and, bending over, clasped the child to her arms, while her 13-year-old son, Edward, who sat in the front row of spectators, also began crying. Mrs. Przybyla made no demonstration.

Asked if they had any statement to make to the court, Mrs. Przybyla said he was married and had a home, and wished the child for her own—so Irene could benefit by these advantages. Mrs. Goosen was so overcome she could make no statement.

A large crowd witnessed the experiment in the courtroom.

Irene, who was born out of wedlock to Mrs. Przybyla Feb. 10, 1922, was placed in the care of Mrs. Goosen at the age of six weeks. On Feb. 10, 1925 Mrs. Przybyla was married to her present husband.

Dec. 24 Mrs. Goosen obtained a decree of divorce from her husband, William Goosen, who is Mrs. Przybyla's brother, but retained possession of Irene. March 20, 1925, Mrs. Przybyla obtained a writ of habeas corpus but it could not be served on Mrs. Goosen.

A previous writ has been refused Oct. 24, 1924. The present action was commenced last week.

Short Subjects and Serials

Lloyd Hamilton in "Careful Please," an Educational release.

Pathe Offers Novelty Release

Widely Varied Offerings Included in Program for Week of February 7th

ADIVERSIFIED short subject program is planned for release by Pathe for the week of February 7th. Among other things it introduces "Songs of Ireland," first of the new "Famous Melody Series" and "The Strenuous Life," a Grantland Rice "Sportlight." There are the usual Hal Roach and Mack Sennett comedies, the "Topics of the Day," "Aesop's Film Fables," serial and news weeklies.

The "Famous Melody Series" are single reel subjects which are offered in the form of a novelty. James Fitzpatrick produced the series and appears in the leading male role, with Peggy Shaw playing opposite him.

In the Grantland Rice "Sportlight," produced by J. L. Hawkinson classical dancing, the Charleston, boxing and other sports are shown.

"Your Husband's Past" is a two-reeler produced by Hal Roach with a cast which includes Vivian Oakland, George Cooper, Tyler Brooke, Fred Kelsey, James Finlayson and Arthur Millett. Fred L. Guiol directed.

"The Smoke Clears Away" is the title of the closing chapter of the serial, "The Green Archer." Allene Ray and Walter Miller have the leading roles and are supported by Burr McIntosh, Frank Lackteen, Dorothy

King and Walter Lewis. Spencer Bennet directed the serial.

Pathe Review No. 6 presents three subjects: "Art in Archery," an old Indian accomplishment emerges as a modern sport; "American Wild Flowers in Pathecolor," the Anderson Aster, the Chokecherry and the Blazing Star are revealed in natural colors; "Enemy Submarines," microscopic studies of the mosquito.

"The Windjammers" is the new cartoon of the Aesop's Film Fables series. "Topics of the Day" and two issues of Pathe News complete the February 7th schedule.

Harry Bernstein Made Red Seal Sales Manager

Harry Bernstein has been appointed general manager of Red Seal Pictures by Max Fleischer, who recently assumed the presidency of the organization. Bernstein previously has been head of Red Seal's New York exchange. He will shortly make a tour of the country in the interest of the company's product.

First of "Molly May" Series Released February 1

"Her First Night in Philadelphia," first of the "Molly May" series which Joe Levering is producing for release through Cranfield and Clarke, is now being cut by Levering. It will be released February first.

Gillingwater Engaged for Hal Roach Comedy

Hal Roach has engaged Claude Gillingwater for a new Pathe comedy which has already gone into production under the direction of Richard Wallace. Gillingwater will be featured in a cast that includes Tyler Brooke, Vivian Oakland, Bert Woodruff and Rolfe Sedan.

Norman Taurog to Direct Tuxedo Comedy

Norman Taurog has been assigned to the direction of the next Tuxedo Comedy for Educational. The new picture will feature Johnny Arthur, formerly starred in Al Woods' production on the stage in New York.

Donna Barrels Signed by Educational

Educational has signed Donna Barrels as a member of the scenario staff. Her first story will be "Home Cured" and will go into production at once with Johnny Arthur in the featured role under the direction of William Goodrich.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Saturday Afternoon"

Pathe—Three Reels

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

IT will be rather difficult to pick flaws in this three-reel Mack Sennett production which stars Harry Langdon. Everything about it is good—cast, direction and photography—furthermore, the story is particularly well adapted to the eccentricities of this droll comedian. So, the advice of this reviewer to exhibitors who want a first class three-reel special—is to book it—for in our opinion, this one certainly ought to please them all. Langdon is to go into features in the near future and this fact can afford to be played up. In this role, he takes the part of a meek, hard working husband who never varies the routine of coming home each Saturday afternoon to hand over his pay envelope to a domineering wife—until a fellow workman lures him to a date with a couple of flappers. Then the fun begins. The supporting cast is excellent. Harry Edwards directed.

The Cast

Harry Langdon, Vernon Dent, Ruth Hiatt and Peggy Montgomery.

The Story—Harry, a henpecked, hardworking husband is on his way home accompanied by a fellow workman. It is Saturday noon and Harry is making haste in order to turn over the pay envelope to his domineering wife. However, his pal is a single man, owns an auto and is a gay Lothario. Meeting two attractive flappers, Harry is persuaded by his friend to join an afternoon auto excursion, though he accepts with a troubled conscience and much trepidation. On reaching home each Saturday, it has been Harry's custom to now and then extract a few nickels and dimes from the envelope before handing it over to the wife. His cache is under the parlor carpet and location bears all the ear-marks of a treasure trove—requiring three or four steps to the right and a number to the left. However, this time the mistress discovers her mate in the act of hoarding a quarter and a violent scene follows during which she denies her docile husband the privilege of an afternoon out. But Harry makes a fervent plea for liberty and finally gains her consent. He joins the party on their joy ride and with a new found sense of freedom—proceeds to cut loose—but dark clouds dim the joyous holiday when two other chaps appear on the scene and claim the girls for their own. A fight follows with Harry's pal striving valiantly to defend their rights. Harry prefers to ignore the whole affair. To make matters worse, the domineering wife is out driving in her flivver and catches sight of her erring husband and further complications follow with the result that Harry is finally reinstated in her favor.

Summary—A first class comedy attraction. Good cast, well directed and finely photographed. Bill it as a Harry Langdon Special and as Langdon is to soon enter into features—play him up in this respect. A little extra money spent on advertising will be well worth the effort.

"Famous Melody Series"

(Pathe-Fitzpatrick—First Three Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

THESE first three subjects out of thirteen to be produced by James Fitzpatrick for Pathe release, hold promise of becoming even more popular attractions than "The Music Master Series" which were made by the same producer—and the latter has been a money maker for a great many theatres. In the opinion of this reviewer, Mr. Fitzpatrick has gone several steps ahead in this present series which picture the songs of many lands. Not only has a charming little story been woven around each melody but each reel in itself is a fine scenic. Moreover, the scenes taken in the different countries are authentic.

They are single reel subjects and the first three deal with the "Songs of Ireland, England and Scotland"—in the order named. Peggy Shaw, formerly of the Ziegfeld Follies, plays the lead as "The Famous Melody Girl" and Miss Shaw is admirably cast for the role which calls for the characterization of the maids of the different nations. Mr. Fitzpatrick also appears in prominent roles.

Of the three reels shown—though they are all good—perhaps the songs of Ireland and Scotland have proved to be richer in material for picturization. For where is an Irish man, woman or child whose heart won't thrill at the strains of "Killarney," "The Low Back Car" and "Mavourneen"—and where a Scot who will fail to appreciate such melodies as "Annie Laurie," "Comin Thru the Rye" and "The Cammells Are Coming." And in addition the "Highland Fling," danced by Scotch lassies who certainly know how. However, the English reel is good, too, and features old favorites as "Drink To Me Only With Thine Eyes" and "Just A Song At Twilight" and the "Tally-Ho" Song.

Pathe, in co-operation with Mr. Fitzpatrick, is preparing a special musical cue sheet and score to accompany each subject of the new series.

Summary—Based on the strong appeal of popular songs of many lands and with a charming little story interwoven in each reel, these subjects should prove superior quality first run attractions.

"The Uprising Generation"

(Pathe-Sportlight—One Reel)

ONE hears considerable talk these days as to whether the "Uprising Generation" will have a trend toward jazz and night life or whether they will strive toward athletics and health but this Sportlight will entertainingly demonstrate the fact that the coming generation is an active, vigorous lot of youngsters for the reason that the majority of them are seeking some form of athletics to reach the goal of good health. J. L. Hawkinson is the producer.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Time Flies"

(Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

LUPINO LANE fans will find all they can possibly look for in this two reel Mermaid Comedy, for this popular comedian is given a splendid opportunity to demonstrate his bag full of tricks. At times there is a slight over-indulgence of slapstick but considerable of this is necessary in order to bring out Lane's eccentric acrobatic stunts. There is very little to the story—however a plot is not entirely essential to this type of comedy. Lane's supporting cast is good.

Produced by Jack White and directed by Jesse Robbins. Photography by Robert Doran.

The Cast

The Colonel		Lupino Lane
His Son
His Grandson
The Duelist		Wallace Lupino
The Girl		Virginia Vance
An Adventuress		Gwendolyn Lee
Her Accomplice		Otto Fries

The Story Action gets under way with a duel between Colonel Amos Blackwell—the deadliest shot of his day—and Major Wimpett, the latter furnishing the cause for a combat which is to settle an argument as to whether a "full house or five aces" is the better hand. News of the duel is carried to the Colonel's family and to prevent the demise of the Major, the Colonel's son mounts a trusty, high wheeled cycle and crashes into the field of battle in time to effect a cessation of hostilities—the bullet having hit the boy's watch when he appeared in the line of battle. Beholdened, the Major presents him with his own "Waterbury." Time passes and in the meantime the boy—after bidding his sweetheart good-bye—reaches the cold, cruel city to build his fortune from a capital of ten cents. Hovering around a lunch counter where a customer is drinking a cup of coffee, the lone coin is accidentally dropped in the cup and disappears down the drinker's throat. Disheartened, the boy seeks a country road and meets a repulsed lover who is attempting suicide with a harmless gun. However, the gun suddenly goes off and hits a lamp globe which drops on the boy's head. He is taken to the home of an adventuress who tries to vamp him after linking up the "Waterbury" with a newspaper article which seeks to locate a missing heir to a fortune. The other suitor appears and at this point Lane displays a lot of his tricks in his endeavors to dodge his pursuer. The boy escapes the scheming pair and with his "Waterbury," returns to claim the fortune and his sweetheart.

Summary—This one will please wherever Lupino Lane is popular. There is considerable slapstick but a lot of this is necessary to bring out this comedian's stunts.

"Hearts of the West"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

HERE is an original idea for a western story. The mortgage on the ranch is due. There is no possible way of meeting it and saving the property save through success in an impending horse race. It's up to Black Bess to win that there rich prize and unexpectedly Black Bess comes through. If all horse races were as easy to pick as that one there would be no necessity for mortgages.

There is hardly a redeeming feature to this two-reeler. Every foot of it has been seen so often that the entire story is revealed from the start. Edmund Cobb is the featured player and does the best he can with the story.

The Story. Tom Murray has inherited a heavily mortgaged ranch. He has successfully concealed the fact of the mortgage from his blind aged mother in the hope that he may restore the fortune through an impending cross country horse race. Joel Clegg is the holder of the mortgage and Tom saves Joel's life. Later Joel would sell the property to Sylvia Hunter, a pretty girl from the east, who becomes interested in Tom. Tom wins the race despite the crooked efforts of Joel. He brings his mother the glad news that he has won not only the race, but Sylvia, also.

Summary. This is an old, old story and lacking in interest because every step of it can be anticipated.

First National Plans World's Largest Studio Property

Will Build $1,500,000 Plant on West Coast Site

ROBERT LIEBER, President of First National Pictures, Inc., announces that in accordance with the company's policy of expansion, arrangements have been completed for the erection of a new West Coast Studio, which will be the largest and best equipped in the world. Negotiations, which have been under way for several months, were concluded this week by Richard A. Rowland, General Manager of First National and John McCormick, West Coast Production Manager, as announced in a telegram just received by Mr. Lieber from Rowland.

In commenting on the situation, President Lieber said:

"This studio will provide First National with its own plant for the continuation and the enlargement of the policy which has been that of First National from its inception in the production and distribution of pictures. Through First National Productions Corporation, we will continue our individual efforts in making pictures for the entire world. As a distributing company we will continue to handle not only our own product but that of independent producers.

"Our selling policy will be developed along the same lines as in the past and changed only by the needs of the business as it expands. We will meet all changes in conditions and meet them in the spirit of fairness that has always characterized the policies of First National. And we will continue to conduct our selling operations in our own way and we hope an ever increasing number of exhibitors.

"The very fact that we are entering into this studio project is evidence of our intention to meet all such needs. It is evidence also of our intention to continue First National's part, and in a bigger way, in providing the exhibitors of the world with the only necessity that they require for the growth of their business, namely good pictures."

The new studio site is located in Los Angeles and will comprise seventy-five acres. The investment will run to $1,500,000, including the property, studios, and equipment. The construction of the studios will be started at once and it is expected that a greater part of First National's West Coast units will be at work in the studio by June 1st.

Rowland, in his wire to Lieber said: "In looking over studios now standing and with the future in mind, and with the growing proportions of the film industry, we felt that there was nothing now built that would suit our purpose in size or modern equipment. We are progressing at so rapid a pace that we must look ahead fully twenty-five years. The only way to turn is towards acreage and this was our only solution in providing for our needs in years to come.

"We will profit by the experience of others who have built large plants and we have made our plans to make this the most spacious and most perfectly equipped studio existing."

John McCormick, who has been working with Rowland on studio plans, makes the following statement:

"Beginning with this season, the First National organization will have the last word in studio construction and every up-to-date device will be installed. Bids are now being received from the foremost architects in the country and work on plans will commence at once. Special lighting system and hot and cold temperature for stages will be a feature, also experimental photographic laboratories will be installed for the obtaining of novel photographic effects. Plans call for the largest stages in the world and there will be sufficient space for as many stages as we find necessary."

Among the units now producing in Los Angeles for First National release are: The Joseph M. Schenck Productions starring Norma Talmadge, Colleen Moore Pictures, produced by John McCormick, Constance Talmadge pictures under Mr. Schenck, the Frank Lloyd Productions, the Edwin Carewe Productions, Corinne Griffith Productions, Sam Rork Productions, those of June Mathis, M. C. Levee, Harry Langdon, Marion Fairfax, Charles Rogers and the many special features together with the direct First National units controlled by the First National organization.

Motion Picture Exports At High Level

EXPORTS of motion picture continue at a high level, according to figures compiled by the Department of Commerce, shipments for the month of November totaling approximately 19,000,000 feet, with a value of more than $600,000.

Included in the month's exports were 16,843,457 feet of positive film, with a value of $483,388; 764,925 feet of negative film, valued at $101,411, and 1,314,233 feet of raw stock, worth $38,309.

Our best markets for the various classes were Canada for positives, that country taking 1,815,497 feet, valued at $64,436; and the United Kingdom for negatives and raw stock—233,715 feet, valued at $55,984 of the former and 784,886 feet, valued at $20,738, of the latter.

Among the stars and players are Norma Talmadge, Colleen Moore, Corinne Griffith, Richard Barthelmess, Constance Talmadge, Milton Sills, Harry Langdon, Leon Errol, Johnny Hines, Lewis Stone, Anna Q. Nilsson, Doris Kenyon, Blanche Sweet, Dorothy Mackaill, Lloyd Hughes, Ben Lyon, Mary Astor, Jack Mulhall, Charles Murray, Philo McCullough, Hugh Allan, Jovce Compton and many more famous to the film fans of the country.

In the directorial division will be found Frank Lloyd, Edwin Carewe, Alfred E. Green, Alfred Santell, Lambert Hillyer, Sylvano Balboni, Clarence Brown, Sidney Franklin, Harry Edwards, Maurice Tourneur, Fred Newmeyer, George Archainbaud, Sidney Olcott, John Francis Dillon and others who are directing product for First National at this time.

Col. Levy Buys Valuable Louisville Property

Colonel Fred Levy of Louisville, Ky., First National franchise holder and one of the most prominent exhibitors in the South, was given big spreads on the front pages of the Louisville newspapers a few days ago announcing his purchase of one of the most valuable building properties in Louisville.

In a deal involving $1,500,000, the Speed Building at 4th and Guthrie Streets was sold by the Speed heirs and Sen. Fred M. Sackett to Colonel Levy.

Commenting on the transaction, Colonel Levy said "I consider this property to be one of the choicest locations in Louisville and I know of no better investment. The development of the city is marked and I feel that all property will steadily increase in value."

Loew Stockholders Elect Board of Directors

Directors of Loew's Inc., controlling Loew's State theatre in Main street, Buffalo, were elected for the ensuing year at a meeting of the stockholders. They are Marcus Loew, Max M. Yellen, George P. Rea, Maurice L. Perry, J. Chester Goldberg, Dr. John R. Perry and Maurice Yellen.

All except 20,000 of the 163,000 shares were represented, more than 400 stockholders themselves being present at the annual meeting. The election was marked by a keen contest, owing to the widely different managerial policies advocated by each ticket.

Claude Jensen Returns to Seattle

Because of the improvement in the condition of John G. Von Herberg, of the Jensen-Von Herberg organization, who has been ill for several weeks in New York City, Claude S. Jensen, who was called East during Mr. Von Herberg's illness has again returned to Seattle. It is hoped that Mr. Von Herberg will be able to return to Seattle within the next few weeks.

Hays Office Said to be Co-operating With Independent Organization

ACCORDING to "The Exhibitor," the Philadelphia regional, important conferences are being held between the Hays office and the Independent exchangers, which may result in moves of startling importance to the industry. The article states:

"Following an all-day conference with Will Hays, members of the by-laws and regulations committee of the independent exchange men admitted that the Hays organization had promised to give them unqualified support and assistance in the formation of their organization. Assurances were given the committee that certain houses controlled by national distributors would be assigned to take independent product and that the independents would get their share of booking in all houses controlled by national interests and their associates.

"The application of the plan to Philadelphia would mean that of the Market Street houses one house would be set aside to play independent product exclusively. This same plan would apply to other first-run sections where the Hays organization and its associates are entrenched. The plan would also be worked out on the basis that independents would play a house a given number of days each week.

"The committee accomplished more of nationalizing independent exchanges during its three days' session in New York than any other step that has been taken within the past few years. Part of the discussion was devoted to what producers would be taken in and what would be the numerical strength of the organization. It has been pointed out that it has cost the Hays organization a great deal during the past few years to fight the independents and that co-operation between them will accomplish more for the general good of the industry than the conflict of their forces.

"The committee will meet again in New York within a short time when more important steps will be taken to stabilize the independent market.

"The exact number of Philadelphia exchanges that may join the organization is not yet known, but the city will be well represented."

Investigation by Motion Picture News this week established the fact that "The Exhibitor" story is substantially correct, though later developments may not bear out all the details given by that publication. It is understood that the negotiations with the independents were handled personally by Will H. Hays, who is now en route home from the Coast. He is expected in New York on Monday, January 31.

Jersey Legislature Has Bills

Two Measures Drastically Modifying Present "Blue Laws" are Submitted

TWO Bills, drastically modifying "Blue-laws" are now in the hands of the Jersey Legislature. One of these Bills, known as the "Local Option Sunday Motion Picture Bill" is sponsored by the New Jersey Unit of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. This Bill would license the voters of New Jersey to go to the polls during 1926 and cast their ballot for or against Sunday Motion Pictures.

The other Bill calls for the creation of a Commission to be known as "The Blue-Law Revision Commission" and to be effective in 1927.

This tentative Bill, which was introduced by Senator Williams on January 12, 1926, has been referred to the Committee on Judiciary.

Although Senator Williams' proposal is welcomed with open arms by New Jersey Theatre Owners, President Joseph M. Seider of the State Unit this week warned members of his organization not to relax their vigilance on their own measure because of this favorable action coming from another quarter.

That Jersey theatre owners should urge the Legislature for the immediate sanction of New Jersey public sentiment being determined at the polls is Seider's latest message to his members.

The Williams Joint Resolution now being deliberated upon by the Judiciary Committee provides that the Joint Commission shall comprise three members of the Senate, to be appointed by the President thereof, and three members of the House of Assembly to be appointed by the Speaker thereof,

"for the purpose of making a full and complete investigation of the present-day observance of the Vice and Immorality Act and the Amendments thereto, with a view to revising the said Act so as to comply with modern-day custom and popular demand, due regard being had to the fact that the American Sunday, as a day of rest, is a national institution."

The Bill provides for the appropriation of $500 to be used for any expenses incurred in the work associated with this investigation. It also stipulates that the Commissioners shall receive no salary.

N. Y. Assembly Bill Would Ban Sunday Shows

J. H. Michael, chairman of Buffalo Zone, M. P. T. O. of A., draws attention to assembly bill No. 14 which was introduced by Assemblyman Brunner, read once and referred to the committee on codes. It is entitled "An act to amend the penal law, in relation to public sports on Sunday." It reads: Public sports on Sunday. All shooting, hunting, playing, horse-racing, gaming or other public sports, exercises or shows, upon the first day of the week, and all noise unreasonably disturbing the peace of the day are prohibited."

The "catch" is in "exercises or shows," which may have a kick in it as concerns motion picture presentations. Exhibitors in the state are advised to get busy and look into the measure before this piece of legislation seemingly harmful to their business becomes law.

New England Companies Given Charters

New theatre incorporations during the week in New England include the following: Northeastern Theatres Corporation, Boston, capital 1,000 shares of no par value; incorporators Allan Robinson, Julia W. Troy and Nora E. Troy, 941 Tremont Building, Boston. Palace Theatre of New Britain (Conn.) Inc., capital $25,000, incorporators Israel J. Hoffman and others. The Scenic Theatre of New Britain (Conn.) Inc., capital $25,000, incorporators John Contaros and others. State Theatre Realty Corporation, Stamford, Conn., capital $25,000, incorporators Albert Strauss, 526 West 113th street, New York City, and others. The Capitol Theatre of New Britain, Conn., Inc., capital $50,000, incorporators Israel Hoffman of Ansonia, (Conn.) and others.

Stewart Walkinshaw Dead in Wilkes-Barre

Stewart Maxwell Walkinshaw, a pioneer in the motion picture industry, and president and general manager of the Lyman H. Howe Films Company, passed away at his home in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., on January 25th.

Walkinshaw joined Lyman H. Howe in his film activities in 1898, when Howe's exhibition of travel subjects was one of the very few motion picture entertainments then in existence.

Deceased was born in Buffalo in 1873 and is survived by his wife, Marion Harrower Walkinshaw, and one sister, Margaret Walkinshaw. Funeral services were held from his late home on January 28th.

Exhibitor Liability Up for Arbitration

The Minneapolis Board of Arbitration will be called upon to decide whether or not an exhibitor is liable for films destroyed in a fire which starts through no fault of the exhibitor in an adjoining structure. The complaint was brought by F. B. O. against the Gem Theatre of Inkster, N. D. An F. B. O. print was destroyed in a fire which destroyed the house.

Oldest Canada Exhibitor Passes Away

The oldest exhibitor in Canada, Capt. John Powell, owner of the Grand theatre, Barrie, Ontario, is dead. Capt. Powell was 82 years of age and directed the operation of the Barrie house until a short time ago, the management having been turned over to his son, John Powell, who will continue to have charge.

Lynn Mayor Abolishes Censor Board

MAYOR RALPH S. BAURER of Lynn, Mass. has abolished the Board of Theatre Censors in that city, declaring that the appointment of such a board had meant nothing but free entertainment for its members during its existence. Mayor Baurer says he will place the theatre managers on their honor to present only moral films and plays and that the public itself will be the only censors.

M. P. T. O. A. Will Propose New Playdate Clause

Seider Calls Arbitration Report "Misleading"

ARBITRATION and contract matters this week again became a live topic in the industry. Joseph M. Seider, Business Manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, made two important statements:

1. A new "availability of playdates" clause, which he believes will be acceptable to both sides and will solve this vexatious problem, is to be submitted in the negotiations between the M. P. T. O. A. and the Hays organization.

Considerable progress has been made in conferences between Mr. Seider and the Hays attorneys, on the new contract.

2. Mr. Seider took exception to the issuance of the report on last year's arbitration record and charged that it was "misleading." He asserted that the present system is "compulsory."

The Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York has gone on record as opposed to the form of contract submitted to them by the Hays office, and favors the form adopted by the Independent M. P. Association, and written by Joseph M. Seider.

Discussing this point, Mr. Seider, in the M. P. T. O. A. Official Bulletin, says: "Recently it was reported in the trade papers that the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York had rejected the proposed form of Hays' contract and has forwarded to the Hays organization a form of contract purporting to come from the Independent M. P. Association of America. This contract is, in fact, the one that we had submitted them and the industry generally, and if its to be used, we urgently request that a new thought which we have on the 'availability of play dates clause,' which is simpler than the clause incorporated therein and a clearer solution of the problem, be substituted."

The T. O. C. C. rejection of the Hays contract was made known in a letter from Charles L. O'Reilly, President of the T. O. C. C., to Mr. Hays. In the event that the Hays organization is unwilling to accept the T. O. C. C. proposals, Mr. O'Reilly suggests that the contract itself be determined by arbitration.

To this end, he proposes the appointment of three arbitrators—the exhibitors to be represented by Judge Moses H. Grossman, an official of the Arbitration Society of America; Hays to appoint one; and the two to appoint a third.

The suggestion of Judge Grossman's name does not meet with Mr. Seider's approval. "I think the choice of Judge Grossman is a mistake," he said this week. "I would prefer a judge who is not so closely related to the motion picture business. The choice of a national figure would inspire more confidence and assure the theatre owners throughout the country that their interests would not be jeopardized through the submission of the equity of the contract to a board of arbitration."

In his statement on the industry's 1925 arbitration record, Mr. Seider said:

"Mr. Will H. Hays, to say the least, has not played fair on the contract and arbitration situation. By issuing a statement he is giving the impression that arbitration in the motion picture industry has reached its millennium and is satisfactory to all factors, namely specifically the distributors who sell the pictures and the exhibitors who purchase them.

"The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America performed its duty to the general public by advising the public of the true situation as it relates to arbitration in the motion picture industry. When this subject reached its height from a publicity standpoint Mr. Hays made overtures for negotiations for the revision of the present contract and arbitration procedure. He also made the request that the matter be left status quo, and that we both refrain from publicising the progress of our negotiations.

"Much progress has been made in our negotiations for a better contract, but no agreement on its entirety has been reached. The public and theatre owners should not be led into a false sense of security.

"We are very much for the principle of arbitration. Arbitration for the settlement of disputes is ideal.

"Mr. Hays, and the distributors whom he represents, should apply this principle in their relationship with theatre owners. There cannot be fair arbitration so long as it is predicated upon the present inequitable contract.

"The statement of Mr. Hays that the Arbitration Board consists of an equal number of exhibitors and distributors is not based upon true facts: The distributors actually appoint their arbitrators because of the fact that their organization—the Film Boards of Trade—is a closely knit, small unit.

"It is stretching the imagination to assume that the exhibitor or theatre owner has a voice in the selection of his arbitrators when an organization in which he is not a member is designated to appoint the arbitrators for him.

"In addition to the fact that the arbitrators are appointed for the exhibitor and not selected by him the exhibitor has not even the right to challenge any of the exhibitors appointed to arbitrate his case. We must also bear in mind that voluntary arbitration is one thing—that compulsory arbitration is another. Compulsory arbitration is the form in use in the motion picture industry.

"The recent move of the Chamber of Commerce of New York City in resolving to withdraw their arbitrators from the Joint Arbitration Board unless an equitable contract is forthcoming, is commendable. We are particularly gratified that they have approved the form of contract that we had submitted to the industry as a solution of this vexatious problem.

"By the T. O. C. C. rejecting the Hays contract they have ratified the action of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America at their Chicago Convention when the Convention unanimously rejected the Hays' contract which is now in use."

Charles L. O'Reilly, on behalf of the T. O. C. C., has written to I. E. Chadwick, of the I. M. P. A., suggesting certain contract changes.

The T. O. C. C. proposes a provision for protection against specifically named theaters, and to follow those also to be named, after a period to be definitely prescribed in the contract. Other changes suggested include:

The right to challenge members of the arbitration board being limited to two instead of three; that the chairman of the board of arbitration shall be elected alternately between distributor and theatre owner representatives; that provision be made for liquidated damages for breach of any contract which provides that no photoplays specified in the contract shall be re-issues from old negative unless so expressly stated. Also, that the assignment of contracts be permitted without consent, in which event, without release to the assignor as the case may be; and the elimination of the National Arbitration Commission consisting of three exhibitors and three distributor members to be appointed by the Independent M. P. Ass'n and the M. P. T. O. A.

The contract has not been submitted to the association membership, so the suggestions of the T. O. C. C. will be referred to the contract committee consisting of Oscar Neufeld, Jack Bellman and Jos. A. McConville. Neufeld is expected to call a meeting of his committee at an early date.

Texas May Join Hays in Campaign

WHEN the board of directors of the Texas M. P. T. O. meets in Dallas on February 5th plans will be discussed for a membership campaign in cooperation with the Hays office. Conditions within the industry and plans for the new year will also be given consideration.

C. C. Pettijohn of the Hays office at a recent convention of Texas exhibitors pledged the support of his organization in building up the ranks of the exhibitor organization. The Texas directorate is made up of the following: H. A. Cole, Marshall; C. W. Batsell, A. W. Lilly, W. R. Fairman, John Paxton, H. H. Hoke, Henry Mulkey, W. A. Stuckhert, H. T. Hodge and H. H. Starcke.

"Mare Nostrum" and "La Boheme" Soon to Have Premieres on Broadway

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER will shortly have four big motion pictures running at the same time in four legitimate houses on Broadway, New York. "Mare Nostrum," Rex Ingram's latest picture for Metro-Goldwyn will have its world premiere Monday, February 15th at the Criterion Theatre. Lillian Gish and John Gilbert in "La Boheme" soon will replace "The Merry Widow" in the Embassy Theatre. These two productions, with "Ben Hur" at the Cohan and "The Big Parade" at the Astor make up the quartette.

John Gilbert has been playing in both "The Big Parade" and "The Merry Widow" and now will be seen in "La Boheme." "The Big Parade" and "La Boheme" are Irving Thalberg productions directed by King Vidor.

Ingram was about nine months shooting "Mare Nostrum" from the novel by Blasco Ibanez. The story, in which Alice Terry and Antonio Moreno have the leading roles, has a war background.

"La Boheme," the first starring vehicle for Miss Gish since she signed her Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract is a picturization of the famous opera. Supporting Miss Gish with Gilbert are Renee Adoree, George Hassell, Edward Everett Horton and Roy D'Algy.

A.M.P.A. Tickets in Demand

Reservations for Naked Truth Dinner Being Made From Many States

DEMANDS for tickets to the A.M.P.A. Naked Truth Dinner to be given at the Hotel Astor, Saturday evening, February 6th, are coming into the offices of the ticket committee of the A.M.P.A. (Associated Motion Picture Advertisers) from all parts of the country. It's a far cry from Broadway to the small town, but right now it's a far cry from the small town to Broadway for tickets. According to present indications, every state in the Union will be represented. Requests for reservations are already pouring in from all parts of the compass, North, South, East and West. Residents of Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, California and Canada have already placed their orders for tickets.

Among these are Boyd D. Chamberlain of the Chamberlain Amusement Enterprises of Shamokin, Pa. The management of the Rex Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario is another subscriber. The Schine Enterprises in Gloversville, N. Y., Irving Zeltner, Washington exploiter, and the owners of the Salem Theatre, Springfield, Mass., have sent in their checks, just to mention a few of "out-of-towners."

The entertainment committee is planning to make the affair national in character. Serious consideration is being given to suggestion that the flags of each of the forty-eight states, and that of the Dominion of Canada be put out to make the strangers feel at home. In this connection it is planned to play the popular airs and anthems peculiar to each state. "My Dear Old Tennessee," "Carolina," "California, Here I Come," "Michigan," "Alabama," "Arizona," "Take Me Back to Old Virginia," and "My Canada" will be some of the songs rendered to put the visiting delegates from the various centers at their ease.

As previously announced there will be a dinner, dancing, novelty offerings and the famous A.M.P.A. news reel, in which the entire industry will be hung in effigy. Tickets for the affair can be obtained from Charles Einfeld, First National Pictures, 383 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Nat G. Rothstein of F. B. O. has been chosen official announcer for the evening.

Fineman with First National

Will Have Supervision of Pictures Made at West Coast Plant; Has Long Contract

B. P. FINEMAN, manager of production for F. B. O., will resign that position and through an arrangement with First National will assume supervision of pictures to be made on the West Coast by First National Productions about March 1st. This announcement was made last week by John McCormick, in charge of First National production activities at the West Coast studios.

Fineman's contract with First National is for an extended period. No announcement has been made relative to the productions he will supervise, but it is understood they will be feature pictures and will be made on an elaborate scale.

Fineman has been in the picture industry fourteen years. He started with the Fox Company and later joined Paramount as a department head. He has been general manager of Film Booking Offices in Hollywood for two years and previous to that time produced independently, making twelve features for First National release. Before starting in his new position, Mr. Fineman will visit New York to settle certain business matters and enjoy a brief vacation.

In commenting on the new arrangement, Mr. McCormick said:

"We are very happy to secure the services of Mr. Fineman as supervising head of First National productions. His long service in the motion picture industry has given him wide vision in both an executive and production capacity and I feel certain his association in his new post will give him even greater scope for the exercise of the knowledge he has attained during his services in the motion picture industry."

Providence Report Shows Year's Statistics

Lieut. George W. Cowan, official amusement inspector of Providence, R. I. has presented some interesting statistics in his report to the city government. There were 1,319 new motion picture films shown in Providence during 1925 of which 649 were feature films. New films measured 5,813,000 feet in length and old films measured 10,196,000 feet in length, so that Providence exhibitors showed a total of 16,009,000 feet of films.

Of the 17 theatres in Providence, ten are exclusively motion picture houses and three show motion pictures and vaudeville. Lieut. Cowan, incidentally, was highly complimentary in his report, of the courtesies and conduct of the theatres and managements and of their cooperation with his department.

Palestine Offers Limited Picture Field

Palestine offers a very limited market for motion picture films, according to Trade Commissioner R. A. May of the Department of Commerce, in Alexandria, Egypt. May has just returned from a successful trip to Palestine, undertaken in the interest of the American motion picture industry.

Palestine has a population of about 800,000, seventy per cent of whom are illiterate Arab peasants. The Arabs, according to the report, have not yet reached the stage where motion pictures offer any special entertainment or interest. There are not more than a dozen moving picture theatres in all Palestine at the present time.

Pioneer Exhibitor Dies of Heart Attack

M. B. Niven, for the past ten years part owner and manager of the U. S. A. and Cover theatres in Fort Morgan, Colorado, died suddenly at his home on Saturday afternoon, January 16, 1926. His death was caused by a heart attack.

Niven was one of the pioneers among the exhibitors of Colorado. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon and as a mark of respect every business house in the city of Fort Morgan closed its doors for one hour during which time the services were held.

Northwestern Exhibitors May Unite

IN an effort to bring together the exhibitors of the Pacific Northwest states into an All-Northwest exhibitors' body, a general meeting of Washington and Oregon exhibitors was scheduled to be held in the Benson Hotel at Portland, Oregon, on February 2.

The meeting is an outcome of recent desire for such an organization as expressed a month ago at the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington. Communications have been sent to all Northwest showmen to be present at the meeting, and a temporary general committee of Oregon theatre owners has been appointed to work with James H. Hone, executive secretary of the M. P. T. O. W., in forming a temporary governing board to manage the coming convention in the Oregon City. It is expected that approximately three hundred showmen of Washington and Oregon will be in attendance at the gathering.

Lesser Asks for Constructive Attitude on First Nat'l

West Coast Head Has Confidence in Future

Sol Lesser, head of Principal Pictures and West Coast Theatres, Inc.

By L. C. Moen

SOL LESSER, head of Principal Pictures and West Coast Theatres, Inc., arrived in New York recently in connection with plans involving several million dollars of additional financing for the theatre chain and the filming of "The Winning of Barbara Worth" by Principal. These plans are progressing favorably.

In the course of an interview, the situation in First National came up and Lesser urged that the trade press take a constructive attitude, since much harm might be done by destructive criticism from those in possession of only part of the facts. Asked what would constitute a "constructive attitude" he stated these personal observations:

That First National has been and still is an affiliation of a group of important theatre interests and is operated by men who are primarily concerned with the welfare of their own circuits.

That these men should be given credit for an intention to keep First National free and clear of domination and in a strong, healthy position.

That if any future condition warrants, it would be entirely possible to return First National to its original form of organization.

That the men back of First National mean to carry on and that the greatest help which can be given them is a constructive attitude of confidence and co-operation.

"I regard our franchise in First National as one of our most valuable properties," he said, referring to the West Coast interests.

This company also owns a majority interest in the New York franchise. During the course of an interview, Arthur James mentioned that a group of independent exhibitors had signified a desire to purchase this franchise. Lesser immediately expressed a complete willingness to sell it to such a group and negotiations have been entered into.

"Who is the present leader of First National?" he was asked.

"Robert Lieber," he replied. "I find him in excellent health, and with the situation under full control. He is a forceful executive and inspires confidence on the part of those around him. He may be relied upon to keep things going along as they should."

"Most of the rumors and charges flying about are based on half-knowledge and mistaken inference. These things can do a great deal of harm unfairly to First National and a constructive, helpful attitude based upon the true facts should be taken."

"Remember this: First National is, basically, an affiliated group of exhibitors, maintaining a producing and distributing company to assure for themselves and other exhibitors a supply of good, box-office pictures. Do you think that those men, whose heart and soul are in their theatres, are going to see slip away from them what they have worked so hard to build up? Do you think they want to deliver their company into the hands of somebody else?"

"No, and those men should be given credit for the intention to do what is right and necessary. The men composing such firms as Finkelstein & Ruben, Saenger Amusement Company, A. H. Blank, West

An Important Interview on a Vital Question

THE interview here on the First National situation should be read by every person in the industry, and especially by all those interested in the welfare of First National. It is a frank, straightforward statement of incontrovertible facts, made in no spirit of controversy but in the interests of fair play.

Feeling that such an expression was desirable, Motion Picture News went to Sol Lesser, who is in a position to know this situation thoroughly. He was somewhat reticent on the subject, but finally consented to a statement of his personal stand in the matter as a leading exhibitor, on the ground that such might be helpful to the situation and to the industry.

The News, therefore, is happy to present this vital message on a topic of interest to the entire industry.

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

Coast, Stanley and others are above all exhibitors. If they were interested only in money they could have sold out long ago for more money than they will ever want or need.

"They are interested before everything else in the organizations which they have built up and in which they take pride. They will always get behind any constructive move to eliminate any unhealthy conditions which creep into First National at any time, should such arise."

"It is very unfair to those men to assume that they would permit First National—their organization—to be dominated by any small group or to pass into the control of another company. The idea should be absurd on the face of it. At least give us credit for good intentions and loyalty to our own businesses."

"There has been a great deal of misunderstanding, for instance, regarding the nature of the arrangement between Famous Players and Balaban & Katz. It simply so happens that Balaban & Katz, as an individual theatre chain and not as part of First National, have worked out a system of theatre management which Famous Players believe can be profitably applied to their houses. That is perfectly within their rights and has no direct bearing on First National. The circuits making up First National are first of all independent business enterprises, and if one of them chooses to take a management contract with another company, it is the privilege of that circuit to do so.

"It is manifestly unfair to accuse a man of trying to deliver up his own organization to another merely because he is selling his expert services as an individual to the latter.

"We, that is, West Coast Theatres, have a partnership deal with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer on Loew's State and Loew's Warfield in Los Angeles and San Francisco, respectively, and Fox owns about 35 per cent. of the West Coast stock, but no one has accused us of trying to deliver First National to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer or Fox, merely because we, as an individual circuit, entered into deals with those companies which seemed wise and necessary."

Lesser also scouted the idea that any small group could obtain control of the motion picture industry—that it was too vast and too competitive to permit of such a possibility.

"Right at the present time," he said, "when the air is filled with talk of producer-owned theatre circuits, one Wall Street banking house alone—only one—has $65,000,000 worth of financing of independent circuits under consideration. That, in itself, is the best assurance that those banking interests will not permit a dangerous monopoly to grow up. They are going to protect their interests and the interests of their clients.

"Circuit ownership I believe in, implicitly. I believe that it is the efficient, economical way to run theatres—provided always that sufficient leeway is given to the individual manager. You must know what to standardize and what to leave to individual initiative.

"Too much standardization is a grave danger. You cannot leave the individual out of it. How many A. H. Blanks are there? How many Robert Liebers? How many Finkelstein & Rubens?

"Mighty few, and within six months you are going to see the greatest cry for man-power raised that has ever gone up in this business. Those who are building national chains will discover that the men who built up the individual chains contributed something very definite to them—something that cannot be dispensed with.

"But, above all, let's keep our heads about the First National situation. The interests of everyone are being and will be protected. The individual circuit heads have too much at stake to do otherwise. So let's take a sane, constructive attitude, ignoring rumors and half-truths, and lay out a program that will make First National in the future a bigger, more independent and finer organization than ever before."

Motion Picture News Prize Contest For Branch Managers and Film Salesmen

GREAT interest has been aroused by the offer of a prize of One Hundred Dollars for the best article from any branch manager or film salesman on the subject:

"How MOTION PICTURE NEWS Helps Me in My Contact With Exhibitors."

The competition will close at midnight on July 1, 1926. Articles should be typewritten and limited to 1,000 words, if possible. They may be as short as the contestant desires. The judges will be the editorial staff of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

In case two or more articles are deemed of equal merit, the full amount of the prize will be given to all articles so tying. The winning article will be published in full together with a short history of the winner's career. Articles deserving honorable mention will also be printed.

Competing articles should be addressed to the Editor, MOTION PICTURE NEWS, 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City, and the name and address of the contestant should be written on the first page.

All branch managers and salesmen are eligible to compete. Manuscripts cannot be returned. Copies should be kept by contestants. MOTION PICTURE NEWS cannot be responsible for loss of manuscripts in transit. Proof of mailing will not be considered proof of receipt.

'Laugh Month' Exploitation Winners

Roy Tillson Gets First Prize for Best Exploitation Campaign for Initial Week of Laugh Month

ROY TILLSON, manager of the Fuller Theatre, Kalamazoo, Michigan, won first prize—$100.00—for the best entry for the first week in the Laugh Month exploitation contest. Mr. Tillson's entry was one of the most comprehensive campaigns ever displayed on a two-reel comedy.

Making the Educational Pictures release, "The Fighting Dude," a Lupino Lane Comedy, the center of his Laugh Month advertising for the first week of the month, Tillson backed up a great lobby display with newspaper advertising, newspaper publicity, street ballyhoo, special posters, half sheet posters on the fronts of street cars, trailers and slides and practically every other form of advertising available to this live wire exhibitor.

The second prize for the week—$50.00—was awarded to Mr. F. V. Kennebeck, North Star Theatre, Omaha, Nebraska, a second run house, for a comprehensive display which was arranged to run throughout the month and which, during this week, was tied up to exploit the Felix the Cat Cartoon, "Felix Trifles With Time," Pathe's Our Gang Comedy, "Dog Days," an Aesop Fable, "Noah Had Trouble," and the Fox Imperial Comedy, "Cloudy Romance."

The Omaha newspapers were enlisted in support of the Laugh Month campaign by Kennebeck and the Laugh Month idea was carried through all the programs as well as through all advertising and publicity throughout the week.

The $25.00 third prize went to Mr. J. A. Murphy and Lou Williams of the Family Theatre, Philadelphia, a neighborhood house with a daily change of program. It was Lou Williams who won the cup recently awarded by The Exhibitor, the Roy Tillson, Manager of the Fuller Theatre, Kalamazoo, Mich., who won the first prize for the best short subject exploitation campaign for the first week of Laugh Month.

Philadelphia regional trade publication, for "the best featurette exploitation campaign."

A large cut-out of a laughing face with red cheese cloth over the mouth was the center of an attractive lobby display at the Family Theatre. Behind this large head was a loud speaker connected by an automatic appliance to a phonograph which was kept continuously playing a laughing record.

As a lobby ballyhoo a colored mammy weighing 300 pounds, defied all comers to make her laugh. A placard on her back bore the words: "January Is Laugh Month. Sober Sal gives one dollar to anyone who can make her laugh. Sober Sal is the only one who won't laugh during Laugh Month."

Sam Carlton, manager of the Strand Theatre, Frankfort, Indiana, took fourth prize—$12.50—the principal item of his campaign for the week being a large newspaper display advertisement 3 columns by 11 inches in the form of a proclamation to the citizens of Frankfort, inviting them to begin the year with a month of laughter. Comedies released by F. B. O., Universal and Educational were shown during Laugh Month by Carlton.

Fifth prize—$10.00—went to Guy Bays, Globe Theatre, Buena Vista, Va., for a ballyhoo in connection with the two-reel Century Comedy, "Queen of Aces."

Sixth prize—$5.00—was awarded to H. A. Giles, Royal Theatre, Garrett, Indiana. Giles' mail for the month of January went out in envelopes bearing a large type display calling attention to Laugh Month.

As to the results at the box-office, Tillson and Kennebeck, winners respectively of the first and second prizes, can testify.

"Box-office pepped up at least 25 per cent. during Laugh Month campaign," is the report wired by Tillson, while Kennebeck closes his description of his campaign with:

"We have found that the business during this period has showed a good increase. Yours till another Laugh Month."

Abrams Announces Sales Expansion

United Artists Divides Country Into Three Divisions With General Sales Manager in Charge of Each

BECAUSE of increased product, and the certainty of a very considerable additional increase in the next few months, Hiram Abrams, president of United Artists Corporation, has announced several changes in the sales force and the sales department of the organization.

In making this announcement Mr. Abrams points out that United Artists Corporation rapidly is approaching another birthday, when the company will be seven years old, and in this connection cites the fact that this is the only corporation in motion picture distribution which has maintained one continuous selling policy since its inception, or for anything like such a length of time.

United Artists Corporation was founded on Mr. Abram's idea that each picture should be sold separately and independently on its own merits, he believing then that was the only policy which was fair to exhibitor and producer alike.

This policy and its administration has been more than justified with the result, Mr. Abrams states, the United Artists Corporation, as it approaches its seventh birthday, occupies a position which commands the respect and confidence of every exhibitor, every producer, and every distributor of motion pictures.

"Because we had the right policy as a foundation, and because that policy faithfully has been adhered to and as faithfully administered," says Mr. Abrams, "United Artists Corporation has most of the great screen stars and great producers for the screen in its ranks."

"Increased product brought with it increased problems. These, in turn, brought about the present phase of expansion. The necessity for intensive field supervision became felt. Men who had long been identified with the growth and development of our organization were called up to help in reshaping and strengthening our sales force."

"E. A. Eschmann, a man of high standing in the film industry and its various branches, resigned as general manager of one of the large distributing companies and was added to our organization as assistant to the President. W. W. Hines, who long has been general sales manager, remains in that important post."

"It had become apparent that the sales business of United Artists Corporation best and most efficiently could be handled by dividing the country into three divisions, each to be in charge of a general sales manager."

"Paul N. Lazarus, who has been with us since the corporation was organized, has been chosen as general sales manager of the southern and western division; Cresson E. Smith, long a valuable member of the selling staff, becomes general sales manager of the mid-west division, and Moxley A. Hill, well and favorably known in the industry, was selected as general sales manager of the eastern division."

Slides to Aid Exhibitors Reserve Fund

An arrangement is nearing completion whereby C. E. Cook, business manager of the M.P.T.O. Kansas-Missouri, will enter into a contract with one of the largest retail stores in Kansas City for the showing of slides. The move is an effort on the part of exhibitors to create a reserve fund.

Schnitzer to Run F.B.O. Studio

Will Take Complete Charge of Hollywood Plant
Temporarily as Result of Fineman's Resignation

THE immediate result of the resignation of B. P. Fineman as General Manager of the F. B. O. studios has been that J. I. Schnitzer, Vice-President in charge of production for F. B. O., will take complete charge of the studios temporarily and will institute a reorganization based upon the unit plan of production, according to an announcement issued by Major H. C. S. Thompson, President and Managing Director of the company.

Schnitzer, who went to the coast early in December to work out details and plans for the 1926-27 F. B. O. program, will remain at the studios indefinitely.

"The plan of unit production at our Studios is the result of no hastily reached decision," said Major Thomson, in discussing the subject, "for it has been contemplated for some months that we would put it into effect at the start of production on next year's schedule. However, Mr. Fineman's resignation has precipitated an immediate organization along the lines of unit production.

"Since the reorganization of the executive staff effective early last summer, at which time Mr. Schnitzer became Vice President in charge of production, and Colvin W. Brown became Vice President in charge of distribution, Mr. Schnitzer was able to concentrate on production, and it had been planned that he would spend considerable of his time at the Studios.

"Mr. Schnitzer returned East a week ago for a short conference with me after my return from Europe, and at that time we decided that the unit plan of production would be put into effect in our Studio operations as soon as it was practical to do so.

"We have always been convinced that the unit plan of production is the most efficient method of motion picture manufacture, but have operated our Studio under a general manager because of the fact that up until this year our own production has been more or less limited. The percentage of F. B. O. produced pictures has increased to a point where we feel the adoption of a unit plan of management necessary.

"In addition to taking direct charge of the Studio, Mr. Schnitzer will handle the relations of the company with independent producers making pictures for F. B. O. distribution."

J. I. Schnitzer, vice-president in charge of production for F. B. O.

next few days on arrangements being made by P. A. Powers, Chairman of the Board of Directors of Associated Exhibitors, and his associates for the contracting of two feminine stars of the first rank. This will result in two additional units starting production in the very near future.

One producer yet unnamed and Griffith and Carber are making arrangements to get their first pictures in work by February 1st. Both Powers and Emil Offeman, West Coast representative of Associated Exhibitors and general manager of the studios, are looking forward to one of the busiest seasons in their active careers.

New Seider Department Active

Urges That Railway Companies Again
Place Film Prints on Perishable List

THE newly formed legislative department organized by Joseph M. Seider, business manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, has already been launched on its first activity. It was scheduled to take up this week in Washington, D. C., a plea from the Wisconsin unit of the National organization that the railway companies again place film on the perishable list.

The appeal from the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin to the National Organization to lend its support in securing legal sanction for perishable classification of film was made as the result of a resolution adopted at the recent Annual Convention of the Wisconsin exhibitors.

Business Manager Seider, well aware of the fact that local efforts for this classification would be practically futile, and that a movement would be necessary to engender the entire system of railway express shipments throughout the country, this week communicated with the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington, D. C., requesting immediate relief. In his letter, dispatched from National Headquarters at 745 Seventh Avenue, New York City, the Business Manager calls the attention of the Commission to the fact that prior to the Government Ownership of Railways during the War, film was included on the Perishable List, but since the return of the Railroads to their respective companies, shipments of film have had no preference.

"You will readily understand how the millions of feet of film in course of shipment daily should be handled in such manner as to prevent the serious delays which often occur," the Business Manager stresses.

He continues, "In this connection, Motion Picture Theatres advertise that certain pictures will be shown on certain days. The delay often occurring in the course of regular shipment work extreme hardships on the Motion Picture Theatre owners in that their patronage having looked forward to seeing a certain picture on a certain date, is bound to feel the disappointment when the film does not arrive in time for the play date."

Associated Exhibs. Studio Busy

Three Producers Planning to Start Production
February 1st; Powers to Keep Plant Active

THOUGH the deal through which Associated Exhibitors acquired the Selig studios was only consummated last week plans are already going forward which give promise of making the Associated plant one of the busiest on the coast within the next thirty days.

Already two companies, comprising the Thomas L. Griffith unit which will make a series of comedy-dramas and Bert D. Carber who will star Bill Cody in a series of western features, are installed on the lot and S. S. Hutchinson is transferring his organization from the Hollywood to the Associated. Several other producers will follow suit as soon as productions now in work at other studios are completed.

All details should be completed within the

Three People in Film Business Die in Albany

Film Row in Albany, N. Y., was shocked the past week to hear the death of Morris Goldstein, who as a salesman in the past for the local F.B.O. office, as well as for the Universal exchange, was known to practically every exhibitor in northern New York and this part of the state. Mr. Goldstein was better known as "Goldie." He was forced to relinquish his duties at the F.B.O. office a number of months ago when he went to New York city with relatives.

Exhibitors generally throughout this section extended their sympathy last week to Fred Elliott, owner of the Clinton Square theatre in Albany, whose daughter, Dorothy, 19 years of age, died at her home, following an illness of some time.

The local Pathe office was saddened during the week when the mother of Miss Marie Mahar, a bookkeeper, died at her home in Watervliet.

Henry Hunt Passes Away in Boston

Henry J. Hunt, for many years treasurer of the New Park Theatre in Boston and identified with the management of other playhouses, died Monday at his home in Boston. He is the son of Jay Hunt who is associated with the motion picture industry in Hollywood, his parents arriving in time to attend the funeral services. They travelled across the continent on receipt of a telegram telling of his critical illness. Rabbi Samuel J. Abrams of Temple Ohabei Shalom officiated at the services and burial was in Montvale cemetery, Woburn, Mass.

Report Shows Extent of Arbitration

Motion Picture Boards in Second Year of Activity Decided 5,450 Cases Involving $1,331,206.72

THE value of arbitration in a big industry in keeping disputes out of the courts is exemplified in the second annual report of the board of arbitration of the motion picture industry submitted by Will Hays, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America and released through the Arbitration Society of America with offices at 115 Broadway, New York City.

Though in only the second year of their activity the motion picture boards decided 5,450 cases during 1925, with $1,351,206.72 involved. Of these cases only seventeen were taken to the courts after the arbitration board had made its award. A notable feature during 1925 was that 99 per cent of the cases involved were decided within thirty days after they were filed.

There are thirty-three motion picture arbitration boards in leading cities throughout the United States deciding disputes between the exhibitors and distributors. The boards are made up of three men chosen by the distributors and three by the theatre owners. If the six cannot come to a decision a seventh is chosen by the six. During 1925 only twenty-two cases, totalling $12,341.41 required the services of a seventh arbitrator.

In 1924, the first year of arbitration in this industry, 4,875 awards, involving $1,077,968.99 were made by the arbitration boards. Fifteen of these disputes required a seventh arbitrator and four were litigated after arbitration. In 1925, in addition to the 5,450 disputes upon which actual awards were made by boards of arbitration there were 4,269, involving $802,747.69, settled by conciliation after having been filed, but before being determined by boards of arbitration. Last year, therefore, a grand total of 11,887 cases involving $2,542,544.40 were disposed of without recourse to the courts.

Ohio Arbitration Only for Members

AT a meeting of the executive committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio held on January 12th, a resolution was adopted warning all exhibitors who were not members of the organization within thirty days after January 12th that exhibitor members of Boards of Arbitration at Cleveland and Cincinnati will refuse to sit in all cases involving exhibitors who are not members of the organization.

Five hundred and fifty-four disputes involving $124,797.23 were withdrawn by complainants; 292 cases involving $87,147.86 were dismissed by boards of arbitration. On December 31, 1925, there were pending in the various boards of arbitration throughout the country 539 disputes involving a total of $205,216.71.

"Arbitration has been a tremendous success in settling commercial disputes in the motion picture industry," says the report. "It has made recourse to the courts almost unknown in deciding controversies between motion picture distributors and theatre owners. It has saved tremendous sums that would have been spent in litigation and has operated efficiently and without delay to the satisfaction of both parties.

"Both in its country-wide scope and in its volume, the functioning of arbitration in the motion picture industry is pre-eminently the outstanding example of the successful use of this means of settling trade disputes."

The experience of the motion picture industry is duplicated by an increasing number of trade and professional associations which are making more and more use of the principle of commercial arbitration, according to Richard Washburn Child, President of the Arbitration Society, in commenting upon the report from Mr. Hays.

"For the second year the motion picture industry has given the American business world striking proof of the effectiveness of commercial arbitration in the speedy and economical settlement of business disputes," said Mr. Child. "As yet no other industry can in any way approximate either in number of cases or in the scope of their distribution, the rapid progress made in the motion picture industry, but the use of arbitration in other businesses and professions is becoming in the aggregate an important and a most significant factor in present-day business developments. A year ago President Coolidge signed the first comprehensive Federal Arbitration Act, which permits the application of this principle to business controversies involving interstate trade, and Secretary Hoover has frequently emphasized the importance of business men taking advantage of arbitration as a means to eliminating waste in time and money and modernizing the one phase of business procedure in which America has until so recently lagged."

Tax Measure Stirs Missouri Owners

Hot Battle is Promised Against Governor's Proposed
Ten Per Cent Tax on Admittances to Theatres

WHEN Governor Baker of Missouri recently adopted as part of his proposed constitutional amendment a ten percent tax on all admittances to theatres and other places of amusement, he threw a bombshell into the center of the motion picture exhibitors of the state and they intend to wage a hot fight against the tax.

In response to a telegram from Business Manager Joseph M. Seider of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, the Unit in St. Louis, has signified its intent to fight to a finish any additional amusement tax in Missouri. Seider's wire immediately followed earlier reports that Governor Baker and other State Officers of Missouri were caucusing on a proposed Amendment to the Constitution which would add a 10% Tax on Amusements in that State, the money to be used for state educational purposes.

The St. Louis Theatre Owners are now devising means to combat the proposed Measure, and will forward their outline of the local situation to the National Business Manager. As soon as he is in receipt of this material, Mr. Seider will bring the pressure of the National Organization on the situation through an intensive campaign which he is now planning at National Headquarters at 745 Seventh Avenue, New York City.

The amusement tax would be included in the constitutional amendment to be submitted to the voters of the state at the general elections to be held next November. The proposal already carries a tax of 10 percent on the sale price of cigars, cigarettes and other forms of tobacco and a recommendation that the inheritance and foreign insurance taxes be transferred from the general to the school fund.

Governor Baker anticipates that his amusement tax will drag from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 into the school fund.

The proposed arrangement has been taken up by the exhibitors organization in St. Louis and Kansas City and it is certain that the two organizations have jurisdiction over the Eastern and Western sections of the state will also organize to defeat this new effort to saddle a further tax burden on the exhibitors of the state.

Inclusion of the amusement tax was agreed to at a conference of Governor Baker and several state officials. The revised form of the amendment will be submitted to Baker's committee in charge of the amendment at a meeting at Jefferson City, state capital, next week.

This announcement means nothing more or less than a huge combine of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, all sporting goods concerns, baseball interests and tobacco manufacturers to fight the proposed legislation. Such a combine has not yet been formed, but in the opinion of theatre owners it is inevitable.

"Such a 'nuisance tax' is an insult to the activity of Missouri exhibitors during the recent war," said C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri. "We carried the load of a tax then and freely gave up our screens to aid every good cause which came along. We are forced to pay city, county and state taxes which now are high enough. If such an unjust piece of legislation should be passed it will mean disaster for Missouri exhibitors. I do not say 'disaster' for the mere effect of the thing, but I mean just that—ruination. The smaller exhibitors cannot stand it. The larger theatre will be forced to saddle the increase upon the public, which always is the 'goat' in such type of legislation."

New Bills Appearing in Albany

Measure for Abolishment of State Commission Has Not Yet Been Introduced

WITH the New York State Legislature now in its fourth week, bills of interest to the motion picture industry are being introduced, although up to the present time no bill has yet made its appearance calling for the abolishment of the New York State Motion Picture Commission. This fact is largely due to the Legislature awaiting the report of the reorganization committee, as it is generally known that up to the present time no place has been found for the commission other than in a verbal way. There has been some talk that the commission might be lodged with the State Education department, but if this takes place, the commission will become a bureau but with a New York city branch, where all the reels can be examined as at present. If the commission manages to survive and becomes a part of the Education department, the three commissioners, each of whom draws down a salary of $7,500, will be replaced by a single bureau head.

Talk heard around the Capitol during the last week or two, particularly among the Republicans, seems to indicate a sentiment in favor of continuing the commission.

"If ever the opportunity was offered to relieve the motion picture industry in this state of the troublesome annoyance and unnecessary expense of censorship it is now," said Frederick H. Elliott, general manager of the Independent Motion Picture Association of America in a statement issued this week.

"It is understood," said Mr. Elliott, "that the report of the State Reorganization Commission of which former Governor Charles E. Hughes is chairman will be ready for submission to the legislature during the early part of February, and according to information received from authentic sources no place has as yet been found for the Motion Picture Commission under the reorganization plan."

Senator J. Griswold Webb, a Republican, has introduced a bill exempting news reels from examination by the commission. This bill will unquestionably pass.

Assemblyman Charles A. Freiberg, of Buffalo, has already announced that he intends to re-introduce his bill of a year ago, relative to the admittance of unaccompanied children to motion picture theatres in New York state. This bill got no further than being assigned to a committee last year.

Labor Troubles Up Again in Seattle

A general showdown of exhibitors against Musicians and Operators Unions in Seattle is being expected daily in the Northwest city, as a result of the latest alleged attempt of the union organizations to govern the management of motion picture houses in Seattle's downtown district.

The differences have been brought to a head by the Palace Hip Theatre case. The Palace Hip, formerly devoted to the showing of Ackerman and Harris musical revues, was closed recently and was to have been reopened this week under the management of W. W. Ely, who arrived in Seattle from California to succeed Joseph Muller, former manager. Upon his arrival in Seattle, Ely announced that he would reopen the Palace Hip under a first run motion picture policy, charging twenty cent admission prices and changing his program twice weekly.

Because of the high cost of operation and low admission prices, Ely announced that the musical accompaniments and features at the Palace Hip would be limited to the Palace Hip organ, which would require a musical staff of three men for the house. The Musicians Union of the city immediately notified Ely that unless he employed an orchestra of eight pieces, in addition to the organists, he would be unable to open as a union house, as they would not furnish operators, electricians or other union employees.

Reginald Barker Returns to M-G-M

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have again signed Reginald Barker to a long term directorial contract. He returns to that company after a short engagement with the Fox studios, to whom he went after having completed "The White Desert" for M-G-M. Baker's first picture under the new contract has not yet been announced.

February Is Grainger Month

Fox Sales Forces Will Pay Tribute to New General Sales Manager

FOX has designated February as Jimmy Grainger Month in appreciation of the efforts of the general sales manager since his affiliation with the company last May. During that month every effort will be put forth by the reorganized sales staff to make the current season the most successful in the history of the Fox Corporation.

The sponsors of the plan are confident of its success. In discussing it one of them said:

"When the boys in the field tell the exhibitors they are out to make a showing as a tribute to Jimmy Grainger we are confident of a response that will result in a greater gross than our chief ever expected. No man in the industry has the confidence and good will of the motion picture showmen more than James R. Grainger. The exhibitors know that anything he or his name is connected with has nothing of the lemon variety in its make-up. There is no doubt but that they will meet our salesmen more than half way in showing their appreciation of the outstanding figure in the motion picture sales field."

Mr. Grainger knows nothing about his associates plans to have him realize his ambition. He left for the Southland for a well earned rest a few days before it was hatched in the fertile brains of Fred C. Quimby, Fox short subject sales manager; J. Sichelman, assistant general sales manager; M. J. Schwartz and E. C. Grainger. It was born during a discussion of the annual spring drive.

Report Estimates New Theatres

Dodge Statistical Department Says 335 Houses Were Launched Last Year

CONTRACTS were awarded for 335 theatres in 37 states during 1925, according to a report of the statistical department of the F. W. Dodge Corporation. The amount invested aggregates $28,000,000, according to the report. The territory covered includes everything east of the Rockies and is said to represent 90 percent of the total construction in the entire country.

The report gives the figures as follows:

1925	No. Projects	New Floor Space Sq. Ft.	Cost
Jan.	11	59,800	$251,000

Figures for the first eleven months of 1925 compiled by Engineering News Record showing only houses costing $150,000 and over showed contracts for 119 houses were awarded, involving a total investment of $55,542,355.

The Architectural Forum on data obtained directly from architects places the number of theatres for 1926 at 330, involving an estimated outlay of $69,783,000.

Judy King Associated Exhibitors Star

JUDY KING, for the past few years playing small parts and leads both in feature as well as in short comedies, has been elevated to the rank of star and will appear in a series of six comedy dramas to be made by Thomas L. Griffith for Associated Exhibitors release.

Miss King was born in Montreal, Canada, and at the age of eleven made her debut on the stage in New York. In 1922 she made her first screen appearance with Harold Lloyd in "Safety Last" and this was followed by an engagement as leading lady in several Hal Roach comedies. She alternated between short and feature comedies for the next few years, also playing a dramatic bit in "Smouldering Fires."

Plans are now being made for the first Griffith production which will be started at the Associated studios in Los Angeles as soon as a male lead is selected for the star.

Laemmle Anniversary Plan Launched

Dinner Dance at Commodore Starts Activities Commemorating Twenty Years in Motion Picture Industry

A BIG supper dance to be held by the officers and employees of Universal Pictures Corporation at the Commodore Hotel in New York on Friday evening, February 5th, will inaugurate the round of activities being arranged to mark Carl Laemmle's twentieth anniversary in the motion picture industry.

The Universal employees who will attend will include the Home Office force, the personnel of the Big "U" exchange in New York and the staff and operatives of Universal's laboratory at Fort Lee, N. J.

The affair is to be held in the main ballroom of the Commodore. Dancing will begin at 9 P. M. and will be interrupted by a supper at 11.30. Following the supper there will again be dancing and entertainment.

Music will be supplied by Ben Bernie and his orchestra. E. H. Goldstein, Treasurer of Universal, will be the master of ceremonies for the evening, and R. H. Cochrane, Vice-President of the big film concern will be the toastmaster.

Laemmle is now returning from Europe aboard the Steamship Olympic, and will arrive in New York on February 2nd, well in time for the party at the Commodore. Many activities are projected for his anniversary period. His friends both in and out of the industry will participate in the various functions and festivities. The anniversary will be marked in all parts of world—wherever Universal's and Laemmle's influence extend.

Laemmle's twenty years in the business constitute the entire life of the industry. When he left the department store business early in 1906 and opened a small store-show theatre in Chicago on February 26th of that year, moving pictures consisted of split reel pictures, mostly of the novelty type.

The present Universal organization, valued at millions of dollars and recognized as one of the most compact organizations in the international business field, has grown from an initial investment of $3,600. Laemmle's business acumen, his uncanny sense of values and his fighting ability are largely responsible for this remarkable growth.

Among the letters of congratulation pouring in upon the Universal president, are messages from heads of rival film companies, including Marcus Loew, Samuel Goldwyn and Robert Lieber.

Loew wrote as follows:

"I just learned that it is twenty years since you entered the motion picture industry, and I wish to take this opportunity of congratulating you on your wonderful success.

"No one knows better than I of the trials and tribulations that attended both exhibitors and producers in the early stages.

"With very best wishes for continued success."

President Lieber of Associated First National Pictures paid the following tribute to Laemmle:

"My attention has been brought to the fact that this year of 1926 marks for you twenty years of constructive work towards the advancement of motion pictures.

"I, myself, can think back over a goodly share of these same years, and as I am constantly reminded of your definite purpose through all of this time. Through all of this period your work has been significant of all that is best in the advancement of this industry of ours.

"I am hoping that you will continue to find this same interest for many years to come, for we still need you now as we did in the early days."

Goldwyn sent the following congratulations:

"It has just come to my knowledge that in February you will have been in the business for twenty years, and I therefore feel that it is only befitting the occasion that I express to you my appreciation for the constructive work you have done for the motion picture industry as a whole during that period.

"You have always stood for clean, wholesome entertainment and honest dealings with the public motion picture theatre owners, as well as with your competitors, and I hope that you will continue for the next twenty years to do the good for the industry that you have in the past.

"Best wishes and kindest regards."

Ground is Broken for K. C. Midland

Alliance is Effected With Loew's, Inc. and $1,750,000 Bond Issue Negotiated; Other Theatre Expansion

HERBERT M. WOOLF, associated with M. B. Shanberg in the construction of Kansas City's $4,000,000 Midland theatre, announced this week that the ground for the building would be broken this week.

An alliance with Loew's Inc., has been effected and a bond issue of $1,750,000 with one of the large bond houses negotiated.

Following are some of the outstanding features of the theatre, which will be managed by Mr. Shanberg:

Seating capacity—4,000; Orchestra pit, provided with lift which will bring the 50-piece orchestra into view of the audience when playing; Theatre lobby the height of a 3½ story building; Elevators from lobby to mezzanine and balcony; A larger area than any other down town building; Total frontage on Main, Thirteenth street and Baltimore avenue—553 feet.

The steel frame of the structure will be so built that the building can be increased to twelve stories. The theatre, which, it is expected will have its formal opening next Christmas, will be modeled somewhat after Loew's Capitol theatre in New York. A pipe organ will be built at a cost of $100,000. Thomas W. Lamb of New York, the architect, is making a final revision of the plans and is making a studied effort to gain an effect of coziness, despite the vast dimensions of the auditorium.

The Tacoma Theatre in Tacoma, Washington, that city's oldest and largest legitimate playhouse, was purchased last week by S. R. Balkwill from the Tacoma Theatre Building Company at a cost of approximately $500,000, it was announced this week. Reports that the North American Theatres Corporation, a unit of the DeMille theatre group, would take over the house following a complete remodeling and renovating could not be confirmed by authentic sources. Houses are now under construction in Seattle and Portland for the North American organization, however, and it is believed quite possible that they will take over the Tacoma structure.

Exclusive lease of the Alexandria and Coliseum theatres San Francisco has been obtained by Herbert L. Rothchild, which will henceforth bear the well known trade mark of Herbert L. Rothchild Entertainment. Mr. Rothchild has placed Harry David in charge as general manager of the two theatres. He has as his assistant, John Don Maroney, who in turn has a house manager in each theatre. The general offices are to be maintained in the Alexandria and were completed and occupied officially Saturday, Jan. 9th.

A chain of theatres is to be established over Nebraska, according to an announcement made by W. H. McFarland, general manager of the World Realty Company.

The World syndicate will have houses in fifteen of the largest cities of the state, says Mr. McFarland. The start will be made in Fremont and Columbus, with $100,000 theatres in each city. The company also plans suburban houses in Omaha. Those already announced are at Leavenworth and Twenty-Ninth streets and in Benson. The company owns the Sun, World, Moon, Muse and other theaters in Omaha and is planning the $1,000,000 "Omaha" theater at Sixteenth and Douglas.

A deal between Universal and J. W. Cotter, owner of the Fourth Street theatre, Moberly, Mo., has been completed, whereby Universal purchased the house, according to Charles Sears, in charge of Universal theatres in the Kansas City territory. Lee Jones will manage the house temporarily. The purchase price was not named.

The Goldstein Circuit has taken over the Majestic Theatre of Easthampton, formerly owned by Joseph Rappoulos. Mr. Rappoulos will continue as manager of the house under the new owners. The Goldstein Circuit recently gave up the Strand Theatre, formerly known as Recreation Hall, at Easthampton and this hall is now under the management of Mr. Kendall. It is owned by the West Boylston Manufacturing Co.

It is understood in Rockland, Me. that Paramount interests contemplate building a theatre in that city in the Spring.

Four Due From First National

"Irene" Heads Quartette of Features
Scheduled for February Release

FOUR important releases are scheduled for February by First National. They are "Irene," as the outstanding attraction on February 21st, "Rainbow Riley" on February 7th, "The Far Cry" on the 14th and "The Dancer from Paris" on the 28th.

"Irene" is hailed by First National as the biggest starring attraction Colleen Moore has ever had. It is taken from the popular musical comedy by James Montgomery. In addition to the role enacted by the star, the picture is said to offer a gorgeously colorful fashion show photographed in color.

The scenario for "Irene" was written by June Mathis, and Alfred E. Green directed. In the cast supporting the star are Lloyd Hughes, Kate Price, Charlie Murray, George K. Arthur and Edward Earle.

"The Far Cry" was made at the West Coast studios under the direction of Balboni. The play from which the story was adapted was written by Arthur Richman and enjoyed a successful run on Broadway. Most of the action transpires in the American colony in Paris. Prominent in the cast are Blanche Sweet, Jack Mulhall, Hobart Bosworth and Myrtle Stedman.

Johnny Hines' second starring vehicle for First National is an adaptation of Thompson Buchanan's play "The Cub" in which Douglas Fairbanks starred on the stage. Under the title of "Rainbow Riley," Hines is said to have a rapid-fire comedy story. Charles C. Burr is the producer, Anthony Paul Kelly wrote the scenario and Charles Hines directed. The cast includes, J. Barney Sherry, Brenda Bond, Dan Mason, Bradley Barker, John Hamilton and Harlan Knight.

In "The Dancer of Paris," Robert T. Kane has a sparkling story from the pen of Michael Arlen. As the title indicates, it will be a sophisticated story centering around the gay life of Paris. Kane has assembled a strong cast headed by Conway Tearle, Dorothy Mackaill and Robert Cain. Alfred Santell is directing.

Many Theatre Fires in Week

Fire in Theatres in New England Territory and Albany Result in Considerable Losses

FIRES continue to be troublesome in the New England area. In addition to those recently in Rhode Island and Connecticut, the past week has seen fires in theatres in Haverhill, Quincy, Danvers and Fitchburg, Mass. These fires have resulted in loss of a considerable amount of film to the New England exchanges, all of the larger exchanges having lost from three to six and eight rolls each. The losses have also caused considerable annoyance in bookings of shipment of films and in some cases, changes of programs.

The Majestic Theatre in Fitchburg was damaged by fire which also did heavy damage, estimated at $150,000, to the block in which the Majestic is located.

The Elm Theatre in Danvers, the only motion picture theatre in the town, was damaged to the extent of $65,000. The fire started near the boiler and the theatre will have to be entirely rebuilt.

The Academy of Music Theatre in Haverhill was damaged by fire Thursday morning, a watchman discovering the blaze in a rest room of the playhouse in the early morning. Four hours later, when the fire had been put out, the theatre was considerably damaged. Damage to the theatre and to the block in which it was housed was heavy but a fire wall undoubtedly saved the theatre from total destruction. After extensive repairs, it will be reopened. The loss at this fire is placed at $150,000.

Music Hall in Quincy, the second floor of which is a motion picture theatre, was damaged to the extent of $10,000, of which about half fell upon the theatre. Fortunately all of these fires occurred during the night or early morning hours.

The Strand theatre in Fonda, and the Opera House in Ogdensburg, N. Y., were destroyed by fire last week. The Strand was owned and operated by William VanAlstine, who also runs a house in Fultonville. The fire started in a tailor shop close by and spread very quickly, consuming a bakery, a grocery store and other buildings, including the theatre. The piano and projection machine were saved by laborers working on the New York Central tracks close by. The seats were not sufficiently damaged but what they can be used, and Mr. VanAlstine is already looking around for another house. The fire occurred shortly after 8 o'clock in the morning.

The fire which destroyed the Opera House in Ogdensburg, started shortly after midnight and consumed the City Hall, as well,

Conn. Attorney General Renders Tax Decision

FILMS of an educational or religious character, whether shown in a motion picture theatre, a school or church, are exempt from the state motion picture tax of Connecticut, according to a decision handed to Tax Commissioner Blodgett of that state by Attorney General Healey of Connecticut.

Attorney General Healey, in his decision, says:

"If the General Assembly desired to make the place where these films were to be shown, the test to be applied, in order to make them tax exempt, it could have easily expressed that intention in the statute by appropriate language. It is not within my power to limit the purpose as expressed in the language of the statute by supplying a limitation that would in effect defeat the object sought to be attained in making these classes of pictures exempt.

"Reading the statute in the light of the established public policy of the state, which has always favored tax exemptions of gifts devoted to everything which promotes the public welfare, it is my opinion that this statute should be so construed that the class of pictures enumerated in the statute should be exempted from taxation.

"As the statute places upon you, as tax commissioner, or your agent, the duty of determining in each particular case whether the picture comes within the class enumerated, the interests of the state are amply protected."

with a loss of close to $300,000. The Opera House was being run by J. S. Burnham under a five year lease. While the City Hall will be rebuilt, according to present reports, it now looks doubtful for the theatre. The fire in Ogdensburg occurred in zero weather and with a gale sweeping the city.

Charles A. Meade, manager, and Miss Kathleen Sinclair, organist, proved to be the heroes of a big downtown fire in Winnipeg, Manitoba, last Saturday night which broke out next door to the Lyceum Theatre which is the largest of three theatres in Winnipeg under lease to Canadian Universal Films. The theatre was crowded to the doors but, without stopping the picture, Manager Meade appeared in the orchestra pit to announce that every person should leave quietly. Miss Sinclair stuck to the console to play the exit march although the theatre was filled with smoke, until the last of the audience had departed.

The loss by fire was $150,000, the damage to the Lyceum being estimated at $10,000, through the ruining of new drapes, carpets and other furnishings through smoke and water. The theatre had only been remodelled last October when the house was taken over by Universal. The owner is A. R. McNichol.

Censor Board Threatens to Resign

Seattle's entire Board of Theatre Censors threatened to resign their posts last week, according to news dispatches, unless the City Council took action against the licensing of all-night motion picture theatres. The all-night houses have been established in Seattle for several seasons, and ever since their first opening have been a bone of contention between the censor board and the more liberal minded governing body of the city.

Williams Lauds Dorothy Gish

"Jaydee" Will Make Three Productions in England With Her as Star

J. D. WILLIAMS, Managing Director of British National Pictures, Ltd., London, made the announcement immediately after the "Nell Gwyn" preview at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, New York, that he and his English associates were so strongly impressed as to the future of Dorothy Gish, following her brilliant triumph in the name part of Herbert Wilcox's production "Nell Gwyn," that his company had made a deal with Inspiration Pictures, Inc., who has the star under contract for five years, under which arrangement she is to return to England immediately to be starred in three productions.

"Jaydee," when manager of First National Pictures, saw the possibilities and promoted to front rank stardom several of the present day reigning screen favorites. He sees in Dorothy Gish a player capable of creating for herself an unique position on the screen. "She'll be the feminine Harold Lloyd," he believes.

Officials of Inspiration Pictures and Miss Gish, herself, were sold on the idea of the star's returning to England largely because of the splendid production quality of "Nell Gwyn."

George T. Eaton, President of the big English producing company, a man of long theatrical experience and a former associate of Jaydee in Australia, is one Englishman who has no fear of the success of British pictures in this country, or elsewhere in the world, provided they are of a technical and artistic quality comparable to the American product. He gladly gives American producers credit for having won a practical monopoly of the world's picture business on the basis of quality, and he bases his hopes for the success of his own company on their determination to win on merit alone.

Horton to Star for Associated

3 Productions by S. S. Hutchinson as Additions to "Triumphant Thirty"

AN arrangement has been entered into between Associated Exhibitors and S. S. Hutchinson whereby Hutchinson will make three additional pictures starring Edward Everett Horton, as a result of a preview of "The Nutcracker" in which Horton is co-starred with Mae Busch.

Officials of Associated were so pleased with this production that they decided that although originally listed as one of the "Triumphant Thirty" it should be issued as one of a group of Horton features in addition to their already announced schedule.

"The Nutcracker," which is a comedy-drama of married life based upon the stage and book success of that name, was directed by Lloyd Igraham for Hutchinson. The production was previewed at an uptown Broadway theatre recently and, it is claimed, the audience showed a distinct preference for it over the regular feature in which two popular screen players appeared.

The following day negotiations were started with Hutchinson and the contract signed for the three pictures.

Banker Named Director of Eastern Theatres

Eastern Theatres, Limited, Toronto, an important subsidiary of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, operating theatres in Eastern Canada, has added to its directorate by the election of a well-known banker as director, W. D. Ross, a director of the Bank of Nova Scotia. He fills the place left vacant by the resignation of D. L. White of Midlan, Ontario.

Eastern Theatres has also published a financial statement covering the first three months of the fiscal year, September to December inclusive, which shows that earnings for the period were considerably in excess of those for the same period one year before.

Sen. Harris Drops Dead in State Capitol

STATE Senator John P. Harris, of Pittsburgh, described as "The best friend the motion picture industry ever had in the Pennsylvania Legislature," dropped dead during a legislative committee hearing Jan. 26 in the state capitol in Harrisburg.

Senator Harris was born December 4, 1871. He established the first motion picture theatre in Pittsburgh. Since then he had been engaged in theatre development, extending his business to include vaudeville and legitimate productions as well as photoplays. He is owner of the Harris Amusement Companies, owning theatres in the Pittsburgh District, Youngstown, Ohio; Wilmington, Del. and Detroit, all of which were ordered closed last night because of his death. He was an officer and part owner of the Harry Davis Enterprises, which conducts theatres in several states.

He was also part owner and director of the Pittsburgh Baseball Club, which owns the Pittsburgh Pirates, world champions in baseball. He was vice-president and director of the Washington Trust Company, Pittsburgh, and director of the Rosalia Foundling Asylum and Maternity Hospital.

Senator Harris was the floor leader in the Upper House for the administration measures of Governor Pinchot.

Fox Acquires Ingleton Research Library

THE George Ingleton research library, said to be one of the most complete private collections of rare books in America, has been acquired by the Fox west coast studios. Besides the great number of books obtained in every part of the world, the library includes files of national and international magazines and reference books dating back forty years.

Included in the great mass of literature is information dealing with peoples, customs, modes of living, habits of thought, dress, architecture, transportation and scenery with which the motion picture maker may come into contact.

Overtime Wages for "Extras" in Coast Studios

Overtime pay for women and minors employed as "extras" in motion picture studios in California and working in excess of an eight hour day, has been ordered by the industrial welfare commission in a decision made public January 9th.

The commission defined as "extras" those women or minors employed on a daily basis at a wage not exceeding $15 per day. Pay was fixed at 25 per cent additional for excess of eight hours and less than 10 hours; 50 per cent for 10 to 12 hours; 75 per cent for 12 to 14 hours, and double pay for more than 14 hours.

The decision fixed the working day as beginning when extras are told to, and do, report at a designated place. Women are to be paid for time used in trying on costumes and in fittings. Extras must be paid at the end of each day. Hot coffee and meals must be provided women working at night.

Famous Players-Lasky Win "Covered Wagon" Suit

A $1,000,000 suit against Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, pending since the release of "The Covered Wagon," has just been won by the defendant in the federal court at Kansas City.

The suit, brought by Mrs. Virginia Bridger Hahn, daughter of Jim Bridger, famous Indian scout, charged that the picture defamed the character of her father in that it depicted him as the husband of Indian wives and as a drunkard.

In ruling against Mrs. Hahn, Federal Judge Albert L. Reeves held that the changing standards of living make it impossible to defame one's ancestors. Things considered proper in one generation might be held as improper in another, he said.

Earle Foxe Again Back as Van Bibber

Earle Foxe is again back in the role of Van Bibber in the latest Fox Van Bibber comedy, "The Reporter." This is the fifteenth picture in which Foxe has assumed the same role. Lou Seiler is directing.

With the temporary suspension several months ago of the Van Bibber comedies, Foxe had an important role in "Wages for Wives" and then played the leading male role in "A Trip to Chinatown," first of the Charles H. Hoyt comedy drama series.

Chadwick Will Release Two Next Month

"THE COUNT OF LUXEMBOURG" and "The Transcontinental Limited" will be released as Chadwick specials during the month of February. The former will go to exhibitors February 1st and the latter two weeks later.

"The Count of Luxembourg" is an adaptation of the operetta of the same name by Franz Lehar. George Walsh is featured at the head of a cast which includes Helen Lee Worthington, James Woods Morrison, Lola Todd, Joan Meredith, Michael Dark and Charles Requa.

Johnnie Walker has the leading male role in "The Transcontinental Limited," With Eugenia Gilbert playing opposite him. Others in the cast are Alec B. Francis, Edith Yorke, Bruce Gordon, George Ovey, Eric Mayne and James Hamel.

"Flaming Frontier" is Ready for Screen

UNIVERSAL'S epic of the west, "The Flaming Frontier," has been completed and the first print and negative are now in New York. It will be presented on Broadway in the near future as a highlight of Carl Laemmle's twentieth anniversary celebration. Negotiations are under way for a suitable theatre to house the production for a Broadway run.

Among the historical characters appearing in the picture are President Grant, General George A. Custer, General Reno, Chiefs Sitting Bull, Rain-in-The-Face, Gall, Red Cloud and Crazy Horse. Hoot Gibson and Dustin Farnum head the cast of players.

Harry Carey Introduces New Horse

Sandy, a new equine star will be introduced to picture goers when the Harry Carey vehicle, "Driftin' Thru" is released by Pathe on February 21st. Sandy assumes the place of Pete, the horse that performed so satisfactorily over a long period with Carey. Pete was recently retired to a life of ease and luxury.

Charles R. Rogers is presenting Carey in this new series of westerns for Pathe and Scott Dunlap is directing. Harriett Hammond has the feminine lead in "Driftin' Thru," and the cast includes Ruth King, Stanton Heck, Bert Woodruff and Raymond Nye.

Cissy Fitzgerald is Given Actress Role

Cissy Fitzgerald will have a role with which she should be entirely familiar when she appears in support of Pola Negri in the latter's next starring vehicle for Paramount, tentatively titled "Because I Love You." Miss Fitzgerald will play the part of an actress. The picture is now in production under the direction of Dimitri Buchowetzki. A strong character role has also been given Mikhail Vavitch.

Asso. Exhib. Appoints New Division Manager

HANK HEARN, well known picture sales executive, has been appointed Southern Division manager for Associated Exhibitors with supervision over Atlanta, Dallas, New Orleans, Charlotte and Memphis.

Hearn started in the picture business as an usher in the Arcade theatre in Jacksonville and inside of a year became manager of the house. He then became manager of the Jefferson theatre in St. Augustine, going from there to the S. A. Lynch and E. J. Sparks company in an executive capacity over all that company's Spartanburg houses. He also formed the Exhibitors Service Bureau and when that enterprise was abandoned turned to the film exchanges for a permanent connection.

Headquarters of the Southern Division will be in Atlanta, where Hearn will build up the staff. He is now in New York conferring with Oscar Price, president of Associated Exhibitors, and E. J. Smith, general sales manager.

Cast Announced for M-G-M's "Brown of Harvard"

Jack Piekford will play "Doolittle," William Haines will enact the role of "Brown" and Francis X. Bushman, Jr., will portray the part of "McAndrews," the heavy, in "Brown of Harvard," an adaptation of the stage play by Dorothy Farnum from Rida Johnson Young's novel which is being directed for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by Jack Conway. A. P. Younger wrote the continuity.

Edward Connelly, veteran actor, will complete his eleventh year at the Metro studios by playing the part of "Professor Abbott" in this production and Ernest Gillen has been entrusted with the character role of "Smythe." "Walter," an all-American half-back will be played by Guin (Big Boy) Williams.

Child's Work Pleases Dwan in "Sea Horses"

Director Allan Dwan is much pleased with the work of Mary Dow, four-year-old, whom Florence Vidor selected from 300 applicants to play the part of her daughter in "Sea Horses," which is being made for Paramount. Little Mary is described by Dwan as the most natural child screen player he has seen in years.

The featured players in "Sea Horses" are Miss Vidor, Jack Holt, George Bancroft, William Powell, Jack Swain and George Campeau. The story is by Francis Brett Young, adapted by Becky Gardiner, from whose adaptation James Shelly Hamilton wrote the screen play.

Action stills from "Born to Battle" an F. B. O. production.

First National to Continue Broadcasting

DUE to the thousand or more telegrams and letters received from all over the country at the First National offices the company will continue to broadcast its productions from station WJZ, New York. Exhibitors are equally enthusiastic over this novel way of publicizing pictures and it is claimed that theatre patrons have commented favorably on the new feature.

The time of broadcasting remains at 8.30 each Thursday evening. "Just suppose," the Richard Barthelmess starring vehicle, was put on the air January 21, "The Reckless Lady" was radioed this week, "Memory Lane" is scheduled for February 4, "The Far Cry" February 11 and the Colleen Moore starring vehicle "Irene" will be broadcasted on February 18.

"Winning the Futurity" Cast Completed

I. E. Chadwick, president of Chadwick Pictures Corporation, has completed the cast for "Winning the Futurity," the production of which he will supervise himself on the west coast. Cullen Landis and Clara Horton will have the leading roles in this horse race special. Others in the cast are Ernest Hilliar, Eugenie Besserer, Harry Todd, Bruce Covington, Pat Harmon, George Reed and Mattie Peters.

Weaver Preparing Next Associated Exhibitors Release

Plans for the next H. C. Weaver production for release through Associated Exhibitors are now under way and the forthcoming picture as been given the working title of "The Totem Pole Bagger." E. C. Maxwell, scenic and continuity editor, has completed work on the script and Peter L. Shamray, production manager, is preparing to shape the sets for the interiors.

Cecil De Mille Signs Donald Crisp

Cecil B. De Mille has signed Donald Crisp to a long term contract by the terms of which he will direct three productions this year for release through Producers Distributing Corporation.

Universal to Re-Release "Outside the Law"

UNIVERSAL is to re-release "Outside the Law," the crook drama with Priscilla Dean in the starring role and Lon Chaney co-featured. The picture created quite a sensation when it first reached the screen. It was made from a story written by Tod Browning, who also directed it. According to Universal reports it played in more than 8,000 houses throughout the country.

The action of the picture is laid in San Francisco's underworld and Miss Dean plays the role of Silky Moll Madden, daughter of a gambling house proprietor. The supporting cast includes Ralph Lewis, E. Allyn Warren, Melbourne McDowell and Wilton Taylor.

Exhibitor's Idea Exchange

According to
J. C. Carpenter

Manager of the Park theatre, Cobleskill, N. Y., he used with eminent success a

"gold nugget" exploitation stunt for "The Gold Rush." The stunt which Mr. Carpenter reports has had at least one outstanding novel angle—that being the contest twist which offered prizes to the youngster who collected the greatest number of the heralds (an envelope containing a "nugget") and which were distributed from door to door. This repeat solicitation in which an article is carried into the home and later requested by another ambassador of "The Gold Rush" seems a valuable addition to a very old and very effective form of exploitation.

The "nuggets" which Carpenter distributed were bits of crushed stone, dipped in gilt and enclosed in a small envelope with billing for the picture and an added line requesting people to retain the nugget, in order to help some boy or girl win a prize. Another line used the teaser idea in announcing the contest, saying that the rules would be announced later.

"The envelopes" writes Mr. Carpenter "containing the nuggets I distributed to every house in the town two days before the opening date of 'The Gold Rush.' Then on the opening date I went to the schools and gave out the herald announcing that prizes of a two-weeks pass to the theatre would be awarded the boy or girl who brought to the theatre the greatest number of nuggets. The herald urged the youngsters to go from door to door and ask for the 'Gold Rush Nuggets.'"

"The result was that every house had a visit from one or more children asking for Gold Rush Nuggets, you can readily see how direct this contest advertising was, as surely after anyone answers the doorbell several times and is asked each time for Gold Rush Nuggets they are going to know that the Gold Rush is playing in the town. The children here returned 640 nuggets out of a possible 800."

According to
Hugh Gardner

Manager of the Orpheum, Neosho, Mo., the theatre manager should "go it strong"

on pictures which in his judgment are outstanding examples of the type of attraction his patrons favor. As a specimen of Gardner's work along these lines, we have high regard for his handling of publicity on "Havoc," one of the recent productions which he singled out for special endorsement on his part.

On the editorial page of his monthly house organ—a very neatly printed folder, done on pink paper and listing the attractions for the coming month at the Orpheum—Hugh says, that "we get sold on certain pictures. Naturally we look forward to the showing of some of our attractions more than we do some of the others, it couldn't be otherwise it seems. One of these is the international stage success 'Havoc,' and he goes on to describe the theme of that picture and point out its pictorial and dramatic superiority.

As a follow up to the advance notice given in this editorial comment, Gardner went in for "flash" newspaper advertising. He carried a full page spread in the Neosho Daily Democrat. Gardner's ad had singular force and vigor. He used three of the press book cuts—each of two-column size—in the layout, and featured quotations from newspaper reviews by New York newspaper critics, in a center panel set in between the two press book cuts at the bottom of the page.

According to
J. G. Caldwell

Manager of the Princess theatre, Aurora, Mo., exhibitors who have never tried the amateur ad writing contest, would do well to consider this exploitation device, since in his experience it costs little and arouses lots of interest. Caldwell used the ad writing contest recently in connection with "That Royle Girl." He writes "The results were very good—causing quite a bit of talk—every one read the prize ads—some even calling the theatre to find out who was the winner." Prizes, consisting of passes to the show, were offered for the ads accepted for reproduction. The ads used carried at the top the name of the writer—another inducement to action on the part of the townspeople. It is a stunt which makes ready appeal to newspapers, for it is a promotional proposition for their business and hearty cooperation generally goes along with the stunt proposed by the theatre manager.

According to
M. Rosenthal

Manager, Majestic theatre, Bridgeport, Conn., in addition to obtaining immediate box office results, the prestige and goodwill of the theatre was advanced greatly by the stunt which he used to exploit "Phantom of the Opera" and gain funds for the Christmas Basket Fund of the Bridgeport Star.

The stunt was used during Christmas week and was based on the printing of a special extra edition of the Star. The paper was sold on the streets by "Phantom Newsettes." It was called the "Star Santa Claus Extra" and the price of the paper was "what you will pay." A streamer head featured the line "Phantom Newsettes Sell Santa Claus Extras Bringing Happiness of Toys to the Poor Children of Bridgeport." Proceeds from the sale, which netted a handsome sum, were turned over to the Star's Basket Fund. The expense of the extra edition, printed on pink paper, was borne by the newspaper.

"This item," writes Rosenthal, "was only one of many used in the campaign, including the touring of the city of the Phantom Girls, the use of all restaurant menus with our ad and a terrific advance billboard and newspaper campaign, sniping every available inch of open space."

According to
Charles Lee Hyde

the small town exhibitor is satisfied to stick out a one sheet and expects the town to come to his show because of it, was never less justified than at present. And as proof conclusive, Hyde sends us a photo showing some 24-sheeting he does for his shows and which would make a big town palace envious.

The stand which he uses to bill his week's program is of the so-called de luxe type. There is a twenty-four on every picture he has booked for the week. These appear in a row, reading from left to right in the order of play dates, and follow a three which announces "Grand Theatre. This Week." Pierre is a town of 3,200 and, adds Hyde "They all can see this and they come to the theatre too"—a convincing statement on the testimony of the photo showing the live-wire billing which this enterprising showman uses for his attractions.

According to
Gus Metzger

Of the Rivoli theatre, Portland, Ore., the Charleston dance contest offers exhibitors an excellent drawing card and the means of innumerable tie ups which pave the way for future cooperative stunts that will prove advantageous. Metzger negotiated a Charleston contest recently and on the box office receipts stands by the stunt as a very profitable one. His exploitation was in a hook up with the Portland News, which sponsored the affair and gave it the widest publicity. The prize was a loving cup and cash awards amounting to a total of $35 for the runners-up in the competition. As the feature picture used with the contest, "The King on Main Street" has a stirring Charleston scene performed by Bessie Love, the paper announced that the cup was presented by Miss Love, a publicity feature which gave added zest to the publicity notices.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Dearth's Seattle Campaign for "Best Bad Man"

J. Lloyd Dearth, formerly of Memphis, Tenn., and now manager of the Pantages theatre in Seattle, has been celebrating his entry to the latter city with many exceptional exploitation stunts. Among the outstanding campaigns he has put on is the drive he used for Tom Mix in "The Best Bad Man."

Dearth increased his newspaper space and made an extraordinary poster flash with the use of fifty-five 24-sheets—a more extensive outdoor display than has been made hitherto in Seattle by a picture theatre. As a lobby display he obtained a saddle and a Tom Mix sombrero, through the courtesy of local dealers, and as well installed a Postal Telegraph messenger and telegraph instrument in the lobby. The latter stunt was used as an advance announcer of "The Best Bad Man." The messenger delivered messages from Tom Mix to patrons, inviting them to attend "The Best Bad Man" when it played the following week at the Pantages.

Testimonial Ads Sell "A Kiss From Cinderella"

The list of testimonial ads on "A Kiss for Cinderella," printed in both of Spartanburg's daily papers, was the result of a special morning showing Manager J. H. Stelling held at the Rex theatre for the ministers, school teachers, representatives of women's clubs, and prominent citizens of the town. These personal endorsements of well-known men and women proved extremely valuable from a publicity standpoint.

To interest the collegiate element of Spartanburg, arrangements were made with the Dean of Converse College, whereby an announcement of the picture was made in the dining room of the college, the night before showing.

Unsolicited publicity was given the picture three days prior to opening by a well-known Presbyterian minister, who used the thermometer scene in the photoplay to illustrate his sermon, which ended with praiseworthy comments on the picture at the Rex.

Wanamaker's 'Sea Beast' Show

Whaling Relics, Sea Chanteys and Lecture in Auditorium Tie Up With Warner Feature

ONE of the most striking and dignified exploitation stunts staged in conjunction with a motion picture is on view this week in the auditorium of Wanamaker's where a "Moby Dick Week" is being celebrated in connection with the run in the Warner Theatre of "The Sea Beast."

The picture, based upon Herman Melville's whaling story, lends itself admirably to an exhibit of relics which bring back all the romance and glamor of a great American industry now living only in tradition.

The stunt was the result of conferences between Wanamaker advertising officials and members of the Exploitation Department of Warner Bros. And the whole cost to Warner's was the loan of some shots from the picture. In short, Wanamaker's agreed to play the part of an exhibition pot for a glorified trailer of "The Sea Beast," and proof of the effectiveness of this trailer is had in the announced intention of hundreds of persons to see the feature after they had seen these few selected scenes.

Advertisements announcing the exhibit and its surrounding features are appearing in all the metropolitan dailies—in some instances they are as large as 100 lines over two columns—and throw-aways are being sent to their mailing lists.

Representatives of the store were sent to New Bedford, New London and Washington, D. C., to gather whaling relics, and the Ritz Quartette, which recently won the Wanamaker Close Harmony Contest, is rendering a repertory of Sea Chanteys. These are being broadcast.

In addition to this, A. K. Dawson delivers a lecture daily on "Moby Dick Adventure Land," in which he tells of old whaling days.

Theatre 'Broadcasts' Game in "The Freshman"

As a theatre ballyhoo for "The Freshman" the Robbins' Avon theatre, Utica, N. Y., installed a broadcasting unit through which the exciting moments of the "game" were put on the air. A loud speaker and a sign announcing the stunt was placed on a busy corner of the city and crowds collected to tune in on the progress of the game and the laughs and cheers of the audience.

The play by play football action kept the crowds outside the theatre laughing and a cheer went up from the street when Harold broke through for the long run that brought fame for himself and Tate College.

Troop of Boy Scouts attending in a body a performance of "As No Man Has Loved" (Fox) at the Peoples theatre, Portland, Ore., where there was a big response to the latter recommending the picture to Scout Masters sent out by Chief Scout Executive James E. West.

Invites Cops to Solve Plot of "The Green Archer"

Manager Sidney Larsehan of the Meserole theatre, Greenpoint, L. I., is conducting a lively campaign to exploit his presentations of episodes in "The Green Archer," the Pathe serial. In addition to a strong billing campaign, which includes 1-sheets used as snipes, Larsehan has invited the police and the patrons of the theatre to take a hand in solving the mystery of who the Green Archer is.

In two-column space in the Greenpoint Weekly Star, Mr. Larsehan has addressed an open letter to Police Captain Charles E. Lee, which reads:

"The mysterious Green Archer appears at the Meserole theatre every Saturday afternoon. Who is the Green Archer? A deep mystery requiring the service of the entire force under your command. You are invited to dispatch the most competent detectives on your staff to the Meserole theatre every Saturday afternoon to help solve the greatest mystery of modern times."

On the opening day of the Pathe serial, Mr. Larsehan gave to each of 500 children a "Green Archer" novelty.

Individual Service by Mail Offered by Fox Staff

Individual exploitation service is a new feature installed by the Fox exploitation staff. Exploiters at the exchanges, in between times when they are personally executing campaigns for theatres, now send out to exhibitors a service by mail well in advance of play date.

A press book is sent to the exhibitor together with a letter outlining a complete campaign designed for the individual uses of the theatre addressed. The letter stresses the strong points and selling angles of the picture and calls particular attention to those features of the press book that will best aid in executing a successful campaign.

Next follows a complete set of newspaper display advertising laid out to suit the individual requirements of the theatre, and which shows how best to use the cuts furnished by the exchange. Then, depending of course upon the picture and the opportunities offered, follows a description of several ballyhoos, merchants' cooperation and store window tie-ups, contests of various kinds, special matinees, practical suggestions for lobby display, and atmospheric prologues.

The "Radiobile" a new type of ballyhoo introduced in New York by F. B. O. to broadcast entertainment picked up by F. B. O. feature productions, "The Keeper of the Bees," "Flaming Waters," "Heads Up," "The Midnight Flyer" and "The Last Edition."

F.B.O. Invents the 'Radiobile'

New Form of Ballyhoo Wagon Tours Streets of New York—Barker Speaks into Microphone

THE microphone has been added to the "barker's" equipment and the attractions of radio combined with the flamboyant colors of the circus wagon to promote the interest of the motion picture ballyhoo wagon. An innovation employing these elements of showmanship recently made its appearance on the streets of New York as an exploitation device for the F.B.O. Gold Bond productions.

This vehicle carries twelve one sheets covering the twelve F.B.O. Gold Bond productions. Above these sheets in bright red letters on a background of gold are the words: "Broadcasting to the World News of F.B.O. Pictures." A radio has been installed in the inside of the wagon and the horns, wires, and other radio apparatus are visible above the top of the vehicle. An announcer in a booth alongside the driver's seat speaks into a microphone, and the news concerning F.B.O. stars and productions is broadcast.

News items about "Drusilla With a Million," "If Marriage Fails?" "Parisian Nights," "The Keeper of the Bees," "The Last Edition," "The Midnight Flyer,"

"Flaming Waters," "When Love Grows Cold," "A Poor Girl's Romance," "The Non-Stop Flight," "The Isle of Retribution" and "The King of the Turf" are wafted on the cold January breezes. A fifteen minute talk is given every half hour, and news of F.B.O. stars is interspersed with news of productions.

This new form of exploitation which was invented and executed by the advertising department of F.B.O. will, in all probability, be utilized in other cities. As soon as the radiobile has covered New York City it will be sent to Pennsylvania, New Jersey and the New England States.

Stunts Feature Atlanta Campaign for "Phantom"

A series of publicity stunts, among which was a tie up with the police department which allowed the theatre four men, dressed in red costumes to direct sidewalk traffic, featured the "Phantom of the Opera" campaign executed by the Howard Theatre in Atlanta.

The campaign opened with a pre-view for 200 men and women prominent in film circles.

A ballyhoo which attracted attention was an old carriage drawn by two white Arabian horses. This equipage was driven by a masked man in a red robe and carried on the back seat a young girl dressed as Mary Philbin's Christine in "The Phantom." "Christine" was bound with heavy cord.

The Atlanta Constitution tied up with the picture on a "Phantom Voice" which called several hundred homes on New Year's Eve, saying: "Happy New Year. This is 'The Phantom of the Opera'."

The Howard's lobby was dressed with oils two weeks in advance of the showing and a 6-sheet cut-out was stationed on the lobby stairway. Fifteen thousand heralds were distributed from house to house. One department store conducted a sale of "Phantom Red" hats and another with a sale of dresses.

Roy Tillson's frontal display and ballyhoo for "The Fighting Dude," Educational comedy starring Lupino Lane, for its showing at the Fuller Theatre, Kalamazoo, Mich., which he manages.

Exploitation For Short Features

Showing the mysterious Green Archer who exploited the Pathe Serial "The Green Archer" for the Family Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. The girl rode about the city and launched feather-weight arrows bearing handbills for the theatre.

A scene outside the Strand Theatre, Emporia, Kans., previous to the special matinee at which Manager Harry McClure launched his "Buster Brown" Club to exploit the comedies of that title offered by Universal. Seven hundred kiddies signed membership cards in the organization.

Reginald Ford, who is flashing a superior brand of American showmanship at the Cameo Theatre, Paris, France, places due emphasis on the "Felix" cartoon reels released by Educational, in his lobby display—illustrated above—and sets an example which may be profitably emulated "over here."

Lupino Lane's Educational comedy "Maid In Morocco" was featured in the electrical frontal display at Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, N. Y., as the above photo indicates.

Liberal marquee space was accorded Education al's novelty reel "Marionettes" at the Newman Theatre, Kansas City. The photo shows that the short features can be played up as an important program attraction without detracting from the feature offering.

Judge Vincent M. Brennan is a true modern Solomon.

He not only showed wisdom in planning the means by which he could render a just decision, BUT

He selected the most famous motion picture in the world, the one in which the public reposes its affection and confidence, to carry out his idea.

Movie in Court is Test Of Mother Love For Baby

KING SOLOMON'S method of deciding which of two mothers was most devoted to a child they both claimed was adopted in modern form by Judge Vincent M. Brennan in the Circuit Court Saturday at the hearing of a writ of habeas corpus obtained by Mr. Julia Przybyla, 11570 Waltham avenue, natural mother of a three-year-old daughter Irene, in her fight to wrest the child from Mrs. Irene Goosen, 12599 Flanders avenue, foster-

mother of Irene and formerly Mrs. Przybyla's sister-in-law.

Instead of threatening to dismember the child with a sword, as did King Solomon to study the emotions of the two mothers, Judge Brennan announced that he would award the child to neither Mrs. Przybyla nor Mrs. Goosen, but would commit her to an institution. At the very instant the announcement was made a movie man under Judge Brennan's direction trained his camera on the two women to record their emotional reactions on a film.

Judge Brennan said he would employ the aid of psychologists in studying the film and award the child to the claimant whose features show the greatest expression of grief. His decision will be announced Wednesday, he said.

After the hearing of testimony, which consumed the afternoon, Judge Brennan ordered the two women before him and directed court attaches to place the child, who is now living with Mrs. Goosen, between them on a chair. Behind the judge stood the motion picture operator with a camera and his lights.

"In view of the fact that the Court has heard much testimony against both parties in this action, I have decided to commit the child to an institution," announced the Judge.

As the "movie" lights were flashed on the women and the operator started grinding on his camera, Mrs. Goosen burst into tears and, bending over, clasped the child to her arms, while her 13-year-old son, Edward, who sat in the front row of spectators, also began crying. Mrs. Przybyla made no demonstration.

Asked if they had any statement to make to the court, Mrs. Przybyla said he was married and had a home, and wished the child for her own—so Irene could benefit by these advantages. Mrs. Goosen was so overcome she could make no statement.

A large crowd witnessed the experiment in the courtroom.

Irene, who was born out of wedlock to Mrs. Przybyla Feb. 10, 1922, was placed in the care of Mrs. Goosen at the age of six weeks. On Feb. 10, 1925 Mrs. Przybyla was married to her present husband.

Dec. 24 Mrs. Goosen obtained a decree of divorce from her husband, William Goosen, who is Mrs. Przybyla's brother, but retained possession of Irene. March 20, 1925, Mrs. Przybyla obtained a writ of habeas corpus but it could not be served on Mrs. Goosen.

A previous writ has been refused Oct. 24, 1924. The present action was commenced last week.

Pathe Offers Novelty Release

Widely Varied Offerings Included in Program for Week of February 7th

A DIVERSIFIED short subject program is planned for release by Pathe for the week of February 7th. Among other things it introduces "Songs of Ireland," first of the new "Famous Melody Series" and "The Strenuous Life," a Grantland Rice "Spotlight." There are the usual Hal Roach and Mack Sennett comedies, the "Topics of the Day," "Aesop's Film Fables," serial and news weeklies.

The "Famous Melody Series" are single reel subjects which are offered in the form of a novelty. James Fitzpatrick produced the series and appears in the leading male role, with Peggy Shaw playing opposite him.

In the Grantland Rice "Spotlight," produced by J. L. Hawkinson classical dancing, the Charleston, boxing and other sports are shown.

"Your Husband's Past" is a two-reeler produced by Hal Roach with a cast which includes Vivian Oakland, George Cooper, Tyler Brooke, Fred Kelsey, James Finlayson and Arthur Millett. Fred L. Guio directed.

Ralph Graves is featured in the Mack Sennett comedy titled "Funnymooners." Thelma Parr plays opposite Graves and Marvin Lobach heads the supporting cast. Lloyd Bacon directed.

"The Smoke Clears Away" is the title of the closing chapter of the serial, "The Green Archer." Allene Ray and Walter Miller have the leading roles and are supported by Burr McIntosh, Frank Lackteen, Dorothy

King and Walter Lewis. Spencer Bennet directed the serial.

Pathe Review No. 6 presents three subjects: "Art in Archery," an old Indian accomplishment emerges as a modern sport; "American Wild Flowers in Pathecolor," the Anderson Aster, the Chokecherry and the Blazing Star are revealed in natural colors; "Enemy Submarines," microscopic studies of the mosquito.

"The Windjammers" is the new cartoon of the Aesop's Film Fables series. "Topics of the Day" and two issues of Pathe News complete the February 7th schedule.

"Saturday Afternoon"

Pathe—Three Reels

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

IT will be rather difficult to pick flaws in this three-reel Mack Sennett production which stars Harry Langdon. Everything about it is good—cast, direction and photography—furthermore, the story is particularly well adapted to the eccentricities of this droll comedian. So, the advice of this reviewer to exhibitors who want a first class three-reel special—is to book it—for in our opinion, this one certainly ought to please them all. Langdon is to go into features in the near future and this fact can afford to be played up. In this role, he takes the part of a meek, hard working husband who never varies the routine of coming home each Saturday afternoon to hand over his pay envelope to a domineering wife—until a fellow workman lures him to a date with a couple of flappers. Then the fun begins. The supporting cast is excellent. Harry Edwards directed.

The Cast

Harry Langdon, Vernon Dent, Ruth Hiatt and Peggy Montgomery.

The Story—Harry, a henpecked, hardworking husband is on his way home accompanied by a fellow workman. It is Saturday noon and Harry is making haste in order to turn over the pay envelope to his domineering wife. However, his pal is a single man, owns an auto and is a gay Lothario. Meeting two attractive flappers, Harry is persuaded by his friend to join an afternoon auto excursion, though he accepts with a troubled conscience and much trepidation. On reaching home each Saturday, it has been Harry's custom to now and then extract a few nickels and dimes from the envelope before handing it over to the wife. His cache is under the parlor carpet and location bears all the ear-marks of a treasure trove—requiring three or four steps to the right and a number to the left. However, this time the mistress discovers her mate in the act of hoarding a quarter and a violent scene follows during which she denies her docile husband the privilege of an afternoon out. But Harry makes a fervent plea for liberty and finally gains her consent. He joins the party on their joy ride and with a new found sense of freedom—proceeds to cut loose—but dark clouds dim the joyous holiday when two other chaps appear on the scene and claim the girls for their own. A fight follows with Harry's pal striving valiantly to defend their rights. Harry prefers to ignore the whole affair. To make matters worse, the domineering wife is out driving in her flivver and catches sight of her erring husband and further complications follow with the result that Harry is finally reinstated in her favor.

Summary—A first class comedy attraction. Good cast, well directed and finely photographed. Bill it as a Harry Langdon Special and as Langdon is to soon enter into features—play him up in this respect. A little extra money spent on advertising will be well worth the effort.

"Famous Melody Series"

(Pathe-Fitzpatrick—First Three Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

THESE first three subjects out of thirteen to be produced by James Fitzpatrick for Pathe release, hold promise of becoming even more popular attractions than "The Music Master Series" which were made by the same producer—and the latter has been a money maker for a great many theatres. In the opinion of this reviewer, Mr. Fitzpatrick has gone several steps ahead in this present series which picturize the songs of many lands. Not only has a charming little story been woven around each melody but each reel in itself is a fine scenic. Moreover, the scenes taken in the different countries are authentic.

They are single reel subjects and the first three deal with the "Songs of Ireland, England and Scotland"—in the order named. Peggy Shaw, formerly of the Ziegfeld Follies, plays the lead as "The Famous Melody Girl" and Miss Shaw is admirably cast for the role which calls for the characterization of the maids of the different nations. Mr. Fitzpatrick also appears in prominent roles.

Of the three reels shown—though they are all good—perhaps the songs of Ireland and Scotland have proved to be richer in material for picturization. For where is an Irish man, woman or child whose heart won't thrill at the strains of "Killarney," "The Low Back Car" and "Mavourneen"—and where a Scot who will fail to appreciate such melodies as "Annie Laurie," "Comin Thru the Rye" and "The Cambells Are Coming." And in addition the "Highland Fling," danced by Scotch lassies who certainly know how. However, the English reel is good, too, and features old favorites as "Drink To Me, Only With Thine Eyes" and "Just A Song At Twilight" and the "Tally-Ho" Song.

Pathe, in co-operation with Mr. Fitzpatrick, is preparing a special musical cue sheet and score to accompany each subject of the new series.

Summary—Based on the strong appeal of popular songs of many lands and with a charming glittles story interwoven in each reel, these subjects should prove superior quality first run attractions.

"The Uprising Generation"

(Pathe-Spotlight—One Reel)

ONE hears considerable talk these days as to whether the "Uprising Generation" will have a trend toward jazz and night life or whether they will strive toward athletics and health but this Spotlight will entertainingly demonstrate the fact that the coming generation is an active, vigorous lot of youngsters for the reason that the majority of them are seeking some form of athletics to reach the goal of good health. J. L. Hawkinson is the producer.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Time Flies"

(Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

LUPINO LANE fans will find all they can possibly look for in this two reel Mermaid Comedy, for this popular comedian is given a splendid opportunity to demonstrate his bag full of tricks. At times there is a slight over-indulgence of slapstick but considerable of this is necessary in order to bring out Lane's eccentric acrobatic stunts. There is very little to the story—however a plot is not entirely essential to this type of comedy. Lane's supporting cast is good.

Produced by Jack White and directed by Jesse Robbins. Photography by Robert Doran.

The Cast

The Colonel	Lupino Lane
His Son
His Grandson
The Duelist	Wallace Lupino
The Girl	Virginia Vance
An Adventuress	Gwendolyn Lee
Her Accomplice	Otto Fries

The Story—Action gets under way with a duel between Colonel Amos Blackwell—the deadliest shot of his day—and Major Wimpett, the latter furnishing the cause for a combat which is to settle an argument as to whether a "full house or five aces" is the better hand. News of the duel is carried to the Colonel's family and to prevent the demise of the Major, the Colonel's son mounts a trusty, high wheeled cycle and crashes into the field of battle in time to effect a cessation of hostilities—the bullet having hit the boy's watch when he appeared in the line of battle. Beholden, the Major presents him with his own "Waterbury." Time passes and in the meantime the boy—after bidding his sweetheart good-bye—reaches the cold, cruel city to build his fortune from a capital of ten cents. Hovering around a lunch counter where a customer is drinking a cup of coffee, the lone coin is accidentally dropped in the cup and disappears down the drinker's throat. Disheartened, the boy seeks a country road and meets a repulsed lover who is attempting suicide with a harmless gun. However, the gun suddenly goes off and hits a lamp globe which drops on the boy's head. He is taken to the home of an adventuress who tries to vamp him after linking up the "Waterbury" with a newspaper article which seeks to locate a missing heir to a fortune. The other suitor appears and at this point Lane displays a lot of his tricks in his endeavors to dodge his pursuer. The boy escapes the scheming pair and with his "Waterbury," returns to claim the fortune and his sweetheart.

Summary—This one will please wherever Lupino Lane is popular. There is considerable slapstick but a lot of this is necessary to bring out this comedian's stunts.

"Hearts of the West"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

HERE is an original idea for a western story. The mortgage on the ranch is due. There is no possible way of meeting it and saving the property save through success in an impending horse race. It's up to Black Bess to win that there rich prize and unexpectedly Black Bess comes through. If all horse races were as easy to pick as that one there would be no necessity for mortgages.

There is hardly a redeeming feature to this two-reeler. Every foot of it has been seen so often that the entire story is revealed from the start. Edmund Cobb is the featured player and does the best he can with the story.

The Story. Tom Murray has inherited a heavily mortgaged ranch. He has successfully concealed the fact of the mortgage from his blind aged mother in the hope that he may restore the fortune through an impending cross country horse race. Joel Clegg is the holder of the mortgage and Tom saves Joel's life. Later Joel would sell the property to Sylvia Hunter, a pretty girl from the east, who becomes interested in Tom. Tom wins the race despite the crooked efforts of Joel. He brings his mother the glad news that he has won not only the race, but Sylvia, also.

Summary. This is an old, old story and lacking in interest because every step of it can be anticipated.

"Helpful Al"

(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

WHILE Al Alt is the featured player in this comedy, the laurels really go to a baby girl who appears to be not more than two or three years old. She has more expression and more screen personality than any youngster seen on the screen in a long time and she figures as prominently in the picture as Alt, though her name is not revealed on the screen or in the cast.

This is a picture made attractive principally by the appearance of this youngster. Alt is his usual self and the story is better than the average in these two-reel comedies. There is a lot of knockabout stuff and hokum at the start, but when the action finally settles down things move swiftly and smoothly with a touch of helpful comedy here and there and an occasional thrill to add to the general effectiveness.

The Story. Al and his pal, out in their flivver have a mishap which sends them away for help. When they return they find a baby in the car and dash off for suitable attire and food for her. Again returning, the baby is missing. They locate her at the end of a plank overlooking a high cliff. The baby is rescued only later to grab a handful of balloons from a vendor and to be carried into the air by them. Al and his pal give chase in the flivver and an auto boat. The baby eventually descends into the back seat of a luxurious car in which her real mother and father are riding. Al reluctantly gives the baby up and receives the $5,000 reward offered, but it is carried away by a high wind which springs up suddenly.

Sterns Get "Newlyweds and Their Baby"

STERN BROTHERS, producers of two-reel comedies through Universal have signed a contract with George McManus, cartoonist, whereby they acquire the screen rights of the popular newspaper cartoon characters, "The Newlyweds and Their Baby." The series will be made for release on next season's market.

The cartoons are one of the best known newspaper series published. They have appeared in scores of newspaper all over the country. This series is the third announced by the Sterns for 1926-27. The other two are the new Buster Brown series and "What Happened to Jane," a series of thirteen two-reelers featuring Wanda Wiley and Al Ford.

Summary. This is an attractive picture which will win approval in almost any house largely because of the appearance of this winsome baby. The story is a good one with enough humor and thrills to keep up the interest.

"Lickety Split"

(Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

LIGE CONLEY is featured in this two-reel Mermaid comedy which was written and directed by Norman Taurog and a very good brand of entertainment has been furnished. Most all the action during the first part of the picture takes place in a large ice plant—and where is there a better place to indulge in some slapstick? In the latter half, an elaborate auto-polo contest is staged with a flock of wild flivvers careening madly over the field. Conley's supporting cast is very good.

The Cast

Lige Conley, Estelle Bradley, Glen Cavender, Jack Lloyd and Charles Meekin.

The Story.—The son of the proprietor of a big ice business has just returned from an exploring expedition around the plant in search of a warm spot when his father appears with a friends who manufacturers auto polos. The latter's daughter and her suitor make up the balance of the party. Lige, the ice man's son is instantly smitten with the daughter of the auto manufacturer and immediately proceeds to show her suitor what a slippery place an ice plant can be. The suitor shows up very badly in the slapstick that follows and the daughter voices the opinion that she would like to have Lige play on her father's team at that afternoon's polo game. This remark does not please the suitor and he asks her for the last time to marry him. On her refusal, he decides to play on the opposite side in order to take out his wrath on Lige. An exciting game follows and after many a tumble and narrow escape from the pursuit of his enemy, Lige emerges a hero and wins the fair lady's hand.

Summary.—An amusing comedy featuring Lige Conley in an exciting auto-polo game.

"Montana of the Ranges"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THERE is some fairly good material in this western which features Josie Sedgwick, though the story is the same hackneyed type about which all action in these two-reelers seems to be woven. There is the pampered girl from the east brought to the entirely wrong environment of the west and as usual falling in love with the head of the outfit of rustlers. There is the forewoman of the ranch who outwits, outfights and captures the rustlers and the triumphant finish in which justice is accomplished.

The steel-eyed Miss Sedgwick is just as effective as usual in a role of this kind. There is no denying she is a splendid type for this kind of story and she is a skilled horsewoman. There is some fast action in this tale.

The Story. Ruth Spear, an attractive girl from the east is the owner of the Spearhead ranch, which is run by Montana Morgan, her guardian, a hard riding girl of the west. Ruth is enamoured of Mel Bromwell, head of the band of rustlers. Montana, likewise, is enamoured of Dave Sinclair, who suffers a broken leg in a desperate encounter with the rustlers. He is nursed back to health by Montana. Bromwell sends two of his henchmen to bring Ruth to him so that they might be married. Sinclair attempts to resist them, but fails and the girl accompanies them to the villain's hut. Montana is told of the affair on her return and gives chase. After a stiff fight she is overcome, but is rescued by the posse which follows. The rustlers are taken in time to avert the marriage and Montana accepts the proposal of Dave.

Summary. While the story is somewhat hackneyed there is some exciting action and some clever riding by Miss Sedgwick. The picture should go fairly well where the short western is approved.

"Mother Goose Movies"

(Educational—One Reel)

LYMAN H. HOWE'S Hodge Podge which includes "some sense and some nonsense" offers a variety of interesting and instructive subjects that always make pleasing entertainment for old or young. The kids will particularly enjoy the manner in which the familiar characters of Mother Goose respond to the old woman's orders. With her broomstick, she reviews the different subjects. First is shown the Great Wall of China—erected in the fourteenth century. Next, the Secretary Bird which demonstrates its method of exterminating a snake—and the similar treatment accorded a nineteen foot reptile by natives of British Guiana. Following this there is a scene of a party making the ascent of Mount Assiniboine. Other scenes show where the elephant is used for a truck—and a study of his salt water prototype—the sea-elephant. After this appears a seventy-one year old Philippine native who after weathering the domestic storms provided by fourteen wives, takes unto himself a bride of eighteen years. This about concludes the reel.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Pathe Review No. 4"

(One Reel)

"WORKERS UNDER EARTH" is the first interesting subject of this review and shows the intricate subway system that ants build in their homes. The "Magic Eye" is used to good effect here for the labors of these remarkable little insects stands out plainly. The Herculean task of moving a matchstick—many times their size—is most interesting.

Next comes "The Harvest Fleet" in the great Western wheat fields where reaping time scenes show the vast progress made possible by modern machinery. Extra wide swaths are cut by this particular machine and the stalks are bundled and tied by the same apparatus.

Scenes of Rutgers College in Pathecolor complete the reel. They include the students' "hat fight" and many interesting views of one of the oldest schools in the country.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

The Sagebrush Lady (Chesterfield M. P. Corp.—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

REGULATION Western, plot not startlingly original, but offers good entertainment of its kind, snaps over the thrills with plenty of force and vim, slides easily into the romantic groove, attains happy climax and should prove likely box office asset for houses catering to lovers of open-air, adventure films. Also offers timely comedy relief that balances the melodramatic trend nicely, Eddie Barry being mainly responsible for the funny stuff and getting his gags across well. Eileen Sedgwick, a good-looking, piquant heroine type, rides with fine dash and abandon, has considerable dramatic talent and acquits herself creditably all through in the role of Paula Loring. Jack Richardson is the unfeeling villain, Tom Doyle, and makes that gent so antagonistically repulsive that he stands out as the limit in rough-neck portrayal. Others in the cast render capable support.

THEME. Western Melodrama. Government Agent Hayden visits Paula Loring's ranch in disguise to capture cattle-rustlers, she saves him from lynching, he wins her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Quick action, thrills, Eileen Sedgwick's work in heroine role. Lynching party and attempted kidnapping scenes. Comedy touches.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as lively Westerner, play up riding feats, fights and humorous values. Feature Eileen Sedgwick. Stress romantic developments.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for houses where Western melo is in demand.

SUMMARY. Brisk Western melodrama. Lives up to regulation standard for pictures of this kind in point of thrills, romance and riding feats. Has good comedy interpolations. Star attractive and pleasing actress. Support is adequate.

THE CAST

Paula Loring.....	Eileen Sedgwick
Doyle's Foreman.....	Bernie Corbett
Tom Doyle.....	Jack Richardson
Harmony Hayden.....	Eddie Barry
Sheriff Martin.....	Bill Steele

Author, Carle Cooly. Director, Horace Davey.

SYNOPSIS. Henry Hayden, Government Agent, comes in disguise to check operation of cattle-rustlers around Paula Loring's ranch. His identity is unsuspected by the natives. Tom Doyle, neighboring ranchman schemes to marry Paula. Latter saves Hayden from lynchers, when he is suspected of being a holdup man by telling them he is her fiance. Tom Doyle's foreman is foiled by Hayden in an attempt to kidnap Paula. Having broken up the gang, Hayden remains as Paula's husband.

The Sagebrush Lady (Kerman) PRESS NOTICE

EILEEN SEDGWICK, the only Western feminine star now heading her own company, will make her local screen debut at the _____ Theatre on _____ in "The Sagebrush Lady" a dashing melodrama and romance of the "great open spaces."

The story deals with the adventures of a Government Agent who visits Paula Loring's ranch in disguise, with the object of running down some cattle-rustlers, falls in love with the girl, is saved by her from lynchers who suspect him of being a bandit, through Paula swearing that he is her prospective husband.

A picture full of thrills and fast action, with bright comedy relief. Eddie Barry as the hero and a brilliant supporting cast.

CATCH LINES

Eileen Sedgwick, one of the screen's most alluring figures on horseback, a fascinating heroine!

Dance Madness (Metro-Goldwyn—6393 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

ARTISTICALLY this production ranks high. It is beautiful with dazzlingly attractive interiors and Claire Windsor and Hedda Hopper are sights warranted to charm the female eye in gorgeous creations of the dressmaker's art. As to the story, it consists mostly of farce comedy of the bedroom variety and not particularly original at that, resorting to the old idea of a wife and woman with whom her husband is infatuated joining forces to teach the philandering gent a lesson; wife successfully substituting her person for that of the masked siren. It's sufficiently suggestive at times, though nothing really offensive develops, offers fair enough entertainment for a certain type of audience, but won't suit exhibitors catering strictly to family trade. Conrad Nagel is miscast as the husband, a role demanding a comedian, which Nagel isn't by a long shot. The feminine leads are satisfactory; support and photography O. K.

THEME. Wife gets even with flirtatious husband by successfully substituting for masked dancer with whom he is infatuated. They are finally reconciled.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Elaborate settings, fine photography. Attractive gowns worn by Claire Windsor and Hedda Hopper. Farcical humor and surprise finish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tell women patrons about gown display. Stress idea of hubby mistaking wife for siren he adores. Feature Conrad Nagel and feminine leads.

DRAWING POWER. Not a family picture. Should win where patrons like the gay stuff.

SUMMARY. Runs to bedroom farce comedy type of picture. Has exceptionally fine settings, beautifully photographed and produced. Shows off beautiful gowns.

THE CAST

Roger Halladay.....	Conrad Nagel
May Anderson.....	Claire Windsor
Bud.....	Douglas Gilmore
Valentina.....	Hedda Hopper
Strokoff.....	Mario Carillo

Author, S. J. Kaufman. Director, Robert Z. Leonard. Photographed by John Arnold and William Daniels.

SYNOPSIS. Roger Halladay weds May Anderson, former dancer. He becomes infatuated with Valentina, masked Russian dancer. May discovers that Valentina's husband is Strokoff, who taught her dancing. The two women unite to fool Roger. May, always masked, poses to him as Valentina continuously and arranges to have Strokoff find them embracing. Roger runs away, followed by his masked charmer and finally finds her to be his own wife. They are reconciled.

Dance Madness (Metro-Goldwyn) PRESS NOTICE

CONRAD NAGEL, Claire Windsor and Hedda Hopper are the principal players in Dance Madness, a rippling farce comedy which comes to the screen of the _____ Theatre on _____. This is a remarkably beautiful production, handsomely staged, with a light, humorous plot detailing the escapades of a flirtatious husband and the effectual means his pretty wife takes to cure him.

Claire Windsor is delightful as the clever spouse, who substitutes herself for her masked rickshawer. Hedda Hopper fills val.

Douglas Gilmore and Mario Carillo appear in important roles and excellent support is provided.

CATCH LINES

A lightning courtship, but after the wedding she found their romance was all out of step.

He thought he won the masked charmer but was really making love to his own wife.

Claire Windsor, who appears in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Dance Madness."

The Danger Girl

(Producers Distributing Corp.—5660 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

NOT THE least of this film's decidedly entertaining qualities is its ability to keep the on-lookers amused and thrilled without swinging altogether to the serious or comic side of things. While a vein of mystery and suspense is maintained from start to finish, there's always a balance-weight of comedy in evidence, and classy, high-grade comedy at that, without a suspicion of slapstick. In fact, we cannot remember a crook melo where humorous relief went hand-in-hand, so to speak, with exciting developments to such an extent. The net result is mighty good entertainment that should rap the box office target right in the bullseye. Priscilla Dean makes a great impression as the baffling heroine, whose identity and purposes remain a secret clear up to the finale, and John Bowers is admirable in the role of Wilson Travers. They are well supported, clever acting and direction helping to make the feature's bizzare plot oddly interesting.

THEME. Crook Comedy Melodrama. Thieves' plot to obtain jewels is foiled by girl who aids police and is finally won by owner of gems.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Skilled weaving of comedy with dramatic effects. Brisk action, suspense, thrills. Work of Miss Dean and Bowers. Big surprise climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tell patrons here is a crook melo with a mystery they can't penetrate until finish. Boost story's fun and breathless suspense. Feature leads.

DRAWING POWER. Looks like a sure money-maker for any house.

SUMMARY. Comedy and melodrama are so cleverly mixed in this picture of crook doings, and the mystery angle so skillfully developed, that it keeps folks guessing and thrilled to the marrow all the way through. Great entertainment, sure winner!

THE CAST

Fighting Fate

(Rayart Pictures—4991 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

GOOD comedy drama with prizefight settings and contests that look like the real thing. A great card for the sporting contingent, and, as feminine fight patrons are pretty numerous nowadays, the chances are that it will carry a like appeal for the women folks. While there is swatting in plenty, not all the picture's interest lies in the swinging of pulverizing rights and lefts. There's a snappy assortment of comedy gags that light up things considerably and a love affair from which the hero emerges as triumphantly as he does in the ring. All well put together and running smoothly without a hitch in the action. Billy Sullivan shows up fine as the young chap who refuses to stay licked and gets even for the foul treatment he sustained by dropping his erstwhile conqueror for the ten-count and winning the championship. Nancy Deever, a pleasing, piquant heroine. Johnny Sinclair gets the laughs in a comic role. Photography, direction, OK.

THEME. Comedy Drama. Young boxer defeated by foul means in bout with champion, battles way back to recognition, wins championship title and pretty girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Billy Sullivan's good work in lead. Sinclair's comedy. Realistic glove fights. Well maintained love interest. Smart action.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Go after the sporting crowd strong. Bill as true-to-life prizefight picture, with love interest that will please family trade. Feature star.

DRAWING POWER. Excellent attraction for neighborhood, smaller houses and towns.

SUMMARY. A bright comedy drama with realistic prize ring settings. Has romantic as well as physical thrill and comedy lure. Well acted and directed. Photography first-chop, action fast, continuity even, builds up to slashing climax.

THE CAST

Damon Squires.....Billy Sullivan
Pythias.....Johnny Sinclair
Sally O'Leary.....Nancy Deever
Danny O'Leary.....Tom MacQuire
Cyclone Winters.....Phil Salvadore
George Morgan.....William Buckley

Authors, Henry Robert Symonds and John Wesley Grey. Director, Albert Rogell. Photographed by Lyman Broening.

SYNOPSIS. Damon Squires, aspiring lightweight boxer, while broke in a small town, resents an insult to Sally O'Leary by a chap whom he knocks down. The latter turns out to be champion Cyclone Winters. Squires is matched with him, doped by a bribed trainer and loses. Sally, whose father runs a restaurant, still has faith in her hero. Squires obtains proof of having been double-crossed. In second fight he knocks Winters out, winning championship and Sally.

The Lady From Hell

(Associated Exhibitors—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

A COMBINATION of western melodrama and Scottish romance is offered in this fast-moving Stuart Paton production. While Blanche Sweet is supposed to be the star, it is really Roy Stewart who does the best work, as the former has a rather minor role, while the latter is before the camera almost continuously. The story opens in the west, Stewart masquerading as ranch foreman, in reality is a member of the Scottish nobility. He also served in "The Ladies From Hell," the Highland troops. Stewart is too soon called upon to snap into things in protecting a mother and child from a brute who owns the ranch. Later the action switches overseas and we meet Miss Sweet who becomes Stewart's bride at the same time as he wins an estate. There are some good comedy moments introduced by a quartette of cowboys. The climax has suspense as Stewart's little pal, Billy Boy is found and is taken on a wild drive to save the star from the gallows.

THEME. Romantic melodrama laid in the West and Scotland and dealing with the adventures of a "Lady from Hell," in winning a bride, and estate.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Sequence where son fatally wounds father. Kidnapping of heroine, wedding to her real sweetheart. The climax when boy saves Stewart from gallows. Scenic backgrounds.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Have a man dress in full Scottish regalia and parade the streets with appropriate advertising. Tie up with local Scottish societies.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for patrons who like action drama.

SUMMARY. The stars are your best bet in this one, which shapes up as a fairly diverting program picture which is attractively mounted and has some good acting interspersed.

THE CAST

The Phantom of the Forest

(Lumas Film Corp.—5800 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS is a dog picture warranted not only to appeal to lovers of the canine race, but to movie fans in general. For it's undoubtedly good audience material, that isn't handicapped by a suggestion of having been laboriously built up to exploit the four-footed star, "Thunder," a too familiar fault in films of this type. Here, the dog fits into the narrative nicely, and is, of course, the outstanding figure, but the story itself being well constructed, alive with melodramatic force, and offering a pretty romance between two of the human characters holds unflinching interest to the end. There's a forest fire scene of such vivid realism that you actually seem to hear the flames crackle, and Thunder's rescue of the child and dash through fire and water makes 'em all gasp. Thunder also has a romance with White Fawn, a magnificent white police pup, which, like the love affair of the mere humans, terminates happily.

THEME. Melodrama, with dog star. Treats of conspirators' attempts to cheat girl out of land, and how they are foiled by her lover and dog Thunder.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Impressive outdoor settings. Views of giant redwoods in Santa Cruz Reservation. Thunder's work. The romance. Big forest fire scene.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost Thunder, but make it plain this is not only a great dog picture, but a good human interest melo. Feature Betty Francisco.

DRAWING POWER. If your patrons are strong on dog films, this should be a winner.

SUMMARY. Blends interest in wonderfully clever dog and that of melodramatic and romantic elements successfully. Well directed, acted, offers stunning views. Natural settings of Government Big Tree Reservation at Santa Cruz, wonderful!

THE CAST

The Grand Duchess and the Waiter

(Paramount—6314 Feet)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

MALCOLM St. Clair has added another success to his growing list of worthwhile picture plays. He has taken Alfred Savoir's sophisticated stage comedy and translated it into screen form in such a way that theatregoers everywhere are going to enjoy it immensely. The action runs along smoothly, thanks to good scenario work by Pierre Collings. It would be a difficult matter to find two players more ideally fitted for the title roles than Florence Vidor and Adolphe Menjou; the former's work as Duchess Zenia compares with the finest things she has contributed to the screen. Menjou, as the millionaire turfman masquerading as a waiter so that he may be near the lady of his heart, plays with a smoothness and subtlety that is wholly delightful; the supporting cast has been well chosen, with the exception of Dot Farley, who isn't suited for aristocratic roles such as given her here.

THEME. French fare in which a wealthy philanderer assumes the role of a waiter so that he can woo and win a haughty, but warm hearted duchess.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Opening scenes in theatres, entrance of Menjou in waiter's garb. The scene in which royal attendants find the duchess in the "waiter's" arms. Miss Vidor's gowns. Characterizations contributed by Miss Vidor and Menjou.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Menjou and Miss Vidor. Photos of Miss Vidor used in tie-ups with jewelry stores, beauty parlors, style shops, showing her with brilliant jewels, her new boyish bob and her Parisian gowns.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for any theatre. Should please everyone.

SUMMARY. There's real entertainment in this one. Well directed, admirably acted and beautifully mounted, it is easily one of the best pictures of the new season. You owe it to your patrons to show it.

THE CAST

Author, Alfred Savoir. Directed by Malcolm St Clair.

SYNOPSIS. Grand Duchess Zenia, Russian refugee in Paris, is seen by Albert Durant, millionaire turfman, who is infatuated with her. He takes rooms in the duchess' hotel and in order to be near her, poses as a waiter, at which he is a miserable failure. Zenia, angered with him, has him appointed to her personal staff. Albert is made to do menial work. Eventually Albert discloses his identity and proclaims his love.

The Grand Duchess and the Waiter (Paramount) PRESS NOTICE

ALFRÉD SAVOIR'S stage hit, "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter," will be the screen attraction at the _____ Theatre, commencing _____. Adolphe Menjou and Florence Vidor are in the principal roles. This trio, assisted by an excellent supporting cast, have made of the clever French comedy a highly artistic and decidedly entertaining photoplay. Menjou is at his best, while Miss Vidor in startling French gowns and a new Parisian bob, is a feast for the eye in the role of Zenia, the grand duchess. The plot tells of a wealthy turfman, who infatuated with a duchess impersonates a waiter so that he will be able to woo her. He succeeds and she becomes his wife.

CATCH LINES

Relating the exploits of a rich boulevardier who masquerades as a waiter in order to make love to the grand duchess who has caught his fancy. A snappy love-cocktail with a real parisian flavor.

Nell Gwyn

(British National—Nine Reels)

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

NELL GWYN, who charmed the heart of a king and a nation, comes to life again, this time on the screen, in what is certainly the best English production which this reviewer has yet seen. It has life, it has sparkle and freshness, and the general production values are of an order comparable with those in the best Hollywood product.

Without detracting in any way from the glory due to Herbert Wilcox for the story and direction, it is only fair to say that the J. D. Williams instinct of showmanship seems to us fairly evident throughout, and that the picture can scarcely be imagined without Dorothy Gish, so neatly does the role fit her and she the role.

Miss Gish is truly magnificent in the role. She literally "has everything." A well chosen cast surrounds her. Juliette Compton is excellent as Nell's rival for the king's affections. This is a strictly first-class production and should stand on its own bottom anywhere.

THEME. Romantic comedy-drama based on the life of Nell Gwyn, favorite of Charles II during the Restoration.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Miss Gish's breathtaking performance. Competent work by other members of cast. Excellent atmosphere in settings, photography and details. Well-knit construction of story and continuity.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Miss Gish. Advertise as one of the most fascinating romances in history, filmed amidst actual settings. Sell along romantic, heart interest angle.

DRAWING POWER. With a particularly strong appeal to feminine patrons, not to forget the men, this picture has the necessary "class" and punch to put it across anywhere, suitably backed up with proper advertising.

SUMMARY. Offers a pleasing blend of romance, comedy, sentiment, daring and color, and presents Dorothy Gish in an unforgettable and incomparable screen performance.

THE CAST

Nell Gwyn.....	Dorothy Gish
King Charles II.....	Randle Ayrton
Lady Castlemaine.....	Juliette Compton
Mrs. Gwyn.....	Sidney Fairbrother
Toby Clinker.....	Judd Green
Dickon.....	Edward Sorley

From the story by Marjorie Bowen. Scenario and direction by Herbert Wilcox. Photography by Roy Overbaugh.

SYNOPSIS. Nell Gwyn is seen first as an orange girl at Old Drury theatre, London. She attracts the eye of the King and he makes her one of the players at His Majesty's theatre. She succeeds, and winning the King's affection becomes his favorite, vieing with Lady Castlemaine for his favors. Through her efforts, a palace which he is building for her is converted into a home for disabled soldiers and sailors. When his hour of death comes, he dies in her arms, with her name on his lips.

Nell Gwyn (British National) PRESS NOTICE

ONE of the most colorful and romantic comedy-dramas of many a day comes to the _____ Theatre on _____, when "Nell Gwyn," starring Dorothy Gish, opens for an engagement. This picture tells the story of pretty, witty Nell Gwyn, the favorite of King Charles II and one of the most popular actresses of her day. Her story has been celebrated in countless novels and plays, but never more brilliantly, it is said, than in this photoplay.

Miss Gish journeyed to England especially for this picture, and all details of costuming, setting and so on are absolutely authentic. Miss Gish is surrounded by a splendid cast of players, including Juliette Compton, one of the favorites of the English stage.

CATCH LINES

Dorothy Gish in her greatest role—that of a lovable madcap who won the heart of a King and a nation.

Fifth Avenue

(Producers Distributing Corp.—5503 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AS might be expected from a Robert G. Vignola production, this picture fairly glows with ornate settings and fine backgrounds, and from the artistic viewpoint leaves nothing to be desired. As suggested by the title, the atmosphere is one of glamorous luxury, with a neat contrast obtained by a sudden switch to Bohemian quarters in Washington Square, and there's a gorgeous gown display that is bound to win admiration from women patrons. The story has a good deal of heart appeal, with its "little-girl-in-a-great city" angle that always awakens fan sympathy, in this case strengthened and maintained by the excellent emotional acting of Marguerite De La Motte as the innocent heroine. Allan Forrest is an extremely likable hero, Louise Dresser convincing as the commercially astute Mrs. Kemp; William V. Mong gives a great performance as old Heffner and the support is admirable. A good audience feature, with likely box office possibilities.

THEME. Drama. Southern girl is inveigled into New York house of questionable character, weds happily after resort-owner clears her reputation.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Fine photography, luxurious settings, handsome interiors, brilliant gown display. Good direction, clever development of heart interest.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up title. Stress contrast between society and Bohemian atmosphere. Boost style show. Bill as colorful drama with powerful love story.

DRAWING POWER. Should please general public. Suitable for all theatres.

SUMMARY. A Robert Vignola production with magnificent settings and absorbing romance. Fifth Avenue society backgrounds furnish sharp contrast with humble homes of Washington Square. Offers alluring gown display for feminine fans.

Ship of Souls

(Associated Exhibitors—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

CHARLES MILLER who presided at the small end of the megaphone and those associated with him in production, have made a very realistic screen version of this Emerson Hough novel of romance and adventure in the north country. To begin with the backgrounds are realistic throughout, especially the exteriors of which there are a number of fine, snow-covered mountain shots. The story has many angles of appeal—there are heart interest, thrills galore, love scenes and now and then a flash of comedy. There is some exceptionally good acting with Bert Lytell and Lillian Rich carrying off the honors. There is a tense battle between some renegade trappers and the hero, while the sequence showing how radio is used to solve the hero's marital troubles and unite him with his true love in the northland, carries a good punch. The supporting cast has been well selected with Cyril Chadwick registering his usual good brand of villainy.

THEME. Drama romance of snow wastes, hero after being ruined in Wall street and deserted by his wife, finds a bride after much adventure.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The meeting between Barnes and Christine in home of mad factor. Wedding of Christine and Barnes. Fight with renegade trappers.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tieup with the book. Boost names of stars. Emphasize fact this is by author of "Covered Wagon," and "North of 36." Go strong on radio tie-ups with photos from picture.

DRAWING POWER. Noted author and well known "names" will bring 'em in.

SUMMARY. Exhibitors with a clientele that likes stories of the snow country, up where they "always get their man," will find this one satisfactory. You also have Bert Lytell and Lillian Rich to help put it over.

PRESS NOTICE

BERT LYTELL, Lillian Rich and an all-star cast will appear on the ——— screen, commencing ——— in "Ship of Souls." The story is a drama of love, hate and intrigue in the great waste places of the north country, where the hero goes to seek vengeance and a fine, pure love. The obstacles which eventually prevent the consummation of this romance are finally overcome, the heroine is won and the villain frustrated.

In the supporting cast are Earl Metcalf, Russell Simpson, Inez Seabury, Jean Perry, Cyril Chadwick and others. The production has been given a realistic mounting, the company having gone into the Canadian north-west for correct snow locations.

The First Year

(Fox—6038 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

BRIGHT, snappily amusing, cleverly directed and brilliantly acted, this screen adaptation of Frank Craven's stage play registers as a domestic comedy drama of unusual merit that should prove a box office winner wherever it is shown. You seldom see a comedy so rich in human interest as this is, simply because it stacks up a page from real life with characters who behave and look like folks in everyday existence and the humor has a genuine ring, straight stuff all the way through, with only one touch of slapstick just at the finale. The trials and misunderstandings of the young couple during matrimony's initial stages are wrought into a delightful story that has unfailing audience appeal. Matt Moore is immense as the harassed hubby, Katharine Perry refreshingly natural in the wife role, Margaret Livingston's portrayal of the ex-show girl and present railroad executive's wife excellent, and especial credit should be given Carolynne Snowden's perfect characterization of the "dumb" colored maid.

THEME. Comedy. Treats of young married pairs' troubles. Wife accidentally comes near wrecking hubby's big business deal, goes to mother, but they are reconciled.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Fine direction, smooth action, good acting. Human appeal and splendid comedy values. Dinner scenes, Matt Moore's jag. Climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Street stunt with Ford Sedan like one in film, bridal occupants, carrying "Just Married" sign. Bill as crackerjack domestic comedy.

DRAWING POWER. A banner attraction for any house, big or little.

SUMMARY. Has great audience appeal, chockful of laughs and human interest lure. A comedy that boosts itself, for spectators will pass the tip along to friends.

Queen O' Diamonds

(F. B. O.—5129 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE MEMBERS of that large fan contingent who delight in straight melodrama with recurrent thrills and rapid action should be well pleased in following the headlong plunges of Evelyn Brent's latest vehicle. Stolen jewels, crooks of high and low degree, theatrical and underworld atmosphere, are the main plot ingredients, with a bit of sentimental glamor and romantic interest, the whole forming an attraction which will do good business wherever this type of picture and the star are popular. Although complications increase as the feature progresses, director Chester Withey has managed to keep the main track of the narrative clear, its continuity is smooth and the situations neatly built up to a good climax. Miss Brent puts an amazing amount of energy into her portrayals of the chorus girl heroine and star, handles the emotional phases effectively and is an alluring personality all through the dual role. Support satisfactory.

THEME. Melodrama. Jerry Lyon, chorus girl, is cajoled by crooks into impersonating Broadway star she resembles, is mixed up in diamond theft, gets clear, weds man she loves.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene where Jerry innocently comes into possession of diamonds. Development of love affair. Police raid at finish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tieup on window display with jewelry stores. Bill as melo with Broadway theatrical and underworld atmosphere. Feature Evelyn Brent.

DRAWING POWER. Good wherever red-hot melodrama is in demand.

SUMMARY. Well up to mark of Miss Brent's best pictures. Fast melodrama, dazzling backgrounds, crook stuff well done. Has audience appeal.

EVELYN BRENT in "Queen O' Diamonds" a dazzling combination of crook melodrama and Broadway show world life, will be the chief screen attraction at the _____ Theatre on _____.

The star appears in a dual role, that of a chorus girl and a leading lady whom she resembles and impersonates innocently at the behest of a gang of dangerous crooks, coming into the possession of stolen diamonds, and being involved in a medley of wild adventures, out of which she emerges triumphantly and weds the man she loves.

A picture filled with tense, electric thrills. Miss Brent gives a splendid performance, supported by Theodore Von Eltz, Le Roy Phillips and others.

The Reckless Lady

(First National—7336 Feet)

JUST an average picture! It isn't likely to create any sensation as a box office proposition, nor, on the other hand, register a flop. A sort of "betwixt and between" film offering mildly interesting entertainment, which will probably draw customers on account of its all-star cast. Belle Bennett and Lois Moran, as gambling mother and innocent daughter, are individually appealing, but not even their decidedly excellent work outweighs the handicap of an artificial, unconvincing story. Most of the dramatic sequences are of a "dud" nature—shells that drop heavily but don't explode. There is some suspense generated in the last reel, with the debonair seducer lurking in a back room and threatening to spoil the happiness of Lois and her lad, as well as the elder couple. Lowell Sherman does well enough as the heart-breaker, except that a twelve year jump in time shows him as youthful as at the start. Support and photography O. K.

THEME. Drama. Attentions of gay Russian separates Colonel Fleming and wife. Years later Russian is foiled in attempt to win their daughter. Flemings are reunited.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Acting of Belle Bennett and Lois Moran. Attractive interiors, good photography. Scene where Colonel Fleming lets villain go.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Cast names are your best bet, play 'em up strong. Bill as heart interest drama, stress mother love and sacrifice idea.

DRAWING POWER. Should satisfy as program attraction.

SUMMARY. Will serve to amuse patrons of a not too critical turn. Most of the dramatic situations fail to "get the punch over." Works up suspense pretty well in finale. All star cast has exhibition value. Miss Bennett and Lois Moran best.

THE CAST

Author, Sir Phillip Gibbs. Director, Howard Higgin.

SYNOPSIS. Attentions of Boris, a Russian, to Mrs. Fleming results in her husband, Colonel Fleming, leaving her. The wife retains the baby Sylvia. Years later Mrs. Fleming is gambling at Monte Carlo. Boris reappears and makes love to Sylvia. Ralph Hillier, American, is another suitor. Mrs. Fleming tries to commit suicide but is saved by Ralph and her husband. The Colonel pursues Boris, who leaps over a cliff. The elder couple are reunited. Sylvia accepts Ralph.

THE RECKLESS LADY. (1st National)

PRESS NOTICE

A HEART drama of absorbing interest, "The Reckless Lady," with an all-star cast will be shown on the screen of the Theatre on

It is a quadruple love story, with a mother-love angle of intense pathos, beautifully photographed and cleverly acted.

Colonel Fleming leaves his wife, convinced that she has given her heart to Boris, a Russian. Mrs. Fleming retains her baby Sylvia. Years later, when she has become a reckless player at Monte Carlo, Boris reappears and tries to get the daughter into his clutches. A startling surprise climax is attained.

Belle Bennett, Lois Moran, James Kirkwood, Lowell Sherman, Ben Lyon are featured, with several other players of note in support.

Western Pluck

(Universal—4207 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AN average Westerner, follows the usual plot formula, should hold its own at the box office as a vigorous thriller, for the action rattles along at a merry pace; there are several fights put over in realistic fashion, with Art Acord registering as an energetic, two-fisted hero, equally handy with horse or gun, nor is the love interest neglected. Art's steed, "Darkie" is an alluringly sagacious animal who deserves especial mention for his tricky ways and stacks up well with the leading equine stars of his profession. The scene where Acord rides to the rescue of the runaway stage coach and brings the galloping horses to a halt is uncommonly well done. Director Travers Vale has wisely leavened the melodramatic swing of the story with snappy comedy jolts, the continuity is even and the situation craftily built up to a sensational climax. Marceline Day is a pretty and vivacious heroine; support adequate; photography O. K.

THEME. Western melodrama. Cowpuncher Arizona Allen halts a runaway stage coach, falls in love with girl passenger, is later instrumental in saving her wild brother when the latter is falsely accused of robbery, and wins her love.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Runaway stage episode. Fight between hero and saloon proprietor. The riding feats, comedy relief, romance, fast action.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as sensational Westerner with good love story and great riding and scrapping stuff. Feature Art Acord and Marceline Day.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. as program attraction. Will please lovers of Western melo.

SUMMARY. Has plenty of punch and pep, good average Westerner. Well photographed and acted. Star shows up well in riding and scrapping situations.

SYNOPSIS. Cowpuncher Arizona Allen witnesses stage runaway when horses flee from shot fired by Rowdy Dyer, who thus greeting his sister Clare, a passenger, is mistaken for a bandit. Allen stops the horses and promises Clare to look after her wild brother. Later the stage is really held up and Rowdy suspected. Circumstantial evidence is against him, but Allen fights for him all through and when Rowdy's innocence is proved, wins his sister.

Regional News from Correspondents

FRED GLASS of the Temple and Star Theatre, McCook, Nebr., was among the exhibitors visiting here during the week.

C. R. Malm and J. H. Olson are new salesmen for Associated Exhibitors. They split the Nebraska, South Dakota and Iowa territory between them.

Charles W. Taylor is the new manager of Associated Exhibitors, coming from Warner Brothers in Buffalo. Mr. Taylor is well at home in Omaha. He came here with the General Film Company in 1923, was with Select Pictures Corporation from 1917 to 1921 and then became branch manager for Pathe. He has now been in the East a few years. James Shea, former Associated manager, is with Warner Brothers here.

The Educational exchange has been moved from 1511 Chicago street to the Film building. They needed more room than they had.

A large number of theaters have changed hands in the Omaha territory in the last few weeks. Among Nebraska changes are the following sales: Rialto, Litchfield, sold by M. Daniels to M. M. Floos; Auditorium, Red Cloud, from E. C. Preston to Al Beams; Jewel, Havelock, from Karnes & McLaughlin to Roy Hedrick; Rialto, Cozad, from Armstrong & St. John to William Bolan; Moon, Spencer, from C. H. Lyman to M. Gehlsen; Star, Maxwell, from C. H. Kuhns to C. S. Everly.

The Rialto Theater had a novel presentation act this week, permitting the audience to see backstage. Manager Harry Watts and Entertainer "Happy" Monk Watson put on "The Rehearsal."

Work is expected to start about March 1 on the new theater for George Monroe on the corner of Fifty-fifth street and Military avenue. It will cost $100,000.

Albert Danke, Producers Distributing Corporation manager, covered his Iowa territory the last few days.

James Rogers is back as manager of the Enterprise office, taking the place of Tal Richards as exchange manager. Mr. Rogers was transferred to St. Louis a few months ago.

New York and New Jersey

"MIKE" GLYNNE, Long Island's theatre magnate, has abandoned his previously announced plans to rebuild the Carlton Opera House at Bayshore, with the purchase of a big plot on Merrick Road for the erection of a large theatre, office building with store front. The plot is 115 feet by 350 feet and the theatre will have a seating capacity of 2500. The theatre will have a combination policy of vaudeville and motion pictures. The Carlton Opera House property was added to the Glynne Long Island chain in a recent expansion of the infant circuit.

Included in the list published by the Pathe Sun of the different members of the Pathe organization who received Gold Service Medals as a tribute to loyalty and length of service, a number of executives and salesmen of the New York branch stand out brilliantly. Milton Kronacher, Max Fellerman and Max Westeebe are all credited with nine years of service. William Raynor, Branch Manager, has eight years of toil chalked up beside his name while Bert Sanford and Irving Wormser have the same number of years to their credit. Charlie Stombaugh, the Newark branch manager and John Dacey, Assistant Manager of the New York Branch, have served Pathe for seven years. Leon Medem, formerly of the Albany Branch and now doing special work, has been with the company for a five year period. Floyd Vogt, of Newark also has five years to his credit.

Invitation cards reading "On or about February 1st, 1926, we will remove our business to larger and more centrally located quarters at 1560 Broadway," have been issued by Joe Hornstein, of Howells Cine Equipment Company. According to a report, Saturday, January 30th, is the official opening. It will be well to arrive early in order to avoid the rush, if the prophecies made by Dave Solomon concerning the event are to be taken seriously.

Among the number of changes that have recently been made in the Associated Exhibitors' organization throughout the States, is one that will be of local interest. Phil Meyer, who in the past has had charge of the New York sales, will, in addition, have supervision over the New Jersey territory of this zone.

A special meeting will be held by the Brooklyn M.P.T.O. at the Hotel Astor on Saturday, February 6th for the purpose of electing officers for the coming year, according to a statement by Secretary Phillips of the Brooklyn organization. Following this meeting at the Astor, the installation dinner and dance will take place at the Bossert Hotel in downtown Brooklyn. Those who still desire tickets for this affair, are urged by Mr. Phillips to immediately proclaim the fact as the supply is almost exhausted.

Joe Mann, who will be remembered as having gone to Florida several months ago to make a fortune in real estate, is back at his old position again as manager of the Pastime Theatre at 2nd Avenue and 54th Street, New York City. According to Joe, while he and his associates made no sensational developments, some good, sound investments were placed.

The American Theatre, Fort Hamilton Parkway, Brooklyn, has recently changed hands. Joe Finger was the old owner and the present proprietors are a couple of newcomers in the business. Bobby Binckoff will continue as manager of the American. Mr. Finger still retains a theatre over on Staten Island.

Up at the Fox exchange in the Capitol Theatre Building, the men are getting ready to tackle the latest sales drive to be known as "Jimmie Grainger Month." At the close of the contest, thirty salesmen who have made the best showing will participate in the prize money.

Joe Lee, of the Fox-Jersey branch, is one of the latest to fall for a radio. Joe should be able to pull in plenty of DX at the time he reaches home.

Ed Schnitzer, also of the Fox organization, is nursing an infected finger which is not seriously interfering with his ability to fill out contracts. With such a capable nurse as Harry Buxbaum's secretary, Miss Robinson, prescribing for the ailment, Mr. Schnitzer's finger will soon be well.

According to a report, the Capitol Theatre at Millburn, N. J., will hold its opening on February 10th.

Further proof that a distributor must have good product in order to exist these days, is evidenced by the recent activity of W. Frank who has recently taken over two Lee-Bradford features for distribution in this zone. One is adapted from a well known story by H. Rider Haggard. Frank is well known and liked among the local exhibitors and his new departure in policy promises to establish him in a still stronger position.

Henry Mestrum, that popular, quiet mannered individual who installs "spots" and other projection accessories around town, is responsible for the statement that local exhibitors are constantly striving to improve their lighting and projection. Asked where Mr. Mestrum had recently installed some of his "spots," his reply was "most all of them."

According to report, Manager O'Neill who was formerly with the Keeney Enterprises has struck out for himself by purchasing the Franklin Theatre, Astoria, L. I.

L. Schwab, enterprising supply dealer from Philadelphia, is spending a few days in New York City.

Another prominent manufacturer of accessories who has recently been in town, is J. McAuley of the Peerless Arc Lamp Company. Mr. McAuley and Joe Horstein have been talking over distribution matters pertaining to this territory.

The entire Fox Sales organization which is at present established in temporary headquarters on the fourth floor of the Capitol Theatre Building, will soon be able to move to their new quarters on 44th Street. According to report, the new building is fast nearing completion.

Paul Huhn, Treasurer of Tennek Film Corporation.

Chicago

AMONG the important theatres scheduled for early openings, are Balaban & Katz great new loop theatre, the Oriental, on Randolph Street; their Howard Theatre on Howard Avenue; Ascher Brothers' Colony theatre at 59th and Kedzie and their Drake on Montrose Avenue; Marks Brothers' big house on Sheridan near Devon, which has not yet been named; Andrew Karzas' North Center Theatre, which is located on Robey near Montrose; Lubliner & Trinz's Tower Theatre on East 63rd Street, and Schoenstadt & Sons' Piccadilly Theatre in Hyde Park.

A number of promotions and new assignments of managers, assistant managers and treasurers have recently been made by Balaban & Katz, and the transfers were completed on January 25th. E. T. Leaper becomes assistant to the supervisor of theatre management, and following now are the managers and staffs of the principal B and K Chicago houses: Chicago Theatre, Walter Immerman, manager; E. O'Donnell, first assistant manager; M. E. Zetterholm, second assistant manager; and Harry Potter, treasurer; Tivoli Theatre, L. H. Dally, manager; R. L. Davis, assistant manager; and J. B. Casey, treasurer.

Uptown Theatre, Miles Cannon, manager; L. A. Shead, first assistant manager; H. De Ronchi, second assistant manager; and C. D. Krepps, Jr., treasurer; Central Park Theatre, Max Turner, manager; and Frank Chamski, assistant manager; Roosevelt Theatre, A. Berg, manager; J. G. Sauve, assistant manager; and Carl M. Eggers, treasurer; and McVickers Theatre, G. R. Fouche, manager; Roy Bruder, assistant manager; and E. Doob, treasurer.

Ted Myers is back with Pathe's Chicago exchange and has been assigned to south side territory. Mr. Myers for the past two years, has been stationed in St. Louis and Omaha, in both of which cities he had the title of branch manager.

Frank Schaefer of the Crystal Theatre, is to leave some time during the next month for Arizona, where he is taking Mrs. Schaefer on account of ill health. According to present plans Mr. Schaefer will be gone for about six weeks as he does not want to bring Mrs. Schaefer back to this city before the weather moderates.

Manager Johnnie Mednikow of Associated Exhibitors, has added two salesmen to his force. They are John McFarlane, who has been assigned to Illinois territory, and Bob Slayback, who will cover suburban territory.

Distict Manager Fred Aiken is back at his headquarters at Pathe exchange after a two weeks trip which included visits to Omaha, Des Moines, Iowa and other exchanges.

Exchange Manager Gillick is planning to leave for New York about February 15th, where he will spend a week at the home office.

Three more houses have become affiliated with the American Theatre Circuit, according to Joe Hopp. They include Tom Watson's Superba at Freeport; Mrs. Gracy's Gem Theatre at Crystal Lake; and Miss Ethel Barter's Family Theatre at Mount Carroll.

Earl Johnson of the Auditorium Theatre, Berwyn, generally known as the "Swedish Ambassador," was credited with a 128 foot jump at the recent meet of the Norge Ski Club at Cary, Illinois. On his second jump, Mr. Johnson's skis became tangled up and he slid for several hundred feet in a sitting posture, and was caught by the news reel.

The theatre at Glen Carbon, Illinois, is scheduled to open again on February 3rd.

Nathan Ascher and Ralph Kettering were in New York this week in connection with bookings for the Ascher Theatres. While in New York, Mr. Kettering will also arrange for the production of a number of Broadway plays by the Ascher Stock Company at the Chateau theatre. This theatre will pass from the control of Ascher Brothers when their lease expires next September, a burlesque circuit having negotiated a new lease.

It is announced, however, that Ascher Brothers will build a new stock company house on the north side and will also erect one on the south side. The locations for both will be announced within a few days.

Health Commissioner Bundesen formally opened what is said to be the largest and best equipped theatre play room in the United States, at Lubliner & Trinz's Harding Theatre last week. The play room is in charge of a competent trained nurse and patrons of the Harding are keeping it full to capacity.

On February 2nd I. Berkson, owner of the Roseland and Roseland State Theatres, together with M. Katz and wife, expect to leave for a three months' tour abroad which will include a visit to Jerusalem. Mr. Berkson recently left the hospital after a serious illness and believes the trip will enable him to make a complete recovery.

Manager Bill Brumberg has started two more student salesmen through the departments at Universal Exchange. They are A. Rosenblatt, who has a successful record as a New York shoe salesman and Al Fey, who has been connected with the sales force of Lyon & Healy.

On the 1st of March, Maurice Choynski, accompanied by his wife, will make his regular annual visit to Hot Springs. Another Hot Springs' visitor will be Simon Simansky of Simansky & Miller, who is scheduled to leave about February 20th.

It is reported that G. C. Gridley of the Liberty Theatre, Libertyville, will build a new theatre, store and office building. It is understood the theatre will be of seven hundred seats or over.

The Blackstone Theatre, Ezra Rhodes' big South Bend house, has inaugurated a new policy, now changing programs three times a week, charging twenty-five cents admission. The former policy of the house was to change programs once or twice a week, with forty cents admission, which was raised for special attractions.

Cleveland

CONTRARY to a report recently published in these columns of Motion Picture News concerning the retirement of R. C. Steuve from the Orpheum Theatre, Canton, Ohio, we are advised that Mr. Steuve still is in active control of this theatre. The item in error was that the house had been leased to Frank Nolan of Cleveland. Mr. Nolan has recently been engaged by Mr. Steuve as the general manager of the Orpheum.

All Cleveland turned out last week to bid a personal farewell to Philip Spitalny who leaves the musical directorship of the Allen theatre after a five-year uninterrupted period. Spitalny will conduct the orchestra at Loew's State theatre in Boston. Almost every day of last week—his last in Cleveland—was given over to some affair in his honor.

David Rubinoff, talented Russian musical director comes to town to succeed Phil Spitalny in the orchestral pit at the Allen theatre. He takes his place among local directors on January 31st, the date set for the big opening program under the direction of M. H. Newman who has come here to put on what is popularly termed the "California Style" of show. Mr. Newman is building a new and enlarged stage at the Allen, and is installing new lighting effects, as well as new scenery.

Oscar Ruby, local Pathe exchange manager says that during Laugh Month his exchange has shown an increase in bookings of two-reel comedies of 20% over any previous record. The exhibitors of this territory did not get back of the Laugh Month idea to any considerable extent, nor did they, as a whole, exploit short subjects, but the exchanges state that the exhibitors used more short reels during the months and that more exhibitors used short subjects.

George A. Roberts, personal representative for J. R. Grainger was in town last week, visiting the local Fox exchange.

The Angella theatre, Cleveland, has a new name. It began the new year as the New Carlyon. Mrs. Sara Robinson continues as manager. Under the new name the house will be newly furnished throughout, and a new organ will be installed.

Homer Borger, who wears the service star for the most number of years service in the Cleveland Universal exchange, is now with Associated Exhibitors. Nine years has Borger been office manager of the local "U" office. He severed his connection with the company last week. He is succeeded by C. L. Tiejn, formerly in the Universal auditing department.

Dan Phillips, for many years associated with the Cleveland Vitagraph exchange, and later with the Warner exchange when Warner absorbed Vitagraph, is now with Security Pictures Company, independent state rights distributors.

Kasper Tarkowski is the new owner of the Strand theatre in Newton Falls. He recently purchased the house from J. Rubens. Vincent Czajkowski has been named house manager.

I. Friedman, who is associated with Milton Bryer in the Waldorf People's Ideal and Winter Theatre in Akron, has just returned from a three-months trip through the principal cities of Europe.

W. J. Slimm, onetime leading local exhibitor, who has been hibernating in Dennison, Ohio, for the past six months, is back in town again with a new line of reasons why everyone should own a Ford car.

The Mars Theatre, previously known as the Marquis, on Crawford Road, is temporarily closed. J. Flynn runs the house.

John Griebel operated the first neighborhood motion picture theatre Cleveland ever knew. That was eighteen years ago. He opened the Marvel theatre on the West Side. He is still operating it. But with this difference. Eighteen years ago, the Marvel was a store room converted into a movie theatre with about two hundred seats. The show consisted of a single reel and the admission price was five cents. Today the Marvel is a beautiful theatre, has a thousand seats, plays a straight photoplay program the first half of the week and a combination picture-vaudeville program the last half of the week.

Frank Pasker, Universal travelling auditor, spent the week in the local Universal exchange. A few years ago Pasker was in the Cleveland "U" booking department, so his return is celebrated locally somewhat in the nature of an Old Home Week.

Salt Lake City

PAUL BURGER of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Sales Development Department, has left this city for Denver from where he intends to return to the home office.

George I. Cloward, who has been the branch manager of the local Metro-Goldwyn exchange for a number of years, has resigned.

Joseph F. Samuels, who worked the Utah territory for about four years, out of the Metro-Goldwyn exchange here, will succeed Cloward as manager.

C. M. Stern, formerly with the home office foreign department, has joined the Metro-Goldwyn sales force and will cover the Idaho territory.

Seth B. Perkins, who was formerly Assistant District Manager under Dave Bershon, Western District Manager for Metro-Goldwyn, has just been made District Manager for Salt Lake and Denver.

The American Theatre of this city is going to be remodeled this summer and will be closed for about two weeks at that time. About $175,000 will be spent in improvements which will extend from the street entrance to back stage, according to C. F. Montgomery, manager of this house.

Montgomery has just returned to his office after having been confined in doors for a short time because of illness.

Otis B. Kirk, who has been the chief accountant at the American Theatre, will leave the latter part of this week for New York, where he will assume the duties of accountant for F. Dahnken Company, who have interests in eastern theatricals. Kirk will be succeeded by F. P. (familiarily known as Swede) Larson.

George Mayne, owner of the Preferred Pictures exchange here, has just returned from a successful two weeks trip into Idaho.

St. Louis

FRANK A. FINGER, one of the owners of the Gem Theatre, Marissa, Ill., stated that the report that Noah Bloomer of Belleville, Ill., had taken over that house is in error.

The Gem at Marissa, Ill., has been operated by Finger and Louis A. Degen and they intend to continue to operate the house. They have absolutely no intention of selling it. Bloomer did recently take over the Gem Theatre at Mascoutah, Ill., and that town was confused with Marissa. Bloomer has also taken over the Gem at New Baden, Ill., and has since changed the name of both of his new houses to the Rex.

The Richland Theatre, Richland, Mo., is playing but one night a week.

Bob Cluster of Johnston City, Ill., is said to have purchased a new Cadillac car.

Out-of-town callers seen along Picture Row the past week included: Bob Cluster, Johnston City, Ill.; Vernon Kauffman, Mowequa, Ill.; Charles Horsefeld, Union, Mo.; Jim Reilly, Alton, Ill.; Grant Martin, Chaffee, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. O. W. McCutcheon, Sikeston, Mo.; and "Doc" Tetley of Farmington, Mo.

Barney Rosenthal and Bob Taylor have purchased the interests in Columbia Pictures Corporation of Nat Steinberg. Mr. Steinberg is undecided as to his future plans. He is said to have received a very flattering offer to desert the film business. Columbia Pictures Corporation is one of the successful independent film exchanges in St. Louis. The exchange will celebrate its second anniversary in March.

Lew Bent, salesman for F. B. O., was under the weather for several days.

C. D. Hill, district manager for Producers Distributing Corporation, presided at a sales conference of his exchange managers held in St. Louis on January 23rd. Present were the following managers: C. A. Schuktz, Kansas City; Al Danke, Omaha, Nebr.; Eddie Lipson, Des Moines, Ia., and Art La Plant, St. Louis. Hill returned recently from a big sales conference in New York City and he wanted to give his managers the benefit of the things he learned while East.

Tom North, home office exploiter of Pathe, was in town the past week.

A film truck delivery service from St. Louis to points in Southeast Missouri along State Highway No. 9, was started during the past week. Towns served include Flat River, Festus, Herculaneum, Crystal City and Farmington. Practically all of the theatres in that section have arranged for the new company to handle their films.

Mrs. I. W. Rodgers of Cairo, Ill., has inherited ten acres of land in Florida and plans to make a trip to the Sunny South to inspect her new holdings.

George Linn, who claims to have operated the first permanent motion picture theatre in St. Louis, Mo., plans to shortly join the ranks of the benedicts. His bride-to-be is from Riverside, Cal. The date for the nuptials has not been announced. Linn's Theatre was the Nightingale and was located on South Broadway about the time of the World's Fair in St. Louis. It occupied a converted store building and had a few hundred seats.

Floyd Lewis, formerly district manager for Associated Exhibitors in this section has been appointed district manager for Arrow Pictures and will make his headquarters in St. Louis.

Lewis is one of the veterans of the local film colony and knows this territory very well. He is regarded very highly by the exhibitors.

Roy Dickson, who has been manager for Associated Exhibitors here for the past twenty months, resigned January 16 to take charge of the local Arrow office.

Out-of-town exhibitors seen along Picture Row during the week were: S. Roman, Benld, Ill.; Oscar Wesley, Gillespie, Ill.; C. W. McCutcheon, Sikeston and Charleston, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Rodgers, Cairo, Ill., and Poplar Bluff, Mo.; Harry Evans, Glen Carbon, Ill.; T. M. Francis, Charleston, Ill.; G. Schmidt, Pocahtontas, Ill.; S. E. Pertle, Jerseyville, Ill.; and Sam Sallowell, Assumption, Ill.

C. D. Hill, district manager for Producers Distributing Corporation, returned from New York on Sunday, January 17, after attending a sales conference.

Ralph Morrow, district manager for Producers, with headquarters in Dallas, Tex., passed through on his way to attend the New York sales conference.

The equipment of Knapp & Crank's Morris Opera House, Elsberry, Mo., has been taken over by T. C. Knapp.

Mr. and Mrs. Spyros Skouras are exhibiting a new feature in their home. They say that this latest attraction is a "howling success." It is entitled a Little Girl. Release date January 7, 1925.

Houses in this territory that have closed recently include: Liberty, Frankford, Mo.; Baker's Theatre, Sigel, Ill.; Tower Hill, Ill.; Advance Theatre, Advance, Mo.; Home Theatre, Bluffs, Ill.; Opal Theatre, Dale, Mo.; Palace Theatre, Macon, Ill., and Palmer Theatre, Palmer, Ill.

Noah Bloomer of Belleville, Ill., who recently took over The Gem, Mascoutah, Ill., and the Gem, New Baden, Ill., will rename both the Rex to conform to his Belleville house.

Seattle

A. K. BOUSSAD, for the last several seasons owner and manager of the Victory Theatre in Tacoma, last week announced that he had sold his interests in that house to C. E. Clendenny, who spent several days in Seattle last week attending to bookings. Mr. Clendenny is a newcomer among the ranks of the exhibitors of this territory.

Louis Goldsmith, former owner and manager of the Society Theatre, and recently connected with Al Rosenberg's DeLuxe Feature Film Exchange, last week joined the sales staff of Manager Charles W. Harden's United Artists Exchange, and now covers the Eastern Washington territory for that company.

Word was received here this week of the improvement in the condition of John G. VonHerberg, of the Jensen-VonHerberg organization, who has been ill for several weeks in New York City, and Claude S. Jensen, who was called East during Mr. VonHerberg's illness, has again returned to this territory. It is hoped that Mr. VonHerberg will be able to return to Seattle within the next few weeks.

Al Rosenberg, owner and manager of the DeLuxe Feature Film Exchange, last week was cited as an Honor Roll manager of the Northwest in connection with the publication of "The Fire Alarm" by the Will Hays organization. Mr. Rosenberg's efforts in behalf of fire prevention in the Seattle exchanges earned for him this distinction.

Mrs. S. Z. Williams, formerly Miss I. M. Colburn, owner and operator of the Yesler Theatre in this city, last week announced that she had purchased the Good Luck Theatre, another neighborhood house, from J. A. Bradt. Admission prices at the Yesler, it was also reported, will be raised from ten to fifteen cents on February 1.

With the issue last week of service emblems by the home office of the Pathe Exchange for long service in the employ of that organization, several members of the Pathe branch in Seattle were thus honored. L. A. Samuelson, manager of the local branch, who ranks next to W. S. Wessling, Los Angeles manager, as the oldest employee in the West, received a yellow gold emblem and scroll for his ten years in the employ of the Pathe organization. Five-year gold lapel emblems and scrolls were also received in this city by Miss Harriet E. Sarles, cashier, with eight years' service; David F. Hardy, janitor, with six years' service, and Miss Winifred Blair, bookkeeper, with five years' service.

Reports were received here last week from F. C. Weskil, theatre owner and operator in Oakdale, Colfax and Garfield, Washington to the effect that he will soon begin construction of a new house in Oakdale to replace his theatre in that town which was recently destroyed by fire. The new theatre will be larger and more elaborate than any house now under his direction, Mr. Weskil states.

L. A. Drinkwine, owner and manager of the Palace Theatre in Tacoma, and president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington, spent a short time in Seattle last week in conference with James M. Hone, executive secretary of the organization.

Several of the state's prominent small town exhibitors visited Film Row during recent days, and among those whose visits were visible to reporters there were: T. W. Harris of the Kam Theatre, Ephrata, Washington; Kerns Spear of the Randle Theatre, Randle, Washington; R. A. Kelsey of the Ruby Theatre, Chelan, Washington; F. W. Graham of the Graham Theatre, Shelton, Washington, and D. A. Morgan of the Colville Theatre, Colville, Washington, which he purchased from the H. H. & G. Company.

Mike Lyons, owner of the Top-notch Theatre in this city, has started a new amusement venture next door to his house in the form of an archery, and is planning the establishment of a second venture of this type in a neighboring location. The public have evidently taken to the new amusement with interest, and Mr. Lyons declares that many of them walk next door and visit his theatre after their recreation.

H. W. Bruen, who is establishing with great rapidity a string of ultra-modern neighborhood theatres in Seattle, announced this week that purchases of equipment for his newest house, the Woodlawn Theatre, had already been made, and that the structure would be ready for opening within a few weeks. The Woodlawn is situated only about a mile from the recently-opened Arabian Theatre, one of Seattle's foremost neighborhood theatres, also owned by Mr. Bruen.

James Reilly, manager of the Universal exchange, who arrived only a few weeks ago to take over his duties, has already made a trip of inspection around the local territory, and returned last week from a jaunt into Idaho and Montana, during which time he attended the opening of the handsome new Kenworthy Theatre at Moscow, Idaho.

Canada

A GET-TOGETHER luncheon of all branch managers, salesmen and bookers of exchanges was held January 18th, at the Mount Royal Hotel. William Gehring (Fox) President, occupied the chair and acted as toastmaster. Col. Cooper, Chairman of the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada, was present.

After luncheon the regular bi-monthly meeting of the Film Board was held and after the adjournment, a series of speeches were given by various members.

Mr. Gehring, in his opening address, welcomed the various staffs of the different exchanges, and stated the reason the bookers and salesmen had been invited, was to fully acquaint them with the workings of the Film Board and to illustrate the successful functioning of same was for the benefit of everybody in general.

Chas. Osborn (Warner), Sec.-Treas. of the Board explained to the gathering, the inner workings of the Arbitration Board.

Chas. Weiner (United Artists) explained the aims and objects of the Credit Committee of which he is Chairman.

Maurice Davis (Regal Films) gave a talk on the ethics of salesmanship.

There was a general discussion at which Mr. Hooper (Universal), Mr. Dowbiggin (Famous Lasky), and Mr. Larente (Regal)—all veteran representatives in the territory—expressed in a capable manner their appreciation for the enlightenment they had received and vouched for the rest of the salesmen present and even greater effort on the part of all concerned.

Col. Cooper, in a very fine address, congratulated the President and members of the Board on the very fine work they had so far accomplished and expressed the thought that he could not otherwise than report the satisfactory progress that had been attained to the various general managers at the head offices in Toronto.

"Get-Together Luncheon" of the Montreal Film Board of Trade at Mount Royal Hotel

A big managers' bonus competition of the Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, which was recently concluded, was won by James Lynch, manager of the Capitol Theatre, Regina, Sask., his prize being $400 in cash. The second man in "A" Division was Manager Harry Dahn of the Montreal Capitol, and third was Manager J. M. Robertson of the Victoria Dominion Theatre out in British Columbia.

The first prize winner in Division "B" was Manager A. P. Drohan of the Princess Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, who took down a $300 prize. Others in this section were Frank Miley of the Daylight Theatre, Saskatoon, Sask; E. Christensen, Capitol Theatre, Brandon, Man.; Leon Osier, Regent Theatre, Oshawa, Ontario; T. R. Tubman, Algoma Theatre, Salt Ste. Marie, Ont. C. S. Ferguson, manager of the Dominion Theatre, Nanaimo, B. Theatre, Port Hope, and J. P. Pitner, Starland Theatre, Nelson, B. C.

The contest was conducted on the quota system, with points being awarded from week to week according to the relative percentage allowed.

W. P. McGeachie, formerly manager of the Capitol Theatre at Welland, Ontario, has been appointed manager of the Algoma Theatre at Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, in succession to Ray Tubman, who has become manager of the Capitol Theatre at Hamilton.

J. R. Minhinick, manager of the Grand Theatre, London, Ontario, has announced that the policy of the house, starting January 25, will be the presentation of stock dramatic shows in place of the combination policy of pictures, road shows and burlesque which has prevailed for some time past. The theatre is operated by Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto.

Hull, Quebec, is to have a new fireproof moving picture theatre, which is to be erected on the property on Main Street, opposite the Post Office by the owner, Joseph Paquin. The new house will have a two-story frontage, 35 feet wide, and a depth of 96 feet. A building permit was taken out January 21, for the new structure and steps have already been taken for the demolition of the present store property on the site.

The City of Hull, which has a population of 35,000, has two theatres, one the Laurier and the other the Eden Theatre, both of which are operated by Donat Paquin, who also has a directing interest in the Imperial Theatre, Ottawa.

When H. O'Regan of the Imperial Theatre, and Ambrose Nolan of the Rex Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, were returning to their homes early on the morning of January 19th, after a private screening at the Imperial, they discovered a serious fire in the big wood-working plant of the Mayno Davis Co., Ottawa, which resulted in a tremendous blaze. They were the first to turn in the alarm and then started in to rescue horses from the company's stables. The theatre men were prominently mentioned in dispatches for their work.

The theatrical and musical colony of Ottawa, the Canadian Capital, was thrown into mourning on January 20th, by the death of Rudolph Pelisek, conductor of the Regent Theatre Orchestra, since early in 1913, after a long illness. The wide esteem in which the deceased was held was indicated by the great throng at the funeral in St. Luke's Church, Ottawa on January 22nd.

When the new Shea's Theatre opened in Buffalo, N. Y., two coachloads of friends of Jerry and Mike Shea made the trip by rail from Toronto, Ontario, to attend the formal opening. Jerry Shea is the owner of the handsome Shea's Theatre, Toronto, and also owns the Hippodrome, Toronto, which is under a long lease to Famous Players.

Philadelphia

THE old Colonial Theatre in Norristown, owned by Charles Tremont, which was closed for about nine months undergoing alterations, was reopened on January 18th under the name of the Gloria. The theatre has been enlarged to seat 700, has been re-decorated throughout and a new organ has been installed.

It has been announced that in the $3,500,000 building campaign of the Federation of Jewish Charities, the motion picture industry in Philadelphia was more active than any other. Jules E. Mastbaum, president of the Stanley Company of America, acted as general chairman of the campaign and contributed $100,000 to the cause. This was the largest individual subscription received.

Jack Stapleton, formerly special representative of Harold Lloyd productions in Pennsylvania, has joined the local sales force of Universal while Gus Carrick, who was formerly with Associated Exhibitors is covering the Pottsville territory for Universal.

The Savoy Theatre, Atlantic City, was recently taken over by the Savoy Holding Company, of which Louis Lapin is president and Jules Taylor, secretary and treasurer, the consideration being in excess of $200,000.

The Greenwood Theatre, one of the finest motion houses in Trenton, will open the first week in February. The theatre has a seating capacity of 800 and will show first run pictures.

Harry Wiener, who was recently promoted from salesman in the Philadelphia office of Warner Brothers to manager of the Washington, D. C., exchange, has resigned to become Philadelphia branch manager for Associated Exhibitors. Mr. Norman J. Ayers, who was at one time in charge of the Philadelphia office of the Independent Film Exchange and later went to Washington as branch manager, has succeeded Mr. Wiener in the latter city. A few weeks ago he resigned from the Independent organization to become sales manager under Mr. Wiener. His successor has not yet been announced.

Lewis Glick has resigned from the sales force of Imperial Pictures. He has not announced his future plans.

The Stanley Theatre will observe the week of February 1st as its fifth anniversary week, with a special feature and elaborate surrounding attractions.

Miss Margaret Neville has succeeded Miss Rena Bakerman, who has been a member of the Metro-Goldwyn office staff for some years and who recently resigned to be married.

Walter Woodward, who resigned as manager of Green & Altman's Park Theatre in Philadelphia to accept the position of resident manager of the Majestic Theatre in Gettysburg, has returned to Philadelphia on account of the death of his mother. He has accepted his old position as manager of the Park Theatre.

Des Moines

METRO Goldwyn now has one of the most attractive branch offices in the city and a handsome little show room that could hardly be surpassed. The building has everything of the latest in fireproof protection with a complete sprinkler system thruout and with the inspection room and film room separated from all other rooms with fireproof doors that can be used to close one room off from any other. The film is kept in fireproof vaults. The show room is comfortably furnished with cushioned chairs and lounges and is well ventilated. Two machines are used in the projection room. The new headquarters of Metro-Goldwyn are at 1111-1113 High Street.

Another new film building in Des Moines is that of the Parrott Films Company which during the past half dozen years has so expanded its business that it is to the very fore in companies producing advertising film. The new location is at 1700 Keosauqua way. Mr. Goldman gives large credit to H. E. T. Hoensen, his office manager, for the place that this company holds among makers of advertising film.

The office of Pathe films celebrated the birthday of the branch manager, A. W. Kahn, on January 22. Mr. Kahn, who has been somewhat under the weather with a near attack of the grippe has kept at his post nevertheless.

The Rialto Theatre, Des Moines which is one of the string of A. H. Blank and is now under the management of Frank Shipley will close on March 1. The lease of the building expires on that date and the theatre will be taken over by the Register and Tribute News. The theatre will be torn out in order to make room for the expansion of the newspaper. Frank Shipley, the manager of the Rialto Theatre, has a number of prospects in view as soon as he leaves Des Moines.

Lou Ellman, who was formerly with Associated Exhibitors, has been added to the sales staff of First National. He will travel in the southern territory in addition to the salesmen previously assigned to this district.

Dan B. Lederman, who used to be branch manager for Universal at Des Moines, and was recently appointed district sales manager for Associated Exhibitors in the territory covered by Minneapolis, Des Moines, Omaha, Oklahoma City, Winnipeg and Kansas City, has just been given supervision also of the Chicago and Milwaukee offices. Mr. Lederman has just been making a trip in the territory about the Oklahoma City branch.

Ella I. Sage has purchased the Princess Theatre at Dexter. The theatre was sold by W. Knowles.

The Star Theatre at Kanawha and the Grand Theatre at Story City have been purchased by Woodward Brothers. D. G. Woodward, who has been owner and operator of a theatre in Brighton, Colo. for the past ten years, will have charge of the theatre while F. L. Woodward, formerly agent of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad at Maurice, Iowa, will manage the theatre at Story City.

Clarinda, Iowa was chosen as the setting of the secret marriage of Ruth Ball, stenographer of the First National office at Omaha. She became Mrs. Don Copley on January 11.

E. J. Tilton, manager of the Des Moines branch of First National, and J. S. Ambrose, manager at Omaha, had a conference recently with A. H. Blank and the Balaban and Katz interests in Chicago which augured well for First National month.

Covering exploitation for Famous Players for the Des Moines territory as well as that of Sioux Falls, Minneapolis and Omaha L. Putnam has recently been transferred from the territory at Dallas, Texas.

The Opera House at Marathon, Iowa was recently sold for taxes. This house had been operated as a picture house. Another Iowa theatre to close on account of poor business is the Electric Theatre at Hubbard, Iowa.

Recent sales reported by the Western Theatre Supply Company, which recently opened up its offices at 416 Tenth street, Des Moines, are a Powers machine to the Lyric Theatre at Belmond, a motion picture projector to the Plaza Theatre at Ackley, new draperies purchased by Mr. Stanley, owner of the theatre at Corn- ing; new projectors for the theatres at Tracy and Bussey, bought by Mr. Baltzley, and a motor generator set and two Powerlite Low Intensity Arcs to Dwight Baker for his theatre at Ottumwa, and two motiograph projectors for the Orpheum Theatre, Des Moines.

E. M. Tracy, owner and manager of the New Princess Theatre at Storm Lake, who six weeks ago was injured in an accident when his car was run over by a train, is again a well man. He has been out of the hospital for two weeks and no longer requires the aid of crutches.

The Gem Theatre at Emerson has changed hands. William Huntsman, who formerly owned the house, sold to J. C. Wilkins.

The Plaza Theatre at Ackley, which was recently purchased by J. E. Trovas, is being nicely equipped by the new management. Two new projectors are in use instead of one as formerly.

J. L. Mieras of Maurice, Iowa, sold the Star Theatre there to J. E. Mieras.

M. J. Weisfeldt, district manager for F.R.O., left Des Moines for a trip to New York.

Manager Gottlieb of Universal has been out this week in the territory hitting the main towns.

Jay Rentfro, assistant manager of the Majestic theatre, spent the week-end in Galveston with friends. Mr. Rentfro is a new comer to the Houston theatre world, having arrived from Ft. Worth only a month ago.

Mrs. Ed. Collins of Galveston, wife of the manager of the Queen theatre and other Southern Enterprise holdings in Galveston, has been confined to her home for several weeks, suffering with a severe cold.

Albany

ROBERT MOCHRIE, manager of the Producers Dist. Corp. Exchange here, has received notice that he has won the trip to the West Coast through sales over a period of several weeks and he is already planning for a month among the studios of California.

James Rose, with his partner, Henry Windeknecht, will erect a new theatre in Rensselaer this spring, with a seating capacity of 600, and which will be known as The Cameo. The two men already operate houses in Rensselaer and Troy.

Dr. J. Victor Wilson, who has been handling the Robbins houses in Watertown, but who resigned some little time ago, will become a resident of Miami, where he will manage one of the large theatres in that city.

The Naked Truth dinner is being well advertised along Film Row in this city with placards, and many of the exchange managers and exhibitors are planning to attend the affair. The two Schine brothers will have a table for ten.

Herman Stern, manager for F. B. O. in this city, returned the first of the week from a trip to New York City. Vincent Fisher, of the exchange, who has been doing the booking, will spend two or three days on the road from now on. Through Mr. Stern, a benefit for Harold Filkins, who is very ill, will be given at the Colonial theatre, on Saturday, February 5.

Mrs. Walter Roberts, wife of the manager of the Troy theatre, has recovered from a two weeks' illness from the grippe, and is once more back at the ticket office. The use of the theatre has been given to the school children of Troy, on Saturday, February 20, for an entertainment to which all children of the city will receive tickets.

Among visitors along Film Row during the past week were Robert Landry, of Ogdensburg, and William Smalley, of Cooperstown. Harry Lux, of Utica, was also in town.

There was a genuine surprise along Film Row last week, when Ray Smith, a salesman at the Universal exchange, was quietly married with Miss Jane Kaiser, of Albany, as the bride.

James L. Gurnon, a state inspector of motion picture theatres, was in Glens Falls last week, looking over the Empire theatre. Mr. Gurnon stated that the house complied with every requirement of the law and that its sprinkler system was the most complete he had yet seen in any theatre in this part of the state.

When Bob Pierce of Iliou, struck town last week, he was asked how his village was taking to the Sunday shows. Mr. Pierce said that the village was still somewhat divided even though they had voted in favor of the shows, and that those who had opposed the enactment of the ordinance were remaining away from the theatres to a considerable extent.

Alex Herman, local manager for First National, was out on the road a good part of last week.

News notes for the week include the fact that H. C. Bissell, manager for Universal here, and Julius Berinstein, owning and operating the Colonial and Hudson theatres in Albany, were in New York; Larry Tift, of Berlin was in town on a buying expedition; William V. A. Mack, of the Pathe forces, was up from New York, while J. H. MacIntyre, local manager for Paramount, took a swing through the North Country.

Jake Golden, manager for the Griswold in Troy, is still absent from his duties, and according to all accounts, still confined at a hospital in Boston, Mass. John Campbell, assistant manager of the theatre, is looking after Mr. Golden's duties.

Elmer Crowninshield of Albany, who runs a motion picture theatre equipment and repair place, is smothered in work these days, as exhibitors generally, appear to be giving more attention to their projection. Mr. Crowninshield is installing a couple of projection machines this week at Sanschagrin's new theatre in Saranac Lake, which is scheduled to open the forepart of February. The Strand in Schenectady and the Community in Catskill, have also received improved projection through Mr. Crowninshield.

Children's matinees are being staged by the Strand of Little Falls on Thursday afternoons at 4 o'clock, and apparently meeting with considerable favor.

Carl A. Phillips, of Watertown, who recently bought the Antique theatre in that city, declares that the name of the theatre conveys the impression of something rather ancient and has accordingly offered a prize of $50 for an appropriate name. It is Mr. Phillips' intention to improve the house to a considerable extent before reopening it. The theatre has been one of the Robbins group of houses more recently taken over by the Strand interests.

Tom Clark, assistant manager of the Mark Strand in Albany, who lives so far from the business center of the city, that he generally gets home in time to get at least an hour's sleep before start-back in the morning, was heard to declare recently that he would probably move downtown in the spring.

The many friends of Renee Craven, who is connected with the local First National exchange, will be glad to know that the condition of her father who was operated upon two weeks ago, was such as to permit his removal home last Sunday.

Elmer Griffin, a well known exhibitor in Troy, who is connected with the Rose houses, is once more back on the job, following a considerable period in one of the Troy hospitals, where he was operated on for appendicitis.

Denver

EUGENE GERBASE has accepted the appointment as manager for the local branch of Associated Exhibitors. This will be welcome news to exhibitors of Denver territory as it insures Mr. Gerbase, remaining in Denver and continuing his visits into the territory, which for the past eight years, have made him so many friends. Mr. Gerbase, until recently, was manager for the local branch of Universal. He succeeds Mr. H. L. Burnham, who resigned on Saturday, January 16.

The Theatrical Managers Association of Denver, an organization of Curtis Street first run exhibitors, held its annual election last week. Mr. J. Mulvehill was again elected president of the association. Joseph Roth, the manager of the Isis Theatre, was elected secretary and treasurer, succeeding Rick Ricketson, who held the position up to a short time ago.

Stock show week in Denver brought the largest number of exhibitors to town that has been seen here at one time for several years.

They came from New Mexico, Nebraska, Wyoming and all points of Colorado. As a result Film Row was about as lively as the leading hotels. Among the exhibitors seen here during the week were: Mrs. Ossie Des Combes, of the Unique Theatre, Gunnison, Colorado; De Forrest Swanson, Isis Theatre, Lamar, Colorado; J. W. Borders, Majestic Theatre, Stratton, Colorado; William Delahoyde, Thermopolis, Wyoming; Tom Love, who operates a chain of theatres near Hanna, Wyoming; John Bangs, of the Strand Theatre, Rawlins, Wyoming; Earl Nye, who manages the Carl Ray Amusement Company theatres of Cheyenne, Wyoming; Ned Barringer, Princess Theatre, Cheyenne, Wyoming; J. E. (Tommy) Thompkins, America Theatre, Colorado Springs, Colorado; Russell Hardwick, Lyceum Theatre, Clovis, New Mexico.

Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Todd of Casper, Wyoming, were also among those exhibitors, who visited Denver during the past week.

Mr. Todd is the manager of the Rialto Theatre of Casper, and one of the active exhibitors of the State of Wyoming. He is the secretary of the Wyoming Theatre Managers Association.

C. L. Thuerkoph, district manager for Associated Exhibitors, was a visitor in Denver during the last week, assisting Mr. Gerbase, new manager of the local office, in getting started in his new duties. Mr. Thuerkoph arrived in Denver from San Francisco, and on leaving will go to Salt Lake City and various points on the Pacific coast.

J. H. Ashby, manager of the Denver branch of First National, returned after a two weeks trip into the New Mexico territory, during which time he covered all the major points.

Jack H. Hurschman has accepted a position as salesman for the local branch of United Artists. Mr. Hurschman has for the past four years been associated with Paramount as sales representative. Mr. Hurschman also announces that he was married to Miss L. Southwell of San Francisco, California, on December 26, last, which means that he is receiving the congratulations of his many friends for more reasons than one.

Fred P. Brown, former Metro-Goldwyn manager and until recently the owner and manager of the Mission and Pearl theatres of Denver, left Friday night for New York City on a combined business and pleasure trip. Mr. Brown announces that he expects to remain in the film industry, but the nature of his affiliations will depend entirely on the results of his visit to New York City.

Jack Eaton, a former manager of the Fox Theatres in Denver, has returned to Denver to succeed M. Q. Clemmer, in the full management of the new State Theatre of this city. The State Theatre is Denver's newest first run house.

Less Wier, district manager for Producers, and W. J. Mogan general sales manager, are expected in Denver Sunday for a visit with the local branch manager, James S. Hommel.

Atlanta

This week the Atlanta Film Board of Trade is moving from the quarters in the Haas-Howell Building, which the Board has occupied for the past two years, to new and larger quarters in the 101 Marietta Building, suite 215.

The well-appointed Picadilly Theater, Birmingham, Willis F. Westmoreland, Jr., manager, opened January 10th with an attendance far surpassing all expectations.

Among the Atlanta film men attending were Tom Little, of Producers; P. C. Parrish, Southern Theater Equipment Company; Maurice Mitchell, salesman for Liberty; L. J. Duncan, salesman for Producers; Jimmie Greenleaf, Universal salesman. Exhibitors around Birmingham attending were John and Frank Merritt, of the Wise Circuit; Dick Kennedy, of the Rialto Theater; Joe Steed, of Ensley; Warren Andrews, of Ensley; Ben Jaffe, of the Norwood Theater, and Buster Lomax, Southern Theater Equipment Company. Manager Westmoreland received a host of congratulatory wires, among which were messages from Cecil De Mille, Vera Reynolds, Jennie MacPherson, Leatrice Joy and Rod LaRocque. A telegram from William Boyd was read and received with cheers. Baskets of flowers were received from the Atlanta exchanges. After the opening, the film guests were entertained at the Goat and Fiddle Club operated by Ben Jaffe.

Following a series of conferences, which came to a conclusion late Sunday, John T. Ezell was this week placed in managerial charge of the local Warner Brothers exchange, succeeding O. P. Hall, who came here from Boston several weeks ago as Atlanta branch manager for Warner. Mr. Hall has not announced his future plans, but it is probable that he will remain in the South.

Monday morning found Jack Elwell, former sales chief of the local Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange, installed as manager of Liberty Film Distribution Corporation's Atlanta branch, succeeding Hank Hearn, who has resigned to become district manager for Associated Exhibitors in the southeast.

When the trade press assembles for the premiere presentation of "Nell-Gwyn" at the Ritz-Carlton in New York on Monday evening the Weekly Film Review will be represented by its publisher and editor, Anna Aiken Patterson. Mrs. Patterson will leave Atlanta on the Crescent Limited Sunday morning and will be at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel for several days.

Maximilian Pilzer, who is to be the guest conductor at the Howard Theatre for four weeks, arrived in Atlanta on Wednesday evening to get acquainted with the management and the orchestra and prepare for his opening appearance.

The Educational Department of Pathe Exchange, Inc., of New York has just inaugurated a new policy by which a traveling representative is assigned to the Atlanta and Charlotte territories. Mrs. Elizabeth Dessez, head of the department, came to Atlanta early this week to carry out the final detail of the plan which placed Miss Fanny Hanlon in the newly-created position. From Atlanta Mrs. Dessez went to Charlotte to see Miss Hanlon duly installed, and on Friday returned to her office in New York.

W. S. Odum of Saundersville, Ga., was in town Tuesday.

George Allison, Fox manager, returned today from two weeks in Florida.

Lou Remy, district manager for Fox, was in town several days this week.

Dan Michalove left last Sunday for Florida to return about the last of next week.

A. H. McCarty, of Barnesville, was in the city this week, purchasing a pipe organ of F. A. Leatherman.

A. J. Borders, Liberty salesman for Tennessee, is due in town Saturday after a trip through his territory.

L. C. Lowe, Atlanta representative for United Artists in Tennessee, and Ray Beall represented film fraternity of Atlanta at the Fred Martin funeral in Chattanooga.

N. D. Ballentyne, district manager for Pathe, who makes his headquarters in Kansas City, spent the first part of the week in Atlanta exchange and left Wednesday for New Orleans.

Hank Hearn leaves tomorrow on the Crescent Limited for New York to confer with the officials of the Associated Exhibitors, preparatory to taking over the Southern district.

Mr. Waldron, general manager of Wallerstein Theater Company of Miami and Dania, Florida, was a visitor to Film Row and F. A. Leatherman this week. His new theater opens at Dania on the 28th and the Union House soon.

H. J. Hury, prominent Birmingham exhibitor, is confined in South Highland Infirmary with pneumonia. The many friends of Mr. Hury will be glad to learn that the latest reports say he is recovering rapidly.

F. G. Conklin, independent producers' representative of New York, spent two days in Atlanta this week in conference with local independent exchangemen.

J. J. Powell, manager of the Star Theater at Toccoa, made one of his infrequent visits to the exchange center this week. The Star was formerly owned and operated by Joe Burton.

Mrs. S. G. Howell, formerly of Atlanta and Gainesville, but for the past twelve years a resident of Dallas, was a visitor to the offices of the Weekly Film Review on Wednesday. Mrs. Howell is the wife of Editor Howell of the Dallas Motion Picture Journal and takes a lively interest in her husband's publication.

Baltimore

PLANS are under way now by Charles Raith and a company of men to erect a motion picture theatre building to cost about $500,000 and seat about 2,500 persons, at Fulton and Pennsylvania Aves., Baltimore, Md. Stores, bowling alleys and a pool room will be included in the building, which is being designed by Clyde N. and Nelson Fritz, architects, Baltimore.

About $18,000 will be spent on improvements to the City Opera House, Frederick, Md., if the plans of the Mayor and Board of Aldermen go through, it is announced.

Ruebsam and Stevens, construction engineers, Washington, D. C., are drawing the plans. The playhouse is operated now by the Tri-State Theatre Circuit, Inc., H. Clay Evans, president.

A theatre building project is now under way by Dr. M. Saliba, for Wilson, N. C., which will seat about 1500 persons and cost approximately $250,000.

E. A. Lake, manager of Keith's Hippodrome, is now away on a two week's vacation. He went by boat to Jacksonville, Fla., and will visit other resorts before returning to Baltimore.

Miss H. L. Beurriere, motion picture editor of the Baltimore American, has been given six months leave of absence by that paper due to ill health. While away her work will be done by Miss Ida Neucomb.

Samuel Weinstein, is now managing the Brodie Theatre, 1118 Light street, operated by the Riviera Amusement Company.

If it can be arranged, Frank Price, Jr., assistant manager of the Rivoli Theatre, Baltimore, will accompany Guy L. Wonders, manager of that playhouse to New York to attend the Naked Truth dinner this year.

Edward H. Causey, editor and publisher of Film News, Washington, D. C., visited Baltimore, Monday, January 18, and talked to some exhibitors.

The fire wrecked Lyceum Theatre building, Charles St. near Bidle, and the lot on which it stands have been purchased by H. E. Caplan, agent, from the James L. Kernan Company, represented by B. J. Frederick and Brother, Inc., the purchase price is said to have been about $100,000.

Milwaukee

THE Loos Brothers, radio stars from station K. Y. W., Chicago, who appeared in the program at the Alhambra theatre last week, were guests of honor at an informal social gathering held in the home of O. L. Meister, manager of the White House theatre, Milwaukee. Among the guests at the party were "Doc" Honeck of the Milwaukee Pathe office and J. G. Frackman, of Progress Pictures.

S. H. Abrams, manager of the Milwaukee branch of F. B. O. spent the greater part of the week visiting exhibitors throughout central Wisconsin. He returned to Milwaukee Friday.

Steve Dorais of the Star and Douglas theatres at Racine was in Milwaukee last week, and brought the customary report of good business in his section of the state.

Harry Kaufman, Chicago motion picture exhibitor is in a Milwaukee hospital suffering from an attack of illness. Latest reports promise an early recovery.

J. H. Heft of the Pastime theatre at Horicon, Wis., was in Milwaukee a few days last week on business which took him to several of the local film offices.

George Herzog of the Orpheum and Strand theatres at Manitowoc, was also among the out-of-town exhibitors to confer with branch film exchange managers in Milwaukee last week.

J. G. Frackman, manager of the Milwaukee office of Progress Pictures, has returned from a trip to Madison, and Janesville, Wis., and to Chicago.

W. H. Narolf of the Cozy theatre at Iron Mountain, Mich.,

stated that business at his theatre continues to improve. He was in Milwaukee to confer with film booking men a few days ago. He returned to his home town after a brief stay in the city.

Arthur Desarmieux of the Strand theatre at Madison, has been prevented from actively managing the affairs of his house, due to an attack of illness. His condition is improving, however, and he will be able to resume his duties in a short time, according to word reaching his friends and business acquaintances in Milwaukee.

Buffalo

A STOCK company to be known as Fitzer-Syracuse, Inc., with Benjamin Fitzer of Syracuse as president and director, has been formed and papers filed with County Clerk Harry D. Banham at Auburn, N. Y., to purchase, lease and manage theatres, opera houses and motion picture theatres and to deal in films and motion picture supplies. Other directors are Charles D. Blessing and Joseph N. Schwartzwalder, both of Auburn. The corporation is capitalized for $10,000 with a stock of $100 par value. The corporation operates the Strand theatre in Auburn.

The Dellinger theatre property in the heart of Batavia's business section has been sold for a price that is understood to be in the neighborhood of $65,000. This admission has been made by a person who is intimately concerned with the transaction. The contract for the transfer is said to be ready. The buyer's name is withheld, but rumors say that Wolf and David Kreiger of Batavia and a Medina capitalist, are involved in the transaction. It is the intention of the new owners to use the property for theatrical purposes. A court order will be necessary and it is understood that it has been applied for to permit the sale to go through and at the same time to make it valid under the will of the late John Dellinger which provided that William F. Haitz, president manager of the theatre property, should have the life use of it in the case his wife should die. Mrs. Haitz died several years ago.

Miss Marian Gueth, office secretary of Buffalo Zone, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, is recovering from an operation during which she lost her tonsils. She expects to be back on the job soon.

Supper Dance held in the Arbor Room of the Hotel Buffalo, Buffalo, recently by the Universal Boosters Club of the Buffalo Exchange for Laemmle Jubilee Month

J. H. Silbar of Milwaukee has come to Buffalo to join the sales force of the local Dependable exchange.

William H. Rudolph, special representative of the Fox Film company, has recently been in Buffalo and vicinity.

In order to arouse added interest in the children's Saturday morning film show last week Manager J. R. Osborne arranged with a bunch of local kids to do their stuff on the New Family stage. It was better than an amateur night and the little folk had a great time watching their pals perform.

Frank Moynihan, Albany manager for Freedom Film corporation, was in Buffalo last week end for a conference with General Manager Richard C. Fox, who has returned from New York where he looked over much new product, some of which he acquired for distribution in this end of the state.

Howard Riehl has joined Harry E. Lotz, who has the Golden Arrow franchise in the Buffalo and Albany territories.

I. M. Halperin, who was trained in the B. & K. houses in Chicago, is in charge of the snappy ushers in the new Shea Buffalo. The boys have made a real hit.

Others in the photo are: Mrs. Albert Barnett, Mrs. Charles Goodwin, Mrs. George Schaefer, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Spandau, Mrs. O. T. Schroepel, Sophie Massalska, Bill Doyle, Walter Webster, Anne Rafferty, Ruth Rappaport, Rose Alco, Lou Beckerich, Florence Heindl, Mary Boyle, Bertha Seelbach, Rose Owen, Marie Russell. The members of the Boosters pay dues and when the treasurer gets enough in the safe they hold a supper-dance and you can bet a merry time is had by all on each occasion.

Cincinnati

THE Cincinnati Universal Exchange will celebrate two events in the month of March, Carl Laemmle's twentieth anniversary and the second anniversary of Fred Strief as manager of the local exchange.

Joe Freedman, who succeeded Arthur S. Kane as contact representative for Universal is expected to pay a visit to the local exchange.

George Law of the Hollywood Theatre, Portsmouth, Ohio, spent several days in the city visiting with the various film managers.

Terry O'Connell special representative for Famous Players, is one of the most popular general office men to hit this territory in many years. The boys all like him and will work their heads off for him.

Kansas City

DUBINISKY BROTHERS of St. Joseph, Mo., are to obtain the Billy Mueller Circuit of Theatres, if a deal now pending is completed. The circuit consists of the Miller and Jefferson theatres of Jefferson City, Mo., and the Liberty theatre, Sedalia, Mo.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City territory this week were: Hugh Gardner, Orpheum and Fotosho, Neosho, Mo.; Laurence Brenninger, operating a Topeka, Kas., chain of theatres; Ed. Peskay, Sun Amusement Company, St. Joseph, Mo.; Ensel Barbour, Orpheum, Springfield, Mo.; G. L. Hooper, Orpheum, Topeka, Kas.; Edward Wilhoit, Jefferson, Springfield, Mo.; M. W. Hubble, Hubble theatre, Trenton, Mo.; Myer Brothers, Slater, Mo.; Mrs. H. Winkler, Main Street Theatre, Lexington, Mo.; William Sears, Lyric, Boonville, Mo.; C. M. Pattee, Pattee theatre, Lawrence, Kans.

The Rex theatre, Maysville,

Mo., has been re-opened by J. C. Allison, veteran showman, it has been announced.

Another busy week among exchanges in Kansas City this week. Tommy Taylor, hustling little Universal representative, has been transferred to England by his company as a reward for his work in Kansas City and Sioux Falls, S. D. Tommy is a "bally Britisher" himself.

Friends of C. E. Gregory, Metro-Goldwyn branch manager, are congratulating him upon being ranked by his company in the November fire-prevention honor roll.

Harvey Day, general sales manager for Kinograms, was a Kansas City business visitor.

Missouri may be "out of the mud" as far as concrete roads are concerned, but that is no assurance that the bearings on one's car will not burn out, mourns W. D. Bishop, Metro-Goldwyn salesman.

Joe Rosenberg, Universal salesman, is to be transferred to England. W. E. Truog, assistant sales director for Universal, and Charles Sears, in charge of Universal theatres in this territory, have returned from a business trip to New York, just in time to bid farewell to J. E. Flynn Metro-Goldwyn branch manager, who left for New York.

Miss Maurine O'Connor, for six years cashier of the Vitagraph exchange, has been made cashier of the Independent Film Corp., of Kansas City.

The Kansas City First National force is in eleventh place in the First National Month drive and still plowing ahead.

Sam Goldflam and Joe Silverman of the Independent Film Corp., left for St. Joseph, Mo., and Wichita, Kas., on a business trip.

The entire office force of Universal exchange was guests of Billy Truog and Harry Taylor at the Ivanhoe Masonic Club the other night.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT EQUIPMENT CONSTRUCTION OPERATION

Changing the Church Show from Competitor to Theatre Aid

Cooperation With Authorities Brings Friendly Relations

An Interview With Major Ward B. Wooldridge

CO-OPERATION with the church and school authorities to the end that the motion picture exhibitions held in these institutions become an aid to the theatre instead of a competitor is one of the definite objectives of the Public Relations activities of motion picture theatres, according to Major Ward P. Wooldridge, Director of Public Relations of the Playhouse Operating Company of New York and formerly in charge of a branch of this work for the Hays organization.

Leadership in all matters pertaining to motion pictures is one of the natural products of a Public Relations campaign which has been properly conducted by the theatre or theatres of a town. With that leadership established, it is only natural that the institutions which give occasional motion picture shows should turn to the theatre manager for advice and assistance in the arrangement of their performances. That these phases of Public Relations work can be made a reality, demonstrable in repeated practices in a town, has been illustrated by Major Wooldridge since he assumed his present duties with the Playhouse company, operating theatres in Mamoroneck and Rye, N. Y., Riverhead, L. I., and New Canaan, Conn.

To cite a specific example of the means taken to transform the church, or school show from a competitive into a co-operative force, the work which Major Wooldridge did in conjunction with the Presbyterian church in Riverhead may be related here.

Major Wooldridge has worked with the church authorities since taking up his Public Relations activities for the Playhouse company. He impressed upon them the sincere efforts which the theatres of his company were making to give motion picture entertainments of such wholesome quality as to be an influence for good in the community. Rigid adherence to the promises which he made for the theatre, soon brought about the entente cordiale between the church authorities, parent teacher's association, and other active forces in the town.

Major Wooldridge explained to these people that he would be glad to help them at any time they desired to give picture shows in the churches or schools. He added, however, that such performances must necessarily be of a decidedly religious or pedagogic nature, since the theatre was the proper place for the presentation of photoplay entertainment. The argument was an unassailable one, since the theatre had demonstrated that its performances were in every way as wholesome as those which the church or school could offer and therefore deserved the support of churches and schools as the center of the motion picture entertainment.

This line of reasoning was approved by the authorities of churches and schools. Recently, the Presbyterian church in Riverhead arranged to show pictures at a social event in the church hall. Major Wooldridge was called in to assist the committee in getting pictures and projection machines for the event. It was perfectly agreeable to the committee that the program be made up of subjects of a pedagogic theme—pictures of merit but of the type which under ordinary circumstances would not be available for presentation in a commercial theatre.

The program met with the approval of the committee and the people who attended the affair, which was a success from the standpoint of the church but which did not interfere with the attendance at the theatre. The receipts of the theatre for the night proved the accuracy of the conclusion that the church affair, with or without pictures, would attract the attendance which it did, and that the picture fans, regular attendees of the photoplay would not be diverted from the theatre to the church by the program which was offered there.

Another consideration which Major Wooldridge points out—and an important one for the theatre—is that many of the people who attend these church entertainments never go to the picture shows, and that the effect upon them of seeing pictures in their church halls in many cases will result in making new patrons for the theatre. He was told by the church com-

FACTS ABOUT BUILDING

ANY views or facts pertaining to the trend of building costs should be of value to many business men in our industry. Especially is this so at the present time when a record breaking theatre construction campaign is in the offing for 1926.

From an article appearing in a current issue of "The American Contractor" the following salient points are gleaned:

Considering building construction of all kinds, there has been spent during 1925 nearly five dollars to every one dollar during 1913. Costs of construction during 1925 has been approximately twice what they were during 1913. It then follows that the actual physical volume of construction has been two and one-half times that of 1913.

The cost of building construction predicated on labor cost and material cost has not gone up or down to any appreciable extent during the past two years. Such stability lends confidence both to builders and the man who builds. Price levels in all commodities, with few exceptions, have behaved very much the same way as costs of construction.

The basic fact is that prices are now tending to stabilize, and quite a way up from the 1913 level.

Wages in the building construction trade and common labor for building, weighed and averaged nationally, are 214 percent above their 1913 level. Wages, however, should not show an increase this year excepting in some isolated instances where the proper adjustments have yet to be affected.

Choosing Feature Pictures for The Eastman Theatre

Three Main Considerations Observed in Making Selection

By Eric Clark

Manager Eastman Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

THE selection of the feature picture each week is a matter that calls for careful consideration, not unmixed perhaps with a little prayer, for judging public taste is one of the most difficult things in theatre operation—and it is so easy to guess wrongly.

In selecting a feature picture, which is the backbone of the screen entertainment at the Eastman theatre, the first consideration, as a general rule should be its entertainment value. Occasionally, however, entertainment value may become a secondary matter, particularly in the case of a theatre like the Eastman with its unusually high standards. A picture may be such an outstanding creation of screen art or reflect such unusual brilliance in its conception and direction that its merit is justly entitled to recognition by theatres of this type, even though its appeal may not be so wide as a so-called "box office" picture. Even then it must have a fair measure of entertainment value for, after all, it is entertainment that people seek in the motion picture program. What I wish to convey is that these pictures cannot be judged alone by their power to entertain or to amuse but due regard must be given their contribution to development of picture art in general. A very recent example of a picture of this type was—"Beggar on Horseback"—richly imaginative, directed with flashes of genius and reflecting a genuine effort to do something away from the ordinary.

As I have said, however, entertainment value must usually be the first consideration. Variety comes second. By variety I mean different types of stories—comedies, romances and dramas—different stars and different locales. A third consideration is universality of appeal. At the Eastman to be successful we must play to about one-eighth of the total population of the city each week. To appeal to that number we must offer attractions that will appeal to both feminine and masculine tastes and, in some measure, to the juvenile fancy. Feminine appeal comes first. The picture that appeals to the woman has the greatest drawing power because she brings both the man and the child.

We have two broad, general rules that govern us in selecting our feature pictures. First, there must be no coarseness or vulgarity. Second, the story must not make vice attractive. There will frequently, however, be a difference of opinion among our own group as to whether a certain picture violates either of these rules, emphasizing the difficulty of pleasing all tastes and the difference in viewpoints. "Sex pictures," the term applied to those productions where the love theme is over-stressed, have had little or no success here. I do not think that a "sex picture" can exercise a strong appeal in any de luxe house. The class of audiences which these theatres attract will not respond in sufficient measure to give them popularity. Our own box office records for the year which ended September

1 show that the following pictures were the greatest drawing cards, in their respective order: "The Covered Wagon," Harold Lloyd in "Hot Water," Jackie Coogan in "The Rag Man," "The Sea Hawk," "Peter Pan," Richard Barthelmess in "Classmates," "Abraham Lincoln," Colleen Moore in "Sally," Lon Chaney in "He Who Gets Slapped," and Ronald Colman in "A Thief in Paradise."

People often ask us why pictures are sometimes shown here later than in other cities. A fair question and one entitled to an answer. No one company produces all the best pictures and the best pictures are not turned out in regular succession. They arrive spasmodically. We examine the offerings of all the producers in selecting those we consider suitable for the Eastman. Frequently two or three pictures will be turned out at the same time by different companies. We cannot play them simultaneously and it is therefore necessary to schedule some of them for later playing dates.

If we confined our pictures to the productions of one or two companies we would be able to play them all very close to release date, but the Rochester public would not be given nearly so wide a selection nor such a high quality. An occasional delay in presenting a particular picture is inherent in our desire to get the 52 best possible offerings each year. People sometimes wonder if our connection with an educational institution like the University of Rochester is a handicap in presenting our programs. On the contrary, it is a definite advantage. It serves to remind us of the things we ought to do.

mitted that their performance met with general approval and applause—evidence sufficient to assume that many people, formerly indifferent to screen entertainment, have been brought a step closer to a full appreciation of the motion picture as a wholesome and satisfactory form of diversion.

According to Major Wooldridge the present market affords the theatre a wide range of photoplays which fit into the program of the Public Relations Director. There is no difficulty, he asserts, in obtaining an adequate supply of photoplays of the character necessary to a complete application of the plan which brings about the approval and co-operation of the church and school authorities.

The preferences in type of plays peculiar to any community can be catered to with photoplays of the sort which win the support of these elements in a town, he says. The theatres operated by the Playhouse company are located in communities of widely differing tastes. At Riverhead, for example, the western drama enjoys the greatest popularity, while at Mamoroneck, it is the society drama which is in demand.

The foundation of the public relations campaign is established, according to the operating method of Major Wooldridge, by booking the highest class of picture of the type in demand at a particular theatre. Theatre reform, therefore, has no place in the public relations program. The tastes of the community are catered to and there is no effort to "educate" the public away from its preferences. The whole work consists merely of using care in the selection of pictures which do not contain scenes or episodes of a nature which parents or church authorities might disapprove as proper for children.

One matinee each week is designed for the children, and the pictures for this day are the ones which are selected with such exacting care. The co-operation of schools, churches and parent teachers' associations is sought to have these matinees attended by the children. In the case of theatres where vaudeville acts are included on Saturdays—the usual day for the children's matinee—a special performance to start at a time that school children may attend following the close of classes, is put on some other day of the week. In this way the routine of the theatre is not disturbed, save for the afternoon schedule on one day a week, in carrying out a program which will enable the theatre to gain the co-operation and support of the church and school authorities, and which permits the exhibitor or exhibitors to take an active part in motion picture presentations, whether arranged for a community hall, church, or school auditorium.

Newman, Kansas City, Will Open Programs Saturdays

The Newman theatre, Kansas City Paramount house, will start a change of policy, beginning January 30. Instead of showing a new picture on Sunday, the change will be on Saturday. The change is to be made largely to accommodate the John Murray Anderson Revues.

Pictures & Vaudeville at Majestic, Detroit

Henry S. Koppin, has taken over the Majestic theatre, Detroit, and changed the policy to a picture and vaudeville combination with three changes a week. This house, heretofore operated by Paramount presented dramatical plays and musical comedies.

Metropolitan, Winnipeg, Back to Films Only

Another big change has come over the Metropolitan Theatre, a large downtown house of Winnipeg, Manitoba, which has been under the management of Charles Straw, former manager of the Strand Theatre, Brandon. The Metropolitan is showing straight pictures again after several months with a combination policy of vaudeville and moving pictures. The "Met" now has an orchestra of 10 pieces under A. Demkies, conductor, and H. J. Naftel and Walter Dolman, two of the best known musicians of the Canadian West, alternate at the pipe organ.

The Metropolitan re-opened Christmas time. The evening scale is: 1,000 seats at 25 cents; 1,000 seats at 40 cents; loges, 50 cents; matinees—all seats 25 cents, with children admitted any hour, for 10 cents.

Garden in Kansas City Now First Run Picture House

The Garden theatre, Kansas City, formerly a vaudeville house, began operation under new management this week. A. L. Greene, formerly of Goodland, Kas., and C. F. Case of Kansas City leased the theatre from the Davidson estate for the showing of first run motion pictures. Only the highest type of pictures will be shown, according to Mr. Greene, and one of the city's most popular orchestras eventually will be a feature at the theatre.

Resumes 'Three Unit Shows' at Columbia, Seattle

Robert W. Bender, manager of the Columbia theatre, Seattle, Wash., has resumed presentation of the "Three-Unit Shows," which he presented several times last season. The idea consists of an equal billing in newspapers, billboards and lobby displays, of three features of his program, last week consisting of his feature "Simon the Jester;" his comedy, a reissue of Harold Lloyd in "Never Weaken," and his music, featuring Francesco Longo's Columbia All-Artist Orchestra in a special "Jazz Week" program.

PRESENTATION PRODUCED FOR $30

This photo shows an episode in the pantomime staged at the Virginian Theatre, Charleston, W. Va., as a presentation for "A Kiss for Cinderella," and described in the accompanying article by D. C. Shiarella, manager of that house.

Developing Presentations For Small Town Theatres

Prologue Idea and Local Talent Provide Means

By D. C. Shiarella

Manager Virginian & Rialto Theatres
Charleston, West Virginia.

BY employing the prologue idea and with local talent available, presentations can be made a genuine box office attraction of the small theatre just as they are now being employed to that end by the large theatres of the big cities. Of course to do this means added work for the theatre manager—the application of time and energies and interest in the developing presentations.

The manager who has never tried the experiment and who will work along the lines which have been tested out in the Virginian and Rialto theatres which I manage, will be surprised at the small cost required to put on stage numbers which have definite entertainment value and as well bring added prestige to the theatre.

That the foregoing statements are based on fact and not theory let me outline a presentation number which we staged in conjunction with "A Kiss For Cinderella." This number employed the services of two boys and two girls, a pony and a footman. The properties consisted only of a coach, constructed of compo board and a backdrop.

The coach cost exactly $24 to build and the costumes for the boys cost $6. The total outlay, therefore, was $30. The two girls furnished their own costumes and the man with the pony donated his services—taking the glory of appearing with his steed as complete and satisfactory reward for his services.

We opened our presentation with a part of the picture showing Cinderella's coach traveling through the clouds and landing at the castle. This was projected on the front curtain. The effect was dim and hazy—an effect which contributed to the dream effect desired. As the coach arrived at the castle, the front curtain was opened and revealed on the stage the property coach with the footman at the pony's head. The carriage door was opened by the prince, who helped Cinderella out of the coach and the footman led the pony and coach off stage. The Prince and Cinderella then performed a simple but effective little dance, which was followed by a bit of pantomime performed by these two and another boy and girl similarly costumed. At the conclusion of the number the screen was lowered and the feature picture started.

Shea's new Buffalo theatre, costing close to $2,000,000 and seating 4,000, it is claimed, recently opened to a very appreciative audience. This view shows the balcony and loges and the elaborate sidewall decorations.

Shea's New Buffalo Theatre Rated Among World's Finest

COMPARING the gorgeousness of decoration, completeness of equipment and conveniences for patrons with the finest theatres of the capitals of the world, Shea's Buffalo has been opened.

The Shea Buffalo, built in exactly one year by John Gill & Sons of Cleveland from plans drawn by C. W. and George L. Rapp, cost close to $2,000,000 and has a seating capacity of 4,000. The entrance, which is on Main street, is an impressive one. A mammoth marquee is faced with three interchangeable attraction signs.

At the left side of the front of the building is the large electric sign, 66 feet high and eight feet wide, and which flashes the name, "Shea's Buffalo," for miles up and down Main street.

Entering a vestibule, 22 by 30 feet, from Main street, through five double bronze doors one comes to a ticket office placed in the center, which is of marble, six feet by five feet and seven feet high. The lobby is 80 feet long and 30 feet wide. Here one comes upon a gorgeous scene of marble walls and pillars, including immense mirrors of panelled glass. On the walls are beautiful candelabra while from the ceiling hang four crystal chandeliers, each of which were especially designed for the Shea's Buffalo.

Large arches extend up each side of the lobby. A grand marble staircase leads from the right end of the lobby to the mezzanine promenade which runs around the rear and along the south and front sides of the lobby. This promenade is artistically furnished, laid with gorgeous rugs, and has a lounge at the front over the space occupied on the ground floor by the ticket vestibule. Here is placed a grand piano, divans and large easy chairs.

From the lobby, one enters the foyer which extends along the entire length of the auditorium to Pearl street, where there is another entrance, marquee, ticket office, etc. This foyer is 22 feet wide and 90 feet long. Side aisles, separated from the auditorium, run down each side of the house.

The eye notes the elaborately decorated proscenium arch which has a height of 50 feet. The stage has an opening 66 feet wide. It is 32 feet deep. The balcony seats 1,600. There are eleven rows of loge seats in the front of the balcony and three mammoth arches at each side of the balcony.

At the center of the top of the auditorium is an immense dome, indirectly lighted. This dome is 56 feet north and south by 70 feet east and west.

The whole interior decoration of the theatre is French renaissance in character. The ceiling is covered with an infinite variety of interlacing woodwork designs on curving panels, painted in the dominant golds, pinks and blues, with many variations of these shades. The designs include shields, scrolls, conventional flowers and plaques.

The orchestra is arranged on a special platform which can be lowered to the basement, and raised to the stage level at the time of the overture. The organ console, similarly arranged, is on a separate elevating unit. This organ, one of the largest ever built by the Wurlitzer company, has pipes ranging in size from 32 feet to three inches in length.

Opportunities for originality in stage fittings are somewhat limited, but the stage of the Shea Buffalo offers something quite different. The fire curtain in the 66 foot wide proscenium, is raised at the opening of the house in the morning, and only the drop of red silk is visible. This curtain alone weighs 800 pounds. When this is parted, the real novelty of this stage is visible in the form of enormous gilded gates which slowly fold back.

All of the stage hangings and scenery are regulated from the ground floor by means of counter weights. The house has a lighting system above reproach. The foot and border lights are straw red and blue in color. On the stage there are sixty 1,000-watt spotlights and eighteen 1,000-watt footlights. In addition there are nine spotlights from the balcony and ten lights from the ceiling which play upon the orchestra.

Dressing rooms for the artists are located on the Main street side with an automatic elevator for the use of these folk. The screening room, equipped with two Simplex machines, is over the dressing room.

A great deal of attention has been devoted to making the house comfortable for women patrons. There are rest rooms on the balcony foyer, on the orchestra foyer

Three Dimensional Pictures PART I

ASOURCE of much contention in the picture-reproduction of scenes and objects, is the subject of perspective. From time immemorial the conveyance of thoughts and ideas, from one person to another, has depended upon the accuracy with which mental pictures are created in the mind of the listener, and even today, with the wealth of words available in every language, liberal recourse in the use of pictures, must be had to supplement the spoken and written word.

It is amusing to observe that, after a cycle extending over two thousand years, the picture language of ancient civilizations again threatens to become the true universal language of this world—this time in the form of motion pictures.

Small wonder, then, that anything affecting the true pictured representations of our thoughts and ideas should receive so much attention. All pictures are necessarily two dimensional affairs. That is, they possess length and width. The handicap to a true picture-reproduction lies in the impossibility of incorporating within it the third dimension—that commonly referred to as "depth."

The best that can be done is create the illusion of its presence and this is accomplished in a number of ways.

How It Is Done

The architect does it by means of his "perspective" drawing, which is nothing more than a two-dimensional picture having its vertical lines in the horizontal plane radiating from a so-called "vanishing point." The expert photographer obtains the illusion by carefully choosing his camera location and then carefully adjusting the camera so as to obtain a natural picture, free from distortion. The intelligent stage manager, with his series of flat, two-dimensional scenes, illuminates them individually and to a different brightness, making them stand out in relief, thereby obtaining the illusion of naturalness when the setting is viewed from an appreciable distance.

And, lest we forget, our grandparents amused themselves of a Sunday with the stereoscopic viewing contraption, still to be found in many attics, in which was placed a double picture, each view photographed from a slightly different angle, thus giving true binocular vision. This principle, in somewhat different form, is in use today in theatres wherever stereoscopic pictures form a novelty on the program.

Many Attempts

Many attempts have been made to obtain a true illusion (if such it can be called) of "depth," or stereoscopic effect, in the projection of motion pictures. Some of them have been rewarded with certain measures of success. None of them have endured in the sense that they are today applied commonly in theatres.

The reason for this apparent failure is not hard to find as the most successful methods depended, for their operation, on mechanical devices held in the hands of the observers and through which the screen pictures were viewed. In a word, they were awkward and cumbersome and served to break the spell of enchantment being woven on the screen by continually reminding the observer of their artificiality.

The tiresome effort demanded by their use predestined their doom so they were relegated to the whimsical field of novelty before they had even been exhibited on any appreciable scale.

If any true illusion of depth in projected motion pictures is to be expected of the future, the method of creating it will have to make use of the picture, projector, and screen alone, since no auxiliary devices placed in the hands of observers will permit of an enduring method.

Screens and "Depth"

The attempt has been made to obtain the necessary illusion of "depth" in the picture by creating an artificial diverting contrast between the picture and its immediately surrounding border. In brief, it consists of an illuminated figured border which serves to assist the eye in fixing the screen in space thus permitting the eye to assume a somewhat fixed focus instead of continually trying to adjust itself for each apparent change in distance pictured within the screen area. In other words, it serves as a marker in space, from which the various distances within the picture area apparently are measured.

This method has been toyed with in both this country and abroad; neither place successfully as far as extended application is concerned.

It has many advantages and one principal disadvantage which have been described before in these columns so that no detailed description of it is necessary at this time. The illusion of "depth" which is obtained by this method is apparent only when the picture is viewed casually, since if the picture be inspected critically, the illusion will vanish entirely even going so far as to create, instead, an unnatural, and somewhat garrish appearance.

It appears that a much modified version of the present affair would give better results.

Wild claims have been made by persons possessing but little information on the subject for screens which, due to some mysterious substance or construction incorporated within them, possess the property of imparting "depth" to a motion picture with the assistance of no other agency. Needless to say, such claims are manifestly absurd and nothing can be found to support them.

Judgments, in support of such claims, are invariably made on the basis of one picture projected onto one of such screens and if there is any suggestion of depth in the picture it is immediately attributed to the screen and not where it belongs—to the skill of the cinematographer who "shot" the scene and obtained a fairly faithful reproduction of it on the film.

Upon such tenuous "tests" are all of these claims founded.

It is possible, to be sure, to compare a picture on an old screen having a poor surface, with the same picture on a new screen having a good surface, and detect a marked difference in the apparent depth of the scene but the reason lies in the fact that the old screen simply fails to reproduce the picture projected to its surface. In other words, it has outlived its usefulness as a picture screen and should be discarded.

Suffice it to say that a test between two new screens of high quality, under conditions favorable to each, would fail to reveal any difference in depth, no matter what pains were taken to render one of them "stereoscopic."

with a lounge on the mazzanine, while in the basement a complete suite has been reserved for their use, including cosmetic and smoking quarters. Behind the balcony is a large foyer, decorated in similar style to the lobby. Above it is an upper balcony foyer, with arches along both sides, so that it gives the feeling of being on a bridge.

The projection booth is one of the finest as well as most up-to date in the country. It is located at a central point at the top of the balcony. It is 34 feet long and 12 feet wide. Three Simplex machines of the very latest type are used and they have special features such as door opening and tilting devices, a three-inch diameter for opening, special front plates of non-warping material, film trap gates of the same material, friction cranks, measuring devices, attachments for speed indicators, direct current motors, 200 ampere switches and boxes for same, porcelain insulators in the switch boxes to take care of No. 00 wire; 3,000 foot reel magazines, including latest type Hall & Connelly high tensile lamps. The booth is equipped with all the latest devices such as three Ward Leonard multiple rheostats, 110 volt, 150 ampere; four Leonard multiple rheostats, 110 volt and 100 ampere; one Brenkert color effect machine, type "F-3"; one Brenkert slide projector; three Brenkert spotlights with six inch iris shutters; one Brenkert metal color box complete; one Brenkert color wheel, three generators for indicators, one motor rewind, an approved film box which will hold 3,000 foot reels and which is in 15 sections.

There are also two sets of hand rewinds, for mounting and inspecting film, one rewind and inspecting bench which was supplied through the Becker Theatre Supply company of Buffalo.

There are toilets and wash rooms for the operators and rheostat rooms. There is also a vent room for taking out the foul air from the booth. All the projection machines are equipped with a changeover device which can be operated from any part of the front wall by touching momentary contact switches.

The house is operated by a staff of almost 200 persons under the managing directorship of Vincent R. McFaul.

New Machine Used for Reviewing Pictures

In order to cut the film and to cut in the titles on the Gold Rush, a new and novel machine called the Moviola-Midget Film Reviewing Machine was used. Fitzer's Kenmore Theatre Opened to Public

The new Kenmore theatre, a half million dollar, 2,000 seat motion picture theatre in Kenmore, N. Y., a suburb of Buffalo, was formally opened to the public, Saturday, January 30 with a private presentation on Friday evening, the 29th, to which were invited city officials of Buffalo, exchange officials, town officers, stockholders and friends of the management. The Kenmore has been leased by Mitchell Fitzer, who also operates the Rivoli, Swan and Savoy theatres in Syracuse and the Strand in Auburn. George Albert Bouchard has been engaged to play the $50,000 Wurlitzer organ. The house is one of the most attractive of its kind in western New York, is completely equipped and artistically furnished. There is every convenience for the comfort of its patrons. It is the only theatre in the town which long has wanted just such an institution. An ordinance has been passed permitting exhibitions on Sundays in Kenmore, which, of course, will be a great help to the new theatre.

Plans Completed for New Buffalo Theatre

Workmen soon commence work on the new motion picture theatre to be erected on Main street at west Northrup place, Buffalo, by Hager, Askey, Forrest, Inc. Bacon & Lurkey, architects, have completed plans for the house which will cost $300,000. It will have a seating capacity of 1,800 on one floor, but is being so constructed that a balcony can be added later and when required to meet the demands of the University of Buffalo section, a community growing in leaps and bounds. The decorations will be gorgeous in keeping with the Spanish style of architecture in which the house will be built. There will be a great beamed ceiling. The stage will be 80 by 30. A Wurlitzer organ will be installed.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Skyrocket" — Associated Ex., Colony, N. Y.

World: "The fragilely white and internationally provocative Miss Peggy Hopkins Joyce, one-time show-girl and married so importantly and so often as to have engaged the envy of the whole world of femininity is being seen (and by large and eager crowds) this week in 'The Skyrocket.' 'The Skyrocket' is better than dozens of pictures which have passed down the road this season. It is good enough to have held this reviewer through to the end without a struggle."

Times: "'The Skyrocket' is fair diversion, the interest in which is heightened by the scenes in Hollywood."

Mirror: "Miss Joyce makes an auspicious screen bow. She photographs beautifully and stands out as a well-defined personality. Indeed, Peggy Hopkins Joyce is the magnet that should pack Mr. Moss' Colony this week."

Herald-Tribune: "You won't be disappointed in Peggy Hopkins Joyce nor in her first picture 'The Skyrocket.' Both are what one would expect, at least that is our 'reaction.' Miss Joyce wears stunning costumes and looks very pretty in many of the scenes."

American: "Peggy Hopkins Joyce. Those three words are enough to fill the Colony Theatre during the showing of her first picture at least. Curiosity will bring the men, come to wonder and to look. Curiosity will also bring the women, some to wonder and to study. There is much to wonder at in the fame of Peggy Hopkins Joyce. And 'The Skyrocket' gives one plenty of opportunity to study her. For Associated Exhibitors have placed her in almost every scene of a typical box-office picture. People wanting to discover what there is about Peggy Hopkins Joyce will doubtless flock to see it. The picture is already probably sounding a jingle of golden pennies in box-office ears."

Graphic: "Peggy's gorgeous gowns, glittering gems and famous beauty are all there 'as advertised.' Also there's something more. There's a very good box-office story well directed, plenty of heart appeal, a peep behind the scenes of a motion picture studio, and a good supporting cast in addition to the glorious Peggy herself. Miss Joyce, considering that this is her initial appearance on the screen, acquits herself creditably. Of course, she has the advantage of having been a stage favorite, so that one may reasonably expect her to be more or less at home before the camera. We'd say she is rather more than less."

"Tumbleweeds" — United Artists, Castle, Chicago

Journal: "'Tumbleweeds' has everything a celluloid best-seller should have. Its big scene is the excited rush of the homesteaders when the Cherokee strip opened before them at last, and they rumble to it on horseback and on foot, in their covered wagons and on high-wheel bicycles, falling over each other, stampeding and trampling and dashing on. Nothing like it has ever been screened. Bill Hart, who made the west for the screen, is back. He's back to keep 'em standing on the sidewalk, hopping on icy feet in their impatience, and to make the customers at the Castle sit on the edge of their seats and nudge an unknown neighbor and chuckle—'Atta boy, Bill!' He's back to pull his guns and ride like a streak on his faithful Pinto, and to get his man."

Herald-Examiner: "A horse, a girl and good old Bill Hart. I never begrudge an hour to that combination. And Bill is good. Good old Bill. Sometimes I think of Bill Hart as affectionately as I do of Bret Harte, the man that wrote a West which is still extensively imitated."

Tribune: "Here's our old pal Bill, just as natural as life. 'Tumbleweeds' is a fine vehicle for him. Yes, sir,—it's ol' Bill Hart back again! Just can't help liking him, can you! He has a powerful appeal for you. The scenery is gorgeous and some of the 'shots' are beautiful beyond description. The mad dash of the homesteaders on foot, horseback, bicycles, and in equipages of all kinds from the lowly buggy to the covered wagon, to stake their claims at the government signal of cannon fire, is an epic of its kind. A thrilling camera triumph. Speaking of vehicles—'Tumbleweeds' is a splendid 'comeback' carriage for the talents of Mr. Hart. Three hearty cheers!"

News: "This is the best picture Bill Hart has come along in for several years."

"Ben Hur" — M-G-M., Cohan, New York

Daily Mirror: "It is magnificent, the greatest thing we have ever seen on the screen. It is a wonderful lavish production. It bears the impressive stamp of its six million dollar expenditure, and stands in isolated grandeur as the supreme achievement of the silver sheet. Ramon Novarro scores a sensational hit as 'Ben Hur'—heroic, handsome, sincere, arrogantly youthful and fearless. May McAvoy makes a sweet heroine, Nigel de Brulier is excellent as Simonides, Winter Hall makes a sincere Joseph, and Betty Bronson as the Madonna inspires the reverence she should."

American: "The pomp of Rome and the agony of Israel surged through the George M. Cohan Theatre. And over it all shone the clear white light of faith, the beauty of the star of Bethlehem. An ancient world was brought to throbbing life in 'Ben Hur.' For ten years 'Ben Hur' has been planned. For three it has been in actual production. We hasten to say that it has been more than well worth waiting for. The producers have approached a difficult subject with reverence and understanding. The Nativity scenes are strangely beautiful, with the first technicolor that we can praise with real enthusiasm. The most poignant memory of the evening is the smile of the Virgin, Betty Bronson, as she rode on a donkey into Bethlehem on December 24th. Any one of a dozen sequences in this production would have made a talked-of picture. Yet, though they have all been piled into one huge production, there is no confusion. The sea fight is a splendid thing. The chariot race a vivid experience for anyone who sees it."

Times: "As a film spectacle it is a masterpiece of study and patience, a photodrama which is filled with so much artistry that one would like to ponder over some of the scenes to glean all that is in them instead of just watching the passing flash. Ordinary conventional methods have been discarded by Mr. Niblo, the director, who, while he has availed himself of every iota of photographic worth in the thrilling episodes, nevertheless finds it pleasant to get in trenchant streaks and positively sublime poetic touches. And when the march to Calvary is depicted it is done with such solemnity and quiet respect that one feels impelled to bow one's head."

The World: "'Ben Hur' takes rank in the very forefront of all the screen plays which I have seen. With its size no man can quibble. In the splendor of its individual 'paintings' 'Ben Hur' is of utter loveliness, in the heart breaking scenes of the galley slaves, in the broad and far flung reaches of its desert, mountain and ocean episodes, in Ramon Novarro's manly, handsome, heroic performance; in the pouring forth of the thousands across the waste lands in these really striking moments the players and Mr. Niblo have wrought nobly and impressively."

Herald Tribune: "The chariot race in 'Ben Hur' is the biggest thing ever done in pictures. When finally Ben Hur wins over the hated Messala, the people in the theatre could stand it no longer, they stamped and cheered. The suspense was terrible. Novarro is magnificent. Francis X. Bushman was a splendid choice as Messala. Carmel Myers is effectively beautiful in her portrayal of the fair Egyptian. Fred Niblo has invented many new ways of taking pictures. It is as an adroit a use of the motion picture camera as we have ever seen. Betty Bronson is seen for a brief moment as the Holy Mother and she gives a performance that is truly inspired, she has a spiritual quality about her that is startling. 'Ben Hur' is the greatest thing that has ever been put on the screen. It is. It's too great. We are still dazed. Don't miss 'Ben Hur.'"

Sun: "It was received with enthusiasm which manifested itself in hand claps and cheers—especially during the thrilling chariot race. That both the religious and romantic-melodramatic appeal of the picture went straight to the hearts of the audience is not open to question. Throughout the unwinding of the story between Jerusalem and Rome and Antioch there is much pageantry, exciting sea fights between ancient galleys, the fall of a temple, a thrilling chariot race, and beautiful close-ups of Betty Bronson as the Virgin. The film reaches its highest peak in the chariot race—which is unquestionably the most dynamic race ever filmed. It has breath taking effect. It is good."

Telegram: "Every lover of the silver screen will walk a mile to see 'Ben Hur.' Bewildered eyes will blink as scene upon scene is flashed before them, the gleam of thousands of Roman helmets in a market place, galley slaves, chained and sweating, as they propel the huge galleys, warriors leaping from crippled triremes into a sea already black with human heads, to record everything in this picture would take hours. 'Ben Hur is here!'"

Journal: "Beautifully presented, magnificently made, 'Ben Hur' opened at the George M. Cohan Theatre. People forgot they were in a theatre, and cheered as the twelve-teams of four horses raced around the arena."

"His Secretary" — M-G-M., Capitol, New York

Graphic: This story is one of the most amusing screened in many a movie month. 'His Secretary' boasts some fine photography and attractive sets, and is packed with some great comedy situations. Don't miss it!"

Telegram: "The picture provides amusing entertainment. Apart from her highly successful disguise, Miss Shearer has contributed some convincing and interesting acting in her interpretation of the secretary role."

"Parisian Modes In Colour" — Educational, Rivoli, New York.

Herald-Tribune: "Hope Hampton's color film, called 'Parisian Modes,' is on the program. It is very beautiful . . . tantalizing flashes of 'Lavin', Paul Poriet, and 'Drecol.' The colors in the picture are so perfect that it is as good as seeing an all fashion parade in Paris."

Mirror: "In addition to the feature picture there is a one-reel fashion film in natural colors, with Hope Hampton the lovely model for many ditto frocks and wraps."

World: "On this same varied and agreeable program yesterday for the first time an attractive set of fashion pictures, in color, posed by Hope Hampton, was shown. This handsome star, gowned in stylish garments gathered in all parts of the world last summer (and particularly in Paris), smiled prettily and walked before the camera, exhibiting these dainty and gorgeous pieces to the delight of the houseful of feminine admirers."

The Robert Morton Organ Company,
1560 Broadway,
New York City, N. Y.

Gentlemen:-

The Style 49 Pit Unit Organ which we purchased some two years ago, we consider a wonderful addition to our musical programs.

The instrument has caused us no trouble whatever and being located where we cannot have the attention of an experienced Organ
Mechanic for repairs and tuning, we found that in a very short time, with just a little experimenting, that we were able ourselves,
to keep the organ in first class condition.

We feel confident in saying to the average Exhibitor who wishes to play to capacity, that this is the best musical instrument the smaller town theatre could possible have.

Yours truly,

A CHORUS OF PRAISE FROM THE CRITICS

"Leatrice Joy at her best. * * * Should appeal to any audience."
—Morning Telegraph

"Good! The interest is held pretty tight from beginning to end."
—Harrison's Reports

"Carries a wallop, a romance and action."
—N. Y. Daily Mirror

"A dandy picture. * * * You can't appreciate a picture like this unless you see it. Take our advice, and do."
—N. Y. Daily News

"A picture of unquestioned artistic appeal and box office value."
—M. P. World

"It would be surprising if this picture failed to 'click' in any house."
—M. P. News

"Crook story that carries some unusual twists * * * There is the usual first class De Mille production."
—Film Daily

"Miss Joy is in exceedingly good form both as to role and her figure."
—Mae Tinee in Chicago Tribune

"It abounds in sharp and striking contrast which is part of the De Mille process in production success."
—Los Angeles New

"The picture never drags and the suspense and interest is maintained up to the end, which comes in the form of a very melodramatic climax."
—Los Angeles Herald

Los Angeles, Jan. 26.
(Drawing Population, 1,250,000)
Metropolitan drew the picture shoppers last week, with the house getting the top figure by $3,000 and playing to a profit. The attraction was "What Happened to Jones"
(Reginald Denny). This is the first Denny (Universal) picture to ever play this house, and the drawing power of this star asserted itself from the opening day. Denny also demonstrated the fact that he can pull trade into a house which some

THE WHOLE INDUSTRY

GREAT events cast their shadows before them. Everybody sensed something gigantic before the release of "The Hunchback" and "The Phantom." The same frenzy of expectation foreshadows "The Midnight Sun." Now the whole industry is eagerly awaiting the first showing. And what a picture — gorgeous — glamorous — marvelous!

YOU don't have to worry about business when you've got a combination like this—a dog star known to be a big puller, in a picture made from a widely-read novel. And what a picture it is! Sizzling action every minute; clutching suspense all the way through; heart-holding drama in every scene, and coursing through all a love story of compelling power. Man, here you have KNOWN BOX-OFFICE VALUES. Take advantage of them—NOW!!!

Startling! Thrilling! Dramatic!

UNUSUAL, too—just the sort of picture to pep up moviegoers' appetites. And a cast that looks like the electric sign for a Broadway stage success—James Kirkwood, Hope Hampton, Louis Wolheim, Ivan Lino, Flora Finch. All in an absorbing, unique plot with a New England locale and one of the most novel story ideas ever evolved. The central point is an island off the coast to which only betrothed couples are allowed to go. Boy, with that situation to start with, they made a PICTURE! By all means—GET IT!

LYNN REYNOLDS

DIRECTOR

Had three pictures named by the leading journals among the first fifty-two box office attractions of 1925.

They were

Riders of the Purple Sage

The Rainbow Trail

The Deadwood Coach

This tops a record of seventy-three feature productions made by him during the past eleven years. Not a single flop and many outstanding successes. Fifty-six of the continuities were written by him and eleven were his original stories. As a record of consistency this is seldom equaled.

In less than two years we have lined up over twenty-five hundred theatres for our economical service, and by the end of this year we confidently expect to have

5000 SATISFIED CUSTOMERS SUCH AS THESE:

"If your service is to be judged by that rendered to us then I may well recommend it to all exhibitors seeking a consistent money making advertising medium for their features."
Rialto Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.

"Words of praise are never too late, so add my indorsement to those you have already on file. I am thoroughly satisfied with your trailers and besides your printed material carries a strong and fine argument why patrons should see the picture."
W. F. Burke, Pres. & Mgr., Mecca Enterprises, N. Y. C.

"Thanks for your prompt attention to our orders. When you render service like this it is useless to wish you a Prosperous New Year; you can have nothing else but."
Rialto Theatre, Hartford, Conn.

"I have been using your trailer service for the past six months and have found it first-class. It has done considerable toward increasing my attendance and I can heartily endorse and recommend it to fellow exhibitors. Your opening and closing trailers are A-1. Your service on quick bookings has been the same. In fact, there is not one single thing that I could complain of. Keep it up and your success is assured."
Nicholas F. Powers, Mgr., Strand Thr., Doylestown, Pa.

"Your service is proving very satisfactory. Trailers on the pictures are very good. Service like this ought to improve any exhibitor's business, and it is well worth the price."
Capitol Theatre, Canton, Ill.

"Your service is novel, unique and superior to anything of its kind I have ever seen, and at the same time costs considerably less."
Warner Bros. South. Theatres, Charlotte, N. C.

"We have in the past used another company's trailers, but feel confident that we will receive a superior trailer service both from the advertising of attractions and service you will render."
Robb & Rowley Theatres, Dallas, Tex.

"Your service fills a long felt want, as previous prices on trailers made them prohibitive for theatres in smaller cities."
Capitol Theatre, Delphos, Ohio

"Since using your trailer service my receipts have increased 20%."
Cliff Queen Theatre, Dallas, Tex.

'SEA BEAST' AT $24,113 LED ALL SPECIALS—BROKE WARNERS' TOP

Nothing startling along the street last week with the exception of the breaking of the house record at Warner's with "The Sea Beast." On a two-a-day policy at $1.10 and $2.20 top it played to over $24,113.

Warner's—"The Sea Beast" (Warner Bros.) (1,360; $1.10-$2.20) (2nd week). Corking business for second week of changed policy, and John Barrymore's name, together with a corking ballyhoo electric sign in front of the house, supplied by Norden, has been responsible in large measure for the pull. Picture is beginning to be talked about. Last week was $24,113, record for the house under either policy that it has been operating.

Service that goes beyond the product

The Simplex Sales Organization is backed by years of close contact and intimate experience with the needs of motion picture exhibitors. Each member is qualified to render a service that looks beyond the product.

Simplex Projectors are so designed and constructed that they assure the best presentation of pictures that modern engineering science can produce. But the Projector is just a unit in the service this organization extends to exhibitors through its salesmen.

New ideas on maintenance: Advice on arrangement; how economies can be effected in operating expense; how to capitalize on better projection; these and many other matters are included in the salesman's service program.

Look upon Simplex Salesmen as your own service men. Draw upon their experience for the solution of your own problems. Their job is to serve — and they like to do it.

Know the Simplex Salesman.

Details of Simplex Service are told in an interesting booklet prepared for exhibitors. A copy of this booklet will be sent to you on request.

Progress

TWO significant statements were made to me last week.

Because they came from a man of high executive position, long experience and sound judgment; and because they hit the very fundamentals of this business as it stands right now, I put them down here as emphatically as I can.

First, he said that producer owned theatres were not the true solution of the exhibition business.

He went further, and said this: that if a theatre or theatres were put up today, of a character, location and operation to be desired by the public—in other words, a number of better seats for the public—then such a theatre enterprise need not have a producer tie-up in order to be assured of acceptable product. It would be a preposterous thing to withhold such product and so flagrantly oppose public sentiment and public needs just because certain wires and selfish ambitions were thereby crossed within the industry. No industry can fly in the face of public welfare. That cannot and will not be permitted.

His next statement was the counter proposition to this.

Just because a theatre or theatres exist is no reason why the producer industry is bound to take care of them. If these theatres are not in the line of progress they are making their own bed and must lie in it. If better theatres are built and offer better seats to the same public, then these are the theatres that deserve and demand the industry's best support.

In other words, it is a plain matter of progress—progress with the public. If an industry, as a whole, is to keep its place in the sun, it must keep faith with the public. The public is the determining factor of progress—not the varied and personal affairs and objectives of the people within the trade.

If the wires within the trade are so crossed as to impede progress—if, as we state, they jeopardize the building of the better seats the public wants, then these wires must be uncrossed. They will be.

If, on the other hand, better theatres can be built in any locality and are not built, then those out of date theatres have no right to demand that they be safeguarded against progress, and the industry has no right to agree to this demand.

The best theatres we have today—those that have led the march of progress and have done immeasurable good for this business—were built out of individual initiative, by men of vision, and daring. There was no assurance of product; no helpful support; but, on the contrary, loud prognostication of foolhardiness and failure.

It has been the same way with pictures. The pioneers in production—the ones laughed at and threatened—are responsible for the remarkable hold this entertainment has upon the public today.

And so it will be this year, next year and in the years to come. The men who foresee what the public wants will succeed whether the trade likes it or not, and the trade will, as always, reorganize itself to meet the lines of progress successfully established—with the public.

W. A. Johnston

Speaking Editorially

GOOD news this week from Missouri: Governor Baker, under the pressure of adverse criticism, has abandoned his plan for a referendum on a ten per cent tax on amusements and tobacco. Missouri exhibitors are greatly elated.

THE foreign situation comes to the fore again in view of the testimony given by Jack Connolly, of the Hays organization, before the House Committee on Appropriations, in which Mr. Connolly pointed out that no less than sixteen countries are now centers of agitation, more or less veiled, against American pictures.

Meanwhile, our film exports are steadily mounting. In 1925, the total export footage amounted to 290,190,973 feet as compared with 237,930,085 feet in the preceding year.

THE FILM YEAR BOOK for 1926 has come from the presses, and represents the highwater mark of achievement in its field to date. The volume contains more than 800 pages. It is filled with statistical and other information which every wide-awake member of this industry needs on his desk.

The assembling of such a book is a colossal job. It has been done in splendid shape, and more impressively than ever before. Our hats off to Danny, Jack Alicote and their associates.

Frank Lloyd, producer-director for First National, with Mrs. Lloyd and their daughter Alma, met by John McCormick upon their return to Hollywood from an extended tour of the Orient. Lloyd will resume production work at First National shortly.

THE era of big pictures on Broadway continues unabated. At the Astor theatre, "The Big Parade" is in its eleventh week; "Stella Dallas," at the Apollo, in its twelfth; "The Merry Widow," at the Embassy, in its twenty-third; "Ben Hur," at the George M. Cohan, in its fifth; and "The Sea Beast," at Warners, in its third. All are unquestioned draws. "Mare Nostrum," the new Rex Ingram effort, will open shortly at the Criterion, and "La Boheme" will soon supplant "The Merry Widow." Never has Broadway seen such a large group of big pictures, of such wide appeal.

TWO important staff changes of the week: Nat Rothstein leaves F. B. O. to rejoin Universal, first to handle the campaign on "The Flaming Frontier," and then to go to Universal City as head of a production unit. In the nine years in which Mr. Rothstein has been associated with the industry he has earned a real place as a creator of distinctive, forceful advertising and exploitation.

"Buddy" Stuart has resigned from Publix Theatres to join the advertising staff of Associated Exhibitors. He is another young man who has worked hard and shown genuine results in his chosen field.

THE week's social calendar included the premiere showing of "Three Faces East" at the Plaza Hotel under the auspices of the Film Mutual Benefit Bureau, with Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld in charge of the presentation; and the annual Naked Truth Dinner of the A. M. P. A. Of these more later.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

FOX DIRECTOR ON RADIO

RAOUL WALSH, Fox director, traded the megaphone for the microphone last Wednesday and spoke from radio station WJZ, New York City, on "What Price Glory?", his next production. He spoke enthusiastically of the inspiration which this story offers and of his efforts to cast the strong leadings roles, Captain Flagg, Sergeant Quirt and the girl, Charmaine. The picture, he said, will be produced with the utmost fidelity to the stage version.

"U" FAMILY GROWS

AN addition to the Universal family occurred this week when Mrs. Edward F. Todd presented the chief comedy and serial cutter with a bouncing baby girl, weighing seven and one-half pounds. Todd asserts that instead of the proverbial silver spoon in her mouth she entered the world with a pair of silver shears in one hand and a bottle of film cement in the other.

"MIDNIGHT SUN" SHINES

UNIVERSAL'S new special, "The Midnight Sun," impressed the National Board of Review so favorably this week as to exact from them one of their asterisks denoting an unusually meritorious subject. The other films to receive the honor this week were two Grantland Rice Sportlights, "Strenuous Life" and "The Great Arena," and Pathe Review No. 5.

WELCOME BACK!

AFTER an absence all too long, Theodore Roberts is back before the camera in "The Cat's Pajamas" at the Paramount Hollywood studio. He declares he is happy to be back—but no happier, we daresay, than the fans will be to welcome him back.

Thunder, the Marvel Dog, signs a contract with Alexander Panthages calling for his personal appearance with the Gotham productions, "His Master's Voice" and "The Phantom of the Forest."

Hope Hampton in a charming dress which she wears in "Colorful Fashions from Paris," the Educational-McCall Fashion reel in colors.

Doris Hill, the latest beauty to be signed by Warner Bros., who expect great things of her. She is a cousin of Eugene O'Neill, the dramatist.

Joe Fisher (left), who is First National representative in the Malay States, China, India and the Straits Settlements, snapped in Hollywood with John McCormick, in charge of West Coast production.

Six vessels in tow by the tug "Marguerite" leaving Baltimore for Norfolk, Va., where four additional schooners will be picked up for towing to Los Angeles, where they will figure in the action of "Old Ironsides" which James Cruze will direct for Paramount.

Benjamin Christiansen, the Scandinavian director, with Norma Shearer, whom he is directing in his own story, now called "The Devil's Circus" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer).

Inauguration dinner tendered by the Chicago Film Board of Trade to its president, J. J. Sampson, in the Bal Tabarin room of the Hotel Sherman, Chicago. This was one of the liveliest social events of Chicago's film row in some time and resulted in an enthusiastic turnout. Ralph Kettering was toastmaster and kept things moving rapidly. A splendid lineup of vaudeville acts was furnished by Dave Dubin. A handsome silver coffee set was presented to Sampson. George Dembow was chairman of the happy occasion.

VERA HERE AND THERE

VERA STEADMAN, Christie leading lady, leaves for Palm Beach next week to be there for the national motorboat racing championships to be run off February 20th to 22nd. She will drive the Christie 151-hydroplane, "Baby Mine." . . . Mal St. Clair has returned to California, where he will direct the next Pola Negri vehicle . . . Monte Blue was at the Warner theatre, New York, the other evening for a radio talk. He picked up the phone to ask for a number, saying that he was Monte Blue. The switch-board girl at the theatre refused to believe him and he had to go upstairs and appear in person before she was convinced. That's what comes of being in the silent drama. . . . Quinn Martin, writing in Liberty, extends copious praise to "Cupid a la Carte," one of the Fox O. Henry series. He declares it one of the best subjects he has seen. . . . During the showing of "Little Annie Rooney" at the Regent theatre, Toronto, a little cripple, interested in the picture, unconsciously rose from his seat without his crutches and left them at the theatre. His name was not learned. So says Manager D. C. Brown. . . . Every sort of sport has been used to create screen climaxes except one—harness racing—and now that has been used by Fox in "The Dixie Merchant."

The scenes are said to be thrilling in the extreme. Eight Akeley cameras were used to film the action. . . . Thomas Meighan has finished work on "The New Klondike," and leaves for New Port Ritchie, Fla., with Mrs. Meighan for a brief vacation. . . . Pat Sullivan is bringing a new actor to the screen, direct from the Chinese studios—Ng Ka Py. (Don't pronounce it, just spell it.) Ng will appear in "Felix in Blunderland." He is the best known of present day Chinese dragons and Sullivan saw him frequently in China on his recent trip.

ABAS GREASEPAINT!

BAD news for the makers of greasepaint, nose putty, liners and mascara is contained in the announcement that "Sea Horses" has been filmed at the Paramount Hollywood studio without makeup, and has proved an unqualified success. None of the male members of the cast, Jack Holt, George Bancroft, William Powell or Mack Swain, used any makeup whatever. Florence Vidor used a little powder, nothing else. Superior lighting and improved photography make this possible.

Now our screen actresses will be removing makeup instead of applying it when they arrive for work at the studio.

Here's how they do those scenes in which an entire room seems to revolve. The apparatus shown in these two views was used in an unnamed Mermaid comedy for Educational, with Lige Conley and Estelle Bradley. The barrel-like contrivance, inside of which is the set, revolves on rollers in a cradle under it.

A GORGEOUS TIME

GLORIA SWANSON entered the Paramount Long Island studio the other day to find awaiting her a 60-foot deep gorge backed by a mountain range and crossed by the remnants of a log bridge—and a high spirited horse waiting to take the leap across the chasm with her on his back.

This was the setting for a sequence in "The Untamed Lady," and she gamely made the leap, pursued by Lawrence Gray on another horse. All Gray had to do was fall off this horse half way across, land in a tree and fall to the bottom. The fact that a heavy mattress lay below didn't cheer him up much. Nevertheless, the daring stunt was performed as written into the script. It was at first planned to do this scene at Bear Mountain, but snow interfered. Later the company went to Pinehurst, N. C., but a mountain blizzard developed, so the gorge was reproduced on the huge upper stage of the studio, with a range of hills built to perspective in the background.

"SEA BEAST" AT WANAMAKER'S

CONGRATULATIONS are being extended these days to Bert Adler for the tie-up which he arranged recently with the John Wanamaker store in New York on "The Sea Beast." A Moby Dick week was held at the noted department store, resulting in copious special advertising and displays.

Seider Starts Movement for Exhibitor Harmony

Sends Envoy to Confer with Western Leaders

By OSCAR COOPER

A DETERMINED effort for internal harmony in the ranks of organized exhibitors is under way. It has been started by Joseph M. Seider, Business Manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, with the avowed purpose of bringing the Allied group back into active work in the national organization.

The first step is the sending by Mr. Seider of a personal envoy to talk with the Western leaders.

This envoy is E. Thornton-Kelly, proprietor of the Grant-Lee theatre, Palisades, N. J., an associate director of the Jersey M. P. T. O. and active on the Arbitration Board of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York.

Mr. Kelly leaves for Chicago on February 9. From there he goes to Detroit; Madison and Milwaukee, Wis.; and Minneapolis. He will confer with such leaders as W. A. Steffes, head of the M. P. T. O. of the Northwest; Jack Miller, of the Illinois organization; and J. C. Ritter, H. M. Richey and other officials of Michigan.

He will also meet Fred C. Seegert, President of Wisconsin; and Solomon Levitan and Henry A. Staab, of the same organization. The indications are that they, as active and important figures in the M. P. T. O. A., will aid in furthering the harmony movement.

It was also learned this week that another prominent figure in the harmony movement is Jake Wells, of Richmond, Va. Mr. Wells stated at the meeting of the M. P. T. O. A. Administrative Committee in New York last week that he was so impressed with the work being done under the Seider regime that he would go at his personal expense to see Messrs. Steffes, Ritter and others and urge them to re-enlist their state organizations actively in the M. P. T. O. A.

This is a development of importance because of the high regard in which Mr. Wells is known to be held by the Western leaders.

The first public indication of the harmony movement was noted in the current Official Bulletin of the M. P. T. O. A. in an editorial, signed by Mr. Seider, and headed "Locarno—Why Not in the Motion Picture Industry?" This editorial said:

"A certain number of theatre owner leaders have charged politics, and simultaneously with the charge, have become inactive. Let us put it this way—instead of resigning they have become quiescent.

"The peril of theatre owners, because of the unprecedented theatre building and aggressiveness of large circuits and producer-theatre owner units, assuredly warrants the dropping of all personal differences, politics, and personal ambitions, so that the theatre owners of the country may be represented by men united in thought and purpose.

E. Thornton-Kelly, who is going on important mission to Western Exhibitor Leaders.

"As serious as the situation is, the theatre owner still controls, because he is the buyer—or rather he could control if he would use sanely his power of purchase.

"'Show Me' has been the stumbling block of the theatre owner organizations. Everybody wanted to be shown. The leader wanted to be shown by those doing the actual work. The theatre owner wanted to be shown before he contributed toward the support of the institution functioning in his behalf. Were the theatre owner to have contributed first, he would not now find himself in the precarious position.

"In the rush for the acquisition of theatres there is no preferred list. The theatre owner who appears secure today is the victim of tomorrow.

"If the very men who are threatened will work in concert it can be executed.

"Now is the time for a Locarno in the Exhibition Branch of the Motion Picture Industry—a deferment of a Locarno will make future effort . . . too late."

In an interview with a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, Mr. Seider this week declared that he was very hopeful of the success of the harmony movement.

"I think we, at national headquarters, have definitely shown results in the past few months," he added. "I announced when I took this office that I would not be a party to the playing of politics, and I meant exactly what I said. The national organization in the past has suffered from personal politics, so much so that its very existence was jeopardized. Happily, that situation is now past and done with.

"The statement by Jake Wells that he would go at his personal expense to talk with the Western leaders is highly gratifying, for one reason because he had been very skeptical that a constructive program would be pursued by the national organization. He is now convinced that we mean business, and I don't have to tell you that his judgment will have great weight with our contemporaries out West.

"Michigan, Minnesota, Illinois, Kansas and the other fine organizations in the Midwest need us, and we need them. That is the plain truth of the situation. They said that if we would show constructive results they would come back actively. In all modesty, I must say that we have done so.

"The time has come for us all to learn exactly where we stand. Those who are not actively in the M. P. T. O. A. are really out of it. We are now taking steps to bring about co-operation in fact. These leaders realize that the situations which made the formation of the M. P. T. O. A. so imperative are reaching a climax. Necessity will, I am certain, bring about the success of this harmony movement."

Conference on Contract Called by Rembusch

FRANK J. REMBUSCH, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Indiana, has sent telegrams to exhibitors throughout the country asking them to come to French Lick Springs, Indiana, Feb. 24-25 for a conference on the uniform contract exclusively.

The wire says in part: "For past fourteen months theatre owners everywhere have talked and complained about the uniform contract but done nothing. Because of past organization political differences national united action has been impossible up to this time. Buying season opens within ninety days. Unless theatre owners unite and make immediate demand for a fair contract we will be forced to continue using the same old one-sided contract."

According to Mr. Rembusch, acceptances to attend the conference have been received from H. M. Richey of the Michigan organization, W. A. Steffes of Minnesota, Fred Dolle of the Kentucky M. P. T. O., William James, president of the Ohio M. P. T. O., Charles Nathan of Peoria, Nathan Ascher of Chicago and Jack Miller of the Illinois organization.

Important Theatre Changes and Circuit Acquisitions of the Week

SUMMARIZED, the important changes in and additions to the theatre map are reported this week as follows:—

Finkelstein and Ruben—L. J. Johnson, Minneapolis architect, retained to investigate theatre sites and pass on plans for houses to be added to the circuit. Expansion plans expected to continue.

F. & R. have purchased an interest in the Sun and Grand theatres at Fairbault, Minn., from William Glaser, who continues as manager. Regent at Eveleth, Minn., bought by F. & R.

Universal—Franklin Park theatre in Dorchester district of Boston, taken over by Universal from C. H. Williams. N. Silver remains as manager.

Famous Players—Samuel Harding, president of Capitol Enterprises, Kansas City, verified report that Paramount is planning to build new theatre in St. Joseph, Mo. Capitol will be associated with Famous Players in the project.

Stanley—Tract purchased by Stanley Company in McAdoo, Pa., in coal regions, part of territory in which Comerford Circuit is entrenched.

Rothstein Rejoins Universal

Resigns Position at F. B. O.; Will Now Handle Campaign on Universal Special

NAT G. ROTHSTEIN, for the past several years in charge of advertising, publicity and exploitation for Film Booking Offices, this week announced his resignation from that company and his return to Universal Pictures Corporation, of which he was formerly advertising manager.

His immediate duties will consist of handling all features of the promotion of "The Flaming Frontier," including advertising, exploitation and publicity.

It is understood that he will later go to Universal City to take up special work there in connection with production.

Some nine years ago Rothstein was induced by R. H. Cochrane of Universal to give up his advertising agency in Chicago and take charge of that company's advertising. His success was immediate and he rapidly established an important position for himself in the field of motion picture advertising.

He may be regarded as a pioneer in the field of intensive, sweeping exploitation campaigns, and his advertising has been forceful and individual at all times. He has also been active in the affairs of the A. M. P. A.

Universal officials feel that special productions now demand individual attention in the preparation of campaigns and it is with this thought in mind that the expert services of Nat Rothstein have been obtained. He will take up his new duties on February 8th.

Editor of "Filmwoche" in New York to Stay

S. H. Wagener, editor-in-chief of "Die Filmwoche," a Berlin film publication, has arrived to take up headquarters in New York City and will announce a permanent location shortly. He will review all Broadway showings of pictures.

He will consider press material and communications from all concerns interested in publicity in the German field. His temporary address is 341 West 51st street, New York City.

Nat. G. Rothstein, who is now with Universal Pictures Corporation.

Three Theatre Projects for Southeast

A theatre building to cost approximately $100,000 is being promoted for Elizabeth City, N. C., by W. T. Culpepper. It will measure 84 by 116 feet and seat 1,264 persons. The site of the Hinton stables building will be used as the location. The Carolina Bank Building Company will finance the building it is said, and the playhouse will be leased to the Carolina Theatre Corporation, Inc., when it is completed. Plans were drawn by Benton and Benton, architects, Wilson, N. C.

The Statesville Inn, Statesville, N. C., will be used for the site of a theatre, to cost about $150,000 and have a seating capacity of 1,200 persons, if the plans of the Carolina Theatre Corporation, Inc., Asheville, N. C., go through. E. D. Turner is president of the theatre company.

Another moving picture theatre is planned for Elizabeth City, N. C., also, it is reported, by the Elizabeth City Lodge of Elks, No. 856. Three trustees have been appointed on the committee to investigate the project. They are: Dr. I. Fearing, Brad Sanders and P. T. Nash.

Pennsylvania Grants New Charters

Charters of incorporation were granted to the following amusement concerns, at the Pennsylvania State Department in the Capitol at Harrisburg, in the latter part of January: Theater Lobby Display Company, $25,000; John E. Davis, Bellevue, Ruben Soltz and Rose Soltz, Pittsburgh; Park Device Mfg. Co., Inc., Philadelphia, $50,000; Joseph Lusse, Robert Lusse and Richard Lusse, Phila.; Lusse Bros., Phila., $25,000; Joseph Lusse, Robert Lusse and Richard Lusse, Phila.; Edwardsville Amusement Company, Edwardsville, $20,000; M. E. Comerford, Scranton, M. B. Comerford, Scranton and James Dikas, Edwardsville, Willows Beach Company, Oakmont, $250,000; Emanuel Woodings, J. T. Anderson, and Paul E. Reinhold, Oakmont; The Stoneboro Park Company, Stoneboro, $70,000; A. D. Daily, H. Q. Hines, W. B. Slater, C. B. Hines, all of Stoneboro.

Chicago Planning Six New Houses

CHICAGO is in the midst of a new theatre boom with plans developing for six new large houses in different parts of the city. A $2,000,000 development is contemplated at Ashland and Milwaukee as soon as the Ashland Avenue widening is completed. At Ashland and Ogden and even larger development is being considered.

Another $2,000,000 project will develop in the erection of two new houses, one on 75th street from Essex to Kingston Avenue and a second at the southeast corner of Main street and Dixie Highway, Homewood. The Homewood, costing $65,000 and containing 1,500 seats will be designed by Loewenberg and Loewenberg. Warren B. Irons, president of the Irons-Clamage Amusement Company is to operate the new house.

Downers Grove is planning a second new theatre to be operated by Elmer Ulhorn and C. H. Dicke. It will seat 1,200, and the structure which will also contain stores and apartments, will cost $250,000.

Sixteen Nations Propose Laws to Limit American Films

House Committee Told of Situation Abroad

AGITATION against American films, accompanied by existing or proposed legislation restricting their importation, is under way in 16 foreign nations, Jack S. Connolly, Washington representative of the Hays office, told the House committee on appropriations, speaking on behalf of the adoption of the supplemental appropriation of $26,000 for the enlargement of the motion picture section of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, of which C. J. North is director.

The countries mentioned by Connolly as presenting unfavorable legislative situations were: England, France, Germany (contingent already on), Czechoslovakia, Austria (tax about to go on), Hungary (contingent system made a law), Poland, Cuba, Australia (threatening to exclude American films), Italy, Denmark, Sweden, India, Japan, Holland and Spain.

The situation in England is quiet at the moment. Hugh D. McIntosh, leader of the anti-American agitation in Australia is due to arrive in England this week, which may stir up a new burst of feeling.

France, it is reported, will shortly increase all import duties about 30 per cent., which would include films. There has been other talk in this country of a high protective tariff on the importation of motion pictures.

Austria is about to impose a tax on imported films. The present plan calls for a tax of $100 per subject, but it is hoped that this may be reduced to $50. Every effort is being made in this direction at present. The reports indicate that this revenue to the state may be used to subsidize Austrian production. Reports from Vienna this week stated that Sascha and Vita, leading Austrian companies, were resuming production in Vienna.

Hungary has passed a contingent law, providing for 20 importations for each domestic production, but latest dispatches indicated that this had not yet been put into force. At the same time, it was stated that Hungarian producers had issued a call for a meeting of European film interests in Budapest to consider ways and means of combatting American film supremacy.

New South Wales, Australia, threatens a law which would place a tax of 25 per cent. on all moneys sent overseas for the purchase of films. Since, however, the firm most heavily hit would be Australasian Films, Ltd., a purely Australian firm, this may not go into effect in the form proposed.

Agitation in other countries takes varying forms, some of it rather indefinite, but the possibility of a league of European producers, banded together for concerted action, looms up and it is obvious that the situation calls for prompt and well directed action to protect the American industry.

Numerous Plans for Filming Abroad

"Old Heidelberg," "Man Who Laughs," and Others Pending by American Firms; Lillian Gish May Appear in "Faust"

By L. C. Moen

INFORMATION obtained here and from abroad this week indicated that plans are on foot for a number of important productions to be made outside of the United States by American firms. One of the most important of these is "Old Heidelberg," which may be made in Berlin by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in association with Ufa under the joint deal recently entered into by those companies. "Old Heidelberg," it may be noted, has enjoyed a strong theatrical revival as "The Student Prince."

This picture will probably be directed by E. A. Dupont, German director now at Universal City. Ufa still holds an option on his services for this one picture, which will be started in July according to present plans. There is an alternative possibility that the picture may be filmed in Hollywood under Dupont's direction.

It was learned from Paris that Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, has been in conference there with the heads of the Societe Generale, which produced "The Miracles of the Wolves," regarding the production of "The Man Who Laughs" from the Victor Hugo story, "L'homme qui rit." Universal entered into negotiations last year for the joint filming of this story in Paris by the French and American companies, with Sven Gade, Lon Chaney, Mary Philbin and Ernest Torrence to be sent to France for that purpose.

According to reports from Berlin, Ufa is again negotiating to obtain the services of Lillian Gish for the role of Marguerite in "Faust." This picture has been in production for a considerable period under the direction of F. W. Murnau, who made "The Last Laugh," with Emil Jannings in the role of Mephistopheles and Goesta Ekman as Faust.

It was definitely announced on one occasion that Miss Gish would play this role, but this failed to materialize. Now, through the recent affiliation between Ufa and M-G-M, the former company again hopes to obtain the American actress, which, it is pointed out, would materially enhance the box-office value of the film in America.

Various other plans are in the air. Columbia Pictures has announced plans for the filming of pictures in England and France, and the British representative of that company is now in New York for conferences.

Another interesting angle of this situation was pointed out in a story received this week by MOTION PICTURE NEWS from its Canadian correspondent, which indicated that production might develop in Canada as a result of the proposed British quota plan, as follows:

Details of film quota plans, the development of a moving picture industry in Canada and facts concerning far-reaching moves in the moving picture business were brought back by Raymond S. Peck, director of the Canadian Government Motion Picture Studio at Ottawa, Ontario, on his return from a series of conversations in New York City during the past week when he met important officials of both the American and British industries. Among other things, Peck announced that a definite step had been taken by a well-known British commercial enterprise, having extensive investments in Canada, toward the erection of a large motion picture studio in the vicinity of Victoria, B. C., on Vancouver Island, for the purpose of making pictures to qualify under the proposed British film quota legislation which, he said, would undoubtedly come into force on January 1, 1927, according to direct information that he had received.

"Important developments are occurring in both the American and British film industries which may result eventually in Canada playing an important role in the great commercial drama which is now being enacted to bring British Empire-produced films to the screens of the world," Peck declared. He pointed out that, unless a cooperative plan between Great Britain and the United States is worked out, American producers would undoubtedly lose 10 per cent of their present business in the United Kingdom.

While in New York, Peck had a conference with the representative there of the British company which has set about to establish producing facilities in Canada and learned that it was the desire of this company to make a certain number of British films in Canada each year for distribution in the British Isles and other portions of the Empire, as well as making them technically good enough so that they would be acceptable in the United States and other markets. It was pointed out that there are hundreds of excellent British and Canadian-born screen players in California who would readily go to Vancouver Island for picture making under British auspices. Details of the financing of the Canadian proposition were also told Peck.

Missouri Governor Withdraws Proposed Plan for Additional Tax Bill

FACING a solid wall of opposition from exhibitors and other amusement interests, Governor Baker of Missouri has withdrawn his plan to submit a proposed constitutional amendment providing for a 10 per cent tax on all theatre and amusement admissions.

The Governor's move came as a big surprise as he had announced that he would carry the plan through and submit it to the people regardless of the committee he had called together to discuss its features. The revenue was to have been used for school purposes.

"Some people think me stubborn," the governor said, after abandoning plans for the proposed amendment, "but the reaction to this plan for establishing a permanent fund for the public schools has been so adverse that I decided to abandon the idea."

The governor's move came just as exhibitor forces of the state were discussing a merger with all allied amusements in fighting the proposed amendment and using the screens of the state to fight the measure. Baker's withdrawal of the idea is accepted as a signal victory for exhibitors.

Spoken Drama Tax Bill Loses

Senate Finance Committee Would Avoid All Discriminatory Legislation

A DETERMINATION to avoid discriminatory legislation and the difficulty of defining the various classes of spoken entertainment were responsible for the action of the Senate finance committee in eliminating from the revenue bill the House proposal to exempt from admission tax the legitimate spoken drama, it is shown by the report on the bill submitted to the Senate by the committee.

"The House bill afforded exemption from tax for the 'legitimate spoken drama,' the committee declares in its report. "The committee recommends that the tax apply to all admissions without differentiation by reason of the character of the amusement, but that the present exemption for a charge of 50 cents or less be increased to 75 cents. The increase in the amount of exemption will leave $20,000,000 in revenue still to be derived from this source of taxation.

"In the opinion of the committee it seems unfair to afford full exemption to the 'legitimate spoken drama' and not to afford a like complete exemption to musical concerts, musical plays and similar performances of an at least equally educational and enlightening character. To deny exemption to vaudeville theatres which might contain on their programs several 'legitimate spoken dramas' of less than one hour and 45 minutes duration, can not be justified. Nor can there be any defense for imposing a tax upon a drama which happens to last less than one hour and 45 minutes and to make such tax free that exceeded that time limit.

"The administrative difficulties would be numerous. Just what would fall within the designation of 'revue, burlesque or extravaganza,' and so be taxable under the House bill, the committee was unable to determine.

"In view of the Government needs for the $20,000,000 to be derived as revenue, the committee deems it more proper to afford a reduction in the tax based upon the price paid for admission and to have the tax apply, within that limitation, to all forms of theatrical and other amusements without differentiation or discrimination."

Credit for the action of the committee, which will rebound materially to the advantage of the motion picture houses through the increase of exemption to 75 cents, goes largely to Jack S. Connolly, Washington representative of the Hays' organization.

Site Selected for F.N. Studio

New First National West Coast Studios to be Located at Burbank, Calif.; Cost $1,500,000

A RRANGEMENTS have just been completed by Richard A. Rowland, general manager of First National for the building of a new studio at Burbank, California, the site selected costing a million and a half dollars.

The location selected is known as the Providencia Rancho and the Scott tract subdivision and covers sixty-four acres. It is just three miles from the business centre of Hollywood and adjoins the Lakeside Golf Course.

Bids are now being received for the erection of a group of buildings in a decorative manner along Moorish, Colonial or Spanish lines of architecture. There will be no delay as it is planned to have at least some of the First National units installed in the new studios by June 1st. John McCormick, manager of West Coast production for First National states that the studio construction will be in the hands of C. P. Butler, an official of First National Production Corporation, who will have full charge from the beginning to the completion of the work. The plant will be designed to accommodate all of the First National executives, stars and others engaged on the Coast in the making of productions for the most elaborate and extensive program ever prepared by First National.

Washington, D. C. Board Names Officers

Officers of the Washington, D. C. Film Board of Trade were elected for the ensuing year on Monday, January 11. They are: Harry E. Hunter, Paramount manager, president; John Bachman, Educational manager, vice-president; Louis Bache, Producers Distributing Corporation manager, secretary and Tracy Cunningham, United Artists manager, treasurer.

The exhibitors will be represented on the arbitration committee by Harry Crandell, Harry Bernstein and J. Louis Rome, the latter from Baltimore while the exchange men will be represented by R. C. Robin, Pathe manager; Rudolph Burger, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer manager and Robert E. Smeltzer, First National manager. Alternates for the exchangers are: Frank L. McNamee and Harry E. Hunter.

The executive secretary will be Samuel L. Boyd and his assistant is Miss Dorothy Anderson, both of whom were re-elected from the previous year.

Youth Implicates Six in St. Louis Holdup

As the result of an alleged confession of James Walsh, 18 years old, six men are held in St. Louis in connection with the attempted holdup of the Grand Central Theatre in that city. Walsh was disarmed by Manager Spyros Cardas when the former handed the manager a note in the crowded lobby at 5.10 on Sunday, January 24th. The note read: "Get into your office and don't make any noise. If you do, I'll blow your head off."

Instead of complying Cardas seized the young man's wrist and snatched a revolver from his belt. In a subsequent alleged confession, Walsh is said to have implicated six men, one of them a former policeman, in the holdup.

Albert J. Marks, manager of the Kingsland Theatre was also a holdup victim. He was seized by two men at his own home, compelled to return to the theatre and $680 in cash was taken.

J. J. Sampson Honored at Chicago Dinner

THE inauguration dinner tendered by the Chicago Film Board of Trade to its president, J. J. Sampson, in the Bal Tabarin of the Hotel Sherman, brought out a crowd of 325 exchange men and exhibitors and was the jolliest and largest social gathering of motion picture men held in Chicago for several years.

Stunts and vaudeville acts furnished by Dave Dubin kept things lively, and Toastmaster Ralph Kettering pulled some fast ones on the crowd, and also kept the list of speakers and the length of their talks to a minimum.

During the evening a handsome silver coffee set, the gift of the Board of Trade, was presented to Mr. Sampson, who had already listened to many of the speakers pay him sincere tribute, and who had made a brief speech of thanks in return.

Credit for the great success of the dinner is largely due to George Dembow, Chicago manager of Fox, and vice-president of the Board, who was general chairman.

Marines Under Contract to M. G. M.

Fox, Wishing Troops for "What Price Glory?", Finds Devil Dogs Tied Up on Exclusive Arrangement; Suit Threatens

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER, it was learned this week, has signed a contract with the Marine Corps to produce a story of Marine life, under the terms of which M-G-M is protected for a period of one year against the appearance of the Marines in any other film drama.

When Fox Film Corporation began to lay final plans for the filming of "What Price Glory," the Laurence Stallings play of Marine Corps life, it was assumed that bodies of troops would be available from the Corps for manoeuvres, as in the past. When Major-General John A. Lejeune, commandant of the Marine Corps, was approached for permission he refused, stating that he had signed a contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer granting that company exclusive "motion picture rights" to the Marines for a period of one year after the completion of a film being made by that firm.

Saul E. Rogers, counsel for Fox Film, announced that the matter would be taken to court in an effort to have the contract nullified, according to The Film Daily, and if that move fails a further effort will be made through Secretary of the Navy Wilbur and perhaps President Coolidge.

Mr. Rogers left for Detroit on Tuesday, and could not be reached for a further statement.

Raoul Walsh, who is to direct the picture for Fox, and who came east to make final arrangements, stated merely that it would not interfere with his plans in any way and that he would proceed without delay on "What Price Glory?" next month.

Lya de Putti, German Star, Signs With F. P. L.

IT was learned in New York this week and confirmed by an announcement in Berlin that Lya de Putti, a leading German film actress, would arrive in New York about March to take up work under the Paramount banner. This, like the signing of Emil Jannings, comes as an aftermath of the Ufa-Famous-Players-Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer affiliation, Miss de Putti having appeared recently in Ufa productions, including "Variety" and "Manon Lescaut."

Announcement of the signing of the German star was made in Berlin by Ike Blumenthal, general representative of Famous Players in Europe. It was previously announced that Morris Gest had placed her under contract and would bring her to America, but this was apparently in error.

Miss de Putti is of Hungarian birth and is one of the most remarkable personalities in the ranks of European players.

Major-General Lejeune, according to Washington dispatches, maintains that he was entirely within his rights and will stand by the contract. News weeklies and others may photograph the Marines, as before, whenever they please, but the troops will be ordered out for special manoeuvres only for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, according to the contract.

Various reports stated that Fox had entered a complaint with Will Hays, but it was stated at the Hays office that this had not yet been received, and that while the matter would undoubtedly come up in the regular routine of affairs, no special action was known of at the present moment.

It was learned at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer that the picture involved in the contract is now in production at San Diego, Calif., under the working title, "Tell It to the Marines." George Hill is directing and Mary Brian, borrowed by Famous Players, is a member of the cast. The story is based on a scenario by Col. Greecy of the Marine Corps.

Major Edward M. Bowes, vice-president of M-G-M, expressed surprise at the agitation which had arisen, and stated that there was nothing unusual about the arrangement.

"We had an identical arrangement in the case of 'The Midshipman,' made at Annapolis," he said. "Major-General Lejeune saw that picture, as well as 'The Big Parade,' and felt that we could do excellent justice to a picture featuring the Marines, which he wished made to give publicity to that branch of the service."

"Since we were willing to make this picture without cost to the government and at our own expense, he felt that it was only fair that we should be granted protection against the making of any similar picture for a reasonable period and the one-year contract was signed. I am sure that anyone who knows Major-General Lejeune knows that he did not sign without being certain that he was acting within his authority, and that he is a man of his word."

While it could not be learned definitely at First National, it is generally understood that that company was protected by a one-year clause in the making of "Classmates," much of which was taken at West Point.

Will Stage Publix Shows on Coast

J. A. Partington Producing Unit Acts for Los Angeles and Frisco
Houses Pending Completion of Coast-to-Coast Circuit

PENDING the completion of a coast to coast circuit for presentation acts of the Publix Theatres Corporation, shows similar to those being produced in the east by John Murray Anderson and others, will be staged in Los Angeles for Publix theatres there and in San Francisco by J. A. Partington, San Francisco theatre man according to a report from the coast. Mr. Partington will remove his activities from San Francisco and establish himself in Los Angeles soon.

This move coupled with a report from Kansas City quoting Frank Newman as declaring that "anything might happen" when asked if he had returned there to resume management of the Newman and Royal theatres which he leased to Paramount last year, gave rise to reports that Partington was going to Los Angeles to replace Newman as head of the Publix houses there. This, however, was denied by the Publix organization heads in New York, who stated that Partington's activities in Los Angeles will be confined exclusively to the production of presentations and will not partake of theatre management in that city. Several rumors regarding Newman's

Universal Leases Colony Theatre, New York

R. H. COCHRANE of Universal this week announced that that company had taken a six months' lease on the B. S. Moss Colony theatre on Broadway, New York City. The lease includes control of management, booking and advertising, and takes effect the coming Sunday, February 7th.

The opening bill will be "What Happened to Jones," it is stated.

future activities, current in Kansas City since his return there a short time ago, remain unsupported by any definite statements by Mr. Newman or the Publix offices in New York.

According to present plans the Publix organization expects eventually to have a circuit which will permit the routing of acts from the east to the west coast without over-long jumps from one city to another. The completion of such arrangements, however, will consume a year or more and during the interim presentations for the Publix houses on the west coast will be starred in Los Angeles and play over a limited circuit in that section.

The productions will offer on a somewhat more elaborate scale the type of entertainment which Partington has been staging for some time at theatres of the Rothchild chain in San Francisco, the Imperial, California, Granada and Coliseum, now affiliated with the Publix organization.

While he will devote much of his time to producing, Mr. Partington will continue to take an active part in the direction of these San Francisco houses, in which he is interested. It is probable that Mr. Partington will become associated with production of presentations Publix headquarters in the east when the coast to coast circuit is organized.

It was reported at the time that the Publix company would establish permanent producing headquarters on the Pacific Coast and in other sections and that the acts after playing local houses would be interchanged with those staged in the east. This, however, was denied by the Publix officials in New York.

Queen Marie of Roumania to Write Screen Stories for M-G-M

QUEEN MARIE of Roumania has turned motion picture author. Louis B. Mayer, vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, announced this week that the celebrated royal author is to write an original story for screen production by M-G-M and has also signed contracts by which all her previously written novels, stories and plays are to be available for production by that organization.

Queen Marie is to write an original play for immediate production by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and the contract gives them an exclusive option on any additional story material by her. Queen Marie is a granddaughter of Queen Victoria of England and daughter of the Duke of Brunswick. She is the mother of Prince Carol who recently attracted international notice through renunciation of his rights to the throne.

Title and details of Queen Marie's first photoplay will be announced soon, Mr. Mayer said.

Hays Praises Casting Bureau

Extras Will be Benefited Without Necessity of Paying Commission

"A GREAT thing for good actors and of no earthly use to bad actors," is the way Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, described the Free Casting Bureau which has just been opened in Hollywood by the Motion Picture Producers of California, Inc.

Hays is back from a trip to Los Angeles on business which included the formal opening of the casting bureau.

"This bureau is operated by the producing organizations and eliminates commissions as high as 10% that all extra people were forced to pay in the past to agencies," said Mr. Hays. "This means that if a producing company uses a thousand extras on one particular day and pays them ten dollars each, the extras each get ten dollars, instead of nine, and the thousand dollar commission goes to the workers, not to the agents."

"The Free Casting Bureau recognizes only competent extra people and makes every effort to see that they get enough work so that they may live comfortably. This plan eliminates the extra who was not a real part of the motion picture industry. The California state officials and the Actors Equity Association have cooperated fully.

"This Free Casting Bureau is only one of the many fine things that the California producers are doing to improve conditions on the coast."

"All of us in the industry are entitled to real satisfaction at the progress the studios are making. We are surely seeing a new day in production with a tremendous increase in the number of really great pictures and an enormous rise in the standard of all pictures. I am convinced too that we have seen only the start of the movement. Production is on a new basis."

"In my trip across the United States and back I met many persons who reflect accurately the attitude of the public toward our industry. All thinking people are our friends. They know of course that we are sincere and that we are delivering week in and week out the kind of entertainment that is satisfying and which proves completely our ability to move to still finer things."

Independents Organize Further

President Chadwick Will Inaugurate I. M. P. A. Auxiliary on West Coast

AT the regular monthly meeting of Independent Motion Picture Association of America held in New York last week it was decided to organize immediately the independent producers on the west coast. I. E. Chadwick, president of the association, will inaugurate the movement on the coast. The New York meeting was presided over by Frederick H. Elliott in the absence of the president and vice-presidents of the organization.

President Chadwick has made tentative plans for the meeting on the coast which will be called within the next ten days. He will have the assistance of several of the Independent Association's executives who are already on the coast, including Sam Sax of Lumas Film Corporation, M. H. Hoffman of Tiffany Productions and Harry Cohn of Columbia Pictures Corporation.

The association has recommended to the executive committee a classification of the producer-distributor members and as a result of this action it is anticipated that at least fifteen companies will take advantage of the opportunity to affiliate with the I. M. P. A., which is composed of independent producers, distributors and exchanges.

The association approved of a short animated trailer to be attached to all independent productions and several of the company executives present stated that they had given instructions to have this trailer attached to their releases in the future.

Oscar Neufeld, of Philadelphia, chairman of the contract committee announced that he would call a meeting of his committee to be held in New York on Saturday, February 6th at which time conferences are to be arranged with representatives of other organizations interested in the adoption of a standard equitable exhibition contract.

Beach & Krahn Plan New House at Oakland, Cal.

Beach & Krahn, Inc., of Oakland, have plans and specifications for a new quarter of a million dollar theatre investment in Oakland at College and Claremont Avenue. It will be known as the "Senator" theatre and will seat 1800 people. The new theatre will be of modernized Italian architecture with an entirely new interior design of decoration. There will be six stores and ten offices in the building in addition to the theatre. One of the largest stages of any theatre in the Bay district will be a feature. It will be 40 feet in depth and 100 feet in width, fully equipped to accommodate grand opera and spectacular productions. In connection with the theatre there will be a large auto parking service. J. Albert Marshall of College Avenue, Oakland, is the architect and Maury I. Diggs will be in charge of construction work. The new theatre is part of an extensive expansion program of the Beach & Krahn Theatres, Inc., which is being financed by their own corporation with but a limited amount of stock offered for sale.

Child Admission Bill Up in Albany

Assemblyman Charles A. Freiberg of Buffalo introduced his bill on Tuesday of this week, in the New York State Legislature, which pertains to the admission of unaccompanied children between the ages of 10 and 16 years to motion picture theatres in New York state outside of the metropolis.

In connection with its introduction Mr. Freiberg said that the bill had the approval of the police department of Buffalo, as well as the president of the Board of Education of that city and the judges of the children's and city courts of Buffalo.

Wanger, Buchowetzki and Schulberg in N. Y.

Walter Wanger, general manager of the production department of Famous Players; B. P. Schulberg, associate producer on the West Coast, and Dimitri Buchowetzki, director, arrived in New York Monday from Hollywood.

Schulberg remained in New York but two days, returning to the Coast on Wednesday. Wanger returned East after two busy weeks at the West Coast studios. Buchowetzki is in New York to seek material for his next Paramount picture.

Screen Advertisers to Convene in South

THE annual convention of the Screen Advertisers Association will be held this year in New Orleans on February 11th, 12th and 13th. A special train carrying the delegates headed by President Douglas D. Rothacker in scheduled to leave Chicago February 9th as a part of the Panama Limited on the Illinois Central.

The screen Advertisers Association is a department of the Associated Advertising Clubs, made up of manufacturers, buyers and users of motion pictures for industrial and educational purposes. Douglas D. Rothacker is serving his fifth term as president of the association since its reorganization at Milwaukee.

Public Now On Trial, Declares Lasky

Producers Are Willing to Make Artistic Films, He Says. But Audiences Must Support Them; Cites Failures

THE public can have just as good motion picture as it wants, but it must support them, declared Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky, speaking before the eleventh annual luncheon of the National Board of Review last Saturday at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York City. He later amplified these remarks to a representative of the News.

"The public is on trial," he said. "There is no question of the producer's willingness to make just as fine and artistic pictures as the public wants, but the public must do its part and support such films—which it has failed to do in the past in any great measure.

"Scarcely a day passes but what some director, writer or player in our organization comes to my office with an idea for a picture with originality and artistry. We make them as often as we can afford to—but we have a board of directors and stockholders, and our first duty to them is to make pictures that will make money."

Due to the fact, he said, that "Peter Pan" and "A Kiss For Cinderella" had been made successful only with the greatest of difficulty, it has been practically decided upon to abandon plans for the Christmas special planned for next year from an original story by J. M. Barrie.

"We would like to make a picture especially for the children each Christmas," he explained, "but the support has been disappointing and we can hardly continue the practice.

"It is not alone these pictures which have failed to find the public support which they deserved. Such artistic masterpieces of artistry and subtlety as "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," "The Last Laugh," "Beggar on Horseback," "The Bluebird" and many others have failed to meet with widespread approval. They were what we call critics' pictures but the public failed to agree with the critics.

Films Important Factor in Southern Countries

ACCORDING to officials of the Pan American Union, motion pictures are one of the most important factors in promoting friendly relations between the United States and the South and Central American nations, and in developing American commerce in those countries. The showing of American products, it is stated, has done much to create a demand for furniture, automobiles and the like.

The Union urged care, however, in the portrayal on the screen of characters from these countries, stating that great improvement had been made in this direction. The wish was expressed that South Americans might see more films acquainting them with the beauties of their own countries, it being felt that an interchange of such films among these countries might promote internal harmony to the south of us.

News reels, it was stated, were one of the most valuable factors, since they showed American life exactly as it is, uncolored by the demands of screen drama.

"47 Workshop" Turns to Photoplays

PHOTOPLAY production has at last seriously engaged the attention of the "47 Workshop" at Harvard, which has developed a number of successful writers. The American Historical Film Club is ready to shoot its first scenario with the camera.

At present arrangements are being completed by which certain of the plays written by "47 Workshop" members and now Broadway successes, will become available for screen production. Daniel J. Horgan is president of the American Historical Film Company, Rolin J. Dixon, vice-president and James P. Munroe, treasurer.

In January, 1925, negotiations were opened with many of the "47 Workshop" alumni to induce them to attempt in a professional manner the production of photoplays. These negotiations will bear fruit in the near future.

"A picture of sophistication and subtlety finds an audience, to be sure, but it is not a large enough audience to repay the tremendous investment which a modern film involves. Remember that we must back up our desire to make an artistic picture with two or three hundred thousand dollars of our own money, which calls for far more courage than to merely say that pictures should be better.

"It is only the artistic pictures which also have had spectacular elements that made it possible to sell them to the public that have succeeded at the box-office, such as "Ten Commandments" and "The Covered Wagon." The smaller, intimate screen drama of sophistication cannot yet attract a profitable number of patrons.

"William Allen White is absolutely right in his contentions regarding pictures, as long as he speaks for himself—but he makes the mistake of assuming that there are enough persons like himself to make pictures profitable. When he assumes that his tastes are those of the public, he is mistaken."

Another difficulty pointed out by Lasky at the luncheon was the fact that picture producers are largely dependent upon the stage and printed fiction for their stories, and that more than half of the plays and novels were unfit to see or read, much less picturize.

He insisted, however, that he was by no means pessimistic regarding the future. Public taste, he feels, is certain to improve gradually through the occasional production of unusual merit.

Lasky's contention regarding current fiction was strikingly borne out by a letter which he received this week from R. B. Alexander of the Woman's Home Companion. Referring to Lasky's statements on contemporary novels, he said in part:

"In our case, we need but look at the average newstand to realize that many publishers are accepting the easiest route to quick returns and are feeding our young American minds with great gobs of salacious fiction and brazen yarns calculated to do nothing but fire the mind and stir the emotions."

Another speaker at the National Board of Review luncheon was Milton Sills, who made a plea for more culture in the motion picture, and urged training schools for scenarists. Other speakers were Mae Murray, John C. Flinn, Dr. A. A. Brill of Columbia university and Dr. George W. Kirehwey. More than 1,200 persons were in attendance.

United Studios - Paramount Deal Completed

The final details of the deal by which United Studios became the property of Paramount were concluded last week with the signing over of the plant by M. C. Levee and R. W. Allison representing United Studios to the buyers, represented by Frank James, attorney.

Plans for the transfer of filming operations from the present Lasky Studio on Vine Street to the new home of Paramount pictures on Melrose Avenue are continuing under the supervision of Hector Turnbull and B. P. Schulberg, Associate Producers, aided by Milton E. Hoffman, executive manager.

Sanders to Book Publix Theatres Acts

Publix Theatres Corporation has engaged the services of Earl P. Sanders to represent them as booker of acts playing some of the Publix theatres. Mr. Sanders has had fifteen years experience in this line of work, having been associated with the Orpheum Circuit and with the William Morris Agency for many years. His office will be at 1520 Broadway.

North Carolina Urges Production Center

THE annual Midwinter banquet of the North Carolina Theatre Owners was held last Wednesday evening at the Selwyn Hotel in Charlotte with 150 exhibitors, theatre owners and film exchange men in attendance. The inauguration of motion picture production in North Carolina was strongly urged, with Charlotte and Asheville suggested as the most likely production centers.

Among the speakers of the evening were F. Alton Abbott of Charlotte, secretary of the association; R. D. Craver of Charlotte, recently resigned president; C. O. Kuester, business manager of the Chamber of Commerce; E. F. Dardine, manager of Universal exchange; Mrs. J. A. Parham, president of the Better Films Committee; Percy Wells of Wilmington, past president of the association; J. E. Estridge, of Gastonia; C. W. Tillet, Jr., attorney of the organization; C. I. Gresham, of Mooresville; W. J. Allen of North Wilkesboro; Nat Royster of the Broadway Theatre and Miss Dorothy Kenney of New York, representative of the Hays organization.

Barbara La Marr Dies at 29

End Comes at Altadena After Actress
Was Apparently on Road to Recovery

BARBARA LA MARR, screen star, died on Saturday afternoon, January 30, in Altadena, Calif., as the result of complications following a nervous breakdown. Her condition had been much improved recently and it was believed that she was well along the road to restored health. She suffered a sudden relapse on Saturday and died about an hour later.

The first serious breakdown came during the filming of "The Girl from the Montmartre," but she recovered sufficiently to return to the studio to complete that picture, after which a complete rest was ordered.

The body was to lie in state for three days in Los Angeles this week, to be followed by simple funeral services on Friday, conducted by a Christian Science reader. Burial was to be made in Hollywood cemetery, where a mausoleum will be erected as a monument to the actress.

Shortly before her death she made arrangements for the rearing of her three-year-old adopted son, Donald. He was adopted in Dallas, Texas, more than two years ago, and has been cared for during recent weeks by Mrs. Tom Gallery (Zasu Pitts).

Miss La Marr, who was 29 years of age, rose to screen fame in an incredibly short time. She was on the stage from childhood, in vaudeville and stock and as a dancer. She became a scenario writer for Fox, but her unusual type of beauty soon led to her appearance before the camera.

Douglas Fairbanks selected her for the role of Milady in "The Three Musketeers," where her appealing beauty won instant notice. Rex Ingram cast her for important roles in "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Trifling Women," which further added to her popularity. She was given featured roles in "Quincy Adams Sawyer," "The Hero," "The Eternal City," "Strangers of the Night," "St. Elmo," "Thy Name is Woman," "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," and many others.

She had by this time established herself so definitely with the public as the leading portrayer of "siren" roles that her stardom was a logical sequel. She was accordingly placed under a stellar contract and made "The White Moth," "Sandra," "The Heart of a Siren," and "The White Monkey."

Her last role was in "The Girl from Montmartre," first known as "Spanish Love" and changed to the present title. She was in poor health at the commencement of this picture and the strain proved too great, resulting in the breakdown which led to her death.

Her passing robs the screen of one of its most individual players and one who contributed to it several roles not likely to be soon forgotten.

Ginsberg, Kann in Partnership

Will Distribute Pictures on Independent
Market in America and Abroad

A NEW partnership for the distribution of pictures on the independent market in this country and abroad has been formed by Henry Ginsberg and George E. Kann, both long and favorably known in the picture industry.

Kann for the past twelve years has been identified with the foreign market. He was for many years identified with Universal and with Goldwyn in charge of foreign sales. For the past two years he has been a member of the Simmonds-Kann Enterprises, Inc., foreign distributors.

Ginsberg is widely known as an independent distributor. The Henry Ginsberg Corporation has grown rapidly in the year of its existence in the marketing of product in the state right field.

According to the announcement, the new company will be one of the most thoroughly organized selling combinations in the field. The contracts of the Henry Ginsberg Distributing Corporation for the handling of Banner and Royal productions will be taken over by the new concern. The association of the two men will bring about a change in the name of the company. The organization will hereafter be known as the Henry Ginsberg-George E. Kann Distributing Corporation.

Additional plans for the expansion of the firm's business are under way.

Stralem Elected to Finance Committee of Paramount

Casimir I. Stralem, a member of the firm of Hallgarten & Company, has been elected a director and member of the finance committee of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to succeed Maurice Wertheim, resigned.

King Meighan Signed By Columbia

COLUMBIA PICTURES has signed King Meighan, brother of Tom, to a starring contract and he will leave immediately for the west coast to start work immediately in the first picture in which he ever appeared. It is likely this will be "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," one of the early releases for next season.

Young Meighan is a product of Pittsburgh and his sole experience in the picture industry has been in the selling end of the game. He is younger than Tom, has an abundance of personality and good looks and has always wanted to appear on the screen.

Further than the announcement that he will probably be one of the stars of "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," nothing has been announced for the future for Meighan. Stories are now being selected for him as well as a number of candidates to act as his leading lady.

Mullin Made Maintenance Chief for Publix

M. J. Mullin has been appointed Supervisor of Maintenance of the Publix Theatres Corporation, with headquarters in New York. His department will handle all of the supplies, equipment, advertising accessories, etc., used in the maintenance of the theatres of he corporation throughout the country. Plans for the department involve the establishing of warehouses at convenient points throughout the country, such as are now maintained in Atlanta and Dallas.

Mullin has been in Atlanta for the past seven years, the last three of which he has been in charge of the warehouse of the theatre division of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Previously he acted in the same capacity for S. A. Lynch Enterprises, Inc.

Safe Crackers Loot San Francisco House

Safe-crackers, using an acetylene torch with much skill burned their way into a large steel safe in the Alexandria Theatre, one of San Frisco's largest residential houses, early January 25th and got away with $1500. Appropriating a velvet portiere from the theatre lobby, the burglars hung it across a hall to screen the brightness of their flame from the street.

Minneapolis Board Takes Up Fire Case

The Minneapolis arbitration board has taken under advisement the case of Film Booking Offices against the Gem theater at Inkster, N. D., in which a film destroyed by fire figures. The fire started in an adjoining building and razed the theater. The film was lost. The exhibitor pointed out that he could not obtain any insurance on prints except for fire which starts in the theater booth.

George E. Kann, now in partnership with Henry Ginsberg in Henry Ginsberg-George Kann Distributing Company.

"U" Fixes Full Production Schedule

Announces Greater White List With Jewels and Specials for Release During the 1926-27 Season

SIMULTANEOUSLY with the return of Carl Laemmle from Europe this week, Universal announces its full production schedule for the season of 1926-27. The Greater White List is a schedule of Jewels and special productions.

In addition to the several super-pictures such as "The Flaming Frontier," "The Midnight Sun," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Gulliver's Travels" and "Les Miserables" Universal plans the release of five or six special Reginald Denny pictures to be marketed separately, twenty-eight Universal Jewels, twenty-four Blue Streak westerns and a lengthy schedule of serials and short subjects.

The first Denny production will be "Be-ware of Widows."

Universal will start the year with "Poker Faces" starring Edward Everett Horton and Laura La Plante. The second release will be "The Old Soak" adapted from the play by Don Marquis. The release date is set for September 12th.

The Hoot Gibson production, "The Texas Streak" is scheduled for release September 26th. Seven Gibson pictures will be released during the season in the following order: "The Prairie King," November 14th; "The Buckaroo Kid," January 2nd; "Riding Like Fury," February 13th; "A Hero on Horseback," April 3rd; "The Silent Rider," May 15th, and "Ace High," July 11th.

In October of this year Universal will release two Jewel pictures, "The Star Maker" starring Mary Philbin and "Perch of the Devil," a King Baggot production with Mae Busch and Pat O'Malley.

Two more Jewels will be released in November. They are "The Ice Flood" and the Hoot Gibson picture, "The Prairie King." The former will be directed by James O. Spearing.

New Bill Asks Repeal of Admission Tax

REPPEAL of the taxes on admissions and dues in their entirety is sought in an amendment to the pending revenue bill which has been introduced by Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, and for the adoption of which he will press while the bill is before the Senate.

The Senate on January 29 began its consideration of the amendments to the House bill made by the finance committee, but because of the controversy which has raged over the admission tax let those provisions go over until a later date.

December will see three Universal Jewels released. They will be "The Whole Town's Talking," "Prisoners of the Storm" and "The Big Night." The first, to be released December 5th will be an Edward Laemmle Production.

"Prisoners of the Storm" to be released December 19th, is a Lynn Reynolds Production starring House Peters.

"The Big Night," for release the day after Christmas, will be a Laura La Plante starring vehicle.

In addition to the Gibson picture "The Buckaroo Kid," Universal's January (1927) releases will include the Universal Jewel "The Runaway Express," With Jack Daugherty.

In February, 1927, Universal will release three Jewels, the Hoot Gibson picture "Riding Like Fury," and "The Mystery Club" and "Butterflies in the Rain." "The Mystery Club" will be a Herbert Blache production.

"Butterflies in the Rain" in which Laura La Plante is starred, will be a screen drama adapted from the story of that name from the pen of Andrew Soutar.

In March, there will be three more Universal Jewels, "Too Many Women," "Brides Will be Brides," and "Taxi Taxi." "Too Many Women" will be used as a starring vehicle for Norman Kerry, with May McAvoy, probably, in the co-featured role. "Brides Will Be Brides" is another Laura La Plante picture. "Taxi Taxi" will be adapted from the Saturday Evening Post story from the pen of George Weston.

The April list of Jewels will include, besides "A Hero on Horseback," the Gibson picture, two other pictures, "Another Woman's Life" and "Down the Stretch." The first an anonymous story will be used as a starring vehicle for Mary Philbin. "Down the Stretch," will be a Jewel adaptation of John Taintor Foote's racing story "Blister Jones."

The May Jewel list will include "Spangles," "Take It From Me" and the Gibson picture "The Silent Rider." "Spangles" will be an Edward Sloman Production with a special cast. "Take It From Me" will be based on the musical comedy success of that name by William Johnston, Sunday Editor of the New York World.

In June, Universal will release the following Jewels, "A Savage in Silks," "The Love Thrill" and "The Big Gun." "A Savage in Silks" will be made as a Laura La Plante picture.

"The Love Thrill" probably will be another Laura La Plante picture.

"The Big Gun" will be a Norman Kerry picture, directed by Edward Sedgwick.

The Hoot Gibson picture "Ace High," set for July 11th release, marks the final Jewel in Universal's 1926-1927 Greater Movie List.

Abrams Appoints District Managers

Six Assignments Made in Reorganization and Reshaping of United Artists Sales Staff

ANOTHER step in reorganizing and reshaping the sales force of United Artists Corporation is announced this week by Hiram Abrams, president of the corporation.

Not content with zoning the United States into three territories, each under the immediate direction of a divisional general sales manager, Mr. Abrams now announces the appointment of six district managers whose work lies in effecting an intensive field supervision in their respective districts. Each of these men has had a thorough training in United Artists Corporation selling methods. The new district managers and their territories are as follows:

Kenneth Hodgkinson, supervising the San Francisco, Seattle, Los Angeles, Denver and Salt Lake City branch offices.

W. F. Seymour, Pittsburgh, Washington, Atlanta and Dallas branches.

Morris Safier, Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Detroit branches.

T. Y. Henry, Kansas City, St. Louis, Omaha and Minneapolis branches.

Penn. Censor Chairman Back From Coast

HARRY L. KNAPP, chairman of the Pennsylvania State Board of Motion Picture Censors, has returned from Los Angeles and Hollywood. He made the trip to escort home Mrs. Knapp, who has been visiting in the West for several months. Knapp made a general tour of studios and conferred with several producers on the censorship situation in the East. In speaking recently of the general trend of pictures during 1925, Mr. Knapp said that there had been a noticeable and substantial rise in the quality and caliber of the pictures being produced during the last year.

Henry T. Scully, Boston, New Haven and Portland branches.

Jack Von Tilzer, New York, Philadelphia and Buffalo branches.

Hodkinson and Seymour will work under the direction of Paul N. Lazarus, general sales manager for the southern and western division; Safier and Henry under Cresson E. Smith, general sales manager for the mid-west division and Scully and Von Tilzer will report direct to Moxley A. Hill, general sales manager for the eastern division.

"This sales force formation gives United Artists Corporation an intensive selling organization both in the Home Office and in the field," said Mr. Abrams.

Minnesota City Declares for Sunday Shows

Montevideo, Minn., has again declared for Sunday shows. The majority was 223 of the 1,535 votes cast. Two years ago the vote stood 200 in favor of Sunday theatres.

Many Attend M.P.T.O. Session

Administrative Committee Devotes Much Time to Consideration of Contracts

So important was the schedule of business for the Administrative Committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America that many directors from all parts of the country were in attendance at these sessions at National Headquarters, 745 Seventh Avenue, New York, when they started on the morning of January 26th and closed on the evening of January 27th. Those present included: A. Julian Brylawski, Washington, D. C., Fulton Brylawski, Washington, D. C., Sydney S. Cohen, Joseph M. Seider, New York, Jake Wells, Virginia, Harry Davis and M. J. O'Toole, Pennsylvania, Jack Harwood, Ohio; and Tommy Goldberg of Maryland.

To the contract situation alone, the Committee devoted fully five hours. This executive body instructed the Committee on Contract and Arbitration to obtain a reduction in the number of days for which the distributor has to accept a contract because of the rapid facilities afforded by the air mail. The Administrative unit also condemned the tax clause as offered by Mr. Hays, because of its form and language.

The Contract Committee was further instructed to insist upon a change in the percentage clause which would provide for a definite amount being paid by the exhibitor in the event the exhibitor does not like a percentage picture.

The Contract Committee's stand for a provision for a specific amount to reimburse the theatre owner in the event a distributor does not deliver a percentage picture, was also approved by the executive heads of the national organization.

The selection of a designation of playdates' clause as presented by Joseph M. Seider, in his capacity as Chairman of the Contract Committee, was unanimously endorsed.

The Administrative Committee authorized President R. F. Woodhull to appoint committees for the National Convention in Los Angeles in June. The social end of the convention had been left in the hands of National Director Glenn Harper.

A suggestion that the M.P.T.O.A. organize sub-headquarters throughout the country was referred to the Business Manager. At the same time Mr. Seider was authorized to notify State Presidents that Harry Sigmond of the Tax Free Music Bureau has arranged a schedule when he will visit their organizations and acquaint them with the value of tax free music in connection with their campaign against the amendments to the copyright law. The music tax subject was also gone into at length at this meeting by Fulton Brylawski, national attorney.

Dupont Here to Direct for 'U'

German Producer to Start Work Soon at Universal City; Has Novel Plans

E. A. DUPONT, one of Europe's leading motion picture directors, arrived in New York on Wednesday of last week and proceeded to Universal City on Monday to take up a megaphone as Universal's newest director under a three-year contract. His first picture has not yet been decided upon, but may be based on a story which Dupont is now writing.

Dupont's most recent production in Germany was "Variety," which it is understood Paramount will handle here.

The director's career has been a colorful one, closely bound up with the motion picture industry. Some 17 years ago, when he was but 17 years of age, he began the first film department on a European publication (and perhaps the first anywhere in the world). This was on the well known German daily, the Berliner Zeitung.

For nine years Dupont was a film critic and editor, frequently rather outspoken in his comments on current productions. Finally a producer, irritated at these frank criticisms, said: "Well, if you know so much more about making pictures than I do, let's see you make one for us." "All right," Dupont responded, "I will." He did, and his first picture was a success, eclipsing other productions of this company. From that time on he devoted himself to writing and directing, doing the scripts for his own pictures.

Two years ago, dissatisfied with conditions in the German film industry, he gave up directing and bought a combination picture house and music hall in Mannheim. His experiences at this theatre, and his contacts with performers, were the basis of many of the incidents in "Variety," which Dupont

Governor and Mayor To Attend Dinner

THE Sixth Annual Dinner Dance of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, which will be held at the Hotel Astor on Friday evening, February 12th, will be attended by both Governor Alfred E. Smith and Mayor James J. Walker. This announcement has been made officially by Charles L. O'Reilly, head of the exhibitors' organization.

In addition to the Governor and the Mayor, practically all heads of the City departments, as well as the judiciary divisions, will be present at the function.

The Sixth Annual Dinner Dance will be the largest ever arranged by the members of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, as a concerted effort is being made to establish a fund for the acquisition of a new club house.

Vincent Lopez will personally appear at the head of his Casa Lopez Orchestra which he plans to augment for the occasion.

adapted from Felix Hollaender's story, "Der Eid des Stefan Huller."

Dupont is an exponent of the realistic photodrama, as opposed to the fantastic elements frequently seen in European productions. His desire is to make, not European productions in Hollywood, but American productions which will combine the best in American technique and taste with ideas acquired in his European experience. He hopes, first of all, to meet the requirements of the American box-office in full measure, and believes that a picture should above all appeal to a sufficiently wide taste to be commercially successful. He would like, in his first picture here, to present something of the impressions of America received by a foreigner upon his arrival.

He will probably direct two pictures between now and July, at which time he will probably make one more picture for Ufa. His contract with Universal was not to go into effect until 1927, but through arrangements made in Berlin recently by Carl Laemmle this was advanced to this year.

David Cooper to Build at Carlisle, Pa.

Construction work on a new theatre for Carlisle, Pa., will be started on April 1 by David Cooper, on a plot on West High Street, near Pitt, opposite the Orpheum theatre which he operates. The new structure will cost $100,000, in addition to the cost of the plot for which Mr. Cooper paid $60,000. The new picture house, which will be equipped with a stage so that it can be used for vaudeville also, will be two stories high and built of brick or concrete, and will have a seating capacity of 1,200, including 400 balcony seats and 800 on the main floor. The plot has a frontage of 55 feet and extends back 240 feet to Church Alley. The plan is to preserve the present building on the front of the property, including office and store rooms and apartments, and to erect the theatre at the rear, with a long lobby extending to the front.

Mr. Cooper has been engaged successfully in the theatre business in Carlisle for about seven years. It is not decided whether he will continue in operation of the Orpheum theatre after the new theatre is erected. It is expected to be completed in the Fall.

Notables Attend Funeral of Senator Harris

The following were named by the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company; Watterson R. Rothacker, President; Douglas D. Rothacker, Vice-President; C. E. Pain, Jr., Treasurer; John G. Hahn, Secretary; John Mammoser, Assistant Treasurer; E. H. Seifert, Secretary.

The Rothacker-Aller Laboratories re-elected the following: Watterson R. Rothacker, President; Joseph Aller, Vice-President; Wesley Smith, Secretary-Treasurer.

Jersey "Blue Laws" Due to Pass Out

SOME of the drastic New Jersey "Blue Laws," adopted 127 years ago, seem destined to pass out of existence with the present session of the State Legislature. The Senate of the Legislature has adopted a resolution appointing a commission to investigate them in preparation for their repeal. This resolution is being backed by theatrical, motion picture and other liberal interests of the state.

PN-9 and Two of Crew to Be in "Non-Stop Flight"

Skiles Ralph Rose, navigation pilot, and Otto G. Stantz, chief radio operator, two of the five men who made the famous hop to Hawaii last summer in the attempt of the U. S. Navy to cross the Pacific by air, will appear in "The Non-Stop Flight," the Emory Johnson production for F. B. O. and the seaplane, the PN19, in which the flight was made has also been loaned to Johnson for the production by the Naval Department.

Sanford Sells Foreign Rights on Picture

F. M. Sanford, head of Sanford productions, Los Angeles, announced before his departure for the Coast this week that he had sold all the foreign rights on "El Pasado" (The Past) to Richmond Pictures.

"The Past" is the first of a series of eight melodramas or society dramas which Sanford will make for the coming season for state rights release.

Oklahoma City Leads Sales Drive

WITH but a week remaining of the First National Month Sales Drive, Oklahoma City was leading the branches of the organization for first place, with four others in close competition for second. With the contest under way ten weeks, the present leader had held that position since the start of the second week. The four branches competing for second and third places are but a few points apart in the following order: New Jersey, Washington, Dallas and San Francisco.

The cash prizes to be awarded the personnel of the three leading branches totals more than $5,000. The prizes will be awarded all employees in the successful branches from the manager down to the office boy.

Jersey Considers Overseating

Seider Recommendation Approved for Preparation of Legislative Measure

A NUMBER of matters of considerable importance were decided upon or discussed at the meeting last week of the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey. Upon the recommendation of President Joseph M. Seider, the directors authorized the organization's legislative committee to take definite action in regard to theatre encroachments and overseating in small towns.

Instructions were given to prepare a measure for presentation before the legislature which would amend the state building code. According to the outline of President Seider the amendment would require towns under 10,000 to issue all licenses for prospective theatres in their jurisdiction. In addition it would require the approval of these licenses by common councils, and also the granting of a public hearing upon the request of any citizen.

Among other activities of the meeting, National President Woodhull's request for the state to turn down the tax clause proposed by the Hays organization, was unanimously acceded to by the twenty-nine theatre owners present.

A committee, composed of Messrs. Samuelson, Unger and Gold, was appointed to appear before the State Insurance Rating Board with Mr. Stallings, an insurance expert, who addressed the meeting on the subject of reducing the basic rate of insurance. This same committee met the following day in Trenton, on the power rate situation, with the Public Service Commission. Aaron Dawes, special counsel for the organization was also in attendance at that meeting.

Instead of being feted this time, National President Woodhull was host of the New Jersey Theatre Owners in a joint capacity with I. A. Roth. Among the 29 New Jersey exhibitors present were: Joseph M. Seider, Chas. Hildinger, Peter Adams, Joseph Bernstein, Leon Rosenblatt, William Keegan, S. S. Samuelson, R. F. Woodhull, Benjamin Schindler, I. M. Hirshblond, Leo Juskowitz, William C. Hunt, I. A. Roth, Jacob Fox, J. L. Unger, Lee Newbury, E. Thornton Kelly, and Louis Gold.

The honor guests of the Morristown meeting were: State Senator Frank Abel, E. Bertram Mott, County Clerk, and F. M. Lottum, Secretary of the Local Chamber of Commerce.

Naked Truth Dinner All Set

Capacity Attendance Assured Annual Affair at Hotel Astor Saturday

ALL plans have been completed and a capacity attendance is assured the annual Naked Truth Dinner, entertainment and dance to be held at the Hotel Astor in New York City on Saturday night of this week. Stars film executives and privates in the ranks will be there in large numbers and indications are it will be the most successful event of the kind ever held by the Association of Motion Picture Advertisers.

Nat G. Rothstein will serve as Master of Ceremonies, and assisting him as guest conductor of wise cracks will be Texas Guinan, Broadway favorite and wise cracker supreme. The latter volunteered her services for the occasion when urged by the dinner and entertainment committee.

Rothstein and Miss Guinan will have an extremely busy evening as no one of importance in the industry will escape their jibes and jests. It is safe to say that not a picture star in New York City will be absent from the ceremonies. Also in attendance will be the twelve immortals, the leaders of the motion picture game.

It was at first announced that two orchestras would render the music for the dancing. These, however, have been supplemented by an additional one. With three of the leading musical dispensing organizations of Broadway, dancing will continue throughout most of the night.

Among the regular features of these annual affairs is the showing of the burlesque news reel, which this year promises to surpass all others. This reel was prepared by Vic Shapiro and is said to be even better than those of the past.

Indications are that the dinner will be a complete sell-out. Charlie Einfeld, who has had charge of the ticket sale reports that but few of the pastboards are now available and that they will be going at a premium before the curtain rings up Saturday night.

Film Export Increase Large

Preliminary Figures Show Additional Footage for All Countries in 1925

ACCORDING to preliminary figures just issued by the Department of Commerce, American exports of positive films for 1925 reached a total of 225,656,151 linear feet at an invoice value of $6,787,687, while exports of negatives were 9,929,643 linear feet valued at $1,893,058.

As compared with 1924, exports of the former, which were 170,347,342 linear feet valued at $6,081,917 and 8,100,264 linear feet of the latter at a value of $1,419,859, the year 1925 has shown a striking gain in our foreign trade in motion picture films.

In 1924 Europe took from the United States about 60,000,000 feet of negatives and positives combined. In 1925 this figure exceeded 86,000,000 feet. Latin America to which in 1924 we sent about 47,500,000 feet received about 63,500,000 feet in 1925. The Far East with about 45,000,000 feet of films

Jersey Owners Protest Arbitration Plan

AT the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey held last week a resolution was adopted accepting the report of the National Contract and Arbitration Committee and protesting against the proposed tax clause in the exhibition contract.

The resolution in part, also reads: "THAT the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey will resist with every means within their command any efforts to compel theatre owners in the State of New Jersey to arbitrate film contracts unless the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey are granted their just right to appoint the exhibitor arbitrators on the Joint Board of Arbitration to arbitrate disputes in which New Jersey theatre owners are parties."

in 1924 increased this total to 53,500,000 in 1925. While figures for 1925 covering Africa and the Near East are not complete as yet, there is every reason to believe that a satisfying gain has been recorded here as well.

With regard to individual markets, the United Kingdom continues to head as it always has in the past. The figures here show about 36,500,000 feet—a gain of above 10,000,000 feet over 1924. Australia with just under 24,500,000 feet has displaced Canada for second place. This betters Australia's 1924 total by about 6,000,000 feet. Canada as indicated went to third place, even though her total of 23,000,000 feet topped 1924 by nearly 4,000,000 feet. One of the most startling gains recorded was the 20,000,000 foot total from the Argentine—a gain of more than 7,000,000 feet over 1924—which put her in fourth place. France is fifth with a 5,000,000 foot gain over 1924, her total for 1925 being 14,500,000 feet.

Our next five markets in that order are Brazil, Japan, Mexico, Germany the Straits Settlements. Of these Brazil's 2,000,000 foot gain brought her up over Japan, which stood sixth in 1924. Brazil's total was 10,500,000 feet and Japan's a little over 9,000,000 feet, the Japanese figure being a decline of about half a million feet from 1924. Mexico's eighth place total of 7,500,000 feet and Germany in ninth place despite of her "contingent" system, took just over 2,000,000 feet more in 1925 than in 1924, the figures here being 6,500,000 feet against a trifle under 4,500,000 feet.

Exports from the United States of motion picture films sensitized but not exposed amounted in 1925 to 74,605,179 linear feet valued at $1,585,529 as compared with 59,482,479 linear feet valued at $1,261,087 for 1924.

Up State N. Y. Houses Feel Coal Shortage

On account of the present scarcity of coal in central and northern New York, many of the motion picture houses are rather hard put these days in an effort to keep their theatres as comfortable as possible, with the least outlay of coal or its substitute. One Troy house is using wood in its furnace while others have been forced to submit to the use of soft coal.

The motion picture exchanges in Albany are also in need of coal and several are already using soft coal or coke.

Dorothy Phillips Signs With M-G-M

DOROTHY PHILLIPS, film favorite long in retirement is to return to the screen in the near future. She has been signed to a long term contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Miss Phillips, star of both stage and screen is the wife of the late producing-director, Allen Holubar. She retired from the screen on the death of her husband.

It was while appearing in New York in the stage production of "Everywoman" that Miss Phillips met Allen Holubar, who played King Love in the same play. Later she was featured on the stage in such successes as "Mary James' Pa." When Holubar later left Universal for First National Miss Phillips went with him and was starred in his productions.

Tuttle to Direct Florenz Ziegfeld Production

Frank Tuttle has been selected by Jesse L. Lasky to direct "Glorifying the American Girl" for Paramount. Plans for the immediate production of this big picture have been going ahead steadily and Florenz Ziegfeld will return shortly from Palm Beach to take personal charge of the whole affair. The story was written by Rex Beach and the production will be supervised by Townsend Martin. Arrangements have been completed to have many of the Ziegfeld stars and beauties appear in the picture.

Vincent Lopez at Brooklyn Strand February 20

Vincent Lopez and his Augmented Orchestra has been booked for the Brooklyn Mark Strand by Managing Director Edward L. Hyman for the week beginning Saturday, February 20. Hyman has also increased his ballet corps to fourteen dancers in accordance with the theatre's policy of bigger shows during 1926.

Lopez and his orchestra are featured as the stage attraction this week at the Strand in New York.

F. B. O. Directors Named for Specials

J. I. Schnitzer, vice-president in charge of production for F. B. O. announces the retention of two directors to finish the eleventh and twelfth, last two of the Gold Bond specials which topped the F. B. O. schedule for the current season. Harmon Weight will direct Laura Jean Libbey's "A Poor Girl's Romance," and James Hogan will handle "The Isle of Retribution," based on a novel by Edeson Marshall.

Douglas Gilmore Renews M-G-M Contract

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have renewed the contract of Douglas Gilmore, who has been under contract with the company for the past few months, appearing in such successes as "Sally, Irene and Mary" and "Dance Madness." The renewal comes as a reward for his excellent work in the past.

Warners List Three for Month

"The Night Cry," "The Cave Man" and "The Man Upstairs" are Announced for Release

WARNER BROTHERS will release three productions during February featuring stars and prominent players of the Warner stock company. The titles are "The Night Cry," "The Cave Man," and "The Man Upstairs."

"The Night Cry," starring the canine actor Rin-Tin-Tin was directed by Herman Raymaker and the locale of the story is laid in the sheeping raising section of Nevada. June Marlowe plays the human lead supported by John Harron, Gayne Whitman, Heinie Conklin, Don Alvarado and Mary Louise Miller. The story was written Phillip Klein and Edward Meagher.

"The Cave Man," in which Matt Moore and Marie Prevost are co-starred, shows Moore in the role of a brawny coal heaver, who is exploited by a society woman. This story by Gilette Burgess was directed by Lewis Milestone and the supporting cast comprises John Patrick, Myrna Loy, Phyllis Haver and Hedda Hopper.

"The Man Upstairs," a mystery story adapted from Earl Derr Biggers' "The Agony Column" has Monte Blue and Dorothy Devore in the featured roles with John Roche and Heinie Conklin in support. Roy Del Ruth directed from a scenario by E. T. Lowe, Jr.

All Anchor Product for Rayart

Contract Between Johnston and Schlank Gives Rayart Distribution of Anchor Product

AFTER several weeks of negotiation between Morris R. Schlank, for Anchor Film Distributors and W. Ray Johnston, president of Rayart Pictures, a deal has been arranged whereby Rayart secures the distribution of thirty-six Anchor productions now in work or recently completed.

The productions involved are: Eight melodramatic westerns starring Al Hoxie, of which four are completed, one is in work and three are to be made; a series of railroad melodramas, starring Helen Holmes, four of which are ready for release, a fifth is going into production and others are to follow. A series of eight out-of-doors classics, starring Bob Reeves, four of which are finished and four remain to be started.

Rayart under the new contract also acquires a series of Bobby Ray Comedies, known as Radiant Comedies, of which five are completed and seven remain to be made at intervals of thirty days each.

J. P. MacGowan is director-general and supervises production of all of the Holmes-Hoxie-Reeves units which are being produced at the California Studios.

M. G. M. to Release 2 in March

"Beverly of Graustark" and "Monte Carlo" are Scheduled for Exhibitors

THE two productions to be released by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer during the month of March will be "Beverly of Graustark," starring Marion Davies, and "Monte Carlo." The former is a Cosmopolitan production directed by Sidney Franklin, and the latter, written by Carey Wilson, was directed by Christy Cabanne.

"Beverly of Graustark" was adapted from the George Barr McCutcheon novel by Agnes Christine Johnson. Antonio Moreno plays the male lead opposite Miss Davies, while others in the cast are Creighton Hale, Roy D'Arcy, Albert Grau, Max Barwyn, Paulette Duval and Charles Clary.

Lew Cody has the featured role of Tony in "Monte Carlo," with Gertrude Olmstead playing opposite him. She has the part of an American girl, Sally, in this satirical comedy depicting the drolleries of Americans at the great European gambling capitol. Roy D'Arcy, Harry Meyers, Karl Dane, Caesare Gravina, Trixie Friganza, Zasu Pitts, Andrey Lancy, Arthur Hoyt, and Gene Borden make up the balance of the cast.

These two pictures are announced as worthy successors to those Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have released since the beginning of the year; "Soul Mates," "Mike," "Dance Madness," "The Auction Block," "Ibanez' Torrent," "The Devil's Circus," "The Barrier," and the two pictures released in legiti-mate theatres, "La Boheme," starring Lillian Gish and John Gilbert, and Rex Ingram's "Mare Nostrum," filmed in Europe with Alice Terry and Antonio Moreno in the leading roles.

Casting Big Problem with Fox

Suggestions Urged Naming Actors to Portray Difficult David Warfield Roles

HAVING acquired an abundance of valuable play and story material for production for next season, Fox Film Corporation is now in considerable of a quandary as to who will fill many of the difficult roles. Just at present a nation-wide questionnaire is out asking suggestions regarding a David Warfield of the screen for such characterizations as "The Music Master," "The Auctioneer" and "The Return of Peter Grimm," all of which were made famous by Warfield on the speaking stage.

Many suggestions have been received by Fox mentioning Joseph Schildkraut for the character role in these plays, but the ideas of people everywhere in America will be welcomed.

Another problem which Fox is facing is the selection of players for the roles of Captain Flagg and Quirt in the production of "What Price Glory." Raoul Walsh, who has been chosen to direct this dramatic success, is in New York from the coast to cast the players.

Casting of the three modern matrons who have scored so heavily in the current Broadway success, "The Cradle Snatchers," is also being considered. Hap Hogan, the fight manager, and Chick Cowan, the scrapper in "Is Zat So?" also offer problems for the Fox casting directors.

To find players who will give highly satisfactory screen interpretations to the difficult roles of the Clyde Fitch play "The City," is a task of sizable proportions. There are also a number of important selections to be made for the screen presentation of A. S. M. Hutchinson's latest novel, "One Increasing Purpose," to be produced by Fox next season.

Swedish Star to Play in Universal Pictures

Enar Hanson, Swedish stage and screen actor, has been placed under a five year contract by Universal. His first assignment will be as leading man in "The Big Night" starring Laura La Plante which Mel Brown will direct. Hanson is twenty-three, a native of Stockholm and a graduate of Polytechnic University there. He appeared on the stage in Sweden and Denmark for six years either as leading man or star.

According to present plans he will be starred after a brief training into the technical end of American productions.

De Luxe Acquires American Feature Film Exchange

Sam Stiefel and Oscar Neufeld, of the De Luxe Exchange, Philadelphia, recently made an outright purchase of the American Feature Film Exchange from Bob Lynch, general manager in this territory for Metro-Goldwyn, who operated the American Feature Film as a separate and independent organization. The acquisition of the American Feature releases makes De Luxe one of the two largest independent distributing organizations in the East.

By the absorption of American, De Luxe gets practically forty new feature pictures, three serials and two series of short reels, besides the comedies. The old American quarters have been vacated and the product will be distributed from the De Luxe office.

Georgia Hale Given Lead in "Rainmaker"

Georgia Hale who was recently placed under a long term contract by Paramount has been selected to play the leading feminine role in "The Rainmaker." The picture is an adaptation of Gerald Beaumont's Red Book story, "Heaven Bent." William Collier, Jr. has previously been assigned the leading male role. Clarence Badger will direct.

Fiction Writer is Signed for M-G-M

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have signed George Ridgeway to a contract as scenarist and continuity writer. He will work on the adaptation of famous novels, write continuities and act in an editorial advisory capacity. He may also adapt his own original stories, including some that have been published in the leading periodicals.

Vital Incorporated in New England

Vital Exchanges of New England, Inc., has been incorporated with capital of $50,000. The incorporators are Henry G. Segal, Brookline, Mass., May C. Berman and Lillian Yacker, Boston.

Exploitation Contest Returns Arriving

EXHIBITOR returns from all parts of the country are coming in fast in the First National Month exploitation contest for the $2,000 in cash prizes to be awarded. The complete campaigns will be judged on the basis of the best newspaper advertising, publicity stories, stunts, program matter, lobby displays, ballyhoos, presentations and their contribution to the success of First National Month.

Effectiveness of display, originality, attractiveness and ingenuity of design, and the showmanship revealed in each effort will be the chief considerations in determining the best. The judges should receive photos of stunts and other data properly captioned, together with a complete story of the exhibitor's exploitation efforts throughout First National Month.

All exhibits must be received by the Contest Editor, First National Pictures, Inc., 383 Madison Avenue, New York City, not later than midnight, February 21st, 1926.

Thalberg in New York for Conferences

FOLLOWING a series of conferences with Louis B. Mayer, head of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, Irving G. Thalberg, associate executive, is due in New York this week. He is accompanied by King Vidor and John Gilbert. Thalberg brought East with him the most ambitious producing plans for the coming season in the history of the studio and he will confer with Marcus Loew and Nicholas M. Schenck in this connection.

He will remain in New York for three weeks or more and will view with John Gilbert and King Vidor the premiere of "La Boheme," Lillian Gish's new picture, in the production of which the three were associated. They will also see "The Big Parade" and "Ben Hur" which are enjoying sensational runs on Broadway.

En route to New York Thalberg and Vidor worked on the script of the forthcoming production in which Gilbert will be starred.

Warner Bros. Busy With New Productions

IN an effort to clean up the 1925-26 schedule of productions Warner Brothers completed three productions this week and started four more on their way to completion. Those pictures which were finished this week are "The Sap," featuring Kenneth Harlan, "The Little Irish Girl," Dolores Costello's first starring vehicle, and "The Honeymoon Express," starring Dorothy Devore. "Why Girls Go Back Home," with Patsy Ruth Miller featured, Rintin-Tin's new picture "Hero of the Big Snows," "Silken Shackles," in which Irene Rich is starred and "Hell Bent for Heaven," which J. Stuart Blackton is producing are the four productions which have been put in work.

Walter Anthony to Title "Don Juan"

Walter Anthony has been engaged by Warner Brothers to write the titles for "Don Juan," John Barrymore's next starring vehicle. Director Alan Crosland and Film Editor Harold McCord are now cutting and editing the film.

Among other activities on the Warner lot last week was the loaning of four players to other companies. Matt Moore goes to Fox to appear in a picture to be directed by Frank Borzage; Kenneth Harlan will appear in a Universal picture directed by James Spearing; Helene Costello is to play the lead to Raymond Griffith for Famous, and Louise Fazenda will be seen in the featured role in "The Old Soak" for Universal.

George Marion, Jr., has finished titling "Other Women's Husbands," in which Monte Blue and Marie Prevost will be seen together again.

Gotham Starts "Hearts and Spangles"

With the arrival of Sam Sax on the coast Gotham Productions started work on "Hearts and Spangles" with Wanda Hawley in the leading role of a circus rider. This is the tenth of the Gotham pictures for the present season. It is being supervised by Renaud Hoffman and directed by Frank O'Connor. Robert Gordon plays opposite Miss Hawley.

Associated Names New St. Louis Manager

Associated Exhibitors has appointed Nat E. Steinberg manager of the St. Louis branch. For the past two years he was vice-president of Columbia Pictures Corporation and previous to that he was assistant manager to Barney Rosenthal when the latter was in charge of the Universal branch in St. Louis.

Mong Added to "Brooding Eyes" Cast

William V. Mong will have the role of a crook in support of Lionel Barrymore in "Brooding Eyes," a Banner picture now in production on the west coast for release through Henry Ginsberg. Edward Le Saint is directing. Others in the supporting cast are Montague Love, John Miljan and Lucien Littlefield.

Six by Paramount in February

Releases Will Inaugurate Program for Spring and Summer Months

PARAMOUNT will launch its Spring and Summer program with the release of six pictures during the month of February. They are "The Wanderer," "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter," "The Song and Dance Man," "The Vanishing American," "Behind the Front" and "Moana." Four of these attractions are listed among the company's ten long run specials for the new season. They are, "The Wanderer," "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter," "The Song and Dance Man" and "The Vanishing American."

"The Wanderer" is a Biblical story which held the screen for several months at the Criterion Theatre in New York. In the cast are Greta Nissen, William Collier, Jr., Ernest Torrence, Wallace Beery, Kathlyn Williams and Tyrone Powers. The picture was released generally on February 1st. It was directed by Raoul Walsh.

Adolphe Menjou and Florence Vidor have the leading roles in "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter," which is scheduled for release February 8th. This production was made under the direction of Malcolm St. Clair.

"The Song and Dance Man" will also be released February 8th. The story by George M. Cohan is of back-stage Broadway life and was made under the direction of Herbert Brenon. Featured in the cast are Besie Love, Tom Moore and Harrison Ford.

Zane Grey's "The Vanishing American" will reach the screen on February 15th. It has already enjoyed successful showings in New York and San Francisco. Lucien Hubbard adapted the screen play from the Grey story and George B. Seitz directed. The featured players are Richard Dix, Lois Wilson and Noah Beery.

"Behind the Front," a comedy narrative of the war is scheduled for release February 22nd. Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton are the featured players and Eduard Sutherland directed.

Another release of February 22nd will be Robert Flaherty's production of "Moana," a romance of life and love in the South Seas. Flaherty was responsible for "Nanook of the North," the most successful of the many northern pictures.

Warners Move Division Heads

Sam Morris Makes Three New Assignments in Reorganization of Company's Sales Staff

SAM E. MORRIS, general manager of distribution for Warner Brothers returned from Chicago to New York during the week and announced three important changes in division managers to strengthen the sales force.

Lloyd Willis, who has been serving as manager of the Eastern Central division has been brought to New York and will hereafter be General Home Office representative, acting for the home office in contact with the field representatives and exhibitors all over the country.

Herbert Elder, who has been in charge of the Eastern Southern division has been moved into Willis' place in the Eastern Central division and will have charge of the territory embracing Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Indianapolis and Cincinnati.

The vacancy caused by the transfer of Elder has been filled by the promotion of C. C. Ezell, who has been Western Southern division manager. With the Southern divisions combined, Ezell has been placed in charge of the entire south, embracing the territories of Oklahoma City, Dallas, New Orleans, Atlanta and Charlotte.

All three of the men affected by the promotions are recognized in the industry as solid executives of long experience and with contacts particularly valuable in the territories to which they have been assigned. The changes were made by Mr. Morris after a conference at the home office with the men who had been brought in for the opening of "The Sea Beast" in New York.

Mr. Morris, who has been responsible for building up the Warner Bros. sales force during the past year into a high-powered working organization, also called a meeting of the Chicago division while in that city and for the first time outlined just what Warner Bros. had in store on their coming season's program.

Columbia Acquires "Sweet Rosie O'Grady"

Columbia Pictures Corporation has purchased screen rights to Maude Nugent's popular old song hit "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" and it will be produced for release with next year's group. This is the second picture to be announced by the company for next year, the first being, "Poor Girls," from the pen of Guy de Maupassant and the stage play of the same name by Charles Frohman.

The continuity for "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" is now being prepared. Both productions will be made at the west coast studios of Columbia under the supervision of Harry Cohn. The cast and directors are now being chosen.

Production of "Sandy" Begun by Beaumont

PRODUCTION of "Sandy," the story which has run in serial form in more than one hundred newspapers throughout the country, has been started by director Harry Beaumont with Madge Bellamy playing the role of "Sandy." The star has been forced to "bob" her hair to live up to her part in the picture. Leslie Fenton, Gloria Hope, Harrison Ford, Bardson Bard, David Torrence, Lillian Leighton, Charles Farrel, Joan Standing and others will appear in the supporting cast of this Fox production, the continuity of which was prepared by Eve Unsell.

Scenes from the Bernarr McFadden True Story picture "Wives at Auction" in which Edna Murphy is featured.

F. B. O. Plans March Releases

Four Features and a Variety of Short Subjects are Included in Program

FOUR feature pictures and a varied assortment of short subjects are on the release schedule of F. B. O. for the month of March. The features are "The Non-Stop Flight," "The Arizona Streak," "Secret Orders" and "The Night Patrol."

"The Night Patrol" is an Emory Johnson production dramatizing the now historic flight of last Summer from San Francisco to Hawaii. Two of the heroic birdmen who made the flight will enact their same roles in the picture. They are Ralph Rose, aviation pilot and Otis G. Stantz, chief radio operator. The production is now being filmed at San Diego with the cooperation of the Navy department.

"The Arizona Streak" is a western drama starring Tom Tyler. Tyler's gang, including Frankie Darro, a pony and the dog, Beans, will again be seen with him.

Evelyn Brent will be the star of the melodrama, "Secret Orders." The supporting cast and director have not yet been announced. Richard Talmadge is the star of "The Night Patrol," in which he will be supported by Mary Carr, Rose Blossom, Josef Swickard and Grace Darmond.

"It's a Buoy!" and "Read 'Em and Leap," No. 2 and 3 of the "Fighting Hearts" series, starring Alberta Vaughn, which Ralph Ceder is directing from the original stories of Sam Hellman, well known humorist, are among the short subject releases. Larry Kent, Al Cooke, Kit Guard and Grant Withers support Alberta. This will be Miss Vaughn's last series. She will, at its conclusion, be launched as a star in full length feature productions.

Two Bray cartoons, as yet untitled, will be shown during March, as well as "A Beauty Parlor," a Standard Fat Man comedy and "A Fraternity Mix-Up," a Blue Ribbon two-reeler.

Dix to Make Next Picture on West Coast

Richard Dix will leave New York within the next two weeks bound for the Lasky studio in Hollywood where he will make his next production titled "Romance a la Carte," a humorous travesty on the Desert island romance. This will be Dix's first production to be made in Hollywood in six months as he worked his last two productions in the East. Gregory La Cava, who will direct the production and Julian Johnson, supervising editor are also leaving for the Coast.

Creighton Hale Signed by Associated

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS have signed Creighton Hale to a long term contract to star in productions of Thomas L. Griffin. The deal was consummated last week at the Associated Studios in Los Angeles, recently acquired by P. A. Powers to house West Coast producers for Associated Exhibitors.

Creighton Hale

The series in which Hale is to be starred is to be produced from stories written expressly with the star's talents in view. The first is "Tardy Tolliver," an original story from the pen of J. Stewart Woodhouse. Judy King, who is also under contract to Associated is to play the leading feminine role in Hale's support. No director has yet been selected.

Unique Foto Film Will Handle "She"

Unique Foto Film, H. Frank, president, whose headquarters are at 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City, has acquired distribution rights for Greater New York and Northern New Jersey on Sir H. Rider Haggard's "She" and "Down Upon The Suane River." Betty Blythe is starred in the former, and Mary Fuller and Charles Emmet Mack have the leading roles in the latter. Grosset and Dunlop are preparing a special photoplay edition of "She" as a part of the exploitation and advertising campaign being conducted nationally.

Tyrone Power Cast for "The Test of Donald Norton"

Tyrone Power has been signed for the role of the father in "The Test of Donald Norton" a Chadwick production starring George Walsh which was adapted from the novel of the same name by Robert E. Pinkerton. The cast also includes Eugenia Gilbert, who appears opposite Walsh, Mickey Moore, who will play "Donald Norton" in the prologue, and Evelyn Selbis, Virginia True Boardman, Joan Meredith and Robert J. Graves. Reeves Eason is directing the production under the supervision of Jesse J. Goldberg.

"Into Her Kingdom" Next for Corinne Griffith

Corinne Griffith will have as her next vehicle "Into Her Kingdom," a novel by Ruth Comfort Mitchell, which deals with life among the royalty. Miss Griffith will start work upon the new production upon completion of "Mlle. Modiste," on which she is now working. It is expected that work will be begun on the new story about the middle of March immediately after which the star will do "Ashes" previously selected for early production.

Antonio D'Algy Added to "Toto" Cast

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have added Antonio D'Algy to the cast of "Toto," the picturization of the famous stage play by Ahmed Abdullah. Lew Cody has the title role formerly played by Leo Ditrichstein on the speaking stage. Production is to start within a few days under the direction of John M. Stahl.

Fred Humes Signs Long Term Contract with Universal

Universal has signed Fred Humes to a five year contract and elevated him to the rank of western star. He is now at Lone Pine where exteriors are being 'shot' for his first starring vehicle "Prowlers of the Night" in which Barbara Kent will play the leading feminine role. Ernst Laemmle is directing.

"The Prince of Pilsen" is Completed

The A. H. Sebastian production of the "Prince of Pilsen" for Producers Distributing Corporation release, with George Sidney in the featured role, has been completed. The picture is now in process of cutting and will be ready for its initial preview in Los Angeles within the next two weeks.

Winkler Productions) was sold by him for the Entire Continent, as were also a number of Features and short subjects.

Colleen Moore Preparing for "Ella Cinders"

Having completed "Irene" for First National, Colleen Moore is preparing to start work in "Ella Cinders," a story based on a comic strip now running in newspapers throughout the country. Miss Moore will return to rags and tatters in the role of little freckled-faced Ella. Work is now progressing on the preparation of the script and shooting will be started in about ten days.

La Cava Making Third Successive Dix Production

Gregory La Cava will start next month to direct his third successive production with Richard Dix as star. The production, temporarily titled "Romance a La Carte," will be filmed at the Lasky studio, Hollywood.

La Cava's other two productions are "Womanhandled" and "Let's Get Married" which he just finished filming at the Long Island Studios.

Kane Forms Comedy Unit Headed by Del Ruth

ROBERT T. KANE has signed Hampton del Ruth to a long term contract and has placed him in charge of a separate comedy unit with headquarters at the Cosmopolitan studios, New York.

The first Kane production to be made under the supervision of Del Ruth will be "The Wilderness Woman," a Saturday Evening Post story by Arthur Stringer. Aileen Pringle and Chester Conklin have been signed for this comedy melodrama, which will be released through First National. Del Ruth, a comedy specialist, is one of the pioneers of the picture business, having been active in it for fifteen years.

Cortez Joins "Sorrows of Satan" Cast

D. W. GRIFFITH has selected Ricardo Cortez to play the hero role of the novelist in the next Paramount picture, "Sorrows of Satan." Cortez will play opposite to Adolphe Menjou, who has the role of Satan. Carol Dempster has been chosen for the leading feminine part. One other principal role has still to be filled.

Cortez is now on his way to New York to confer with Griffith and William Le Baron, associate producer at the Paramount Long Island studio, where the picture will be made.

Lillian Gish Starts in "Scarlet Letter"

Director Victor Seastrom has started production with Lillian Gish in the Nathaniel Hawthorne masterpiece, "The Scarlet Letter." It will be a Producers Distributing Corporation release. The only two of the cast being used in the first sequence are Miss Gish and Lars Hansen, famous Swedish actor, whose first American role in the characterization of Reverend Dimmesdale.

The picture will be lavishly filmed and close attention will be paid to historical details of costumes and customs. In the supporting cast will be Karl Dane, Mary Hawes, Fred Herzog, Jules Cowles, Marcelle Corday and William H. Tooker.

Bow Added to Cast of "The Flight to the Hills"

Clara Bow will play the leading feminine role in "The Flight to the Hills," a William De Mille production for Paramount, which was written by Charles Nevo Buck. The picture will be made at the Lasky studios in Hollywood and production will begin within a week. This is the first picture Miss Bow will make on the coast for Paramount as "Dancing Mothers," the first picture she appeared in for Paramount, was made at the Long Island studios.

M-G-M to Produce Service's "Trail of '98"

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer are to produce on a lavish scale the Robert W. Service Northern story, "Trail of '98." It is to be made under the title of "Robert W. Service's Trail of '98." The picture is to be produced by Irving Thalberg, but as yet no director nor cast has been announced.

Bryant Washburn Signed for "Wet Paint"

Bryant Washburn has cancelled a vaudeville tour to assume an important role for Paramount in the Raymond Griffith starring production, "Wet Paint," previously announced as "Fresh Paint." The picture is being directed by Arthur Rosson on the West Coast.

Ben Tolmas Joins Sierra Film Corporation

Ben R. Tolmas has resigned as manager of Independent Film Corporation of Philadelphia and has joined Sierra Pictures as a sales representative. He is leaving this week for a sales trip to the exchanges throughout the country.

Mitchell Directs Ginsberg and Kann Publicity

Henry Ginsberg and George E. Kann, in keeping with their plans to extend the distribution activities of their newly-formed partnership in the Henry Ginsberg-George E. Kann Distribution Corporation, have engaged L. H. Mitchell as director of publicity and advertising, effective this week.

Mr. Mitchell has been engaged in motion picture publicity for the past six years, having had charge of trade journal publicity for Goldwyn Pictures and for First National. He has been general press representative for Winthrop Ames and for Guthrie McClintie, theatrical producers, and has been on the city staff of the Evening Journal and the New York Globe, and dramatic editor of the New York World. He is the author of several books—"Bobby in Search of a Birthday," "The Circus Comes to Town," "Here, Tricks, Here,"—and has a new one, called "One Boy Too Many" coming from the presses of the Century Company in the fall.

De Mille Adds Two to "Eve's Leaves" Cast

Cecil B. De Mille has made two additions to the cast of "Eve's Leaves" which he is producing for Producers Distributing Corporation release. William Boyd has been assigned the leading male role opposite Leatrice Joy, who is starred in the production. So Jin, the Chinese "heavy" has also been secured for a featured role.

Kirkwood to Play Lead in "The Wise Guy"

James Kirkwood has been signed by producer-director Frank Lloyd to play the title role in "The Wise Guy," a novel by Jules Furtham, which Lloyd will produce for First National release. Lloyd expects to start production on the west coast about the middle of February.

Frances Marion to Adapt "The Red Mill"

The adaptation and continuity for "The Red Mill" will be done by Frances Marion, according to an announcement by Louis B. Mayer. This is a Cosmopolitan production starring Marion Davies and for release through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The picture will be directed by Marshall Neilan.

June Mathis to Produce for First National

FIRST NATIONAL has completed arrangements with June Mathis whereby she will produce four features for that company each year to be directed by Balboni, who was recently placed under a long term contract. Miss Mathis is in New York for a brief vacation following a year of concentrated work on "The Viennese Medley" and other First National pictures.

In the future Miss Mathis will confine herself to production. Her new contract will become effective immediately upon her return to the west coast in March. A number of plays and novels are now being considered for this year's pictures to be made by Miss Mathis.

Exhibitors Service Bureau

Atmosphere for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Tower of Lies" was imparted to the lobby of the Loew's Regent Theatr, Harrisburg, Pa., by wall and booth decorations of painted compo board suggesting castle walls and towers, as shown in the photo above.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Tire Billboard Idea Used for "California" Display

The huge open books featured on the deluxe billboard posters of the U. S. Tire Company, were appropriated to a display for the lobby exploitation on "California Straight Ahead" at the Loew's Regent Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa.

An imitation of one of the boards was placed in the lobby with the following copy featured "You Are Now Entering CALIFORNIA Straight Ahead. CALIFORNIA Straight Ahead is a riot of lafs. It will be remembered by all who have seen it as one of the funniest films of all time. The management invites you to join Reginald Denny's caravan through a melange of comedy and love. Don't Miss It!"

Cooperative Merchant Ads Exploit "Lost World"

The efficacy of commercial tie-ups was effectively demonstrated again by Allan S. Glenn, Director of Exploitation for First National Pictures, during the engagement of "The Lost World" at the Jefferson theatre, Roanoke, Va.

A double truck (two full pages) of ads were obtained from the city's most prominent advertisers by the Roanoke World-Times through the aid of James F. Lundy, First National exploiteer. Each of the ads took as its basis the title "The Lost World," and used scenes from the picture for illustration.

Audubon Theatre Using Reviews for Heralds

The Fox Audubon Theatre, New York City, in addition to using the regular folder heralds on its coming attractions, has inaugurated the use of commendatory reviews of a coming picture, printed on a sheet of herald size paper, with the play date of the attraction printed across the bottom. This "flyer" carries a photographic reproduction of the critique.

Decorative illuminated signs worked out in parchment paper for lettering, gave an attractive and dignified display for the presentation of First National's "The Dark Angel" at the Liberty, Portland, Ore.

Special Campaign for "Sandy"

Fox Exploitation Staff Launches Advance Drive—Many Newspaper Tie Ups Arranged

ONE of the most extensive exploitation campaigns ever attempted by the Fox company in the interests of a production has been launched in connection with "Sandy," the forthcoming screen adaptation of the Elenore Meherin newspaper serial now running in papers throughout the Country.

The press book, which the company reports will be one of the most complete exhibitor aids compiled, is in course of preparation. The greatest single item of exploitation which is to be developed for "Sandy" is the newspaper tie-ups available through the publication of the original story in the papers.

General Sales Manager James R. Grainger has sent special representatives through the country to complete arrangements for these tie-ups. Among them are Ned Holmes, Director of Exploitation, W. H. Rudolph, Max Roth, and George Robert, special representatives, as well as every exploitation agent working under the Fox banner. Early reports indicate that these representatives are meeting with even greater success than they anticipated.

Another feature of the campaign is the supplying of slides and trailers announcing that "Sandy" is in the movies now. These are being distributed gratis to exhibitors so that advance publicity may be obtained.

Shadow-box novelty to feature the showing of "The Phantom of the Opera" at the Capitol, Edmonton, Alta., Canada. The scene duplicated the Bal Masque sequence in the Universal spectacle. The "Phantom" appeared and disappeared at intervals of one minute at the head of the staircase. The mystery effect was obtained by a concealed cut-out figure of the "Phantom," which, with the aid of a mirror and a flash or wink-a-little plug, appeared and disappeared from the scene.

Trackless Train Ballyhoo Now for "Big Parade"

The famous Trackless Train, which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's exploitation department sent across the continent on a tour of sensational advertising for the company's attractions, is now specializing on "The Big Parade." The Train, which made a triumphal entry to Pacific Coast Towns some months ago, is carrying special billing for the King Vidor production at the Grayman's Egyptian Theatre in Hollywood.

This advertising special has attracted considerable attention on the west coast, and is at present working the innumerable small towns.

An idea of its activities may be drawn from a single entry in the log of the Trackless Train. The entry for Friday, December 11th.

"Leaving Grauman's Egyptian Theatre at nine thirty we proceeded on our way to Sierra Madre. The route was through Eagle Rock, Glendale, Pasadena and other smaller communities. Thousands of people were attracted as we drove along with bell ringing and whistle blowing.

Many Harmonica Tie-Up Drives

Educational Reports Contests for Juvenile Comedies are Being Launched Through Country

EDUCATIONAL officials report that the exploitation tie up made with M. Hohner, Inc., manufacturers of harmonicas, an arrangement under which complete plans, advertising accessories and prizes of harmonicas are offered free to exhibitors using the harmonica contest exploitation stunt, is being received with unusual enthusiasm by exhibitors. The tie up is with the Educational Juvenile comedies and was recently announced for national application.

Working in conjunction with the Canadian distributors of Hohner harmonicas, Educational's Toronto Exchange has arranged for the staging of a contest at the Pantages Theatre in that city. The theatre manager Mr. Miller plans to conduct this feature from February 1 to 5 inclusive, and has arranged to give a large number of prizes, including three medals, gold, silver and bronze, in addition to a number of the prize Harmonicas and cash prizes.

Educational's Cincinnati Exchange has requested complete information and all materials so that there could be staged at the Palace Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio one of the first of the contests in their territory.

The St. Louis and Indianapolis officers with large numbers of Juvenile accounts, wired for additional material. The salesmen working out of these exchanges will carry complete materials, publicity, etc., so that they will be in a position to render immediate assistance to an exhibitor desiring to stage a contest in their territory.

The Howard Theatre of Atlanta will put on a contest within the next few weeks in conjunction with the showing of an Educational Juvenile Comedy.

Among those who have been first to write direct to the Hohner organization for particulars of the tie-up is the New Broadway Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. David Schaefer, director of publicity for the Haring and Blumenthal theatres in Jersey City and Union City, made a personal visit to the manufacturer, and David J. Lustig, manager of the Regun Theatre, Harlem,

New York City, did likewise, for the purpose of arranging contests.

From all indications the tie-up promises to exceed every former exploitation tie-up arranged by Educational's

Pirate Hats Herald Errol Vehicle at Long Beach

One of the most successful stunts in the campaign staged for "Clothes Make The Pirate" at the Loew's State Theatre, Long Beach Cal., was the tie-up with a store to distribute cut-out pirate hats. It is the custom of these stores to put out an advertising bulletin weekly and the theatre representatives persuaded them to print their ad on the back of the cut-out hats issued as accessories for the picture.

Pre-production Tie Up for "Too Much Money"

A pre-production tie up for exploitation purposes was made by First National on "Too Much Money," the arrangement permitting the taking of special stills to be used for window display and other advertising material in connection with presentations of the picture in cities and towns.

The jewelry tie-up was made with Gorham Silver Company through the agency of John Drake, executive secretary for the National Jewelers Publicity Association. This association is promulgating a campaign for good taste in the wearing of jewelry and use of silverware.

With ample time to work, the Gorham Company manufactured a special silver set that was used in the tea and dinner sets of the picture. Harold H. Lance for the Gorham Company went to the First National studio and helped Director John Francis Dillon and Harry Carr to prepare the set.

Special photographs for exploitation were taken of this set featuring not only Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson but also Dorothy Mackaill who was working with another unit at the studio. These photographs will be distributed to dealers.

"Bobbed Hair" Beauties Compete in Terre Haute

A "Bobbed Hair" beauty contest used as exploitation for the picture of that title in Terre Haute, attracted an entry list of 74 flappers of all ages, types and sizes to the Liberty Theatre, where the competition was held recently.

All the competitors represented beauty shops and their bobs were described by the local newspapers as "ultra-modern" and "super-sophisticated." Through a tie-up with a fur company they were permitted to wear chic coats while being judged, and the whole event was given an extremely smart atmosphere.

The contestants passed in review before the audience and the amount of applause given determined the awards. The first prize was $15; the second $10; the third ten pairs of theatre tickets, and the fourth five pairs of theatre tickets.

A stunt that stopped the traffic! Photo above shows the turnout which responded to the offer of Manager G. P. Bannaza of the Strand, Nashville, Tenn., to give a prize to the best-dressed cowboy or Indian—a contest open to boys under fifteen and used to exploit "The Scarlet West" (First National).

"Brown Eyes" Personal Appearance for "Go West"

Butte, Mont., was the scene of some novel exploitation for "Go West," when the American Theatre there announced the forthcoming personal appearance of a new screen star—a "Miss Texas," winner of a beauty contest and therefore named for her native State.

Fifty automobiles and a brass band were there to take her to the theatre when the Eastern express came to a standstill at the station platform, there was a tremendous burst of laughter as a beautiful brown cow came down a gangway from the baggage car, and the people observed the placard on her side, "'Miss Texas' cow starring with Buster Keaton in "Go West," at the American theatre."

Pirate Ball Launches Drive for Errol Feature

The presentation of a "Pirate's Ball," staged by a local dance hall, was one of the main features of an extensive campaign for "Clothes Makes the Pirate" at John Kessler's Alhambra theatre, Canton, Ohio.

In addition to the dance event there was a pirate's plunder contest, in which a newspaper co-operated by publication of feature stories for a week in advance.

The window projection machine which showed a continuous trailer was placed in the window of the town's leading merchant. The crowds grew so thick about the window that traffic was blocked.

The pirate ball was staged in conjunction

Near zero weather added to the effect of this stunt for "Lady Windermere's Fan" at Warner Bros. Theatre, New York. The young women braved the chill air in low cut evening gowns. The stunt was executed by Bert Adler, handling special exploitation for Warner Bros.

with the Land-O-Dance Ball Room. The ballroom management got special bill paper printed advertising the dance and the picture and fairly plastered the town with it. And in addition they used 50 one-sheets and 25 threes which they purchased from the First National exchange. The picture ad-cuts were also used by the ballroom management in advertising their dance in the daily three column by seven inch ads which they used

Haselton's 'Royle Girl' Ad Has Unusual Twist

Guy D. Haselton of the Rialto Theatre, Missoula, Mont., is the author of an unusual ad for "That Royle Girl." In his copy, addressed to a competitor, Haselton shows that you can compliment a rival show and do it in a manner that reflects even greater glory on your own. The copy follows:

I read your advertisement in the Thursday Missoulin with a great deal of surprise and wonderment. We all know that Colleen Moore's "The Desert Flower" is a fine picture; even though it were only an average one, still it would be well worth one's while to see it only for the enjoyment of watching the inimitable Colleen.

But—is your Sunday picture going to be the best picture in town? A statement like that should not be made unless there are facts to justify it. You have not seen D. W. Griffith's "That Royle Girl," for ours is to be one of the first showings in the United States. I doubt also if you have even seen a criticism of it. Therefore how in fairness can you say that "The Desert Flower" is to be the best picture in town? Have you seen Reginald Denny's newest picture which, I believe will be shown at the Bluebird?

Contrary to your assertion There Is An Argument! We previewed "That Royle Girl" last night and we are wonderfully enthusiastic about it. What a drama it is. Carol Dempster is superb in her part. James Kirkwood and Harrison Ford are fine. And you should see the new Paramount actor, W. C. Fields, who made his reputation in "Sally of the Sawdust."

We believe that "That Royle Girl" is one of the best pictures to be shown next Sunday. But we realize that the others are well worth the price of admission.

THE NEW YORK CAMPAIGN ON "STELLA DALLAS"

The reproduction of newspaper ads in the layout above are from the press sheet giving the complete campaign for this First National production in New York. The campaign, executed by Victor M. Shapiro, director of advertising and publicity for Samuel Goldwyn, is notable for the cumulative value resulting from follow-up methods in displaying endorsements of famous actors, actresses and writers. The order in which the ads were used is indicated by the arrangement above. The advance announcements were followed by quotations from letters of praise for the picture from Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Chaplin, Ethel Barrymore, John Barrymore. These were summarized in a single display. Then followed single excerpts from newspaper reviews, which also were followed by a display featuring excerpts from all reviews. The large display at the extreme right was a tie-up ad used by the Saks—Fifth Avenue store, featuring a gown similar to that worn by Belle Bennett.

: : : : "THE CHECK-UP" : : : :

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

Short Subjects and Serials

Scenes from "Heavy Love," a Standard Fat Man comedy released through F. B. O.

New Serial Heads Pathe List

"Casey of the Coast Guard," with George O'Hara and Helen Ferguson Featured, Ready for Release

THE Pathe line-up of releases for the week of February 14 includes the first chapter of the new Patheserial "Casey of the Coast Guard," three two-reel comedies, a single reel comedy and the usual "Aesop's Fables," "Topics of the Day," Pathe Review and Pathe News.

"Casey of the Coast Guard," the new serial, which Will Nigh directed from the adaptation which Lewis Allen Browne and William Burt made from their own story, is based upon the activities of Government Coast Guard service. Helen Ferguson, who appeared in the Patheserial "Wild West," and George O'Hara of "The Sea Beast" fame, appear in the leading roles. The chief supporting parts are played by J. Barney Sherry, Jean Jarvis and Coit Albertson.

With the cooperation of the Government many revenue cutters, submarine chasers, and other speed craft were used in the production. The interiors were staged at the Pathe studio on Long Island. "The Smuggler's Ruse" is the title of the opening chapter.

Alice Day is the star of the Mack Sennett two-reel comedy "Gooseland," which shows her as a farm dapper in Holland. Joseph Young, Eugenia Gilbert, Barney Hellum, Sunshine Hart and Mary Ann Jackson appear in support of the star. Alf Goulding directed.

"Buried Treasure" is the title of the latest "Our Gang" comedy which Robert McGown directed. The "Gang" embark on a treasure hunt and land upon an island where moving picture actors are making a cannibal picture. Things happen fast and furiously for the treasure hunters from then on.

An all-star cast appears in "Trimmed in Gold," another Mack Sennett contribution, which shows Billy Bevan and Andy Clyde as barbers who are trimmed of their bankrolls. Madeline Hurlock and Kewpie Morgan head the supporting cast of the comedy which was directed by Del Lord. Paul Parrott is starred in the single Hal Roach comedy "Pay the Cashier."

Pathe Review No. 7 brings another "process camera" novelty, "Making Over a Metropolis" to the screen. Alvin Knechtel makes a city do many strange things in this subject. "The Birds' Paradise," scenes of Palmyra, Hawaii and "The Stonebound City," Rothenberg, Germany, in Pathecolor complete the reel.

"Hunting in 1950" is the title of the "Aesop's Film Fables" release. "Topics of the Day" and two issues of Pathe News complete the schedule announced by Pathe for February 14th.

Red Seal to Have Own Exchange System

UNDER the new policy inaugurated by Max Fleischer, president of Red Seal Pictures, the company has started the establishment of a series of exchanges throughout the country. Arrangements have just been made with Ben Amsterdam of Philadelphia whereby Amsterdam will distribute Red Seal's product throughout his territory in association with Fleischer.

This Philadelphia exchange, the fourth to be established to handle this short feature product, will open on February 15. The other three exchanges are located at New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

The company's product for this season numbers one hundred and forty featurettes including a number of specials.

"Harry Bernstein" Fleischer detailed, "recently made general sales manager of the national organization, will make a trip about the country in the immediate future and establish exchanges in the key cities.

Well Known Players Cast for Roach Comedies

The new comedies being made by Hal Roach for Pathe release include some of the screen's best known actors and actresses. In the latest Charley Chase comedy just completed under the direction of Leo McCarey are Virginia Pearson, Anders Randolph, and Martha Sleeper.

Mack Swain, Bull Montana, Helen Gilmore, Jimmy Finlayson, Fred Kelsey and Martha Sleeper appear in the cast of the two-reel comedy starring Glenn Tryon which was directed by Fred L. Guiol.

A great number of feature picture players, including Theda Bara, Lionel Barrymore, Mildred Harris, Stuart Holmes, Mildred June, Lincoln Stedman, Eileen Percy, Mickey Bennett, George Seigman, Gertrude Astor, John T. Murray, Cesare Gravina, Lucien Littlefield and Joe Madison have appeared in two-reel Hal Roach comedies made for Pathe release.

Hiers Completes "Wireless 'Lizzie'" for Educational

Production on "Wireless 'Lizzie,'" starring Walter Hiers, has been completed under the direction of Earle Rodney. This is the comedy on which Hiers was working several months ago when he met with an accident which cost him the loss of a finger. The supporting cast for this Educational release includes Duane Thompson, Jack Duffy, Bill Irving and Lincoln Plumer.

"A Fraternity Mixup" is Joe Rock's Next

Joe Rock's next Blue Ribbon Comedy for F. B. O. release will be made under the title of "A Fraternity Mixup." It is a collegiate story written by Bob McKenzie. Alice Ardell will be featured with a comedian yet to be selected. Percy Pembroke will direct.

R. Doran Makes Radio Talk in St. Louis

REGGE DORAN, director of the Public Relations Department of Pathe Exchanges, Inc., was the featured talker on the regular women's hour at Station KMOX, in St. Louis, on January 21. Miss Doran spoke on "The Value of the Movies in National Life and in the Lives of Our Young People."

On Tuesday, January 26, before the Cincinnati Motion Picture Council at the Sinton Hotel, Miss Doran gave a very informative talk on "What the Motion Picture Means to Parents," in which she discussed the reaction of the younger generation to motion pictures, and the service the film industry gives these youthful patrons. She also spoke on children's matinees and how to put them on. The Pathe public relations director also addressed the Rotary Club of Alton, Illinois on January 20.

Sterns List Comedy Releases

Four Two-reelers are Due Through Universal During Month of February

FOUR two-reel comedies produced by Stern Brothers are scheduled for release through Universal during the month of February. In their order they are, "The Big City," starring Edna Marian; "Crowning the Count," featuring Eddie Gordon; "Accidents Can Happen," featuring Al Alt, and the new Buster Brown comedy, "Buster's Nose Dive."

"Buster's Nose Dive" is the sixth of the Buster Brown series. It was directed by Gus Meine and recently had a pre-release showing on Broadway. It features Arthur Trimble as Buster, Doreen Turner as Mary Jane and Pete, the dog, as Tige. The picture is scheduled for release February 24th.

"The Big City," another of the Edna

Marian comedies, will go to the exhibitors on February 3rd. It was directed by Francis Corby and shows Miss Marian as the country flapper, whose escapades as a big town vamp get her into many difficulties.

"Crowning the Count" is set for release February 10th. It was directed by Jess Robbins. Larry Richardson has the chief supporting role to Eddie Gordon. The story has to do with the showing up of a bogus count, played by Gordon.

February 17th is set for the release date of "Accidents Can Happen," in which Al Alt is featured. The comedian is again supported by the rotund Hilliard Karr. This comedy was directed by Charles Lamont.

"A Bankrupt Honeymoon"

(Fox—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THERE'S quite a plot to this buzz-saw action, hilarious comedy starring Harold Goodwin, which runs along at a clipping rate and hasn't a dull moment in it. When the newly-wed spendthrift hero goes supposedly broke on his honeymoon, fate and a taxi driver show him the way out and in partnership with the latter he starts an "Eat-While-You-Ride" bus that competes successfully with a bus-line run by his dad. Goodwin scores in the leading role, with Shirley Palmer, as the girl, and Oliver Hardy, as the taxi driver, doing excellent work. The picture is well photographed and directed. Should please all classes of patrons, a capital addition to any program.

The Cast

Oswald Overton.....Harold Goodwin
The Girl.....Shirley Palmer
Girl's Dad.....Frank Beal
Boy's Lawyer.....Harry Dunkinson
Taxi Driver.....Oliver Hardy

The Story—Young Oswald Overton, son of wealthy bus lines operator, spends money regardless of his parent's remonstrances. He weds a girl in a hurry and as he starts on his honeymoon after a convivial night, during which he becomes "pals" with a taxi driver and runs up a huge bill driving around; is notified that his dad has gone broke. He and the taxi driver start an "Eat-While-You-Ride" bus that proves a big hit and scoops all patronage away from the ordinary, rival bus lines. His father's lawyer buys him out for $50,000. It transpires that the supposed bankruptcy of his old man was a frame-up to check his extravagance.

Summary—A comedy with lots of snap, fun and slapstick action, offering unusually good plot material. Direction and work of cast up to best standard. Well photographed. Amusing from start to finish, should please everywhere.

"Felix, the Cat, Flirts With Fate"

(Educational-Cartoon—One Reel)

ACCORDING to Pat Sullivan and Felix, the planet Mars is mostly inhabited by cats and a few other weird looking objects. Just how they discovered all this was because Felix decided to ride a skyrocket to the planet to look over an attractive young lady cat he spied thru a telescope. All this happened to Felix thru a dejected state of mind following an unsuccessful search for a sweetheart. Arriving on the planet, Felix meets his lady-love and they attend a dance where, Felix finding things too slow, introduces the "Charleston." Soon, the whole planet is rocking from the effects of this dance. A bouncer interferes and Felix is thrown back to earth. This cartoon is up to the usual average.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Sea Scamps"

(Educational-Juvenile—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

"BIG BOY" and the rest of the gang of kids furnish most of the funmaking in this two-reel Juvenile Comedy although a chaperon, a chauffeur and a ship's officer contribute a goodly portion of the laughs. The story has to do with the efforts of a nice, charitably inclined old lady who arranges a day's outing for the inmates of an orphanage. Once aboard, the kids almost drive the nice old lady and the officers frantic by their deviltry. Charles Lamont directed.

The Cast

Big Boy, Bonnie, Spud, Ginger, Bobbie and Pal.
The Story—Thru the efforts of a charitable old lady who has a big sedan automobile, a day's outing aboard a ship is arranged for a number of orphans. On the appointed day, the auto arrives, the kids climb in and on the way to the ship almost wreck the car with the tricks played on the chauffeur. "Big Boy" gets off to a late start and is left behind but manager to get aboard with his dog before the ship gets under way. Once aboard the packet the gang start in immediately to make life as miserable as possible for everyone concerned. A few of the pranks that they put into play include setting off a case full of fireworks and interfering in general with the ship's routine.

Summary—A good comedy that features "Big Boy" and the rest of the gang of kids. The antics of "Big Boy" are always good for a number of laughs. The rest of the cast is excellent.

"Your Husband's Past"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

A VERY fair story, amusing incidents and a well known cast will generally insure the success of this Hal Roach two reeler. Fred Guiol did the directing and made a good job of it. The comedy concerns the complications which arise when a reformed crook marries a governor's daughter. His past comes back to haunt him.

The Cast

Vivian Oakland, George Cooper, Tyler Brooke, Fred Kelsey, James Finlayson and Arthur Millett.

The Story—A couple of crooks are playing their trade in a theatre where a governor and his daughter are among the spectators. One of the pair of crooks succeeds in robbing the governor's daughter of her necklace while the other steals back the jewels from his pal and returns them to the owner, thereby affecting an introduction to the charming young lady. The crook works fast, is invited to the governor's mansion and eventually obtains consent to marriage. In the meantime a detective recognizes the crook who has passed himself off as a titled gentleman, and endeavors to expose him. The detective is foiled in his first attempt and the crook, his pal and the governor's daughter prepare for an elopement. Many situations arise during the elopement and the crook's past continues to haunt him with several detectives playing the part of the ghost. He is finally run to cover.

Summary—There is nothing wrong with this one—amusing little plot, excellent cast and good direction. Should be well received at most any house.

"Long Pants"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

THIS is a much better comedy than the last one in which Glen Tryon appeared and the result is a very satisfactory brand of entertainment which should be a welcome addition to the program of any theatre. Furthermore, Tryon has a strong supporting cast, with the efforts of Jack Clifford particularly deserving of mention. Hal Roach is the producer and Fred L. Guiol did the directing.

The Cast

Glen Tryon, Vivian Oakland, Cissy Fitzgerald, Jack "Rube" Clifford and Sue O'Neill.

The Story—Our hero appears in his first pair of long trousers which are the latest and most extreme cut that has been adopted by the young male flappers of today. In possession of this up-to-date leg covering, Glen feels the urge of romance and a chance meeting with a vamping, merry widow results in the young man completely falling for her wiles. After performing a heroic rescue in a nearby lake, Glen immediately discovers that though his trousers are one of the latest creations, they are not unshrinkable and almost spoil his romantic efforts. The young lover invites the widow to dinner at his home where his father, despite a rheumatic ailment—also becomes an admirer of the charming lady. During the dinner there is a lot of good comedy enacted.

Summary—Glen Tryon and a strong supporting cast in an amusing two reel comedy that will prove satisfactory to the average audience.

"Funnymooners"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

A NOTHER Ralph Graves comedy from the Sennett studios that will please. Graves has his usual good support from Thelma Parr and Marvin Lobach and this trio is always bound to furnish good entertainment. The story concerns the adventures of a love sick pair who experience many difficulties in dodging an irate parent when trying to elope. Lloyd Bacon directed.

The Cast

Ralph Graves, Thelma Parr and Marvin Lobach.

The Story—Ralph and Thelma are a love-sick couple who are having considerable difficulty with the progress of their romance—due to the objections of Thelma's father who does not approve of Ralph as a prospective mate for his daughter. They endeavor to elope on several occasions but the parent is always on hand to frustrate their plans. However, the pair finally manage to outwit the old man and in their flivver, go in search of a preacher to tie the knot—and to find quarters for the night. Complications arise when they are unable to find a minister and they are finally forced to seek shelter in a hotel where an insurance agent and his wife offer them the hospitality of their room which is the only one vacant. A terrible night passes—and the girl's father appears on their trail the next morning. Everything is finally straightened out.

Summary—This trio, consisting of Ralph Graves, Thelma Parr and Marvin Lobach are generally always good for first rate comedy and this one is not an exception.

"The Big City"

(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is a typical Edna Marian vehicle. It is just a hodge-podge of slapstick and knock about stuff which gives this clever young comedienne full scope for the display of her talents. There is not even the thread of a story, but just a series of incidents that permits Miss Marian a chance to wreck a household and do some tumbling about that must almost wreck her.

The Story—Edna, a gawky country girl arrives in the city to visit her aunt. A traffic cop directs her to a bus which she boards, but falls off and is picked up by the fender of a passing car. She is also thrown from this to land on a scooter which takes her to her destination. Upon arrival at the wealthy aunt's she is warned not to touch the canary. She liberates the bird and spends the rest of the time knocking over bric-a-brac and wrecking furniture in an effort to recapture it. When the bird tires of the chase he returns to the cage of his own volition.

Summary—This is a fair knockabout comedy of just the type suited to Miss Marian. It is almost entirely without a story, but is made up of a series of incidents and mishaps that give the star full scope for her talents. It should be good for a few laughs.

"Officer of the Day"

(Fox—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardey)

THIS Fox Imperial is lively comedy, good for the laughs all the way through. Also, it offers remarkably fine photography, including many attractive marine shots and outdoor views with particularly nice shading and light effects. The film snaps into high speed right at the start and maintains its breezy action to the finish. Harold Goodwin, as the gob Keene, gives a gingery performance. Eugenia Gilbert scores as the heroine.

The Cast

Keene, The Boy Harold Goodwin
The Girl Eugenia Gilbert
The Villain Brooks Benedict
Chief Petty Officer Harry Woods
Boy's Buddy Jack Ackroyd
Vamp Edna Tichner
Captain Larry Stears
Consul Roderick O'Farrell

The Story—Keene joins the U. S. Navy so as to reach Alveria, where Mary Todd's father is consul, as he wants to win the old man's consent to their marriage. Going ashore at Alveria his valise is accidentally substituted for one a gob is taking to the Captain at a hotel. He finds the Cap's uniform in the suitcase and wears it. Mary is abducted by a rival suitor. Keene catches and beats up the villain, is warmly congratulated and gets Mary.

Summary—Has plenty of punch and go, situations breezily amusing, no hitch in swiftly-moving action, has love interest lure, whirls into great burlesque chase climax.

Highlights of "The Feud," a new Van Bibber comedy produced by Fox Film.

"The Winged Rider"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

LOVE and intrigue combined with an oft-told, but interesting story making this a fairly good western with Edmund Cobb featured. The action is almost continuous and well sustained with little diversion to the usual sidelights of these two-reelers. Cobb as the hero has an easy role and does it well, with the balance of the cast well suited to the tasks assigned them.

The Story—Tom Sage, Big Bar Ranch foreman is also the head of the rustlers. He makes a dicker with the Winged Rider noted outlaw to help them over the border with a herd of the Big Bar horses. Jackie Day, daughter of the ranch owner encounters the Winged Rider and falls in love with him. Later she sees him in the company of Sage and becomes suspicious of the latter. She tells her father and a posse is formed. Sage and the Winged Rider are captured, Sage is revealed as the head of the rustlers and the Winged Rider as a ranger who has been impersonating the famed outlaw.

Summary—A good two-reel western with a well told story and well acted. It should go well wherever the short western is liked.

"The Little Brown Jug"

(Pathe-Fable—One Reel)

THIS time the farmer, a jug of wine, a cat and a dog go fishing. On the end of a dock they try their luck but none of the finny tribe are tempted by the lure. Then Mr. Terry shows the reason—there is a session on in a fish school under-sea and the class is being taught by an experienced old timer of a fish who shows the youngsters just how to strip a hook of its bait without heading straight for the frying pan. In the meantime the liquor gets in its work on the farmer and his past crusades against the fish are revealed in a horrible dream whereby the denizens of the sea reap their revenge.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"A Dumb Friend"

(Universal-Blue Bird—One Reel)

ARTHUR LAKE is the featured player in this lively little comedy which gives the young comedian a better vehicle than he usually has. Arthur is the driver of a wagon for a dry cleaning concern and on his route he picks up the dress suit of a prince. When he effects a rescue of the girl from a band of hoodlums he inadvertently dons the coat of the prince and hands the girl the latter's card. As the prince he is invited to the girl's party, but is finally compelled to reveal his identity when the horse persistently follows him about. The girl sympathizes with him and reveals her love for him.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Egypt Today"

(Fox—707 Feet)

PUBLIC interest in the Land of the Nile is constantly being stimulated by cabled reports in the daily press dealing with fresh discoveries by explorers of ancient Egyptian relics, a fact which lends additional charm to this fine scenic, showing the massive ruins of the past, pyramids, temples, tombs; all bearing majestic testimony to that dead and gone era of a great civilization which once led the world. These are striking views, superbly filmed. A picture with historic and educational appeal, that will also please the curiosity-loving fans.—GEORGE T. PARDEY.

"Soft Pedal"

(Pathe—One Reel)

A SHORT comedy with Paul Parrott in the leading role that will fit extremely well into any exhibitor's program. It's a burlesque all the way thru and this clever comedian has a good chance to do his stuff. Parrott plays the role of an umbrella salesman, aided by a little darkey who crawls along the tops of buildings with a sprinkling pot, emptying the contents of the can on the heads of pedestrians who immediately become prospects for the sale of an umbrella. This occasions many an amusing situation.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"A June Bride"

(Pathe-Fable—One Reel)

THIS one of Paul Terry's fables is well up to standard and is good for many a laugh. Three of his familiar characters are featured which include Thomas Cat, his lady friend and the farmer. Due to an eagle eye that the farmer keeps on the lady cat, Thomas has much difficulty in courting the fair feline. However, true love finds its way—and also a preacher—who ties the knot while the irate farmer attempts to break down the door.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

Great Activity on the Mack Sennett Lot

Ralph Graves has started work on his latest two-reel comedy for Pathe release on the Mack Sennett lot under the direction of Arthur Ripley. Thelma Parr again appears opposite the star and the supporting cast includes Marvin Lobach, Thelma Hill, Dave Morris, Patsy O'Byrne and Barney Hellum. Raymond McKee and Ruth Hiatt are making another of the "Smith Family" comedies under the direction of Gilbert Pratt with a supporting cast including Mary Ann Jackson, Sunshine Hart and "Cap," the canine actor.

Eddie Cline is directing a comedy with a racing theme with Alice Day starred and the cast includes Danny O'Shea, Ruth Taylor, Eddie Quillan and Joseph Young. The all-star troupe, Billy Bevan, Andy Clyde, Vernon Dent and Madeline Hurlock, are making a cannibal story under the direction of Del Lord.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

The Pleasure Buyers (Warner Brothers—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

ARTHUR SOMERS ROCHE can usually be depended upon for something worth while in mystery stories of which this is one of his best. While the screen version is rather long, it succeeds in holding the interest unusually well, the only breakcoming when a lot of useless comedy is injected by Charles Conklin in the role of a colored servant which tends to interrupt the continuity and has no place in a picture of this type. The mystery is one that keeps the observer guessing right up to the last scene and there will be few if any in the audience that will be able to solve it. In a foreword the exhibitor and patron are urged not to divulge the ending. Irene Rich gives her usual clean cut characterization and she is supported by Clive Brook, in the principal male role which is not overly convincing. Mr. Brook does not look like a former police commissioner. Frank Campeau also overdoes the role of sleuth. June Marlowe attractive in a minor part.

THEME. Mystery drama. Former police commissioner seeks to find who killed a wealthy gambler and clear his sweetheart.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Gambling room scenes. Cassena's attack on fiancée's father. Shooting of Cassenas. Third degree in which Joan figures. Solution of crime.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Book store displays. Boost the star, who is a strong box office puller. Promote a Pleasure Buyers' Week in co-operation with merchants.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for average house. Irene Rich should help sell it.

SUMMARY. A good mystery tale, which is rather long, but holds the interest. Has a fair cast and is well mounted. Will please most persons. Some parts overdone.

THE CAST

Joan Wiswell.....	Irene Rich
Tad Workman.....	Clive Brook
Gene Cassenas.....	Gayne Whitman
Helen Ripley.....	June Marlowe
Burke.....	Charles Conklin
Tommy Wiswell.....	Don Alvarado
Kildare.....	Edward Peil

Author, Arthur Somers Roche. Director Chet Withey. Photographed by Joseph Walker.

SYNOPSIS. Gene Cassenas, sitting in his own home is shot fatally by someone in the dark outside. Tad Workman, former police commissioner, is called in. Six persons are under suspicion, a valet, Joan Wiswell, society beauty; her brother, Tommy; Terry, a former business associate; Helen Ripley, fiancée and the latter's father. It transpires that the valet rigged up a hall clock which fired a gun at a certain time. Joan and Tad wed.

Irene Rich, in Warner Bros. picture, "The Pleasure Buyers."

The Pleasure Buyers (Warner Brothers)

PRESS NOTICE

"THE PLEASURE BUYERS," will be shown on the screen at the _____ Theatre, commencing _____. The story concerns the romance between Joan Wiswell, society belle, portrayed by Irene Rich, and Tad Workman, former police commissioner, the role assumed by Clive Brook. Gene Cassenas, ne'er-do-well gambler is engaged to Helen Ripley. In an effort to save Helen from Gene's fascination, Joan arouses his antagonism. When, after an exciting night in which he quarrels with several different persons, Cassenas is found murdered, suspicion falls on Joan. How Workman clears her of guilt and marries her, is the climax.

Fangs of Fate (Chesterfield M. P. Corp.—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THERE can be no complaint as to lack of action in this Western. Flashing guns, galloping steeds, stage holdups, vigorous rough-and-tumble scraps comprise the greater part of the picture, with some comedy centering around a good-natured, corpulent sheriff altogether too heavily handicapped by superfluous flesh for the satisfactory performance of his duties; and love interest duly interjected. Bill Patton is the star, and Bill can certainly ride and battle with the best of 'em. He does very well as the reformed bandit leader who turns deputy sheriff and rounds up his old associates because, in the first place, a good girl has learned to love him, and secondly, he wants to get even with the gang members for not knowing enough to quit when he told them to. Dorothy Donald is the pretty heroine, and it's quite easy to understand why Bill wanted to go straight for her sake.

THEME. Western Melodrama. Outlaw captain turns straight for girl's sake. When gang refuses to quit he becomes deputy sheriff and rounds them up.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Gun fights, horsemanship feats, fistic scraps. Bill Patton's energetic work. Tricks of his horse, Silver Flash. Romantic appeal.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the whirlwind action, the scene where Bill whips town rowdies, his round-up of the bandit crowd. Feature Patton and leading lady.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for daily change and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Picture follows familiar plot trail, but will satisfy fans who want their Westerners dished up with continuous red-hot melodramatic action. Has no end of exciting fights, gunplay and fistic variety; riding feats galore.

THE CAST

Bob Haynes.....	Bill Patton
Dorothy.....	Dorothy Donald
Dodo Briggs, Sheriff.....	Ivor Macfadden
Judge.....	William Bertram
Red.....	Merrill McCormick
Bill.....	Tex Starr
Tom.....	Carl Silvera

Author, L. Carpenter. Director, H. B. Carpenter. Photographed by Paul Allen.

SYNOPSIS. Outlaws terrorize town of Arcady, Arizona. Bob Haynes, a stranger, is attracted by Dorothy, daughter of boarding house keeper and protects her from some drunken rowdies. Sheriff offers to make Bob a deputy, but he declines. Later, following a stage holdup, he accepts and brings in the guilty bandits, but confesses that he had previously been their leader. The outlaws are sent to jail, but the judge paroles Bob in Dorothy's custody.

Fangs of Fate (Chesterfield M. P. Corp.)

PRESS NOTICE

BILL PATTON, most fearless and dashing of range riders, is the star of "Fangs of Fate," a slashing Western melodrama listed as the chief screen attraction at the _____ Theatre on _____. Bill enacts the part of an outlaw leader who turns straight for a girl's sake. When his former associates refuse to quit, Bill becomes a deputy sheriff and goes on their trail.

He gets his men, and then confesses that he used to be their leader. The judge paroles him in the custody of the girl he loves.

Dorothy Donald gives a fine performance in the heroine role. Others in the cast are Ivor Macfadden, William Bertram, Merrill McCormick, Tex Starr.

CATCH LINES

An outdoor adventure picture packed with thrills, gunfighting and tender romance, a whirlwind of action!

Bill Patton, star of "Fangs of Fate," a Chesterfield production.

When Love Grows Cold

(F. B. O.—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

HOUSES catering to patrons whose desire in film menus borders on the sensational should find in this offering just what they are looking for. To begin with they will get Natacha Rambova as the star. Natacha, of course, means nothing, but Mrs. Rudolph Valentino, her name in private life, is "some-thing else again!" Then there is a big selling factor offered in the gorgeous gowns of her own creation which she wears in this one. Again the settings, also unique, are of her own design. The story, by Laura Jean Libbey, is just fair. So is the acting and direction. However, folks who go to see this will do so because they want to see Natacha and so exhibitors won't have to worry so much about anything else. The supporting cast includes Clive Brook and Sam Hardy, the former the popular English actor and the latter the funny press agent of "Blue Beard's Seven Wives."

THEME. Modern society drama in which a husband's love grows cold when he reaches the pinnacle of success but the wife remains true.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Sequence in which wife, after her husband fails, puts over the big deal before the oil company board. Scene when wife sees "the other woman" in husband's arms. The settings. Mrs. Valentino's gowns.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Hammer home in every nook and corner the name of Mrs. Rudolph Valentino. Book display of Laura Jean Libbey novels. Use photos of star in star window tie-up.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for houses that specialize in the sensational show.

SUMMARY. Looks like a good box office bet for theatres that show this class of picture. Publicity barrage put down on star throughout country will help. Boost star, don't promise much on story or acting.

When Love Grows Cold PRESS NOTICE

NATACHA RAMBOVA, better known as Mrs. Rudolph Valentino, now one of the most talked of women in the world, is the star of "When Love Grows Cold," which will be the attraction at the Theatre, commencing ——. The story, which is from the pen of Laura Jean Libbey, who has thrilled the hearts of the world with her love stories, is an ultra-modern society drama which shows the lengths to which a woman will go, when she really loves a man, in forgiving his transgressions. An excellent supporting cast includes Clive Brook, the popular English actor; Sam Hardy, Kathleen Martin, Kathryn Hill, John Gough, Russell Griffin and others.

CATCH LINES

The most talked of woman in the world in her first picture from the pen of Laura Jean Libbey! The most romantic figure of the century in a sensational Laura Jean Libbey love story!

Don X

(B. A. Goodman Prod.—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS is the first of a series of Western features sponsored by B. A. Goodman Productions, starring Bruce Gordon, the South African stunt-rider and all-round athlete. Gordon lives up to his advertised reputation by executing some nifty, flashy horsemanship feats and using a pair of highly-educated fists in workmanlike style, when, as hero, it becomes necessary for him to whale a villain or two. He is first seen as the stalwart head of a cattlemen's association, then wearing the semblance of a swarthy Mexican, Don X, trailing certain rustlers to their lair, and does excellent work in both cases. Josephine Hill wins favor as the girl who gives Blair the cold shoulder for Don X, being blissfully unaware the two men are really one. But of course she finds out the truth in the end and everything is jake. While there's nothing startlingly new about this film, it travels fast, is well photographed and acted, and a good card for certain houses.

THEME. Western melodrama. Blair of Cattlemen's Association, disguises himself as Spanish Don, runs down cattle-rustlers, incidentally winning ranchman's daughter.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Snappy action, pleasing photography and romance. Scene where hero and bandit dive fighting off cliff. Scrap near finish. Climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tell 'em what a bird Bruce Gordon is at the stunt stuff, play up his riding feats, stress thrills and love interest. Mention Miss Hill.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for smaller houses, or wherever adventure dope holds them.

SUMMARY. First of new Western series starring Bruce Gordon. Plot follows customary lines, but is spiced liberally with thrills, fights, riding feats, the star doing remarkably well in equine stunts and fist-wrangling. Good of its sort.

THE CAST

Frank Blair.....Bruce Gordon
Frank Paget.....Melbourne Morante
Gladys.....Josephine Hill
Perez Blake.....Boris Bullock
Pecos Pete.....Victor Allen
Red Dunn.....Robert Williamson
Don X.....Bruce Gordon

Author Nat Credited. Director, Forrest Sheldon.

SYNOPSIS. Perez Blake and his cattle rustlers raid Frank Paget's ranch. The latter appeals for aid to the Cattlemen's Protective Association and Frank Blair responds. Disguised as Don X, a Mexican, Blair trails the bandits constantly. Gladys Paget, in love with the romantic Don X, refuses an offer of marriage from Blair, who after many adventures, finally meets and whips Perez. The outlaw chief and his gang are turned over to justice. Blair reveals his identity and Gladys admits her love.

Bruce Gordon in "Don X," a B. A. Goodman production.

Don X (A. G. Steen, Inc.) PRESS NOTICE

ADASHING, smashing Western melodrama, "Don X," starring Bruce Gordon, will be the big screen attraction at the Theatre on —.

This is a great story of adventure and romance, vibrating with fast action and loaded with exciting situations. Bruce Gordon plays a dual role, appearing first as a ranchman, then disguised as a Mexican Don for the purpose of running down cattle-rustlers. There is some marvelous stunt work, fast riding and fighting and a love affair which ends happily. The star is at his best in this picture, with fascinating Josephine Hill for his leading lady.

CATCH LINES

A modern Don Quixote who fights his way through an army of enemies to final triumph!

Bruce Gordon, daring stunt rider, in a picture crammed with thrills, lighting action and romance!

The Blackbird

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—6688 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE gloomy windings of London's East India Docks and Limehouse, reproduced with faithful accuracy of detail, furnish appropriate backgrounds for this picture which presents Lon Chaney in a dual role that adds materially to his far-flung reputation as a skilled portrayer of weirdly grotesque characters. While the feature as a whole is inferior to that former Brown-ing-Chaney masterpiece, "The Unholy Three," it ranks as good melodramatic entertainment, the plot travels along original lines, the atmosphere is sombrely artistic and photography excellent. The star's ability to distort himself on short notice from a well-formed, vigorous crook into a pitiable cripple with twisted joints is nothing short of marvelous, horribly effective, some folks may think, but the entire Chaney performance is oddly fascinating just the same. Renee Adoree is sweetly captivating as the music hall lady, Owen Moore a likable lover, support adequate.

THEME. Melodrama. Deals with London crook who dodges police by posing as a cripple, and loves music hall girl. He dies suddenly, girl weds another suitor.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Good direction. Chaney's wonderful impersonations. British slum settings, colorful atmosphere. Death of Blackbird.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tell patrons picture is directed by man who produced "The Unholy Three." Play up Chaney's great acting. Bill as unique crook melodrama. Mention Owen Moore and Renee Adoree.

DRAWING POWER. Should do good business in any house.

SUMMARY. A strong melodrama with queer crook angles, great British underworld atmosphere. Chaney a big hit in lead. Good work by Renee Adoree and Owen Moore. Has audience appeal, plot altogether out of the ordinary.

THE CAST

The Blackbird	{	Lon Chaney
The Bishop
Fifi		Renee Adoree
West End Eddie		Owen Moore
Limehouse Polly		Doris Lloyd
The Shadow		Andy MacClennan
Red		William Weston

Author and Director, Tod Browning. Photographed by Percy Hilburn.

SYNOPSIS. The Blackbird, clever thief, poses as his own brother at intervals, disguised as a crippled mission-keeper, known to his neighbors as The Bishop. He loves Fifi, music hall girl. West End Eddie is his rival. A conflict of wits arises between the crook pair for possession of a diamond collar which changes hands several times. The Blackbird shoots a Scotland Yard man. In avoiding arrest by changing to his Bishop impersonation, he falls and is so badly injured that he dies. Fifi and Eddie find happiness together.

The Blackbird (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

PRESS NOTICE

TOD BROWNING and Lon Chaney, director and star of "The Unholy Three," the picture which created such a tremendous sensation; again combine forces in producing another unique feature, "The Blackbird," which will be shown at the Theatre on _____.

The new film is also a crook melodrama, and one of immense appeal both from the human interest and thrill viewpoints. It concerns a clever rascal whose ability to assume another identity, that of a crippled mission-keeper, enables him to defy the police at will.

In support, Renee Adoree, Owen Moore, Doris Lloyd, Andy MacClennan, William Weston and others.

CATCH LINES

A big new sensational crook melodrama, sponsored by Tod Browning, who produced "The Unholy Three."

Lon Chaney, seen in "The Blackbird." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The Beautiful Cheat

(Universal Jewel—6583 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

REGISTERS as a capital audience picture; once again the making of movies and movie stars becomes the subject of jest by the folks who make 'em, this time resulting in a merry comedy that will tickle the fans' mirthful fancies and should stack up a good box office record. Public interest in what goes on behind the scenes never lessens, and the trials of producer, press agent and star are here set forth with frankness, zest and strong comic appeal. Naturally it all verges on burlesque, but there's sufficient solid material to the story to make it seem convincing, at that. Everybody will like Laura La Plante in the role of Mary Callahan whose name is switched to Maritza Callahansky when fate and the publicity man transforms her into a Russian screen light; she gives an excellent performance and is well supported, with Harry Myers, Bertram Grassby, Alexander Carr, Kate Price, doing first-class work. Direction O. K. Photography good.

THEME. Producer and press agent combine to make movie star out of Mary Callahan. Her debut as Russian actress is put over successfully. She weds publicity man.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Laura La Plante's acting. Scenes aboard ship. The party. Laughable farce situations. Suspense in final episodes and climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Your best bet is to play this as real intimate story of the movies, tell about Hollywood studio shots, press agent's kidding methods, stress the "from shop-girl to movie throne" idea. Feature Laura La Plante.

DRAWING POWER. Meets first-run demands. Should do well in large and small houses.

SUMMARY. Another comedy poking fun at producers' tactics and making of screen stars. Is full of laughs, moves fast, has romantic lure, well acted and directed.

THE CAST

Mary Callahan	Laura La Plante
Jimmy Austin	Harry Myers
Marquis de la Pontenae	Bertram Grassby
Al Goldringer	Alexander Carr
Dan Brodie	Robert Anderson
Mrs. Bruckman	Helen Dunbar
Kate Callahan	Kate Price

Author, Nina Wilcox Putnam. Director, Edward Sloman. Photographed by J. J. Rose.

SYNOPSIS. Picture magnate has press agent Austin take Mary Callahan, pretty shop-girl, abroad, where she is transformed by publicity methods into Maritza Callahansky, Russian actress, advertised as owning Crown jewels. Returning to America, the publicity game goes on, Maritza giving a party in a Long Island mansion, during the rightful owner's absence. Latter's unexpected return creates momentary confusion, but all is straightened out by the son of the family, who has joined the screen acting brigade. Austin and Mary decide to marry.

The Beautiful Cheat (Universal)

PRESS NOTICE

THE romantic, mirthful story of a shop-girl who becomes a famous movie star, is presented in "The Beautiful Cheat," a brilliant comedy-drama which will be given its local premiere at the _____ Theatre on _____.

Laura La Plante is the heroine, playing the role of Mary Callahan, who goes from behind a counter to before the camera, is taken abroad by a foxy press agent, transformed into a Russian celebrity and brought home again. The methods employed by the publicity man to keep the public guessing and backers happy are never failing sources of merriment.

Miss La Plante's best screen performance, with a galaxy of noted players in support.

CATCH LINES

She craved a career, a press agent helped her, she rose from obscurity to fame!

Blue Blood

(Chadwick Pictures Corp.—5600 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

LOTS of whiz-bang stuff in this picture, George Walsh indulging in all kinds of acrobatics, taking a flyer in a plane with the girl, clambering up a mountainside, putting up a waste of a scrap with the crew of a smuggling yacht which he boards to rescue the same lady, and so on. The plot isn't the sort of thing that can stand being analyzed, but if your patrons are content with fast buzzing action and Mr. Walsh's pleasing athletic personality "Blue Blood" should score well with them. It's O. K. for program purposes, the photography, consisting mostly of exteriors, excepting for a couple of ballroom shots, is up to standard and some timely comedy gags are thrown in to balance the melodramatic trend of the tale. Cecille Evans, as the heroine, hasn't much to do but look pretty, and fulfills that condition finely; Philo McCullough is a rather stagey villain and Harvey Clark seems to enjoy himself in the comic role of Tim Reilly.

THEME. Girl's father tries to marry her to supposed business man, who turns out to be rum-runner. She is won by young American who exposes bootlegger.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Walsh's climbing, swimming, flying, fighting stunts. The fast action, romance and comedy. Colorful atmosphere and good outdoor views.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost as melo with rapid-fire action and George Walsh doing some great athletic tricks. Play up the fight aboard the yacht and love affair.

DRAWING POWER. Good wherever they want lurid melodrama, quick punch action, broad comedy, and don't worry about actual plot values.

SUMMARY. A bunch of hokum thrills in this one, the kind of hokum a good many fans will yell enthusiastically over. Star does good athletic work, support O. K. Plenty of rough comedy relief, nice outdoor shots.

THE CAST

Robert Chester.....	George Walsh
Geraldine Hicks.....	Cecille Evans
Percy Horton.....	Philo McCullough
Delight Burns.....	Joan Meredith
Leander Hicks.....	Robert Boulder
Tim Reilly.....	Harvey Clark
Amos Jenkins.....	G. Howe Black

Author, Frank H. Clark. Director, Scott Dunlop.

SYNOPSIS. Leander Hicks wants his daughter Geraldine to wed Horton, supposed malted-milk millionaire. She refuses. At a seaside resort Gerry falls in love with scientist Bob Chester. Horton is really a rum-runner. His men grab Bob in mistake for a revenue officer but he escapes. Hounded by detectives Horton tries a getaway with Gerry and her dad on his yacht. Bob boards the vessel, whips Horton, is attacked by the crew, but officers arrive and break up the gang. The lovers are united.

Blue Blood (Chadwick Pictures)

PRESS NOTICE

AT the ——— Theatre on ———, "Blue Blood," a fast action melodrama starring George Walsh will be exhibited on the screen for the first time in this vicinity.

There isn't a dull moment in this picture, which mingles comedy with keen-edge suspense, thrills and love interest. Walsh plays the part of a young American scientist with whom a rich man's daughter is in love, her father trying to marry her to a man who after turns out to be a rum-runner.

The star is given great opportunity to display his well-known athletic abilities and is well supported, with Cecille Evans as the heroine, Philo McCullough, Joan Meredith and other popular players in support.

CATCH LINES

A million dollar mail robbery, a desperate smuggling gang, a daring hero and beautiful girl!

The Checkered Flag

(Ginsberg Distributing Corp.—6071 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

CONSIDERED as a "buy" for the state rights field, this picture registers O. K. in every particular. It has plenty of action, gets off to a good start and rattles along merrily to the end. There's a real kick to the big auto race scene, where the heroine substitutes for her lover, kept from the track by foul means, and drives his car to victory. Most of these auto-racing stories bear a family resemblance to each other, but so long as romance, suspense and thrills are dished up in generous quantity, the fans like 'em, and "The Checkered Flag" ought to breeze by with flying colors. Wallace MacDonald does very well in the hero role, Elaine Hammerstein is attractive as the girl in the case and Robert Ober supplies timely comedy with a laughable sketch of an amorous Frenchman. Lionel Belmore is effective as the motor-magnate. Direction and photography excellent.

THEME. Auto race melodrama. Hero invents new carburetor which villain steals, but he gets it back. Prevented from reaching track, girl wins race for him.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Development of love affair. Scene where invention model is stolen. Rita's arrival at track. Big race shots and strenuous finish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as fast melo of auto race track. Dwell on humorous and romantic values. Feature the racing scene and Elaine Hammerstein.

DRAWING POWER. Good card for neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Lively auto race melo; has enough action, thrills and romance to please majority of fans. Offers good cast names which should help bring 'em in. Is well photographed and skillfully directed. Acting satisfactory.

THE CAST

In Search of a Hero

(Gerson Pictures Corp.—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

DEFT interweaving of comedy and melodramatic threads lends pleasing variety to this latest Richard Holt vehicle, which snaps along gaily from start to finish and ought to satisfy the star's admirers, as well as those fans who want lots of action and a yarn that's easy to follow. Arthur Hoerl's plot twists into a number of ingenious complications, some of which are more entertaining than convincing, but so long as they are amusing, folks who like this sort of picture won't fuss over its improbabilities. The contrast obtained between hero Percy's college days and that of the lumber camp helps to sharpen up the comedy stuff, and Richard Holt gets considerable fun out of the role, as well as showing up strong in its athletic and love-making phases. His fight with Big Dan is a stunner and all the more effective because he has a tough time winning. Jane Thomas, a charming heroine, support good, photography attractive.

THEME. Comedy-melo. College lad lands in lumber camp, is taken for pugilist, lives up to borrowed reputation by whipping bully, wins girl he loves.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Good college and lumber camp atmosphere. Comedy shots. Adventures of hero and chum on train. The big scrap. Holt's effective work.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Richard Holt's athletic stunts. Bill as exciting lumber camp melodrama, with plenty of laughs. Stress the romantic appeal.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for neighborhood and small houses.

SUMMARY. Lively comedy-melo, starting out with college atmosphere, switching to lumber camp locale. Has plenty of go and pep, gets the laughs here and there, develops romantic lure, star shows up well, especially in big fight at finish.

THE CAST

Percy Browning.....	Richard Holt
Peggy Richmond.....	Jane Thomas
Jack Strong.....	Jimmy Harrison
Dinty.....	Gerry O'Dell
Dugan.....	Al Kaufman
Inez.....	Claire Vinson
Big Dan.....	Les Bates

Author, Arthur Hoerl. Director, Duke Worne.

SYNOPSIS. Percy Browning and Jack Strong are expelled from College. Old Browning sends them to his lumber camp. Percy falls in love with Peggy Richmond, whose father is a competitor of the Brownings. The latter's foreman, Big Dan, uses unfair means to block Richmond's work. Percy, after being groomed by a pugilist, tackles Big Dan and beats him. His father arrives, Percy explains everything, they are reconciled and Peggy admits she loves him.

PRESS NOTICE

RICHARD HOLT, stunt performer and athlete extraordinary, comes to the front again in an exciting comedy-melodrama, "In Search of a Hero," billed as the main screen attraction at the _____ Theatre _____.

This picture shows Holt as an ex-college student whose father sends him to a lumber camp to toughen him up. Fate lands him in the camp in the role of a prizefighter, and he has to live up to it. How he makes good and wins a pretty wife is outlined in a story full of pep, with Dick Holt going great guns as the hero.

Jane Thomas fills the feminine lead.

CATCH LINES

Romance interwoven with thrills and laughter. A pug and his manager who try to pass as college boys!

Fate makes a fighter out of a peaceable youth and Love transforms him into a winner!

Lure of the Wild

(Columbia Pictures—5570 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

ACCORDING to an old adage—"every dog must have his day," and the canines are certainly getting their's in pictures right now. They have made so many excursions into filmland that it has become a tough job digging up fresh stories for the four-legged stars, and it isn't to be wondered at if most of the plots wind along familiar trails. This latest dog feature hasn't anything to boast of in the line of originality, but dishes up a fair assortment of thrills and the bow-wow Lightning distinguishes himself by performing some extremely clever tricks and shaping as a sleuth of no mean calibre. Although not of first-run quality, the film should do nicely in the smaller houses and appeal particularly to animal-lovers. Jane Novak is an attractive heroine, Mario Carilo satisfactory as her sweetheart and other members of the cast render capable support. Action tolerably fast, direction good, photography O. K.

THEME. Melodrama. Treats of young wife whose husband is killed by enemy, wonder dog that rescues lost child. Dog forces villain over cliff. Trapper weds widow.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Intelligent tricks and feats performed by dog Lightning. Scene where Belmont is shot. Romantic development. Death of villain.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the canine star's stunts. Bill as thrill melodrama, with strong love and sentimental interest. Boost Jane Novak's work.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. if your patrons are strong for animal films. Should bring satisfactory returns in smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Another dog picture, plot running along usual lines, put over some pretty good thrills, has romantic lure. Canine star very clever. Ought to prove satisfactory for minor house audiences.

THE CAST

Lure of the Wild (Columbia Pictures)

PRESS NOTICE

ATREAT for lovers of animals and romantic melodrama is promised when "Lure of the Wild" makes its local debut on the screen of the _____ Theatre under date of _____.

Most of the action takes place in the Canadian wilderness, with Lightning, a marvelously intelligent dog, one of the story's central figures. When his master is slain, the dog protects and gets aid for a child abandoned to the mercy of the elements by her father's untimely death. Later the dog exacts vengeance by driving the arch villain over a cliff to his end.

Jane Novak is the pretty heroine and gives a splendid performance supported by Alan Roscoe, Mario Carilo and others.

CATCH LINES

A child alone in the great wilderness, a faithful dog who protected her against unknown dangers!

Made For Love

(Producers Distributing Corp.—5700 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A PICTURE with audience appeal which should satisfy the fan majority and prove a good box office asset. Since the digging-up of old King Tut the discoveries of ancient Egyptian tombs containing mummies and treasures of a long dead civilization have received a great deal of attention in the daily press and this fact should stimulate public interest in a picture which devotes considerable space to such happenings. They've worked up a pretty romance here, with timely comedy relief and quite a bit of melodrama, putting over a decisive thrill when hero and heroine are entombed alive by the wily Prince. There's a very colorful sequence dealing with the story of two lovers of old; rich in antique splendors of the Land of the Nile, which is cleverly interpolated. Leatrice Joy is wistfully charming in a neglected wife role, Edmund Burns pleasing as her husband. Support excellent, photography first-chop.

THEME. Drama. Absorbed in his work, American archaeologist neglects his wife. They are trapped in an ancient tomb by an Egyptian Prince, rescued and reunited.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Impressive scenic shots, good atmosphere. Finding of treasure. Tomb interiors. Scene where hero and heroine escape burial alive.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Refer to daily paper stories regarding excavations and discoveries in Egypt, mention King Tut. Stress the colorful episode in which tale of long-dead lovers is told. Praise modern romance. Feature Leatrice Joy.

DRAWING POWER. A good card for all theatres, large and small.

SUMMARY. Has universal appeal, neglected wife angle will interest feminine patrons. Comedy and dramatic values nicely balanced, beautifully photographed.

THE CAST

Born To Battle

(F. B. O.—5100 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

TOM TYLER comes to bat again in a strenuous, sharpshooting Westerner that's a great combination of rough-house scrapping and hilarious comedy, with romance also in the saddle and winning out by several lengths at the finish. This Tyler chap is certainly all there when it comes to mauling a whole bunch of opponents at one time, and when you've seen him in action you'll have no difficulty in believing that he was a champion athlete before he took to the films, for he looks and acts the part. In this picture he's a gay young Irish lad who would sooner fight than eat, and fills the role to perfection, getting a lot of fun out of its humorous phases. Jean Arthur is a pretty, pert and piquant heroine, Frankie Darro fine as the kid and the support is adequate. Director Robert De Lacey has introduced a number of new twists and turns into the yarn that lifts it out of the stereotyped Western class, and it is extremely well photographed.

THEME. Westerner. Denny Terhune, foreman, Morgan ranch, detects scheme of conspirators to obtain possession of the property, beats up villains and wins boss's daughter.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Sensational incidents, good fighting stuff, ripping comedy relief. Tom Tyler's athletic stunts and comedy work. Sustained fast action.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Advertise as a wild Westerner that is crammed with laughs and thrills. Feature Tom Tyler, tell 'em about his athletic career.

DRAWING POWER. Will go strong wherever Westerners are popular.

SUMMARY. Red-hot action Westerner. Tom Tyler's best up-to-date. Star's athletic feats go over with a bang. Picture packed with thrills and snappy fighting episodes. Comedy values rank high, sure to get the laughs. A good card.

THE CAST

Dennis Terhune.....	Tom Tyler
Eunice Morgan.....	Jean Arthur
Moxley.....	Raymond Childs
Morgan.....	Fred Gambold
Birdie.....	Frankie Darro
Tuffy.....	Buck Black
Daley.....	LeRoy Mason
Trube.....	Ethan Laidlow

Author, William Wing. Director, Robert De Lacey.

SYNOPSIS. Denny Terhune, known as "Irish," foreman of the Morgan ranch, is feared by Manager Daley and latter's henchman, who know there is oil on the property and plot to get control of it. Morgan is in the East. They ship Denny away and try to have him shanghaied, but he escapes and comes back. He meets Morgan's daughter, Eunice, who looks upon him as a roughneck. In the finale Denny defeats the plans of the conspirators, beats them up and convinces Eunice that he is the ideal husband for her after all.

The Man Upstairs

(Warner Brothers—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

A RATHER diverting, mystery drama with a tinge of comedy and romance that takes the spectator through a maze of strange happenings, all of which get their start through two persons, the hero and the heroine, reading "The Agony Column," or personals in a London newspaper. It is through personals written by the principals that they get acquainted. Then the girl permits the man to write to her five letters, one each day, to prove he is an interesting fellow and worth knowing. This is the cue for hero to start his story. It is a murder mystery and the heroine is led to believe that her new acquaintance really did kill a certain army officer. In the end learning it is all a joke, she seeks the aid of the officer and two give Mr. Hero some scare in return. Monte Blue as Geoffrey West, a soldier of fortune, has a role well suited to him and Dorothy Devore is good in the principal female part. The remainder of the cast are acceptable.

THEME. Mystery drama. Hero making joke out of murder story has tables turned on him by girl he meets through personal in Agony Column.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Opening sequence, mystery element. Monte Blue's characterization. The auto wreck.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Book display of Biggers' novel. Boost as thrilling mystery story. Play up names of Monte Blue and Miss Devore.

DRAWING POWER. Should do business if exploited. Suits average house.

SUMMARY. A bit too long for material in plot, but succeeds in holding interest although story in screen form is rather involved. Cast does well with parts assigned and production has been artistically mounted.

THE CAST

SYNOPSIS. Geoffrey West, traveler and adventurer, with passion for "The Agony Column," uses "personals" to get acquainted with Marion Larnard, whom he sees in London hotel. She invites him to write one letter each day for five days. He leads her to believe he has really murdered Captain Fraser-Freer. The latter and girl have him thrown into jail for "murder" of the Captain, who pretends to be dead. It all ends O. K. and Geoffrey wins Marion.

Monte Blue, playing in "The Man Upstairs," Warner Bros.

The Man Upstairs (Warner Brothers)

PRESS NOTICE

"THE MAN UPSTAIRS," will be shown on the screen at the _____ Theatre, commencing _____. Monte Blue is the star supported by an excellent cast including Dorothy Devore.

Hero and heroine become acquainted through the "personals" of a London newspaper and the former is invited to write a letter daily to prove whether his acquaintance is worth cultivating. In these letters he starts a mystery story and is about to be charged with murder when he tells police it is all a joke. Then the girl with the aid of an army officer turns the table and gives the hero a real scare actually making him believe he did murder a man.

CATCH LINES

It will keep you on the edge of the seats with its thrilling situations. A mystery play that's different; packed with excitement and surprises.

The Girl From Montmartre

(First National—Eight Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THERE has been entirely too much footage used on this adaptation of Anthony Pryde's novel, "Spanish Sunlight," which certainly does not belong to the five percent of worthwhile pictures. The plot is a slender one and while it has its moments of action, it does not ring true, while the characters are unconvincing, except in the case of Lewis Stone who looks and acts the part of the aristocratic English officer in love with a Spanish dancer. And here once the talents of Stone have been wasted. Barbara La Marr fails to win interest in her interpretation which is entirely too sugar-coated. There are some colorful opening scenes in a Paris cafe in war time where we are introduced to the dancer. Later the action switches to an island off southern Spain where the hero again meets the senorita, but finds the path to her heart strewn with dangers in the form of Spanish plotters and a jealous suitor. The production is well mounted.

THEME. Romantic drama laid in Paris and Spain. Love story of aristocratic Englishman and Spanish dancer.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Opening sequence in which dancing partner takes life. Abduction of the girl. Wounding of villain, saving of heroine. Attractive natural backgrounds.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Put on Spanish dance as prologue. Play up names of LaMarr and Stone. Arrange window display of Spanish shawls in department store.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for program houses, community theatres and towns.

SUMMARY. This is just another picture, containing nothing new in plot, which is padded out to unwarranted lengths. Miss LaMarr lacks appeal and Lewis Stone's talents are wasted. Settings best feature. Don't promise much.

THE CAST

Emilia	Barbara LaMarr
Jerome	Lewis Stone
Ewing	Robert Ellis
Rodney	Willim Eugene
Robert Hautrive.....	E. H. Calvert

The Girl from Montmartre (First National)

PRESS NOTICE

"THE GIRL FROM MONTMARTE," is coming to the _____ Theatre, commencing _____. Barbara La Marr and Lewis Stone, are the featured players. Sun-bathed Spain, land of romance, and gay Paris in war time, form the backgrounds for this colorful love story which is one of rare appeal. The plot chiefly concerns itself with the attachment of a Spanish dancer for an aristocratic Englishman. The jealousy of another suitor, however, threatens to disrupt the romance. Supporting cast includes such names as Robert Ellis, William Eugene, Bobby Mack and Mathilde Comont.

CATCH LINES

When the soul-flame of a Spanish dancer leaps to kindle a bachelor's heart there's romance and drama aplenty! Spanish days and Spanish nights when tempestuous love claims two souls.

Regional News from Correspondents

LARRY T. JORDAN, general representative for the Keith interests in Philadelphia, left February 1st for a month's stay in Palm Beach, Fla.

David H. Barrist and C. H. Goodwin, former owners of the Ritz Theatre and interested in a house in Schwenksville, Pa., have returned from a brief vacation in Miami, Fla.

Al Bloison, distributing manager for Associated Exhibitors, has returned from a short trip throughout New England.

John Bethel, at one time Philadelphia manager for Vitagraph, has joined the sales force of the Philadelphia branch of Associated Exhibitors as special representative throughout the territory. Bill Mattison, who was also a member of the American sales force, has returned to the Metro-Goldwyn fold.

Philadelphia

New York and New Jersey

THE next meeting of the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey will be held at Newark on Friday, February 5th.

Joseph M. Seider left on Monday of this week for a short stay in Trenton where he will attend to matters pertaining to the New Jersey organization of theatre owners.

This week finds the Howell's Cine Equipment Co. installed in their handsome new suite of offices on the third floor of the Embassy Theatre Building. In comparison with the old quarters at the corner of 7th Avenue and 49th street—it's a "knockout." Everything is on one floor and there is five times as much space as the concern had at the old stand. The genial Joe Hornstein held an official opening to the trade on Monday and more than upheld his reputation as a first class host. Accessory manufacturers, trade paper representatives and other members of the Motion Picture Industry were among the guests.

Tom Waller, editor of the National M. P. T. O. Bulletin, has been confined to his home for several days with an attack of la grippe.

Last week, Harry Hecht and his famous "Four Horsemen" were so successful in their expedition from New Jersey to the local exchanges that they again swooped down on the boys this week.

Landing a good sized contract is not the only big event that happens in the life of Edward Carroll, Pathe representative. Recently Mrs. Carroll presented Ed with a bouncing eight-pound baby boy. The arrival of Ed Jr. makes the third in the Carroll family. Mother and child are doing finely—and so's the old man!

Charlie Stombaugh, Newark branch manager for Pathe, is still doing a lot of night work among the Jersey exhibitors. For the last ten nights they say he has been missing a portion of his usual slumber. Another item of interest concerning this popular member of the Pathe organization, is that he has a most attractive new secretary.

Tony Cavallo is the new manager of Goldreyer and Fleischman's Manor Theatre at Avenue K and Coney Island Avenue, Brooklyn. Mr. Cavallo is taking over the duties of I. Berman, who was recently taken ill. Cavallo was formerly associated with the Rosenweig and Katz theatre circuit.

The Cross Bay Theatre at Rockaway Boulevard, Woodhaven, after having been closed for several months, has reopened under the management of Spiegel and Fischer. The firm name is the Rockwood Amusement Corp. Mr. Spiegel also operates the Utica Theatre while Mr. Fischer, in addition to the Cross Bay enterprise, is connected with Somer's Theatre at Sheepshead Bay.

Another closing recently reported is that of the Elite Theatre, Pitkin Avenue, Brooklyn. C. H. Nielson was the owner.

Nicholas Peter and Michael Constantine are the new owners of the American Theatre at Fort Hamilton, Parkway and 39th Street, Brooklyn. They are new comers in the business and recently took over this house from Joe Finger.

Fanny Lightstone, who operates the Select Theatre on Pitkin Avenue, Brooklyn, has taken over the Livonia Theatre, Livonia Avenue, Brooklyn.

Jack Tierney, National film room inspector for Pathe, still finds it necessary to use a cane. Out in Los Angeles, Mr. Tierney disputed the right of way with a Ford and quite a mix-up resulted. With the light New York traffic, Mr. Tierney has no difficulty.

The Grange Theatre, 11 Hamilton Place, New York City, has recently reopened under the management of Braiman Corp. A fire occurred at this theatre some little time ago and it has been closed up until this time. Charles W. Ebeling of the Costello Theatre, is the booker for the Grange.

There has been considerable moving and shifting about on several floors of the Godfrey Building at 729 7th Avenue, due to the fact that Educational Film Exchange has taken over the entire eighth floor. Concerns moving from the eighth to the third floor include the Service Film Co., Prime Pictures and the Savoy Printing Co. Sierra Pictures have shifted from the eighth to the seventh floor and the Savoy Film Co., from the eighth to the fourth, the latter changing their name to the Forbell Film Co. Kerman Film Exchange has moved from the fifth to the third and the Vital film department, from the fifteenth to the ninth. The Nathan Salland Laboratories are now on the fifth floor.

Another recent change of address among the accessory dealers is that of the Crown Motion Picture Supply Company which has recently moved from their old address on 46th Street to the third floor of 729 7th Avenue.

Edw. Spiegel, of the Utica Theatre, and Moe Kerman of the Kerman Film Exchange, have leased the Supreme Theatre on Fulton Street to an Italian Opera troupe for an indefinite engagement.

Manager Ford of the Keeney-Enterprises, formerly with Keeney's Bedford Theatre, Brooklyn, is now handling Joe O'Neill's old position. Mr. O'Neill has taken over the Franklin Theatre in Astoria, L. I.

Bob Horn, Pathe salesman, recently suffered the loss of his father. All his friends extend their sympathy.

According to report, the Carleton Theatre on Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, will open on February 8th. William and Harry Brandt are the owners and some innovations in theatre decorating and construction are to be looked for.

Roth Brothers of Morristown and Summit, N. J., have a new theatre under construction at Dover. The plans call for a seating capacity of 2,500 and the policy will be vaudeville and pictures.

It is reported that Irving M. Lesser has again added to his string of theatres by taking over a house in Jamaica, L. I.

Atlanta

THIS week the Atlanta Film Board of Trade is moving from the quarters in the Haas-Howell Building, which the board has occupied for the past two years, to new and larger quarters in the 101 Marietta Building, suite 215. Executive Secretary E. L. Cole will be in charge of the moving and will take the lead in arranging the board's affairs in its new home.

W. C. Alexander has been added to the sales force of the Southern Theatre Equipment Company and will travel the Alabama territory.

L. C. Baxley, formerly manager of Associated Exhibitors, with office in Dallas, and C. W. A. McCormick, formerly of the Crescent and Majestic Theatres, Austin, Texas, were in Atlanta this week on their way to Charlotte.

George Allison, who was confined to his home, suffering of a severe cold, came down to his office on Thursday.

W. A. Sanges returned Monday night from a successful trip through northern Alabama and Tennessee.

R. E. L. Golden and son, of the Golden Theatre at La Grange, were in the city for several days.

J. M. Johnson of the Colonial

Theatre, Jasper, Alabama, was in town a couple of days the early part of the week.

F. V. Merritt of the Marvin Wise Theatres, Birmingham, Alabama, was in town Monday.

George Beaumeister, booker for F. B. O., is the proud father of a baby girl. The young lady has been named Jacqueline.

M. W. Smith, of the United States Army Motion Picture Service, of Washington, paid one of his regular visits to Film Row this week.

Joe Shear, of Lee-Lash Studios, Mt. Vernon, New York, was in town the first of the week

Dave Kalker, formerly of B. F. Keith's, Henderson Theatre, Coney Island, who is now doing the publicity for the Lee-Lash Studios, was in Atlanta this week with Joe Shear, the organization's representative in this territory.

P. C. Parrish, manager of Southern Theatre Equipment Company, left Thursday for New Orleans. He expects to return about the end of next week.

R. T. Hill, of the Cumberland Amusement Company, with headquarters in Tullahoma, Tennessee, was in town this week.

Detroit

OTTO BOLLE, manager of the Detroit Paramount exchange, received honorable mention for the month of January by the Detroit Fire Chief and his committee.

Eddie Wescott, for many years identified amongst Minneapolis film circles, has joined the sales staff of Warner Bros. in Detroit, assigned to do special work.

Lloyd Willis, divisional sales manager for Warner's in this section, spent the latter part of the week talking to Jack Young, Detroit manager.

Henry S. Koppin, continuing to add theatres on his already long list took over the Catherine Theatre in Detroit, last week, formerly operated by Lynch Brothers.

Frank Stuart, P. D. C. manager in Detroit, attended a divisional sales conference held at Cleveland last week.

Eddie Canty, booking manager for Paramount in Detroit, attended a party conducted by the PeP Club, an organization of the Chicago Paramount office which was held in that city last week at the Fish Fan Club.

Ned Holmes, exploitation manager of Fox Film Corp., New York, spent a few days in Detroit last week visiting with F. D. Drew, local manager.

The 23rd anniversary of Fox Film Corp., recently held, proved to be the biggest business the Detroit exchange ever experienced in its history, and on behalf of the exhibitors, Mr. Drew, manager, wishes to thank them for their earnest support.

F. W. Kreamer, office manager for Universal for some time, has been transferred to the St. Louis office where he will act as salesman covering the key cities in that state. Wade Allen has already taken over the duties as office manager at the Detroit exchange.

Bill Peck, for many years known as "Bill the billman," who operated the Orpheum Theatre in Fowlerville, Mich., has sold his house to Vernon Locey, who also operates the Temple Theatre in Howell, nine miles from Fowlerville.

Butterfield circuit announces that on Feb. 21st, the Capitol Theatre in Owosso, Mich., will open, and on March 1st another new house, the State in Pontiac.

Howard City, Mich., for many years without a theatre, it is reported, will open a new theatre this week, and Coral, Mich., also announces the opening of a new theatre in their town. J. Mosher is responsible for both of them.

F. A. Garinger of the Saenger Amusement Co., New Orleans, La., paid a visit to a few of Detroit's beautiful theatres.

Fred Davie, manager of Associated Exhibitors, spent most of the week covering key towns in Michigan.

Jack Saxe, manager of Favorite Film Co., finally purchased a Studebaker, after looking them all over.

After the zero weather in Detroit came to an end, Bob Sheehan came down to the film building in a dandy racoon coat.

Fred S. Phillips, who operates the Broadway Theatre in Flint, Mich., paid one of his rare visits to the various exchanges last week.

George Weeks, from the New York office of Paramount, recently conferred with Otto Bolle, manager of the Detroit Paramount exchange.

The Junction Theatre has changed hands, and will be operated in the future by Anthony J. Kubinski.

Peter Cataldo, has taken over the Enterprise Theatre in Detroit, heretofore operated by E. Neyer.

The Garden Theatre in Stanton, Mich., has been taken over again by Glen Gardner, who turned it over to C. D. Milds sometime ago.

George Trendle, general manager of Kunsky Theatrical Enterprises, returned last week from California.

Ruby Martin, contract clerk for Metro, walked to the altar with Jesse Rice on Jan. 30th, and now she is Mrs. Rice.

It is reported that Detroit will have one of the finest, most exclusive, modern film exchange buildings in the country. Excavation will start on March 1st at Montcalm and Cass Avenue, where the proposed $800,000 structure will be erected. Several of the national exchanges have already applied for space. Walter R. Stebbins is the builder.

Buffalo

KENMORE, N. Y., may well feel proud of its new Kenmore Theatre which was opened Friday evening, January 29. Guests included the stockholders, town officials, Buffalo exhibitors and exchange men and wives, daughters, etc. There were many floral gifts wishing success to Mitchell Fitzer of Syracuse, who has leased the house and will operate it as a link in his chain. The Kenmore has a capacity of 1,565, all on one floor, although plans have been made to add a balcony when needed. Attorney Frank C. Moore introduced Mr. Fitzer, who promised the Kenmore folk the best obtainable in motion picture entertainment. The theatre building extends 241 feet along Delaware avenue, 118 feet on Chapel road, 110 feet on Landers road. The theatre proper is 66 by 205 feet. Mr. Fitzer has been identified with the motion picture business for nearly 20 years. Among the houses operated by him are the Swan, Savoy and Rivoli in Syracuse and the Strand in Auburn.

Loew's State Theatre, Buffalo, passed into the hands of a new board of directors, with Max M. Yellen, president of the Buffalo-Boloxi Corporation and treasurer of the Main-Go Realty Company, as president. This means a change in ownership of the house, but according to a statement issued by Mr. Yellen it will not mean a change in policy. Loew's State has been under the control of Loew's Buffalo Theatres, Inc., and will continue to operate under this name, but with a new administration.

William L. Sherry, one of the veterans of the motion picture industry, has returned from Florida to Buffalo to again assume the management of the local exchange of United Artists. Joe Liberman, formerly with Universal in Saint John's, Canada, is a new member of the U. A. sales force in Buffalo. Jack von Tiltzer, district manager, has installed Mr. Sherry in his managerial position.

Bill Bork, booker at the Paramount office, is wearing a three sizes larger derby. Joyce Ardith Bork has arrived at Bill's home and of course, she's the prettiest baby in the world.

Leo Murphy has been engaged as a member of the Associated Exhibitors' sales staff, succeeding E. H. Arnold, who recently resigned to manage the Savoy in Syracuse for Mitchell Fitzer.

Rich Richeson, known as "The Pigskin Fiddler," has been engaged as conductor of the orchestra at the Hi-Art Theatre in Lockport.

Gerald K. Rudolph, publicity manager for the Fox Film Corporation, was in Buffalo last week end, visiting Manager Harry Bailey at the local Fox exchange.

Because of the recent city ordinance prohibiting the construction of a theatre within 50 feet of a church, school, hospital or orphan asylum, an amendment will be enacted by the common council in Rochester permitting the Fenyevy interests to erect a theatre at Clinton avenue south and Court street.

The Jefferson Theatre in Rochester has installed two new Powers 6-B projection machines.

Dave Harrison is retaining the management of the Empire Theatre in Syracuse under the dissolution of the Fitzer-Harrison partnership.

Miss Marian Gueth, office secretary of Buffalo Zone, M. P. T. O. of N. Y., has returned to her desk in the Root building office, fully recovered from a recent severe illness.

W. L. Trass, manager of the Strand Theatre in Salamanca, N. Y., won the managers' bonus prize in the contest conducted last month by the Schine Theatrical Corporation.

Charles Fornesi is back on the job at the Seneca Theatre, Seneca Falls, N. Y., following a long siege of illness.

Plans have been completed for Jim Cardina's new house in Bailey avenue, Buffalo, work on which will start this Spring.

Milwaukee

L. J. MCCARTHY of Chicago will succeed Ed. Volendorf as manager of First National's exchange in Milwaukee. The change will be effective on Saturday, January 30.

John Lorentz, manager of the Fox exchange in Milwaukee, was in Chicago for a few days last week.

Exchange men in Milwaukee were favored with a visit from J. Cooper during the past week. Cooper is manager of four theatres in the state and enjoys the reputation of being a progressive and successful exhibitor. His houses are the Casino and Strand at LaCrosse, the Bell at Sparta and the Unique at Tomah.

Mark Morgan, formerly booker for the Producers' Distributing corporation at their Milwaukee exchange has been named to cover the Wisconsin territory for the same concern. Morey Anderson has been appointed to take his place as booker, and will be located at the local office.

Sam Abrams, manager of the branch office of F. B. O. in Milwaukee, has left the city on a trip through the northwestern section of the territory.

A. C. Wilson, auditor for the Fox Film Corporation, with headquarters at the home office in New York, paid a brief visit to the Milwaukee exchange last week.

Petro Rouman, manager of the State Theatre at Rhinelander, Wis., was a business visitor in Milwaukee last week. He has recently purchased a Barton organ which will be installed in the State in the very near future, he announced. Rouman recently sustained a loss by fire while he was a visitor here. Some of his property, which is not used for theatrical purposes, was destroyed in the blaze.

J. G. Frackman, Progress Pictures' Milwaukee manager, has left the city for Evansville, Ind., to be at the bedside of his wife. Mrs. Frackman recently underwent an operation. Word received by Frackman's associates at the Progress office indicates that she is recovering rapidly from the operation.

St. Louis

ROBERT STEMPFLE of the Strand Theatre, St. Charles, Mo., has awarded the contract for his new theatre there to E. M. Humphrey, a St. Charles contractor. The building will be two-story and basement, 50 by 140 feet and of brick, steel, concrete and mill construction.

Floyd Lewis, district manager for Arrow Pictures has returned from a sales conference in Chicago.

A. E. Adkinson, who was temporary manager for the local Associated Exhibitors following the resignation of Roy Dickson, has moved over to the Pittsburgh, Pa., office.

Arthur S. Kane, business manager for Douglas McLean Pictures, was among our visitors Saturday, January 30.

E. E. Hillar, special serial representative for Pathe, was a caller of the week.

The Board of Directors held their annual meeting at Herrin, Ill., the past week. Present at roll call were: John Marlowe, president; J. Caesar, secretary, and the following film peddlars: Eddie Alpers, Warner Brothers; Nicky Goldhammer, Universal; C. L. Hickman, Universal; Butch De Frenne, Paramount; Mike Dunn, St. Louis Film; Tommy Tobin, F. B. O.; J. Talley, Associated Exhibitors, and Bill Barron of United Artists.

The theatre at Creel Springs, Ill., has been closed.

Lou Hess, manager for Universal, is recovering following a minor operation for an infection in his side.

Roy Dickson has taken charge of the local Arrow office.

Nat Steinberg has been appointed manager of the Associated Exhibitors office here. He took charge February 1.

Cincinnati

H. M. BYRD, of the Forum Theatre, Hillsborough, O., was a recent visitor at the local exchanges.

The F. B. O. offices presented a very attractive appearance last week after the decorations and pennants indicating the March drive had been distributed and placed in the various places available.

W. C. Chesborough, managing numerous theatres in Columbus, O., arrived in the city last week for the express purpose of booking pictures for his many houses.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Van Delft, of the Opera House at Mt. Orab, O., spent a few days in Cincinnati last week, doing some general shopping and looking at several pictures.

Frankie Schreiber, booker de luxe for Universal here, is also a bowler of considerable note. He has issued a challenge to everyone connected with the film business, that he will bowl 50 points higher than his nearest opponent.

Marcella Borgemenke, who has been connected with the W. A. Kaiser enterprises for many years has resigned her position with this firm. Her new connections have not been announced as yet.

E. A. McAuliffe, formerly with Associated Exhibitors, has joined the selling forces of F. B. O. and will travel through the Kentucky territory.

Fred Times, of the Columbia

Theatre, Portsmouth, O., is one of those lucky fellows who if it was raining soup would be caught with nothing else but a fork. Jury duty seems to be his weakness.

Glass partitions have been installed in the offices of Hugh Owens, the new manager for the local Famous Players exchange.

Chas. Reagan, district manager for Famous Players with offices in Cincinnati, attended the District Managers meeting of the firm in Chicago last week.

H. C. Farley's frontal display for "The Merry Widow" (M.G.M.) at the Empire theatre, Montgomery, Ala.

Seattle

SALE of the Rose Theatre property in Everett, Washington, for a consideration of $40,000 was announced in this city last week by Joe St. Peter, operator of the house, whose connections in that city are in no wise affected by the transfer. The purchasers, whose names were not divulged, are represented by the Citizens' Bank and Trust Company of Everett, and the seller was Christina Nicklasen of that city.

Edwin J. Rivers, managing director of the Inland Theatre Company of this state, last week announced that he had purchased the Colonial Theatre in Eugene, Oregon, from Mrs. Laura Paine. This is the second house to be added to Mr. Rivers' string since the purchase of the Arcade Theatre in Walla Walla several months ago, and is the first house outside of the state of Washington to be included in the new organization of houses.

Charles W. Harden, manager of the United Artists exchange, returned to his local office last week after a trip to the home office in New York City. The exchange, during his absence, was under the efficient supervision and management of Harold Harden, his son.

The Burien and South Park Theatres in this city, suburban houses formerly owned by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas, were purchased last week by Dr. Albert G. McKeown, who will assume the management of the houses immediately. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas plan to leave this territory soon for California, where they will re-enter the exhibiting field.

L. O. Lukan, former manager of the Universal Exchange in this city, and now assistant sales director for the West Coast for the First National Pictures corporation, spent several days in this territory last week with Manager Fred G. Sliter of the local F. N. branch.

John G. VonHerberg, head of the Jensen-VonHerberg theatre chain, returned last week from New York, where he was under the care of physicians for several weeks of a very serious illness. Upon the recommendation of his medical advisors in this city, it is believed that Mr. VonHerberg will leave soon for a recuperative trip to Florida.

Paul Gray, Western exploitation director for the Pathe company, arrived here last week to spend a short time with Manager L. A. Samuelson in this territory.

Reports that were current on Film Row last week indicated that Charles W. McKee, former manager of the Heilig Theatre in this city when it maintained a picture policy, would soon assume the lease on the Grand Theatre in Bellingham. The house was formerly operated by Mike Newman, of the Producers Distributing Corporation national organization, and has also been under the direction of the Bellingham Theatres Company, Inc., with Fred Walton directing.

Reports received by Manager R. S. Stackhouse of the Associated Exhibitors exchange in this city indicated that the local A. E. office is far and away in the lead in the national sales competition among branches being conducted by that company.

Lee Marcus, general sales manager of the Film Booking Offices, was a visitor at Manager A. H. Huot's local F. B. O. exchange this week. He was accompanied by A. A. Schmidt, Western division manager.

South East

MANY exhibitors took advantage of the M. P. T. O. get-together banquet in Charlotte to combine pleasure with business and the following exhibitors were seen along film row.

C. L. Welch, of the Victory Theatre, Salisbury, N. C.; W. J. Allen, Strand Theatre, N. Wilkesboro, N. C.; E. L. Hearne, Alameda Theatre, Albemarle, N. C.; J. W. Prevo, of the Palace, Thomasville, N. C.; J. A. Estridge, of the Gastonian Theatre, Gastonia, N. C.; J. E. Simpson, of the Ideal Theatre, Gastonia, N. C.; W. T. Gray, of the Loray Theatre, Gastonia, N. C.; Percy Wells, of the Howard-Wells Amusement Co., Wilmington, N. C.; Jas. L. Williamson, of the Opera House, Hamlet, N. C.; Chas. Picquet, of the Carolina Theatre, Pinehurst, N. C.; C. I. Gresham, of the Artcraft Theatre, Mooresville, N. C.; E. D. Turner, president and general manager of the Carolina Theatres Incorporated, home office in Asheville, N. C.; S. S. Stevenson, president and general manager of the S. S. Stevenson Theatres, Inc., Henderson, N. C.; Jack Marcus and Mr. H. J. Paradis, of the Oasis, Wilson, N. C., the Colonial, Tarboro, N. C., and White's, Greenville, N. C.; C. H. Arrington, of the Palace Theatre, Rocky Mount, N. C., and many other representative exhibitors from the Carolinas.

The Colonial Theatre, being built on the site of the old Broadway Theatre in Winston-Salem, N. C. will be ready for occupancy on the 8th of February. The old Broadway was destroyed by fire last winter and was operated by the Piedmont Amusement Co. of that city. The new house which seats 1,000 will be operated by A. F. Moses, formerly vice president of the Piedmont Amusement Co.

U. K. Rice, who opened the new Capitol Theatre in Salisbury, N. C. in April will assume management of the Colonial. Mr. Rice for several years was manager of the Piedmont Amusement Co. and well known in Winston-Salem. He is from Columbus, O., where for a number of years he was connected with the Southern Theatre there.

The Colonial is of unique design and appointments. It contains a mezzanine floor, balcony and lower floor with offices and lounge rooms on the former floor. A straight picture policy has been inaugurated.

Earle Griggs, exploiter for Universal, who makes his headquarters in Atlanta, passed through Charlotte on his way to Asheville.

S. S. Stevenson, was along film row the past week arranging production for his new theatres that have just opened as well as his other houses on the circuit.

Charlie Griffith, of the Rosen Film Delivery Service, of New York and Connecticut, and Mr. Rosen, general manager and owner of the company are Charlotte visitors. They are arranging to put in an overland film delivery through the Charlotte territory.

San Francisco

PLANs are being completed and bids will be called for the completion of a class "A" theatre building lately acquired by the West Coast Theatres Corporation at Martinez, Contra Costa County. This structure was designed about two years ago by Architects Reid Brothers, 105 Montgomery street, San Francisco, and construction started but never completed, due to the death of the owner. The estimated cost for the completion of this building is $50,000.

There seems to be a general exodus of home office representatives from the San Francisco Pathe Exchange. After a stay of two months, Auditor J. C. de Waal left for Portland, while Inspector Booker L. A. Savage, who has made San Francisco his home for the past three months, left for Salt Lake.

Harry Schmidt of Pathe has been installed as head booker with Eddie Frier and Herman Lehrback as his assistants. Harry Schmidt was manager of the Virginia Theater at Vallejo until his affiliation with Pathe. Lehrback comes to us from Educational, formerly a Patheite.

Jimmie Meyers, in charge of the advertising sales department of the local Paramount Exchange, is quite proudly introducing exhibitors to his new service room.

Harry Scott, general sales manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., made a tour of exchanges in behalf of "Laugh Month" and other activities.

J. A. Muehlman and L. Levi of First National have gone to Nevada and have taken a big brief case full of contracts to get the exhibitors' names on the dotted line.

Reorganization and reincorporation of Pacific Theaters, Inc., with subsequent election of officers shows the following results: L. R. Stradley, Cheerio, president; Frank Edwards, Winter Garden, vice-president; H. W. Bruen, Arabian and Ridgmont, general manager; George E. Herpeck, Winter Garden, secretary-treasurer. Activities of this organization include buying, operation, leasing, building, etc., of suburban houses in Seattle.

Recently Freddy lamps were installed in the Wigwam, Palmer, Sunset and Vardi Theaters of this city and many of the out of town houses.

E. C. Cunningham, formerly of the Iris Theater at Pacific Grove, has taken over Mr. Ed Stark's theater at Hollister. Mr. Cunningham will act as manager, having had considerable experience in operating theaters of his own formerly.

BILL MILLER, former treasurer of the Empress and Shubert Theatres, Kansas City, has accepted a position in charge of ticket sales for the new teatro de Algria, a lavishly built house in Miami Shores, Fla.

H. Koepler, United Artists representative, has taken over the Beyers theatre of Excelsior Springs, Mo., he announced.

Several theatres in the Kansas City territory were "dressing up" with new equipment this week. Two new Motiograph projection machines were installed in the Ashland Theatre, Kansas City, and two in the Westport Theatre, a suburban house of Kansas City.

But he got even with them. Last week Adolph Eisner, former president of the M. P. T. O., Kansas City, was summoned to jury service. Several farmers were discharged, but Eisner was retained as an "ideal" jurymen to hear the case of a delayed shipment of cabbage. Eisner's only knowledge of farm products were obtained through a Pullman window. The case was disposed of and the case of a motion picture operator was next. Then the farmers were forced to do their duty, being adjudged "good men for the case," while Eisner went gleefully homeward.

A tint of spring served to quicken the pulse of business along Kansas City's movie row this week. Joe Levy, well known veteran, was named Warner Bros., branch manager, succeeding Louis Reichert, who was transferred to the Washington, D. C. branch.

I. W. Quillian, vice-president of Enterprise Distributing Corp., was a Kansas City visitor, remaining long enough to predict that the year 1926 would be a pace-setter.

Edward Wagoner, P. D. C., home office representative, conducted a sales meeting at the local office.

For the first time in twenty years Harvey Day, general manager of Kinograms, and Stanley Chambers, managing director of the Miller Theatres, Wichita, Kas., met and renewed old friendship this week.

E. C. Rhoden, Midwest Film Distributor president, was hustling in the territory, as were Joe Levy, Warner Bros., branch manager, and Lloyd Willis, special Warner representative, and C. F. Senning, Educational branch manager.

D. J. McGowan, First National special representative, held a sales meeting at the local branch.

C. W. Rodebaugh, after several years absence from the film business, has returned as a representative of the Independent Film Company in Kansas City.

"Gerry" Akers, former Paramount and Universal official in Kansas City, has purchased an interest in the Standard Film Exchange in Kansas City, it was announced this week.

Tom Byerle, First National branch manager who has been confined in Research hospital, ill of typhoid fever, is improving, according to physicians.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: Conrad Gabriel, Garden City Amusement Company, Garden City, Kas.; Eysley Barbour, Joplin, Mo.; J. H. Bunch, Strand, Osage City, Kas.; Ben Levy, Hippodrome, Joplin, Mo.; C. L. McVey, Herington, Kas.; Harry McClure, Strand, Emporia, Kas.

Canada

PROMINENT citizens of Hamilton, Ontario, attended the dinner which was tendered to Ray Tubman the new manager of the Capitol Theatre, Hamilton, at the Royal Connaught Hotel, the chairman being George Stroud, manager of the Pantages Theatre. Manager Tubman was welcomed to the city by Mayor Jutten and Judge Gauld. Among the speakers were Clarence Robson and Harry Sedgwick of Toronto, officials from the head office of Famous Players Canadian Corp., which is operating the Hamilton Capitol. Other prominent guests included Controller Morrison, Ald. H. E. Wilton, manager of the Strand Theatre, Hamilton; J. D. Chilman, secretary of the Hamilton Football Club; Sam Manson, well-known Canadian athlete and others. The prowess of Ray Tubman on the football field, a la Red Grange, was extolled by various speakers.

W. G. Rupay, manager of the Griddin Theatre at Woodstock, Ontario, literally had some old friends drop in to see him recently when three airplanes from Toledo, Ohio, made a voluntary landing at Woodstock, the pilots being personal friends of Mr. Rupay, who had seen service in the Royal Flying Corps.

Club quarters for members of the Ontario Division of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners have been established on a floor of the Hermant Building, 21 Dundas street East, Toronto.

The hockey team of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Ltd., Toronto, is leading in its series of the Toronto Hockey League with three other local clubs. The latest match was won in overtime by the film stars by a score of 2 to 1. Mel Hudson of Famous Players, incidentally, is the leading scorer of the series, while Jimmie Tallon is second in this respect. The team consists of: Goal, Bossin; defence, Taylor and Hudon; centre, Heggie; wings, Tallon and Grant; substitutes, Martin and Murphy.

The Montreal Theatre Managers Association has decided to hold another Bal Masque and cabaret, following the immense success of the first venture last year. The dance is being held at the Venetian Gardens, Montreal, on February 12, as a St. Valentine feature.

Denver

ALLEN J. O'KEEFE, local sales representative for Producers Distributing Corporation, has been promoted to the managership of the Salt Lake branch of his organization. James Riley has been appointed to fill the vacancy left by Mr. O'Keefe.

W. E. Matthews, manager for F. B. O. received word that he will be transferred to the San Francisco branch of F. B. O. within a few days, as manager. During the transfer the Denver office will be under the temporary management of Fred Lind.

S. B. Sturtevant, owner and manager of the Majestic Theatre, Fruita, Colo., sends word that he is about to leave for an extended trip to California for a visit to the large studios. Mr. Sturtevant is one of the pioneer exhibitors of the territory.

Several new theatres are reported to have opened or about to open out in the territory. A new 700 seat house is being erected in Las Cruces, N. M. by the Las Cruces Drug Co. The American Legion of Alamosa, Colo. have about finished a 700 seat theatre which will be leased by the organization. Messrs. J. D. Jones and Carmichael of Clovis, N. M. have just opened a new 400 seat house called the Rex. John Foster and J. A. Clayton have completed plans for the opening of their new theatre in Artesia, N. M. It will have a capacity of 500 seats.

Exhibitors visiting Denver during the week were Dave Hess, owner and manager of the Princess, Del Norte, Colo., and Iris Theatre, Monte Vista, Colo.; Mrs.

Tyo, of the Tyo Theatre, Wray, Colo.

Chas. R. Gilmour, Warner Bros. manager is making a sales trip to Western Nebraska points this week. G. E. Rosenwald, local manager for Universal has returned from a business trip into the Wyoming territory. Joseph Ashby, First National manager took advantage of the wonderful spring-like weather and made a trip to Colorado points by auto returning a few days ago.

Cleveland

H. O. DUKE, assistant secretary of Producers Distributing Corporation, spent several days of last week in Cleveland, with division manager Robert Cotton.

The exhibitor force of Mansfield was practically all on sick leave last week. Tim Roberts, of the Park and Whiteway was laid up with a bad cold, and W. A. Partella, of the Majestic and Opera House was confined to his home for like reasons.

It was too cold for exhibitors to leave their native lairs last week and subject themselves to the Lake Erie breezes. The only out-of-towners listed on the Film Bldg. register were L. W. Kummer, Pantheon, Toledo; C. O. Frederick, Moose Theatre, Norwalk; A. J. Buck, Colonial, Fostoria; Earl C. Lair, Louisville, Louisville; C. W. Goodrich, Chardon Theatre, Chardon; and Forney L. Bowers, Opera House, New Philadelphia.

Lloyd Willis, central division manager for Warner Brothers, spent the week end in Cleveland.

Dr. B. I. Brody, Mrs. Brody and their son, have left for a three weeks trip to Cuba. Dr. Brody is head of the Broadway circus shows up to the present day

the new Cedar-Lee Theatre on Lee Road, Cleveland Heights

A freak accident last week caused the death of Paul Lazare, 29, owner and manager of the Ball Park Theatre, 6900 Lexington Ave., Cleveland. An overheated furnace in the basement of the theatre exploded. The blast hurled a door against Lazare and fractured his skull.

Albany

A MOVEMENT is already on foot to provide Ogdensburg, N. Y., with another theatre, replacing the one burned two weeks ago, and which was being operated at the time by J. S. Burnham. The head of a chain of several houses in New York state, whose identity is not being disclosed at the present time, is said to be negotiating for a site upon which to erect a large theatre. The municipal authorities of the city are also considering the advisability of erecting a house and J. S. Burnham has come forward with an offer to contribute $10,000 in the undertaking and also to take a lease of the same for a period of fifteen years.

Samuel W. Burns, who was at one time connected with Warner Brothers' exchange, has been named by Sidney Sampson, as manager in Albany for the Bond Photoplay Corporation.

H. S. Riehl, of Buffalo, representing Golden Arrow Pictures, now being distributed through the Freedom exchange, announced that he would open an exchange here in the near future.

During the past week exchange managers decided to hunt up business for themselves. Austin Interrante of Warner Brothers, went to Utica, to arrange for a road-showing, and Jack Krause manager of Associated Exhibitors, was in Saratoga and elsewhere.

Walter Hays, head of the Mark Strand operating company, was in Albany during the past week, coming on from Buffalo. Mr. Hays expressed himself as much pleased with the new improvements. Miss Mary Skelly, an usher at the Mark Strand, was operated on last week, for appendicitis, but is now reported as being on the road to recovery.

Departing somewhat from his former policy, Claude Fish, owner of the American theatre, in Schenectady, instead of playing all pictures for a single day, will now hold over some of the better drawing ones for two days.

Frank X. Breymaier, who has been managing the Barcli in Schenectady, since it was reopened in the early fall, has been promoted to the management of the Van Curler, in the same city. Mr. Breymaier will continue to handle the advertising and exploitation of the Schenectady group of Farley houses. A. J. Rochell, who has been handling the Van Curler, has gone to Elmira, where he will manage the Majestic.

Bigger pictures running for straight weeks are to be given the American, in Troy, according to an announcement just made. The house is handled by Edward Trembly.

The forty or more employees of the Farash Theatres in Schenectady, held a meeting one night last week at the State Theatre for the purpose of forming a mutual benefit association.

Benefit Stern, of the Lincoln Theatre, Troy, purchased an automobile during the past week. Walter Roberts, manager of the Troy Theatre, also bought a car a short time ago, and it is now a common sight to see the two men talking over cars and accessories.

The many friends made by Miss Carolyn Goodman, while she acted as secretary at the Albany Zone headquarters, will be interested in knowing that she has secured a position in New York city, being connected with the Vital exchange.

When the Albany Film Board of Trade met this week, a proposal advanced for another dance in the near future was discussed. It appears that the dance of two weeks ago failed to bring much money into the fund being created for those out of work or sick. Comparatively few exhibitors attended the affair. It is now planned to make the next ball more of an exhibitors' affair.

The benefit given at the Colonial Theatre in Albany for Harold Filkins, a salesman at the local F. B. O. exchange, who is very ill, netted a considerable sum. Julius Berinstein donated the use of the theatre while the organist and other employees contributed their share.

Bob Landry, of Ogdensburg, gave a benefit performance at his theatre last week to aid a number of actors who had been stranded in the northern city through the fire that wrecked the Ogdensburg Opera House.

Undismayed by the fire that consumed his theatre in Fonda, William Van Alstine is now looking about for another location, and has already written several exchanges in this city to the effect that he will have another house in the near future.

In spite of every medical attention possible, Mrs. Maurice Sullivan, wife of the owner of the San Souci in Watervliet, died a week or so ago, from pneumonia.

Miss Esther Dwore, whose brother George, runs the Cameo and Capitol theatres in Schenectady, was in New York city last week on a shopping trip.

Bob Wagner, who formerly ran the Rialto Theatre in Little Falls, is once more back in the game, having remodeled an old church in Oriskany, and reopened the place as "The Star" Theatre. Mr. Wagner has had a great deal of experience in the show business and, it is understood that his plans call for a chain of small theatres in central New York.

The past week brought a change in the ownership of the theatre in Salem, when Frank Wurm took over the house from John Gillies, who had been running the theatre with much success.

Ted O'Shea, local manager for Metro-Goldwyn, made a trip during the past week to Kingston, Saugerties, Hudson and other places south of this city.

William McNeeley, of Canastota, is still endeavoring to thresh out the Sunday situation in that village. It appears that at the recent taxpayers' election, it was voted to have Sunday shows, but during the days have followed, certain legal entanglements have arisen and as a result no Sunday shows have yet been staged. The village is midway between Utica and Syracuse.

James Roach, manager of the Farash theatres in Schenectady, is more than busy these days in looking after the details of the chain as W. W. Farley, owner of the houses, is in Miami, and will probably be there for three or four weeks yet.

The southern part of New York state is now being covered for the local Fox exchange by George H. Rosenbaum, a former resident of Philadelphia, who recently came to this city with the Fox branch.

The Madison Theatre in Oneida, run by Mike Kallette, was entered by burglars a week or so ago, but no money was taken. The combination of the safe was smashed before the burglars were scared away, leaving their tools on the floor of Mr. Kallette's office. During the past few weeks, Mr. Kallette has been remodeling the rooms above his theatre for the use of the Citizens' Club.

Baltimore

FRANK DURKEE, manager of the Palace Theatre, here, has gone to Florida for a two-weeks' vacation.

Robert Burgan has succeeded John Volz as manager of the Apollo Theatre, 1500 Harford Avenue.

George Jacobs, manager of the Goldfield Theatre, 913 Warner street, underwent an operation for appendicitis at Mercy Hospital last week, and is now getting along nicely.

Thomas D. Goldberg, manager of the Walbrook and Harford Theatres, spent part of the week beginning, Monday, January 25, in New York City.

Raphael Schroeder, accountant for the Associated Theatres Company, Baltimore, has returned from Boston where he went to attend a wedding.

Some of the exhibitors from Baltimore who are scheduled to attend the Naked Truth dinner on February 6, in New York City are: Mr. and Mrs. Harry Reddish, Mr. and Mrs. Walter D. Pacy, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Clement Weber, J. Louis Rome and Mr. and Mrs. Guy L. Wonders.

E. A. Lake, manager of Keith's Hippodrome, here, has returned from a two weeks' trip to Jacksonville, Fla.

J. S. Fitzgerald, formerly salesman for Producers Distributing Corporation has now joined the forces for Film Booking Offices.

Lou Bates has resigned as manager of the Washington, D. C. office of Producers Distributing Corporation.

Morris Epstein has resigned the position of Universal Washington, D. C. office manager and has been succeeded by Morton Van Praag.

Sam Gallanty, formerly with Producers Distributing Corporation, now has become Washington, D. C. office manager of the Independent Film Company.

Harry Weiner, formerly manager of the Washington, D. C. office of Warner Brothers, Inc., has resigned to go to Philadelphia with the Associated Exhibitors.

Clarence Eisman, formerly with Universal as a salesman, is in Baltimore now representing the Independent Film Company.

Harry Levy, formerly with Producers Distributing Corporation is now with Exhibitors Film Exchange as a salesman.

Jerry Marks has resigned as manager of the Progress Exchange, Washington, D. C. and has been succeeded by Miss Betty M. Rose. The salesman of that company will be Ribnitzki, formerly a Universal booker.

Work on the improvement being made on Warner Brothers Metropolitan Theatre, Baltimore, is rapidly nearing completion. The new box office at the North and Pennsylvania corner entrance of the playhouse was placed in operation last week and the former entrance on North avenue now has been turned into an exit exclusively.

The Lincoln Theatre, Washington, D. C., will be managed hereafter by Walter Pinchback, who succeeds Charles E. Lane, Jr., who has resigned.

Due to George A. Hicky, district supervisor for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Washington, D. C. office being on the sick list, Sam Burger, special representative of that company, is filling his place for the present.

S. A. Shirley, district manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, spent several days with the Minneapolis organization recently.

W. P. Cameron is a new salesman on the Metro staff.

Max Rivkin has resigned after 11 years on the Metro staff in the Northwest. Now there is an argument on as to who is the oldest employe. L. J. Blumberg, salesman, declares he has been there nine years. Miss Anne Griffin of the office force says that she has been there eight years, having beaten Manager Fisher to the job by 10 days. Joe Comer, assistant manager, declares he has been there as long as anybody.

Metro men bring back the report that Prosper F. Schwie opened to a great business at his Orpheum in Duluth.

Much local interest is manifested in the Garrick Theatre trial here which opened Monday.

New England

THE new United Theatre at Westerly, R. I. opened Monday night with many officials from New York and Boston attending as well as officers of the United Theatres Corp. from New York and New Jersey. Prominent city and state officials were guests. James Thornton is manager of the house. He is the son of Owen Thornton, who is manager of the theatres at Arctic and Riverpoint for the same company. The house is one of the most attractive and completely equipped in Rhode Island.

F. H. Faulke, who formerly conducted a theatre in Norfolk Downs, Mass., has taken over the National Theatre at Winchendon, Mass., formerly owned by J. B. Wilkinson.

Chester Sawin, formerly manager for Vitagraph at its Boston offices and associated with Warner Brothers, resigned to become associated with the Producers Distributing Corporation. District Manager Kline is in charge of the Vitagraph exchange for the present.

Mrs. Rossie Morton Jackson of San Antonio is visiting in Houston.

West Coast's "Relations" Dept. Charts Patron Preferences

Gauge Public's Tastes By Personal Touch and Questionnaires

TAKING the pulse of a million theatre patrons, and constantly striving to gain and maintain their good will is the daily task of the West Coast Theatres Public Relations Department, members of the organization deny that it is a formidable problem. On the contrary contend that the patrons themselves respond in a manner which makes the work merely a matter of efficient organization.

The West Coast Theatres, Inc., as far as can be determined, were the first, and only, large theatrical organization in the country to establish a department of this nature.

Many of us find it a difficult task to please or satisfy our little group of friends or the immediate members of our family. Few of us would care to assume the responsibility of keeping this limited number entertained, and the majority of us would laugh and be greatly amused over the brief command: "Take the pulse of a million theatre patrons, learn their likes and dislikes, ascertain what they are seeking in the form of entertainment, meet their requirements, and exercise constant vigilance that the youthful members of the million are protected from anything that grownups alone should see."

Sounds like a superhuman task, yet it is being carried on in a most systematic and successful manner by the Public Relations Department of the West Coast Theatres, Inc. The officials of this organization: M. Gore, Pres.; A. L. Gore, Vice Pres.; Sol Lesser, Sec'y.; A. M. Bowles, Gen. Manager; operating one hundred and sixty-eight theatres and catering to in excess of a million patrons yearly, attribute their success to this simple receipt—"Determining what appeals most to the public and furnishing it in the most entertaining and uplifting form possible."

The great problem is ascertaining with some degree of accuracy, a representative tabulation of the feelings of the patrons, and the West Coast Theatres Public Relations Department is maintained and operated with just one object in view, the good will of the public.

Sol Lesser in speaking of the success of the Public Relations Department attributes it to the interest and efficiency of his organization. "The days when the rental of an average motion picture film, the engagement of a mediocre piano player, and an indifferent ticket seller were all that were essential to the theatre business, are past. The public has become more discriminating and critical in its entertainment demands, and certainly has a right to be, but what forms of entertainment carry the greatest appeal to the greatest number of people is a problem which can only be solved through close contact and co-operation on the part of the theatre management and the patron.

"Our department of Public Relations endeavors to establish and maintain this contact through personal touch, questionnaires, and various systems which do not cause our patrons the slightest inconvenience. Letters of praise or adverse criticisms of a picture come direct to our attention and we tabulate the statements and use them as a guide for the future.

"Pleasing the grownup is far more simple in the matter of selection than pleasing the children. Programs for youngsters must not only be entertaining but must be of a nature which protect these future fathers and mothers from anything coarse, crude, suggestive or demoralizing in the slightest degree. What may amuse and greatly entertain a child might at the same time prove most harmful to his mind, and the protection of the childish mind is of paramount importance to the officials of West Coast Theatres, Inc.

"With the view to logically and constructively handling this phase of work, the Public Relations Department maintains a special organization for the presentation of Junior Matinees for youngsters. This organization is under the supervision of Ryllis Hemington. Miss Hemington who is in addition to being familiar with entertainment values, and who has made a special study of the minds of children has a corps of assistants engaged in this work with her.

"Prior to its general release, arrangements are made whereby a special preview of a picture to be showing in one of our theatres is given for mothers, teachers, women's clubs or any

Architect or Contractor

FOR several years we have been receiving requests for theatre plans, usually for houses ranging in seating capacities from three to seven hundred. The prospective builders generally state that they are willing to pay for this service.

We answer these requests, in effect, that we have no plans to recommend for their use, and for these reasons: Each theatre project must receive individual study in order to provide the greatest returns for capital invested. Perhaps a severe digression from orthodox theatre design will eliminate an expense in construction or, as is often the case, the plot on which the theatre is to be built may call for special plans. And there are numerous other angles to building theatres that make following plans specifically drawn for one house unsuited for a general application.

We recommend that prospective builders secure the services of an architect who, if possible, has had experience in theatre design. It is the duty of an architect to plan a project, in cooperation with his client, to the end of reducing expenditures as far as practicable and yet build a theatre that will meet the demands of the particular locality. Also, an architect personally supervises the actual building construction so that there can be no alterations or skimping of the plans or specifications.

It is false economy for theatre builders to forego an architect's services to save a nominal fee. This sum is relatively small and often is repaid several times over in reduced cost of construction, or a more practical theatre building.

Arranging Junior Show Programs

recognized organization which cares to send a representative. The film is carefully studied and later discussed for the purpose of deciding whether any scene or bit of action would be likely to have any other than a most helpful influence on the minds of children. If any question does arise on this angle, notes are made and the questionable parts of the film are cut for the showing at the Junior Matinees. All the objections are carefully tabulated on cards, and these cuts are made every time the film is shown at a Junior Matinee in any West Coast theatre.

"Another outstanding feature of this year being conducted under the supervision of Miss Hemington is the fact that the general public, through representatives of various organizations, are made to feel that their views, suggestions and constructive criticism is welcome at all times; that it is the paramount aim of West Coast Theatres, Inc., to please the General Public and not sit in final judgment on entertainment with the arbitrary attitude 'Take it or leave it.'

"Give the public just what it likes and desires is the great problem of the theatrical owner after all, and West Coast operates on the theory that there is no better judge of its likes and dislikes than the public itself."

"Plumes" Pretentious New Fanchon and Marco Idea

"Plumes," was the title of the West Coast Presentation staged at Loew's State Theater, Los Angeles, the week of January 23 to 29th. It is a Fanchon and Marco Idea featuring Frederick Kovert and his $5,000.00 peacock costume. This gorgeous gown was used in the "Queen of Sheba."

The presentation opens with Helene Hughes singing "Behind the Fan" with a chorus of Sunkist Beauties wearing a novel costume with great strings of pearls hanging between the girls and attached to their dresses. A black drop is used and at the conclusion of the number this opens disclosing a tall column lighted with color thrown upon it, a winding stairs which curve around the column and disappear. The entire background is black velvet. Myra Kinch appears on the stairs and dances, with the chorus as a background for the first half of the dance, finishing alone. Helene Hughes in a black dress and a great head dress of black plumes stands on the stairs while Otto Ploetz stands at the foot of the column and they sing a duet. At the finish of this number there is a parade of wonderful costumes made out of ostrich plumes, the girls entering down the winding stairs. They are grouped about the stage as the Sunkist Beauties enter and dance the Powder Puff Ballet. The act closes with Frederick Kovert's peacock dance.

Amy Cox Joins Vaudeville Circuit in Kansas City

Amy Cox, formerly office manager of the Virginia-Carolina Managers Circuit, with offices in Atlanta, for a number of years, has moved to Kansas City to assume the management of the vaudeville and presentation acts with Gus Sun-Ackerman Harris, Inc.

A completely equipped playroom presided over by a trained nurse and furnished with a variety of toys and devices for the amusement of youngsters while their parents witness the show in the main auditorium is one of the features of the new Harding Theatre in Chicago.

Children's Playroom Proves a Box Office Asset at Harding

THE playroom for children with a nurse in attendance and a complete equipment of toys and devices for the amusement of kiddies is one of the outstanding service features of the New Harding Theatre in Chicago, recently opened by Lubliner & Trinz. According to the management of the house, this playroom is proving a formidable box office attraction. It provides an advertising angle of certain appeal to mothers and guardians of youngsters.

The playroom is beautifully decorated and finely equipped. It is furthering the goodwill of the Harding to an appreciable degree, according to reports from the organization.

The room is well patronized every day, scores of happy children enjoying the conveniences afforded by the nursery under the care of a competent trained nurse, while their mothers view the entertainment in the auditorium of the Harding.

The playroom has a specially canvassed and padded floor so that the children are protected against falls. The wall decorations are lines of colored animals with other cut-outs on shelves to give perspective. Diminutive tables and chairs are there for comfort and beds for the infants are also provided.

Many appliances and toys that delight kiddies have been installed, including swings, see-saws, teeter-totters, spiral and straight gliders, sand piles and a variety of blocks. Musical chairs, which play when sat upon, also provide a thrill for the youngsters.

Musical Novelty Staged at Columbia, Seattle

A novelty in musical presentations was offered by Manager Robert W. Bender of the Columbia Theatre, Seattle, last week, when Francesco Longo, director of the Columbia All-Artists Orchestra, offered a piano solo played in comparison with the same selection as recorded by himself several seasons ago for the Ampico Player Roll corporation. The novelty of the offering made an exceptionally pleasing impression with Columbia audiences all week.

COSTUMES designed by Erte, noted European designer, for the "Pageant of the Allies," presented as a prologue to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Big Parade," at Grauman's Egyptian Theatre, Hollywood, are shown in the photos on this page.

The number is a pretentious and elaborate one from every standpoint, but has attracted particular notice through the rich costumery which is featured in the pageant. The vivid colors of the nations represented in the act have been employed with striking effect by the designer of the costumes and accentuated through the employment of unique designs and rich fabrics.

Charleston Act Repeats in Atlanta

Second Contest Eclipses First At Metropolitan

A THEATRE filled to the overflowing and queues of people impatiently waiting for admission marked the second Atlanta Georgian-Metropolitan Charleston contest which opened at the Metropolitan Theatre Monday afternoon and played to such crowds that an even larger week than the first contest occasioned resulted. Olive Hill, who staged the first contest directed the second.

With over double the number of contestants, one hundred and fifty in comparison with the sixty of the first contest, and with several changes in the plan of operation which had shown themselves to be necessary, the second venture got under way Monday afternoon. The first, and most noticeable change was made when four daily performances, two in the afternoon for the younger contestants, and two at night for the older, were substituted for the three daily contests, for all ages, of the old regime. The prizes were also made larger this time, over five hundred dollars in daily and final prizes being offered.

The act opens with a song by Olive Hill. Then the Hill girls, four in number, add a revue touch by Charlestoning down the aisles of the theatre to the stage. As Miss Hill finishes her song all five of them swing into a spirited exhibition of the Charleston.

At the conclusion of the dance Miss Hill is left alone on the stage. She calls his or her name, each contestant Charleston from the wings and has the stage to him or herself for a short while. The audience applause determines the prize winners.

"Old Fiddlers" Acts Score in Baltimore

The popular interest in Old Time Fiddlers which swept New England continues to spread to other sections of the country, Baltimore now being added to the cities where the enthusiasm stirred up over Mellie Dunham has registered. Dr. J. H. Whitehurst, president of the Combined Whitehurst Theatrical Interests of Baltimore started a contest to locate the oldest champion fiddler of Maryland. He is Charles Henry Wilson, it is said, and he was booked for the Garden Theatre, Baltimore, during the week of January 25th.

The old fiddlers' contests in northern New York are on this week and are attracting much attention in Carthage and elsewhere where the Schine brothers have theatres. In connection with the contest in Carthage, a silver cup has been donated by a jewelry company. The contests went over so well in Albany the past week that it was necessary to hold them over for a second night.

Victoria in Philadelphia Serving Afternoon Tea

The Victoria Theatre is the first in Philadelphia to introduce the English custom of serving tea in motion picture houses. Tea is served from 12 noon to 6 P. M. to patrons occupying mezzanine boxes at the theatre, the purpose of the innovation being to induce clubs, sororities and other organizations to come to matinees in a body.

The MANAGER'S OFFICE

MILLER MERIWETHER has resigned as manager of the Ideal Theatre, Winston-Salem, to become associate manager of the Auditorium, Pilot and Amuzu Theatres, operated there by the Forsyth Amusement Company. The three theatres are now under the general management of Fuller Sams. Meriwether will direct publicity and supervise the houses.

GEORGE E. GUISE, former Minneapolis theatre press agent and newspaper editor, has been appointed to manage the Pantages Theatre in Minneapolis, succeeding Louis for several years manager of the house, according to a report from that city.

NAT HOLT, manager of the California Theatre, has been made manager of the Granada, San Francisco, transferring places with Dick Spier, who leaves the Granada to manage the California. Holt has taken Charlie Kurtzman, his publicity director, to the Granada with him.

CHARLES J. JONES, former vaudeville player, has been appointed manager of the Victoria Theatre in Harrisburg, Pa., succeeding Charles H. Campbell who resigned recently. Jones played vaudeville for several years in an act with his wife. The act was known as Colta & Colta and recently completed an engagement with the show "The World of Pleasure."

WILLIAM H. BUCK of the New York headquarters offices of the Maine and New Hampshire Theatre Corporation which conducts a chain of houses throughout New England has taken over managership of the Olympia Theatre at New Haven, Conn., succeeding Harry Browning, manager for three years past, who has become manager of the Capitol Theatre at Middletown, Conn., in which he recently became financially interested.

Publix Announces Transfers and New Appointments

The following promotions and transfers have been made recently in the organization of the Publix Theatres Corporation:

Montgomery S. Hill, district manager of the Carolinas district, has been transferred to the management of the Atlanta district, succeeding J. J. Franklin, transferred to the management of the New York district. J. J. Fitzgibbons, former New York district manager, goes to Charlotte to succeed Mr. Hill.

Ernest Morrison, former manager of the Imperial, Asheville, has been appointed manager of the Howard, Atlanta, succeeding Charles G. Brandon, resigned. C. B. Stiff goes from the Imperial, Columbia, S. C., to the Imperial, Asheville, succeeding Morrison. Thomas Holliday has been transferred from the Alhambra, Charlotte, to the Imperial, Columbia, his place in Charlotte being taken by J. H. McKoy, a graduate of the Managers Training School. L. A. Shead, former manager of the Uptown Theatre, Chicago, has been appointed manager of Loew's Palace, Memphis, succeeding George Brown who goes to the Strand, Birmingham, succeeding Roscoe Faunce, resigned.

New Appearance Aim of Lobby Displays Says "Sameness" Tires Regulars

The importance of lobby decorations was touched upon recently by Edward L. Hyman when he was visited at the Brooklyn Mark Strand Theatre by a trade paper representative. Upon entering the front door the visitor noted that a green hedge row had been placed across the promenade over the inner-doors leading to the orchestra floor. Hidden lights playing on this hedge row and upon mirror mosaic vases placed at strategical points attracted the eye of patrons.

"Lobby decoration is a very important thing," said Mr. Hyman. "I think it should be given as much attention as any other angle of the theatre. Too often you have probably noticed the theatres whose lobbies present the same appearance week after week. Their marble walls and exquisite panels may have been very attractive, but if the house caters to the same people regularly the beauty of things is bound to wear off and become monotonous. When that point is reached the patrons will take the theatre as a matter of course, which is always a bad condition.

"I believe in constantly changing the lobby decorations so that something new reaches the patrons every few weeks. Having a wide passage way running across the marble staircases, it was a comparatively easy matter to put the hedge row across and hide strip lights on the floor in front of them with which to light them. The two large mirror mosaic vases at either end of the hedge row are at present lighted by varicolored spot lights. This, also is a simple matter. The spot-light is placed about three feet in front of the vase and shoots directly at the center. A rainbow gelatine sheet is placed over the spot-light and the trick is done."

Split-Week Policy in Force at Alexandria, Frisco

Fewer and better pictures is the new policy inaugurated by Herbert L. Rothchild at the Alexandria Theatre, San Francisco, commencing Wednesday, Jan. 7th with the innovation of two complete changes of program each week. According to Harry David, general manager of Herbert L. Rothchild Entertainment, Inc., this will enable the Alexandria to concentrate on two feature programs each week, selecting only the bigger attractions for both stage and screen, changing the bill on Wednesdays and Sundays.

Isis in Kansas City Adds Stage Features

Another Kansas City suburban house, the Isis, has changed its policy of presentation. Beginning Saturday, January 2, Jack Roth, manager, added Jack Riley and his orchestra, well known radio entertainers in the Kansas City territory, as a permanent fixture to the theatre. Also, Harry Weber and a bevy of girls in "Collegiate Capers," were an added feature. New lighting effects, by way of border lights, footlights and dimmers, were added to the theatre. Thus far a steady increase in patronage has prevailed.

Martha Washington Theatre, Hamtramck, Mich. Features the Marr & Colton Organ

"I heartily agree that Marr & Colton is in truth America's Finest," writes Reginald E. Webb, well known organist of Martha Washington Theatre. He further states "you have successfully combined beautiful tonal qualities with instantaneous response. Even the large reeds speak as rapidly as the lighter registers. The individuality of every set of pipes and the balance of the instrument is amazing."

Reginald E. Webb.

Exhibitors from coast to coast, have found that the Marr & Colton organ has real box office value. You will find a Marr & Colton in leading theatres throughout the country as a permanent attraction, because it stimulates better patronage. A Marr & Colton organ keeps the crowds coming.

More than 100 workmen toiled frantically to put the final touches on Ascher Brothers' 3,000 seat Terminal theatre, Chicago, on the day of its opening.

West Coast Theatres, Inc., Add Three More Houses to California Circuit

THE West Coast Theatres, Inc., latest addition to their 200 houses, the new West Coast Imperial theatre at Ocean Boulevard and American Ave., Long Beach, opened Saturday night December 19th.

Sol Lesser, Secretary of West Coast Theatres, Inc., states that the Imperial theatre is equal in beauty to any theatre in Southern California. Italian decorations are being used throughout and it is a veritable jewel box in colorful splendor, say those who attended the opening.

The policy of the playhouse, according to A. M. Bowles, general manager of West Coast Theatres, Inc., will include the showing of the biggest motion pictures that the country affords and will give the Long Beach public a chance to see the wonderful productions that are being talked about in Los Angeles.

Famous stars from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Famous Players-Lasky, Fox, Cecil B. De Mille, Hal Roach, Universal City, Christie, First National, United, and Metropolitan studios were present at the big opening Saturday night.

The opening of the Manchester theatre, one of the newest of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., chain of houses springing up almost weekly in Southern California, will herald a new departure in theatrical architecture, according to R. B. Grunauer, general manager of the South Side Theatres, Inc., for instead of sticking to the invariable so-called "Spanish" type of architecture, it will present to the public an East Indian effect reminiscent of the Taj Mahal.

"There is something mysteriously beautiful about the delicate scroll work and tracery of the East Indians," stated Mr. Grunauer, "that lends itself splendidly to the theory of theatrical art. The stage and the screen are meant for the presentation of the mysterious and the beautiful, and that is why we planned to place our screen plays and the West Coast Theatres, Inc., presentations in a mysterious and a beautiful setting."

"After considerable planning with Robert E. Powers of the Powers Studios, who have charge of the decorations, the East Indian idea of beauty was hit upon, and was carefully followed out, after a thorough formerly used and is strictly classical in interior decoration had been made by the staff of the Powers studio and myself."

The opening date for the Uptown Theatre is set for the immediate future.

The manager of the theatre has been busy selecting the usherettes from the 128 girls who applied for the position. As there will only be 24 usherettes he had a hard job on his hands. The 128 girls who reported were of all sizes, nationality, styles and from the ages 16 to 60. Out of a possible 38 girls who would have done the 24 who were the most courteous and intelligent were selected.

The finishing touches are being put on the interior decorations of Uptown and Robert E. Powers who designed all the decorations says, "This theatre marks a new era in West Coast Theatre decoration, it breaks away from any style which has been formerly used and is strictly classical in treatment. The outer lobby is Spanish Renaissance, the ceiling of which is very elaborate and has more work on it and cost more than has ever been spent on a theatre lobby in the west."

"The interior of the theatre is a blending of Spanish and Italian Renaissance, the walls being old Italian plaster which is wavy in texture. The five dome ceilings in the mezzanine are all hand painted murals. The walls are two-toned effects of red and tan. The carpets are of special design and manufactured in the east especially for the Uptown Theatre. The Galphins Grills for the organ are very beautiful and very fine work, covered with pure gold leaf. All the furniture is specially hand carved for the foyer."

Mr. Powers says, "This theatre is the most elaborate and expensive that the West Coast Theatres, Inc., have built from the decorative standpoint. We believe that it will set a precedent for future theatre construction."

Dunlap Among Attractive Iowa Small Houses

E. T. Dunlap, owner and manager of the Dunlap Theatre at Hawarden, Iowa, has one of the prettiest little theatres in the state. Mr. Dunlap designed and built the structure which houses the Dunlap Theatre, a two story brick building in which the second floor and store space on each side of the theatre is devoted to office rooms. This only serves to add to the effect of the theatre with its facade stretching out over the sidewalk. The lobby and interior of the theatre are up to date in every way in construction and equipment. The Dunlap Theatre seats 401.

Theatre-goers of Eau Claire, Ill., will find comfort in the new State theatre, recently added house to the F & R circuit. The auditorium seats 1,300 with additional capacity in the balcony and loges. V. B. Valteau, well known theatre operator, is the manager.

In Step with Progress

To satisfy the seating requirements of the modern theatre calls for resources in production, in engineering skill, and in the art of design, such as only years of concentrated industry and experience can give.

In these respects the American Seating Company has, during recent years, kept pace with the rapid strides made by the Amusement industry. Installations, not dreamed of twenty-five and fifty years ago are today "all in the day's work."

Inquiries and Comments

PERSPECTIVE Part II

HE degree of enjoyment experienced when viewing motion pictures depends, in a large way, upon the faithfulness with which the cinematographer reproduces the scenes upon the film. For the enlightenment of those projectionists who may be troubled with doubts as to just what manner of person a cinematographer is, we wish to say that the cinematographer of today is the cameraman of yesterday.

It should now be evident to even the most unlearned that the motion picture industry has progressed along lines other than those connected solely with projection. But for that matter it was only recently that the erstwhile "operators" of the country shed their skins to assume the truly awe-inspiring mantle of "projectionist."

The costs of progress are indeed heavy but names are names and as such they serve a useful purpose so we can do nothing else but abide by them.

Important Link

Nevertheless, the cinematographer forms a very important link in the producing machine for upon his skill depends the appearance of the finished article. That is, before the projectionist gets in his work.

It behooves the projectionist, therefore, if his sphere of influence extends at all beyond the confines of the "operator's box," to familiarize himself to a slight extent with the work of the man who is responsible for the photographic reproduction which the projectionist has in his care and is about to reproduce again, this time on the screen.

Since no practical device is, as yet, available which, when used in the motion picture system, will give the illusion of "depth," reliance must be placed upon the skill of the cinematographer in photographing the scenes, to see that they give a faithful representation of the original. To do this requires a complete knowledge, on his part, of "perspective."

Phases of Perspective

It appears that the subject of perspective is quite complicated and an article by J. F. Young, entitled "Perspective" which appeared in a recent issue of The Photographic Journal (London) brought out some additional "kinks" which are well worth knowing.

We shall take the liberty of quoting rather liberally from Mr. Young's article.

He tells us that the photographic picture must be produced in accordance with very definite laws; and it is easy to prove mathematically.

First, that the picture produced in a pin-hole camera must be a true perspective representation of the picture portrayed, i. e., it is produced in accordance with and subject to the laws of the science known as "perspective."

Secondly, that this is true when a lens is used instead of a pinhole, provided the lens is "rectilinear," i. e., reproduces straight lines without distortion.

The first grasp towards understanding the subject is to grasp this thoroughly and to realize that here we have one of the many limitations imposed on the photographer by the nature of his processes.

The artist painting a scene, gradually builds up a picture which appears to him to be a fair representation of what he sees before him, modified in a greater or lesser degree to conform to his artistic ideals; and he will be seen constantly leaning back or stepping back to gaze at his work, so that it may produce the right effect when viewed from a position such as the spectator may be expected to choose when viewing the finished masterpiece. His picture, when complete, probably does not conform to the laws of perspective; indeed, we have it on Ruskin's authority that "no great painters trouble themselves about perspective; very few of them know about its laws."

The photographer is in a very different case to the painter. When he presses the button he gets a ready-made perspective picture. He probably expects this to resemble the scene at which he aimed his camera. If it does not and it frequently does not—he is somewhat taken back and talks vaguely of "false perspective," "wide angleism," and so forth. If he is sufficiently interested in his subject to wish to understand the reason for such anomalies, he finds that the dictum "no theory of perspective is accurate" has this element of truth in it; that no consistent and comprehensive exposition of the theory is at present available. To arrive at a complete theory it is necessary to consider new aspects of the subject which have so far been generally ignored.

Divisions of the Subject

Apart from the question of the influence of the lens, already touched upon, the subject can be divided as follows, into four main heads all closely associated of which the two former are satisfactorily dealt with in ordinary text books on perspective, while the other two have hitherto received little attention:

1. The properties of the ordinary plane perspective picture.
2. The influence of the position and shape of the sensitive surface.
3. The effect of changing the standpoint from which the picture is viewed.
4. The relation between the perspective picture and "what we see." This last topic involves some study of vision in its two aspects, physical sensation and mental judgment, the latter introducing some elements of uncertainty, the nature and extent of which our knowledge of the working of the human mind will enable us to discuss fairly thoroughly.

Dealing with the properties of the perspective picture, the point which needs emphasis beyond all else is this—that these properties are not mere matters of opinion or of observation; they are deductions from well-established data. So it is possible to foretell the exact form of the image of any object for a given position of the lens and the plate. The text-books on perspective deal almost exclusively with this branch of the subject, which has been exhaustively investigated.

Why Lines "Vanish" Laterally

The answer to such questions as "Why, if lines vanish laterally, do they not also vanish vertically?" is, that the form of the photographic picture is predetermined by definite principles. Among other things, parallel lines which are parallel to the photographic plate appear still parallel in the picture. As the plate is generally vertical, all vertical lines remain parallel; as already stated, this property is not peculiar to vertical lines, and the suggestion that parallel lines necessarily vanish (i. e., converge) laterally is unfounded. To the eye, of course, parallel lines always appear to converge, whether vertical or not.

It is not always possible, however, to detect the convergence of vertical parallel lines as will be evident from the following example. In a landscape, the difference in the apparent widths at the top and bottom of the tower 80 ft. high and a quarter of a mile distant will be less than a quarter of one percent, which, of course, is much too small to be detected.

Giant Steamship to Have Projection Equipment

The largest and fastest high-powered passenger steamship ever to be built in the United States will have, as a part of the equipment designed for the comfort and enjoyment of her passengers, facilities for the showing of motion pictures both in the lounge and on the open deck.

The ship is the Malo'o, Hawaiian for Flying Fish, which is now being built for the Mat on Navigation Company at Cramp's Shipyard, Philadelphia. She will be launched this coming spring and will be placed in service on the San Francisco-Honolulu run in the spring of 1927.

Both of the motion picture booths will be provided with electrically driven exhaust blowers, doors, and other equipment to meet the requirements of the National Board of Fire Underwriters. The booth in the lounge will be built-in steel structure lined with magnesia and galvanized sheet iron. The screen will be designed to roll up and lie concealed within a false beam aft of the fireplace.

You can check up

There is no question about the popular demand for photographic quality on the screen. Your patrons expect it.

Eastman Positive is the film that carries the quality of the negative through to the screen.

And you can check up—the black-lettered identification “Eastman” “Kodak” is in the transparent margin. Look for it.

Dr. Kellner, Optical Expert of Bausch and Lomb, Dies

Dr. Herman Kellner, long associated in an important capacity with the Bausch and Lomb Optical Co., died at his home at Rochester, on Jan. 28.

Dr. Kellner was one of the world's foremost optical experts and was very well known in the motion picture industry. His efforts in solving problems dealing with the optics of projection contributed much toward its present degree of perfection. Also Dr. Kellner was a very active member of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, holding various offices and contributing valuable papers and discussions at their annual conventions.

Dr. Kellner's genial personality and ready wit will be missed by all those who were fortunate enough to have known him.

Automatic Ticket Announce Manager's Register

A new electrical device just completed by the Experimental Department of the Automatic Ticket Register Corporation, N. Y. City, is creating widespread interest among exhibitors.

This device is known as a remote control register which records in the private office of the proprietor or manager the sale of each priced ticket as the sale is tabulated in the ticket machine located in the box office.

E. S. Bowman, treasurer, states that formal announcement giving full details of this new Gold Seal product will appear in an early issue of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

The Duplex Polishing Machine, made by the Duplex Motion Picture Industries, has many special features that make it of great value wherever used, it is claimed. The mechanism is clearly shown in this reproduction

An Amazing Difference!

Pictures that on the average screen are dull, shadowy and tiresome, snap out clear, lively and bright on a Super-Lite Screen.

That is because practically all the light that falls on the silvery surface of a Super-Lite Screen is reflected.

Super-Lite Screens give the equivalent of higher intensity light sources at a fraction of their cost. They are made from fine, sturdy material and last for years.

Advance Trailer Service is Expanding Rapidly

I. Schwartz, President of the Ad-Vance Trailer Service Corporation, New York City, announces the second anniversary of the company.

Two years ago this company came into the field producing a trailer service and has been pleased with the manner in which it has been accepted by the exhibitors all over the country. At present this company is serving approximately twenty-five hundred accounts, amongst them several of the largest circuits.

Among the improvements made by the company during this period, is the giving to the exhibitor of seven different openings and closings a year, so that there is a complete absence of monotony upon the screen.

Goldstein Bros. Plan New Springfield Theatre

Goldstein Brothers Amusement Company of Springfield, Mass., are having plans drawn for a new motion picture theatre to cost approximately $1,000,000, to be erected in Springfield early in the spring.

Main floor and balcony of the Capitol theatre, Taylorville, Ill.

Wallace Beery using an Eyemo camera, a new type of portable standard motion picture camera that has been put on the market by Bell & Howell Co.

The State Street Baptist Church has been purchased by the company as a site for the theatre and this structure will be razed. Originally it was planned to convert the church into a theatre but that plan has been abandoned and an entirely new building will be erected.

The new theatre will have a seating capacity much larger than was originally planned for by conversion of the church into a 1500 seat playhouse. The new building will be four stories high and the street front will contain stores and offices in addition to the theatre lobby. The entrance to the theatre will be from State street. Details of the plans are being worked out.

Arctic Nu - Air Appoints Milwaukee Agent

E. G. Tunstall and Walter Hicky, well known in Milwaukee film exchange circles, have been granted the Wisconsin state rights for the Arctic Nu-Air cooling system. Both Tunstall and Hicky are former Milwaukee exchange men. They left here some time ago to join the company with which they are now associated, and at that time were granted state rights in New England and New York. Their acquisition of state rights in Wisconsin may mean that either may return to Milwaukee.

The image displays a collage of newspaper advertisements for the film "Lady Windemere's Fan" by Ernst Lubitsch. The ads are from various theaters, including Rialto, Orpheum, Blue Mouse, and Circle. Each ad features the title, cast members (Irene Rich, Ronald Colman, Bert Lytell, May Mayov), and promotional text like "The Toast of the Town" and "The Season's Greatest Hit". The ads are arranged in a grid-like fashion, showing different layouts and designs used by various newspapers.

Representative newspaper displays which have been used for "Lady Windemere's Fan" (Warner Bros.) are shown in the layout above. The treatment for the most part has consistently followed a straight "billing" formula, designed to feature title, author, director and past. The displays shown above were used by the following theatres: Circle, Cleveland; State, Pittsburgh; Orpheum, Chicago; Blue Mouse, Portland, Ore.; Broadway, Charlotte, and the Rialto, Washington, D. C.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

William V. Mong, appearing in the Banner production "Brooding Eyes," released through Henry Ginsberg Distributing Corporation.

"The Last Edition"—F. B. O. Pantages, San Francisco

Herald: "Pantages audiences are getting an insight into newspaper methods and at the same time full measure of thrills this week. 'The Last Edition' is fine entertainment. Lewis is noted for good character work, and particularly suited for the role of the pressman."

"The Sea Beast"—Warners, Warners, New York

The Daily News: "You may spend all the praises at your command and still feel that you haven't done the piece more than half justice. We doubt if there has ever been a picture with more magnificence of scene."

Telegraph: "John Barrymore justified his reputed desire to abandon purely romantic roles by presenting at Warners' Theatre last night one of the most powerful and virile characters ever seen on the screen. 'The Sea Beast' is a fine achievement for Barrymore and from the standpoint of production a tremendous victory for Warner Bros."

Herald Tribune: "We are sure 'The Sea Beast' is a magnificent production. It is so big. If anyone ever doubted it before he must now admit that John Barrymore is as great a make-up artist as Lon Chaney."

American: "Another saga of the seas opened last night at Warners' Theatre. 'The Sea Beast' is a grim tale. The whaling episodes are well worth seeing. Their realism is splendid."

The Sun: "The Warner Bros. have a picturesque, melodramatic success. The scenes of the ships are all effective as are those of the wild crews, the storms and the whales. Barrymore gives what is called a superlative characterization."

The Mirror: "There is the smell of the sea in the picture. Indeed 'The Sea Beast' is more than a fish story. It's a whale story. It is all John Barrymore. You will be thrilled or you will be upset by this photoplay. It steers no half way course."

Evening World: "Barrymore's portrayal of madness is a strikingly excellent piece of acting. 'The Sea Beast' is well worth seeing."

Jane Novak, who appears in "Lure of the Wild," a Columbia production.

The Telegram: "The temptation is strong to call it a whale of a picture. You'll have to forgive us if we yield to it. For on viewing the picture you'll understand why. The picture is greater than 'Down to The Sea in Ships.'"

"The Skyrocket," Associated Ex., St. Francis, San Francisco

Bulletin: "The prophecy is that the picture will be an unqualified box-office success. Flappers packed the house yesterday, from the top row to the drums. True, there were escorts, sweethearts, husbands and fathers present, but in theatre parlance it was a 'flapper audience.' Gloria Swanson has nothing on Peggy when it comes to swanky garb. Ermine gowns, chinchilla capes, white fox collars on night robes, and what not. It's a sort of fashion show, with the spotlight steady on the one girl. Miss Joyce has a sharply defined screen personality. Her greenish eyes are wide apart, a great desideratum; her eyebrows are arched in half circle; she is blonde—a blondness with an impact, allure in short the je ne sais quoi."

Daily News: "A new star, and one of exceeding brilliance, has flashed across the screen heavens. The star is Peggy Hopkins Joyce. Peggy Hopkins Joyce is a name that is not new to the columns of the daily press or the stage. Her love affairs and ventures in matrimony have used up much printer's ink. But for the first time in her career her adventures, fictional this time, are recorded in imperishable film.

Interesting adventures they are, too. Adela Rogers St. Johns, who wrote 'The Skyrocket' has seen to that. Then Marshall Neilan has further abetted Miss Joyce's bid for screen recognition by faultless direction and an uncanny ability to bring out every ounce of the star's acting ability while using her exceedingly good looks and graces to the utmost."

Chronicle: "People, of course, are interested first in Miss Joyce herself. She is as beautiful as report makes her, and is of the type that just now has the call in screen stars—Vilma Banky, Constance Bennett, Dolores Costello. She is as blonde as a baby, has a quite lovely profile and an equally beautiful front face on which there is nearly always a shade of sadness. One would say that she is a pensive beauty, but her face lights up wonderfully when she smiles, which is seldom. The picture is cruelly truthful as to studio and screen star life, without exaggeration, and seemingly without malice. It shows how quickly a name can be made or marred, and to what extravagance the suddenly rich stars go to show their wealth."

Daily Herald: "Because the newspapers have been more or less filled with the doings of Peggy Hopkins Joyce, of late, one is led to suspect that audiences are attracted more from curiosity than any other motive to the St. Francis, where 'The Skyrocket' with Miss Joyce, in her first picture role, is showing. If that is the case, they will have their curiosity sated, and be entertained as well, for 'The Skyrocket' is a good picture... Miss Joyce is revealed as a screen actress of ability, is quite sure of herself, and manages to transmit to the spectator a very fair share of the emotions which she feels in this story of Hollywood."

"Dance Madness"—M-G-M., Capitol, N. Y.

Telegraph: "The screen at the Capitol this week is graced by an airy little comedy called 'Dance Madness.' It has been directed with such a light and clever hand, and is acted with such charm that it is wholly delightful. It is as light as a bubble, but as when you watch a bubble, you are continually waiting for it to blow up. And 'Dance Madness' blows up properly and with the right effect just at the right moment."

Post: "Claire Windsor as the clever wife of 'Dance Madness' looks very handsome with her blonde hair bobbed and uncurled, and even handsomer yet in the black wig. Mr. Nagel appears to enjoy himself hugely in this, something of a departure from his usual upright young man role. The picture serves excellently as frothy entertainment of the farcical variety."

Journal: "It is a lightly entertaining story written for the screen by S. Jay Kaufman. The settings are lavish, and Claire Windsor is lovely with her new bob."

George Fawcett, who appears in the A. G. Steen production, "Nine and Three-fifths Second".

Gentlemen:

Now about this. This is to let you know just how we feel by after a lot of investigation as to merits of other makes and the fact that we bought a Wurlitzer, and paid more for it than what we could have bought others of equal specifications what we think of your pipe organs when it comes to tone and quality.

even if your organs were only equal to others, it would still be the organ to buy just because it is a "Wurlitzer". We use the phrase "The Mighty Wurlitzer Pipe Organ" in all our advertising copy and we know that tying up our Organ with those of such theatres as the Chicago, Tivoli, McVickers and others of your wonderful installation in the City of Chicago, it places our Organ in public favor far above those of our competitors in this region.

All in all, the instrument, installation and service considered, we believe that we have the finest theatre organ in the State of Indiana.

I remain, With best regards from Mr. Kozacik and myself
Sincerely
Manta

HE'S hit the entertainment bullseye again! Fred Thomson's splendid acting, his unqualified fearlessness, his buoyant, breezy personality and the remarkable cleverness of his horse, Silver King, have gone a long way towards winning for him his amazing popularity but—there is another big factor that is pulling people to box-offices of theatres showing his pictures!

HE GETS AN ABSOLUTELY NEW TWIST INTO EVERY ONE OF HIS PRODUCTIONS!

In "The Tough Guy" he has lived right up to expectations! He has made a bang-up, hundred horsepower super-Western, with all the thrill, the action, the adventure, the excitement belonging to this type of picture, AND HE HAS MADE A DELIGHTFUL COMEDY AS WELL! He has made a picture that will add immeasurably to his own popularity and make a host of new friends for the theatres playing it!

Not So Much DANGER

After All

*Under the caption "DANGER"
Danny says in Film Daily:*

There is much hullabaloo and fuss these days. Over "presentations," special acts, "revues," etc., for motion picture houses. One first run house vies with the other. In trying to present a bill to aid in putting over the feature. One tries to outdo the other. Just where it will end is questionable.

Presentations, special features, all such trimmings are fine. But don't overlook this, please: that people who go to picture houses want to see pictures. That is why they go to such places.

But don't you think you are unduly worried, Danny; and you, too, Mr. James? You know that nothing can, that nothing will, ever take the place of pictures.

If the "presentation craze" were spreading to any extent into the second, third and subsequent run houses, Short Features would be the first pictures to show it through diminished bookings.

But RIGHT NOW one hundred new exhibitors every week are joining the thousands of showmen running Educational Pictures.

And Arthur James writes in Motion Pictures Today:

Presentation, prologue, preliminary and all the rest of the names given to that which precedes the showing of the feature motion picture on the screen, has about reached the height of its foolishness. By example and by promotion the idea of a big show spread from Broadway to Chicago, from Chicago to the West Coast and then all over our motion picture theatre map.

. . . . It still is an important factor in—and only in—the largest houses.

The picture now, as always, is first and last the attraction. Short lengths, novel in character and with picturesque or comedy values, help tremendously, but they, also, are pictures.

What You Can Save By Changing To Incandescent Lamp Projection

In hundreds of theatres the use of the Incandescent Lamp has cut the cost of projection from 35% to 75%. When you can save hundreds of dollars a year on your current bills, and at the same time improve your projection, is it not a matter of good business to do so?

The following table shows the annual savings that a 900 Watt Edison Mazda Incandescent Lamp makes over arc lights of various amperages. For instance, if you are operating a 50 amperage arc by rheostat control, ten hours a day, current rate 8c, a k.w. hour, you can save $1,280.00 a year by replacing your arc with a 900 Watt Edison Mazda Incandescent Lamp. If your arc control is by motor generator, compensator, or rectifier, your saving would be $623.00 per year. If you operate five hours a day, your annual saving would be half as much in each case.

Specialties

I ATTENDED a most interesting luncheon last week. It was called by a Bank President and there were present the top executives of a department store, a baking company, a textile concern, a large carpet mill, etc.

The subjects of chain stores, installment buying, retail buying, synthetic products, exports, etc., came up. It was interesting right along to note how intimately some of these various business questions of the moment applied to the picture business.

Finally the Bank President put to each man this question: "How is the independent doing, in your particular field?"

The answer was unanimous; and it was, it seems to me, strikingly fitted to the independents in the motion picture business — independent theatres, independent distributors, independent producers.

Said each man: "There's plenty of room in my field for the independent, plenty of opportunity. And every independent is doing well — provided he deals in specialties."

In other words, provided he specializes, and does that or deals in those goods which the big fellows do not or cannot — at least so well.

The speakers did not theorize; they talked facts, experience and hard sense.

The independent theatre owner can deal in personality as, perhaps, the chain theatre manager cannot. Knowing his people, having full power to book, he can offer pictures more acceptable to them. He can specialize as the manager cannot who is a cog in a management machine. He can make his theatre radiate enterprise—the result always of individual initiative—as against the more or less standardized tone of the chain amusement shop.

Said the department store owner: "We cannot hope to instill in the heads of our departments the same personality contact with customers that the successful small and specializing merchant has. I can run a special shop right alongside my own store, or any department store, and do better business than the department in the department store does with that same line of goods."

And so it is with the independent distributor who can specialize in films not handled by the national distributor and who is in better and closer contact with the customer; and so it is with the independent producer who can beget his own brain-child and rear it better than the offspring of a big studio.

* * *

The trouble with the motion picture business is that everyone wants to be a trust.

And everyone wants to do what the other fellow is doing.

Yet all the time, slowly but surely, the business is classifying itself — into theatres, pictures, presentations — slowly because of the resistance of the trade itself, surely because the public classifies itself as to the entertainment patronized, and every amusement business in the past has had to classify itself accordingly. So will motion picture entertainment

THE month which signalizes the twentieth anniversary of Carl Laemmle in the motion picture industry was started off propitiously on Friday evening of last week at the Hotel Commodore, New York City, when more than a thousand persons gathered to do honor to the Universal chieftain. Employees and executives of the home office, the Big "U" exchange and the laboratory were included but there was a sizable delegation of executives from other companies, editors and publishers of the fan and trade press, exhibitors from various parts of the country and other prominent persons.

It was the first appearance in public of Laemmle since his return from abroad and he received congratulations from all sides on the rounding out of his twentieth successful year in an industry in which he has been a trail blazer and a leader.

Will H. Hays was a guest of honor, and extended warm congratulations to Laemmle. Al Steffes, Frank Rembusch and other out-of-town exhibitors gave a national aspect to the evening.

An unusual human interest touch was given the affair by the presence of Charles E. Chasteen, Laemmle's first motion picture employe. He was the first operator at the Whitefront theatre in Chicago, where Laemmle embarked in business on February 26th, 1906. The two had a jovial reunion. Chasteen recalled how a mistake on his part, in letting a film slip out of his hands one day, forced Laemmle to buy a picture outright—his first step as a distributor.

The Grand Ballroom of the Commodore was gaily decorated for the occasion. Supper was served at 11:30. The undraping of a twenty-foot portrait of Laemmle brought forth rousing cheers, as did the presentation of a silver loving cup by the employes of the Fort Lee laboratory. A man impersonating "The Phantom of the Opera" presented Laemmle with a box of flowers from the New York exchange. The foreign department gave him a hand illuminated and leather bound Resolutions, congratulating him on his twentieth film anniversary. A program of entertainment followed and dancing was resumed after supper.

All in all, it was a colorful event and a picturesque reminder of the youth of this industry, since we are just observing the twentieth anniversary of a man who started in it when there was precious little to the industry.

All honor to the man who has behind him a record of twenty years of fair dealing, independence and constructive progress—Carl Laemmle!

IRVING THALBERG, the youthful production executive who has played such an important part at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, made an announcement this week which confirms a development that we have felt to be inevitable for some time.

"Out of the 50 pictures that will make up our program for the season of 1926-1927," he said, "there will be from 15 to 20 specials—and by specials I don't mean merely high grade program releases but genuine specials, pictures of the calibre of 'The Big Parade,'

AN EDITOR

The Week in Review

King Vidor, John Gilbert and Irving Thalberg of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer arrive in New York City.

'The Merry Widow' and the like. Each of our stars will have at least two such specials, and these pictures will all be made with every resource we can put back of them."

That confirms our own belief, which we have stated here from time to time, that the picture of the future must and will be the picture with a theme, the picture with planning and thought back of it. "Just a picture" is no longer enough.

Thalberg himself is the best answer to those who have marveled at the consistent entertainment and character in the output of M-G-M the past year. Only 26 years of age, he has the enthusiasm of youth, a tremendous faith in the possibilities of the screen, a keen mind and a rare balance of artistry and showmanship. He is in New York for a brief conference with Nicholas Schenck and "Bob" Rubin regarding the new schedule.

Among the specials which he listed for the 1926-27 group were: "La Boheme," which Vidor just completed with Lillian Gish; "Mare Nostrum," which Rex Ingram produced at Nice, France; "The Magician," which he will next make; "Romance," a picturization, probably in color, of Joseph Conrad's unforgettable story; "A Message to Garcia," based on Elbert Hubbard's world know essay, and for which research has been going on for three years; "The Trail of '98," based on the Robert W. Service story; "Old Heidelberg," two Sabatini stories, "The Strolling Saint" and "Gates of Doom," "The Understanding Heart," a new story by Peter B. Kyne which began in this month's Cosmopolitan magazine; an elaborate version of "The Red Mill" with Marion Davies; a refilming of "Polly of the Circus" with Norma Shearer, to be an "epic of the circus," developed up as no other circus picture has been; and many others, some of which are not yet far enough along for announcement.

Thalberg is a warm advocate of the original screen story, though he does not recommend this as a general policy for all companies as yet.

ON BROADWAY

By William A. Johnston

King Vidor, who accompanied Thalberg to New York, and who will probably be here for the opening of "La Boheme," has many interesting stories to tell of the making of that picture and "The Big Parade." Particularly significant was the enthusiasm among the cast and staff as he described the making of the latter picture. Most of the great pictures—perhaps all—seem to have come about in that way. A story that fires the players with optimism and stirs their imaginations, the big theme that grows and expands as the weeks go on—and presently another picture that will stir the nation has been born.

FOX is going right ahead with big plans of which there have been ample indications in the past few months. This week Jimmy Grainger announced a record deal—the climax of six months of negotiations. He has signed the important Hoblitzelle Circuit, controlling key runs to the Southwest, to a five year contract for the entire Fox product. If this doesn't set a new mark, then we don't know what would.

This gives Fox first-runs in the first-class Hoblitzelle houses in Dallas, Fort Worth, San Antonio, a decided move in the battle for key outlets and changes in the theatre map; and its significance will be at once apparent to those who are closely following the situation.

Also, it is another proof of the top speed at which the Fox sales force, under Mr. Grainger's very able direction, are functioning. With W. R. Sheehan speeding up and developing the production side of the company, and Jimmy Grainger putting over such deals as the with Hoblitzelle, the Fox organization is in a very happy position indeed.

TALKING with Joe Brandt about the independent field, past, present and future. Joe is a pioneer and a practical one. Probably no man knows the exhibitor and exchange field better than he, because he gets his knowledge constantly by contact. He's always afield, in fact. He believes in action, not talk. Says there's too much of the latter.

Answering the eternal question of "What's wrong with the State Rights field?" he says:

"Start off by eliminating the word 'State Rights.' Bury it and forget it. There's no more State Rights.

"What you have today is a coterie of independent producers. Just a few of them are good producers and to be relied upon to deliver just what they say they will—in quantity, and a good level of quality. Those producers know their market, are experienced in production, and are well and carefully financed.

"They deal through a number of independent exchanges—the best. Here, again, there are comparatively few well founded, experienced and successful exchanges. And these—not the fly-by-nighters—deserve the exhibitor's support.

"The independent exchange is still the best way of marketing films—as it was in the early days of Metro and before that with the Sales Company regime. But they should be co-operative and have some kind of a national organization and strength."

It is the intention of Columbia—and Joe Brandt and Jack Cohn are bending their best energies to it—to bring their exchanges into a co-operative franchise regime, with the important objective in view of federating them into a compact national system—perhaps within the year.

WITH "Nell Gwyn," made in England, "Mare Nostrum," made at Nice—each picture featuring but one American player; with Hollywood the home of directors, actors and writers from England, Sweden, Germany, France, Australia, Mexico, the Balkans, Russia, Italy—and where not; with books in use from every country in the world—it does look like the International film was at last arriving.

GREAT NECK, Mamaroneck and Rye are becoming the popular try-out towns. At Irving Lesser's Playhouse, Great Neck, "Partners Again" and "Nell Gwyn" have recently been shown.

"Partners Again," production by Henry King, is pronounced by all to be the best of Samuel Goldwyn's three Potash and Perlmutter pictures. The Great Neck audience roared its appreciation of the automobile sequence in the early part of the picture.

"Nell Gwyn" has had lots of plaudits, and does not need ours. We are glad that Famous Players has taken this British production, pleased at J. D. Williams' success; and Herbert Wilcox, the producer, certainly deserves a lot of commendation for this well directed, well acted picture.

THE Capitol Theatre of Chicago has just recently completed its first year of operation; and the result is most interesting.

I heard of this theatre last winter, while in Chicago. It was built "way out on the prairie," or, as others expressed it, "out in the woods"—at 79th Street and Halsted. It was considered a foolhardy enterprise, to put 3,000 seats and nearly two millions in such a location. Some laughed at it.

Then it opened. The interior was beautiful—the novel and alluring effect of the open sky. And the crowds began coming—as they will to beautiful theatres. The architect means a lot, in the theatre business. The architect in this case was John Ellerson.

The orchestra was good, the presentation good, the pictures good; and the crowds kept coming. And so, after a year of operation, the theatre shows a fine profit—so good that the owners are building and planning other theatres.

Speaking Editorially

THE big news of the week is the ratification of the new Standard Exhibition Contract by Mr. Hays and exhibitor leaders from all parts of the country. Both sides declare it a great improvement—not perfect, of course, but a distinct step forward.

This is constructive work. It demonstrates, among other things, what can happen when men meet each other sincerely around a table—a situation that almost invariably results in the end of talk and the beginning of action.

In this case, action was not only begun; it was carried through to a definite conclusion. The best indication that something real was accomplished is shown in the statements by exhibitor leaders. Without exception, they are pleased.

THE machinery has been created for still further progress by the appointment of an Advisory Committee, composed of Messrs. Woodhull, O'Reilly, Steffes and E. V. Richards—a selection of exhibitor leaders who represent diverse interests and groups. This committee is to go ahead and, in consultation with Mr. Hays and his associates, work for continuing improvement.

In addition, an Advisory Commission, consisting of Henry W. Taft and Judge Moses H. Grossman, will act as arbitrators in case the exhibitors and the Hays group are unable to agree on further changes in the contract.

A DETAILED statement of the changes now agreed upon appears elsewhere in this issue. They should be read carefully by every exhibitor because the new contract will go into effect as soon as copies can be printed and sent to distributors.

ALL the people who participated in the ratification conference deserve praise for their achievement, which comes after two and a half years of argument.

The M. P. T. O. A., for the first time, officially accepts the contract—and this, in itself, is an important development. Those familiar with the situation know of the earnest and untiring efforts on contract and arbitration matters made by Joe Seider, the M. P. T. O. A. Business Manager. He has carried the burden and should now, we think, feel that it has been very much worth while.

Director Robert Kerr and company shooting "A Trip to Chinatown" for Fox Films. Harry Woods is seated at the extreme left. Anna May Wong is holding the megaphone. Robert Kerr, Earle Fox, Marie Astaré and Wilson Bengé may also be seen.

In common with many others in the industry, we hope, also, that the conference on the contract, at which gathered exhibitor leaders of several groups, may pave the way to exhibitor harmony all along the line. Let's see a strong, unified national organization. We have the proof that when exhibitors set their minds to it, constructive results of the greatest importance will follow.

ASPECIAL article in this issue by Edwin Schallert points out how recent studio expansion in Hollywood presages stabilization and improvement in pictures. This is an interesting angle—not hitherto presented. There is every promise that future product is going to be far better, on the average, than ever before.

Mr. Schallert shows how additions to studio equipment are keeping pace with, or have been the forerunners of, gain in screen quality.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

ONCE again the Naked Truth Dinner given by the A. M. P. A. has come and gone. One thousand and one persons fortunate enough to obtain tickets (some four hundred others were not) foregathered at the Astor hotel, New York City, last Saturday night and made merry until came the dawn.

The entertainment was happily shortened, and the only features that interrupted the drinking and dancing were the annual newsreel (always a subject to look forward to and better than ever this year) and the introduction of celebrities by Nat G. Rothstein, master of ceremonies.

A national flavor was given the event this year by the presence of a host of out-of-town exhibitors, including the theatre leaders in New York for the contract conference with Will H. Hays.

Two orchestras provided music for the thousand and one dancers, and the affair broke up at a late hour, voted one of the most successful of the long series.

FROM now forth, Truckee, Calif., has but one cinema idol—Pola Negri. The Polish star went to that city on location recently for scenes in "The Crown of Lies," and the natives expected a temperamental and tempestuous lady who would "high hat" them all.

Not so. From now on Pola is "Truckee's Own." Half the citizens of the town were pressed into service as atmosphere, and Pola ate stew with them and took part in their winter sports like one to the manner born.

Advance stills for the Fox Films version of "Sandy," made in advance of production to serve as illustrations in newspapers featuring the Elenore Meheran story at the present time.

"SANDY" ADVANCE STILL
 SOMETHING of a departure in motion picture practice is represented by the advance stills on "Sandy," three of which are reproduced here. The story has just gone into production by Fox Films, but the fiction version is now running in newspapers throughout the country and it was desirable to have publicity stills of the important incidents in advance of making the picture. So Harry Beaumont, the director, had the leading players pose the punch scenes before the still camera in advance of starting production. He went over the script with them and planned the stills just as carefully as scenes. Madge Bellamy, Leslie Fenton, Gloria Hope, Harrison Ford and Bardson Bard took part.

The finished photos, which are strikingly dramatic, have been sent to the 100 newspapers carrying the Elenore Meheran story to be used as illustrations.

Meanwhile, the "Sandy" company has gone to a magnificent Italian villa in Santa Barbara to film exteriors for the picture. Carmel, a famous California artists' colony, has also been used as a background for many remarkable scenes.

FELIX EN TOUR
 ELSEWHERE on this page we are reproducing a group of snapshots portraying highlights in the recent globe-trotting tour undertaken by Pat Sullivan, creator of Felix, the Cat, and Mrs. Sullivan. Wherever Sullivan went, he found Felix already on the job, adding to the mirth of nations.

In England, where Felix is little short of a national idol, Sullivan sat through a performance of "Trips Through Teyland" at the Marble Arch Pavilion, one of London's finest. While in the United Kingdom the delineator of Felix was entertained not only by Ideal Films, Ltd., his distributors, but by Tom Webster, John Hassall,

Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan greeted by Hawaii in Honolulu harbor. 3. Felix takes a ride in a Port Said taxi. 4. Dropping off a keg of Xmas cheer for the wireless operators at Cocos Island, including a drawing of Felix. 5. Buddhist temple, Colombo, Ceylon, with the Sullivans at the foot. 6. "Vive la France!" R. A., and G. E. Studdy, who draws the "Bonzo" cartoons—all leading artists.

Sydney, Australia, is Sullivan's home town, and he was greeted there by Hugh D. McIntosh, Tom Mutch, minister of education, his father and brother—and a brass band. His presence in the Antipodean region resulted in a marked stimulation of interest in Felix, both in film and newspaper form.

On the island of Hilo, Hawaii, Sullivan found a Felix film running in a small native theatre, run by a Japanese, which uses a calcium light in the absence of electricity.

Aboard the S. S. Narkunda, a Felix sketch was raffled and then auctioned for charity, bringing in a total sum of 53 pounds, 10 shillings, or about $250.

Passing Cocos island at Christmas time, a keg of fruit, candy and presents was dropped overboard for the wireless operators stationed on that lonely spot, visited by ships but twice a year. Before it was cast overboard, Sullivan tacked a sketch of Felix on one end. A radiogram received later from the operators read: "Thanks for the presents and the picture of Felix. It's in good condition and we have hung it already." Even in that barren and distant spot, Felix was immediately recognized and accorded a place of honor.

Charley Chase, Pathe comedian (right), arriving in New York for a visit accompanied by Leo McCarey, director, is met at Grand Central station by W. B. Frank, Eastern manager for Hal Roach (left). Chase will remain for a month or so.

GREAT colorful strides forward have been made in the practical application of color to the screen, and no better illustration may be given of what that means to the screen than the reception accorded two Hope Hampton subjects in color released by Educational, "Parisian Modes in Color" and "Marionettes."

W. Ward Marsh, the well and favorably known critic of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, said recently, in part:

"I have seen 'Parisian Modes in Color' and also another short picture called 'Marionettes,' featuring Miss Hampton and done entirely in color. 'Parisian Modes' is sponsored by McCall's magazine . . . It should prove a delight to the feminine eye. It is what may be called the last word in a fashion revue . . . It is released by Educational. For that matter, so is 'Marionettes.' This short subject, exquisitely colored, deals with the well known affair between Pierrot and Columbine, with Miss Hampton appearing as Columbine. Her lighter colorings lend themselves particularly well to this kind of photography, and . . . interest was held by the beauty in the settings and the costumes."

It should also be remarked that "The Black Pirate" promises to bring us another advance in color technique. Albert Parker, the director of this Fairbanks vehicle, states that a method has been developed of producing a brown undertone beneath the brighter colors, giving an "antique," mahogany tone to the picture, softening and enriching the chromatic hues.

WELCOMING HAYAKAWA

SESSUE HAYAKAWA, the Japanese actor, who has been abroad for some years, opened in a new play, "The Love City," the other night in New York. The audience looked like a cross-section of the film colony. Among those at the premiere were: Mae Murray, Nazimova, William Farnum, Thomas Meighan, James Kirkwood and Lila Lee, Norma Shearer, Hope Hampton, Ben Lyon, May Allison, May McAvoy, Marie Prevost, Johnny Hines, Aileen Pringle, Lois Wilson, John Emerson and Anita Loos, Jesse L. Lasky, Adolph Zukor, Mrs. Marcus Loew, and Hiram Abrams. Valentino and Pauline Frederick attended the play later in the week, and others are dropping in nightly. Many of Hayakawa's pictures are still well remembered for the artistry and finesse which his performances invariably showed.

*SEA HORSES

ONLY one asterisk popped out of the hat in obedience to the magic wand of the National Board of Review. The solitary merit mark went to Paramount's "Sea Horses," a romance of the South Seas.

Will H. Hays and Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, who occupy rather similar positions in the motion picture and baseball world, were interested visitors at Universal City not so long ago; left to right: Reginald Denny, Judge Landis, Marian Nixon, Will Hays, Henry McRae and William Seiter.

First contract signed for film service for the new Roxy theatre building in New York; left, James R. Grainger of Fox, right, S. L. Rothafel, signing up for Fox News.

The Hal Roach rascals appearing in the "Our Gang" comedies for Pathe release bring a valentine for Little Mary, the sweetheart of the gang.

June Mathis, who has signed to produce for First National, and Balboni, the director, greeted on their arrival in New York by Florence Strauss, Eastern scenario editor.

Ruth Taylor of the beauty brigade appearing in Mack Sennett comedies for Pathe release, makes a charming and delightful Valentine.

O "THREE FACES EAST" TRIUMPHS

ONE of the most critical audiences that could have been assembled was brought together on the evening of February 3rd at the Hotel Plaza, New York City—and acclaimed "Three Faces East" as a masterpiece of photodramatic art in no uncertain terms.

The occasion was the annual carnival of the Film Mutual Benefit Bureau, sponsored by prominent society leaders, and the audience embraced members prominent in the social, financial and industrial worlds, as well as leading persons in the film industry.

"Three Faces East" was given a genuine ovation, and made an impression such as pictures rarely achieve. Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld provided it with a musical setting which contributed in no small matter to the effect created by the picture.

Following the screening 26 society debutantes appeared in impersonations of screen stars. First prize was awarded Jane Kirkland impersonating Jetta Goudal in "Three Faces East," and second prize went to Nancy Glave as Syd Chaplin in "Charley's Aunt."

FOX AIDS CRIPPLES

ONE of the most unusual and inspiring pictures of true bravery ever filmed has been made by Fox Films for the Institute for Crippled and Disabled Men, under the title "Thumbs Up," and was given its premiere on February 3d at the home of Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James in New York. This organization was founded in 1917 by the Red Cross for the purpose of aiding cripples by teaching them trades, furnishing them with artificial limbs and finding them employment, and is supported by voluntary contributions.

"Thumbs Up" shows all the work done by the Institute from the time a cripple enters until he leaves to take a job. The star is William Collins, a former railroad conductor who lost both legs in an accident and was helpless for 10 years. The Institute furnished him with two artificial limbs and taught him motion picture operating.

OFF FOR SUNNY CLIMES

C. GRAHAM BAKER, one of our best scenarists, departed on Friday for California, stopping off, en route, for the New Orleans Mardi Gras. Ostensibly he is on a vacation, but he has already received offers from two large companies, and it is not unlikely that New York's loss will be Hollywood's gain for at least a year.

THE YOUNG VISITER

DOROTHY GISH will leave shortly for Hollywood to visit her sister Lillian before sailing for England to make three pictures for Herbert Wilcox, successors to "Nell Gwynn." She will find Lillian at work on one of her most interesting vehicles—"The Scarlet Letter" under the direction of Seastrom.

Anita Garvin, a member of the stock company at the Educational-Comedy studios, poses as a Japanese Valentine in the latest thing in kimonos.

Margaret Quimby, the Universal player, in a picturesque Valentine pose apparently representing a broken heart, or something of the sort.

Sue O'Neil, one of the decorative players in Hal Roach comedies for Pathe, in a big-hearted pose apropos of St. Valentine's Day.

New Contract O. K'd by Hays and Exhibitor Leaders

Hailed As Step Forward; Effective at Once

THE long-awaited new Standard Exhibition Contract was agreed upon at a luncheon Saturday, February 6, given by Will H. Hays, and attended by officials of important exhibitor organizations throughout the country.

The new document, which was hailed by all parties concerned as a forward step, goes into effect at once, it was announced, and will be fully operative by March 1.

The exhibitor leaders in attendance were:

R. F. Woodhull, Dover, N. J., President, Joseph M. Seider, New York City, business Manager, and A. Julian Brylawski, Washington, D. C., Chairman of the Administrative Committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America; Charles L. O'Reilly, New York City, President of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce; W. A. Steffes, Minneapolis, Minn., President, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Minnesota; H. M. Riehey, Detroit, Mich., General Manager, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan; R. R. Biechele, Kansas City, Mo., President, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Kansas and Missouri; Frank Rembusch, Indianapolis, Indiana, President, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Indiana; Jules Michael, Buffalo, N. Y., President, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State, Buffalo-Albany Zone; H. A. Cole, Marshall, Texas, President, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Texas.

At the same time arrangements were made for the further consideration of the matter with an Advisory Committee, aided by an Advisory Commission if necessary.

The following signed statement was issued by those participating in the conference:

"The undersigned have today approved a new Standard Exhibition Contract. This contract shall be put into use immediately. Concurrent with this approval an arrangement has been effected for the appointment of an Advisory Committee to consult with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America relative to still further improving the contract, if possible. This Advisory Committee consists of the following: Charles L. O'Reilly, R. F. Woodhull, W. A. Steffes, and E. V. Richards.

"In addition there has been designated an Advisory Commission consisting of Hon. Henry W. Taft and Judge Moses H. Grossman, who shall be jointly consulted by the Advisory Committee and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America in the event such Advisory Committee and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America are unable to agree on any further changes which may be decided advisable.

"The contract agreed upon today is mutual and contains many substantial improvements. It is our purpose sympathetically to interpret its provisions, to carry it out and to aid in efforts to improve it."

Commenting on the new Standard Exhibition Contract, Joseph M. Seider, Business Manager of the M. P. T. O. A., said:

"The new contract is a good contract. It does not lack mutuality. Although there are clauses that favor the distributors which we could not induce the distributors to waive, yet there are an equal number of clauses that favor the exhibitor.

"I sincerely hope that the contract will be given a fair trial and that its terms will be carried out earnestly and honestly by both distributors and exhibitors; and that neither of them will become too technical in the interpretation of the clauses."

At the request of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, Mr. Seider made the following analysis of the changes and additions to the contract:

"The new contract that will be used by practically all distributors and theatre owners consists of twenty-four clauses. The name of this contract has been changed from Uniform Exhibition Contract to the Standard Exhibition Contract.

"An important elimination from the old form contract is the consideration clause. This clause provided for the payment of a deposit as a consideration of the contract. Through this elimination deposits have been practically abolished.

"The clauses of the new contract without any change are as follows:

"Third Clause—Time and Place of Exhibition.

"Fourth Clause—Payment of Fixed Sums.

"Seventh Clause—Protection and Run.

"Thirteenth Clause—Assignment and Sale of Theatre.

"Nineteenth Clause—Waiver.

"Twentieth Clause—Arbitration.

"Twenty-first Clause—Representations.

"Clause 1—Warranty as to Form.—This clause guarantees that the contract is in every respect a Standard Exhibition Contract that has been agreed upon with the exception of any specific guarantees that may be mutually added but these exceptions must be noted in a blank provided in the warranty. This will serve a double purpose,—first, the theatre owner need not read through the entire contract, but simply by reading this clause he can tell at a glance whether there have been any clauses added. Because of this warranty, no clause in the Standard Exhibition contract can be deleted by any distributor.

"Clause 15—Warranty as to Advertising.—This clause provides for a warranty by the distributor that the photoplays do not contain any advertising for which he is compensated.

"Clause Second.—This clause has been greatly simplified and it now provides that the pictures contracted for must be delivered and played within one year. The year to commence from the first date of showing of the first picture contracted for.

"Clause Fifth—Percentage Bookings.—This clause has been changed to provide that where a picture is played on a percentage basis the distributor shall have access for a period of sixty days to the box office records and books relating to the receipts during the run of the picture played on percentage. It also provides for daily settlement during the percentage run. I have before me a galley proof of the contract form furnished by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., and find two provisions in this relation, although agreed upon, not included. These provisions are, that where an exhibitor fails to lift or play a percentage picture the amount of damage sustained by the distributor by reason thereof shall be determined by the Arbitration Board and, two, where the distributor fails to deliver a picture under the contract providing for percentage payment the exhibitor shall be entitled to damage determined in a like manner. I believe that these two provisions have been left out through error.

"Clause Sixth—Payment on Account.—Through no space being provided in this clause for the amount of deposit, it practically makes the practice of demanding deposits inoperative.

"Good Contract," Says Seider, of Changes

"Clause Eighth—Delivery of Prints.—This clause is unchanged, in fact has been rewritten so that its meaning is clear.

"Clause Ninth—Selection or Designations of Play Dates.—This clause affects only second or subsequent run theatres. First run theatres are exempted.

"Where a photoplay is available on February 1st, notice of availability must be given to the exhibitor not later than January 15th. Within fourteen days after the mailing of the notice the exhibitor shall select the date or dates within the period February 1st to March 1st. If the dates so selected are not available and other dates within the period February 1st and March 1st are available the exhibitor shall select one of them. If he fails to do so, the distributor may, by giving two weeks' notice, specify the dates on which the exhibitor shall play the photoplay provided this date shall not be more than two weeks earlier or six weeks later than the first date requested by the exhibitor. If no other dates in the period from February 1st to March 1st are available the exhibitor shall, by written notice, designate the dates within the period of February 15th and April 15th. If the exhibitor fails to do so the distributor shall designate the dates within the same period giving the exhibitor two weeks' notice. If the exhibitor fails to make a selection of play-date within fourteen days after the mailing of notice of availability the distributor may at any time thereafter designate the date (not prior to the initial date of availability) by giving the exhibitor two weeks' notice. If the run prior to the contract holder had exhibited the photoplay and the contract holder fails to designate his play dates, thereby holding up subsequent runs, the distributor must designate the play date within the period of forty-five days commencing with February 1, the date of availability in this example. In such event the exhibitor loses his protection.

"Provisions (e) and (f) of this same clause are exchanged from the old contract.

"This availability clause provides particularly for two improvements, first, it brings to the second and subsequent theatre owners the opportunity to play photoplays nearer to the run of the first run theatre. He thereby benefits through the publicity given the photoplay by the first run, and eliminates the tendency of overbuying because of an inability to obtain play dates under the old availability clause. Secondly; when a distributor sends a notice of availability he must be in a position to furnish the play dates within the period embraced in the notice.

"Clause Ten—Return of Prints.—This clause has been changed so that where an Important Changes Made in Arbitration Rules

THE Arbitration Clause in the contract has not been changed but the rules have been amended to provide as follows:

1. The number of arbitrators has been reduced from three to two for each side. Each side will have two peremptory challenges in addition to challenges for cause.

2. Either side has the right to an adjournment to the succeeding meeting upon notice to the secretary.

3. If an exhibitor appears to answer the complaint of a distributor, and the distributor loses, the board may include in its award the cost of transportation to the exhibitor and ten dollars for his other expenses.

4. The secretary of the Arbitration Board shall furnish the local exhibitor organizations with a calendar of cases.

exhibitor is damaged by reason of the failure of the exhibitor who holds a prior run to return the print, the exhibitor damaged will have a right to bring arbitration proceedings against the exhibitor who failed to return the print.

"Clause Eleven—Loss and Damage to Prints.—The price of prints lost, etc., has been reduced from 6c. to 4c. per linear foot. In the case of color prints the laboratory cost shall be paid. If a print is returned within sixty days the refund will be made. The sixty-day period has been increased from a thirty-day period.

"Clause Twelfth—Titles of Photoplays—Reissues.—The much debated question of charge of title has been clarified. The distributor has the right to change the title if the story or stars are not changed.

"Clause Fourteenth—Exhibition and Advertising.—The first and second part of this clause is the same as the old contract. A provision has been added which prevents a theatre other than the first house from advertising a photoplay until its run had been completed in the first run house.

"Clause Sixteenth—Taxes.—Much time and argument was spent on this clause. The clause now provides that where a tax is levied and the amount to be paid by the exhibitor is indefinite, the amount will be determined by the President of the Arbitration Society of America. This is a form of arbitration wherein the arbitrator is named in advance.

"Clause Seventeenth—Minimum Admission Charge.—This clause is the same as in the old contract excepting the words 'ten cents' are written in. This is in order that free shows will be eliminated.

"Clause Eighteenth—Delay in or Prevention of Performance.—This clause provides for certain exhibitors in the event of inability to perform by both the exhibitor and the distributor. While this clause is not as equitable as I would like it to be, yet for the first time the exhibitor is exempted from playing pictures if his inability is over a period of three months. This means that if the exhibitor's theatre burned down and he reopens after 5 months, he will not be compelled to play the old pictures on the contract but can get out and purchase new pictures and enjoy the benefit thereof.

"Clause Twenty-Second—Acceptance of Application.—This clause has been changed to provide that the contracts must be accepted without alteration. This will make it impossible for distributors to do as they have done in the past, hold contracts for a period of time and then return them with pictures stricken out. The time of acceptance has been reduced.

A better description is provided for in this schedule such as the space for the title of the photoplay, the star, director or author, also the space in the schedule for the protection period and the run.

"In the Cancellation Clause, what I still maintain was a joker has been eliminated. In the old contract the provision was that you could only cancel after the playing of the second photoplay, not after the playing of the third and fourth or fifth, but only after the second. The clause now provides for the cancellation, at any time after the playing of the second photoplay.

"Changes in the arbitration rules are given in a box elsewhere."

New York Theatre Concern Plans Expansion

Thomas J. Buckley, head of the Buckley Engineering Company and President of Filmland Players, Inc., operating the Filmland Theatre in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn, has recently announced plans for a proposed circuit of theatres in Brooklyn and Long Island. A new amusement corporation will be formed with Mr. Buckley as President and the other officers will be made up of prominent local business men. They will open the Bellburton Theatre, now under construction at Bayside, L. I., in the near future and another theatre site at Garrison Beach, has recently been purchased.

Fred Dollinger, who is at present manager of The Filmland Theatre will be the managing director of the new circuit. Dollinger claims that his associates have at least ten new theatre sites lined up in Brooklyn and on Long Island and that actual construction will begin in about a month's time as it is desired to have four of the new houses open by September 1926.

Motion Picture Companies Organized in N. Y.

Motion picture companies chartered during the past week by the secretary of state, and entering the business in New York state, included the following: Winkler Film Corporation, capitalization not stated, with Margaret J. Winkler, Charles B. and Nathan L. Mintz, New York city; Gromor Amusement Corporation, $100,000, H. R. and William Grossman, New York city, H. H. Frieder, Jersey City; Mechanicville State Theatre, $60,000, William E. Benton, Frank P. Williams, Irene D. Benton, Saratoga Springs.

Frank Rembusch Calls Off Conference

BECAUSE of the agreement between the Hays organization, the M. P. T. O. A. and allied group, over the standard exhibition contract, Frank Rembusch has decided to call off his conference called for French Lick to discuss the matter. The Indiana M. P. T. O., however, will meet there as scheduled on February 23rd.

New Stabilizing of Activity in Deal for Studios

Results Expected to Show in Products of Companies

By Edwin Schallert

EDITOR'S NOTE.—Mr. Schallert, who is editor of the Los Angeles Times Pre-View, writes exclusively for MOTION PICTURE NEWS in the trade field.

RESHAPING of the motion picture industry for a big new drive is now in progress. It can be safely predicted that the spring and summer will see an era of activity far surpassing that of any previous season. Far from feeling any reaction from the extra effort put forward during the past year in the making of big productions, or the superabundant flood of features, everything appears to tend toward a more prosperous and busier outlook.

The principal readjustment at present is in the building up of the physical resources of the industry to meet the increased and intensified demands of picture-making. Studio expansions and changes are the most striking right now, and will have a far-reaching influence for the better.

The most notable improvement will be in the nature of a stabilizing process. Providing permanent homes for their activities has long been a serious problem with the major organizations. The fact that they have been cramped for room has been a handicap in certain cases. The cost of maintaining quarters on property that has accumulated values out of proportion to its utility, has been regarded as something of a detriment, although this is reason much less important than the prominence given it in various announcements would indicate.

However, these causes all enter into the move recently made by Famous Players-

Loew to Build Three Houses in Texas

MARCUS LOEW announces three new theatres to be built in Texas, the first to be started in Houston and others to follow at Dallas and San Antonio. The deal for the Houston property was closed by Jesse Jones, of Houston, representing the Houston Properties Corporation and E. A. Schiller, representing Marcus Loew. The plans, drawn by architect H. C. Finn of Houston, call for a theatre with a seating capacity of approximately 3,000 and a ten story office building.

The theatres planned for Dallas and San Antonio will be constructed along the same lines. When completed the three will be added to the southern and southwestern link of the Loew chain of theatres, now extended throughout the United States, Canada, France, England and Egypt.

Lasky in purchasing the United Studios. The acquisition of that plant at a reputed cost of $1,250,000 is a good business move. The studio is superior in its equipment and modern, and its location is at present not too close to the business district of Hollywood, as was the Vine Street property. At the same time it is very centrally situated.

First National has pioneered into a new field with the purchase of their property at $1,500,000. The only company working in their immediate vicinity will be Universal, except, of course, that the Lasky ranch is in this same general locality. The region which they have selected for their $1,500,000 investment is especially fortunate in the matter of sunlight, and freedom from fogs and mists, as it is pretty well inland. In the future, it is believed that other studios will be built in this section.

In line with this progress the prospects are for other companies to increase their holdings. Metropolitan Studios have already done so, with the purchase of more acreage, this deal not having been officially announced at this writing. Metropolitan already has four stages and is to build another. They will have room for several more on a newly acquired adjoining property.

United Artists will spend $2,500,000 on studio additions. During the absence of Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, the Joseph Schenck units will occupy the Pickford-Fairbanks plant.

The Lasky studio on Vine Street is, of course, to be disposed of, and that eliminates one of the present aggregation of film plants. Its place will, however, be more than taken by the construction of the new First National studio, which will exceed it greatly in size. First National acquires sixty-four acres of ground by virtue of their deal, whereas the Famous Players studio occupies only ten at their plant on Vine Street.

The acreage of the various studios represented at present is given as follows: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, fifty-three acres; United Studios, now under control of Famous Players-Lasky, twenty-six; Warner Brothers, including the old Vitagraph plant, thirty-five; Cecil De Mille, fifteen; Pickford-Fairbanks, eighteen; Fox, fourteen, exclusive of their large new Westwood property; Metropolitan fifty-one, including a holding in Westwood, purchased some time ago by the Christies, used for exteriors. At the Hollywood studio of the company, space is, of course, rented by Harold Lloyd and Corinne Griffith, both of whom are identified with other organizations.

The Universal studio comprises six hundred acres, which is greater than that of any of the others superficially considered. However, this includes the "back ranch," so-called, at the U.

Famous Players-Lasky and Fox possess additional acreage, which is used for location, that they control respectively by lease and ownership. Fox has long been using its Westwood property for exteriors and construction of a permanent nature is going on. The Lasky ranch comprises one thousand acres and the lease has some little time to run yet.

Stages of the various principal companies are listed as follows: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, twelve; United, seven; Warner Brothers, eight; Universal eight; Fox, six, and the others ranging from one or two up to four and five. The actual number of stages is no criterion to the square footage occupied by the stages, as Universal reckons their floor space twelve acres (approximately 450,000 square feet) whereas the acreage of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer stages is approximately six acres or 225,000 square feet.

By their purchase of the United Studios, the Lasky organization, while only increasing their number of stages by one, nearly double their floor space. Most modern stages are being built on a large scale, and the plans of Famous include a considerable addition when they occupy their new property.

Coal Belt Exhibitors Get Reduction

THE anthracite coal strike, which is now in its sixth month, is causing a still further curtailment of motion picture operations in the coal belt. Most of the large distributing companies with exchanges in Philadelphia are allowing exhibitors in the coal region a 25% reduction on their original contracts, due to the fact that business is suffering so severely from the protracted idleness of the miners. The Comerford Amusement Co. has either closed or curtailed shows in 28 theatres. To help relieve the hunger of families of striking coal miners in the Minersville district, Manager Charles Kear, of the Opera House, a motion picture theatre, put on a show at which the price of admittance for adults was a can of vegetables or soup, and for children, three potatoes. The townsfolk patronized the matinee liberally and the foodstuffs were given to the strikers' families.

Marie Prevost's Mother Killed in Auto Crash

MRS. H. PREVOST, mother of Marie Prevost, Warner film star, was killed in an automobile accident which occurred near Lordsburg, New Mexico, on the evening of February 5th and Al Christie and Vera Stedman, who were in the car, received minor injuries.

The accident occurred when the car, a heavy machine owned by Miss Stedman, overturned while traveling about thirty miles an hour. Mrs. Prevost suffered a broken spine and a fractured skull, dying before medical aid could be summoned. Christie and Miss Stedman sustained bruises and lacerations about the head and arms and were taken to a hospital near Lordsburg.

Christie has been taken to his home in Hollywood where he is convalescing rapidly but Miss Stedman is suffering from shock. The party was bound for Palm Beach, Fla., where Mrs. Prevost was to have been joined by her daughter.

Police Chief Goes Reformers One Better by Banning All Sunday Amusements

THE Kansas City territory's annual wave of blue laws appear to have begun. Although the proposals thus far are too ridiculous to cause serious consideration, exhibitors are not sleeping on the job. What is conceded to be the most radical example in Kansas history has been clamped down on Emporia, Kas., a town of 25,000 people.

Last week members of the Ministerial Association and representatives of various women's clubs went to Chief of Police LeRoy Hurt and wailed long and loud about enforcing the Sunday law pertaining to pool halls. The pool halls were closed. Then came the Chief's inning.

"The ministers and women have insisted that all laws be strictly enforced," said Chief Hurt. "They have declared that since we have taken oaths to see that the laws are obeyed it is up to us officers to enforce the anti-pool hall law. Well, we are going to go them one better. We are going to enforce all Sunday laws, regardless of how old they are, and that includes the playing of cards on the Sabbath, even if it is in one's own home." The chief intimated that his police would not hesitate to raid a private home, regardless of whose it was, if a card game was in progress on Sunday.

Sunday night bridge parties also will come under the ban. In other words, what appeared to be a laughing matter, may become ultra serious. But the biggest surprise comes from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where a former vaudeville star is out to make that city a "9 o'clock town."

Miss Effie Cherry, member of the Cherry Sisters Vaudeville team of many years ago, has tossed her bonnet into the political ring again, taking out nomination papers for mayor for the primary in March. She was defeated two years ago for the same office. Miss Cherry has announced that she favors a law to silence the moaning of the saxophone at 9 o'clock and a measure to have orchestras play "Home Sweet Home" at that hour. Among other planks on her platform are cleaner motion pictures and no swearing in public.

Bill Asks Theatre Supervision

Jersey Measure Would Place Amusements Under Tenement House Department

A BILL was introduced February 8th by Assemblyman Siracusa, Majority Leader, at the request of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey in the New Jersey Legislature providing for the supervision of theatres, carnivals and other amusements by the State Tenement House Department. This bill, it is hoped, will have the effect of eliminating unfair competition by the non-theatrical institutions with tax paying motion picture theatres.

This bill is in the nature of a code worked out by the State Tenement House Department and the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey, in compliance with the terms of Senate Bill 241 passed by last year's legislature.

Joseph M. Seider, President of the New Jersey unit of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America sets forth some interesting figures in this relation. There are at the present time in communities with a population under 10,000 in the State of New Jersey 195 theatres with a seating capacity of 185,807 and 65 halls with a seating capacity of 233,361. Thirteen of the 195 theatres are on the second floor, some of these with balconies. Twenty of the 65 halls are on the second floor and 3 on the third floor. Almost all of the 65 halls operate without fire-proof booths and without proper exits.

Fox Earnings Show Increase

Eleven Months Statement Shows $1,000,000 in Excess Over the Previous Year

THE Fox Film Corporation financial report for the eleven months period from December 27th, 1924, to November 28th, 1925, shows net profits of $2,527,241. This is equivalent to earnings of $5.05 a share on a combined 500,000 shares of Class A and B stock.

With certain deductions there was available for dividends a balance of $2,387,534. A total of $750,000 was distributed in the form of cash dividends during the period. The profit and loss surplus on November 28th, 1925, amounted to $12,404,438. Total assets amounted to $26,655,000.

The balance sheet showed current and working assets valued at $17,656,000, of which $4,268,000 was in cash and $500,000 in call loans. Inventories were carried at $8,554,000 and land, buildings and equipment at $7,862,000.

The net income compared with $1,515,000 for the same period in 1924. The increase is said to be due largely to the signing of contracts in the latter part of 1924 and running into last year, which increased gross business between 40 and 60 per cent, and resulted in a net income of $954,000 in September, October and November, 1925, compared with $437,000 in the corresponding period of 1924.

Missouri, Kansas Theatres in Consolidation

Dispatches from Sedalia, Mo., announce that a $500,000 merger involving twenty-five theatres in Missouri and Kansas has been consummated by the American Theatres Company with S. C. Carter of Nevada, Mo., and Lee Jones of Kansas City. Sedalia theatres involved are the Sedalia, Liberty and Strand.

Paramount Will Have Own Boston Exchange

Paramount is to own its own exchange building in Boston and with this in view, plans are under preparation for a modern structure on Berkeley street at the corner of Lawrence street, on the outskirts of Boston's Film Row.

The new building will probably be three stories high and is numbered 58-60-62 Berkeley street. It will be erected under the direction of the real estate department of the Paramount organization.

Richey in Conference With Chicago Exhib. Assoc.

General Manager H. M. Richey, of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, was in Chicago last week at the invitation of the Exhibitors Association of Chicago, and met with the nominating committee of that organization, which is conferring on plans for making the association a larger, stronger and better organization.

It is understood that the plans discussed include the state.

Eskimo Exhibitor Served by Famous-Lasky

William Kelly, manager of the Calgary, Alberta, branch of Famous-Lasky Film Service, Limited, is said to be the only film exchange official who regularly serves an Eskimo exhibitor. Manager Kelly ships films to this exhibitor in Northern Canada to a point 300 miles beyond the nearest railway, the prints being transported this distance by dog teams. This is the only Eskimo exhibitor on the continent, it is claimed.

West Penn. Owners Plan Convention Dates

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania have set the date for their sixth annual convention for April 19th and 20th in Pittsburgh. The following committee was appointed to arrange for convention headquarters: N. Friedberg, Harry Hayward, Nate Friedberg, William R. Wheat, M. Rosenbloom, M. B. Nadler and Fred J. Herrington.

News Reel Censorship Bill Due to Pass

IT is generally expected around the state capital at Albany, N. Y., that the bill introduced in both houses of the Legislature, eliminating news reels from censorship, will pass without any opposition. This belief is founded on the fact that the bill has been introduced by two prominent Republicans, and with both houses of the Legislature Republican in majority, it is only natural to assume that the bill will meet with favor.

Thus far no date has been set for any public hearing on the bill introduced two weeks ago, relating to admitting unaccompanied children between certain ages to motion picture theatres of New York state, outside of the metropolis.

The Hughes reorganization committee is scheduled to report to the Legislature about March 1, and according to a persistent rumor, the New York State Motion Picture Commission is scheduled to become a bureau in the Education Department.

Boston Financier Purchases F. B. O.

Joseph P. Kennedy Takes Over R-C Pictures Corporation, Film Booking Offices and Their Various Subsidiaries

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the consummation of negotiations whereby control of R-C Pictures Corporation and Film Booking Offices of America and their various subsidiaries is transferred by Lloyd's bank and the Grahams of London, England, to Joseph P. Kennedy, Boston financier. The Corporations involved are generally known in the motion picture industry as "F.B.O."

The arrangement under which the transfer is effected was concluded by Mr. Kennedy and Lord Inverforth, representing Lloyd's and Grahams, who came to New York from London with Major H. C. S. Thomson, president and managing director of the companies, a few weeks ago. Thomson, who is a member of Grahams, will continue as president and managing director and the executive and operating personnel will remain unchanged. W. W. Lancaster, representing Lloyd's in America, will continue as a director.

The policy of the companies will continue unchanged. A production policy for the season of 1926-27, similar to the policy of the past season, had been adopted before

Reformers' Bills Lose in Congress

MEASURES to regulate the proper observance of Sunday were introduced in Congress and in 28 of the 42 State legislatures which were in session during 1925, it is stated by the Religious Liberty Association, a Seventh Day Adventist organization which has been active in fighting such legislation, in a report just issued. A total of 69 bills were introduced, it is declared.

During the year, the report continues, some of the States repealed almost all of the Sunday law restrictions, while others liberalized existing statutes. "Not a single bill that was introduced by the Lord's Day Alliance or the National Reform Association to strengthen existing Sunday laws passed in any of the State legislatures."

"The year 1926 promises to be a very fruitful year for the introduction of compulsory Sunday observance bills," the public is warned.

the transfer of control and will be carried out.

The corporations included in the transaction are R-C Pictures Corporation, Film Booking Offices of America, Inc., Film Booking Offices of Canada, Ltd., and F.B.O. Studios, Inc.

In commenting upon the transfer of control, Major Thomson made the following statement: "Grahams and Lloyds have long felt that, because of the fact that their interests are almost entirely confined to England and that these companies represented virtually their only big business interest in America, the development of the companies could best be carried out under resident control. The progress of these companies has been most decided during the last twelve months, their operations are chiefly in the United States and American control was considered a progressive and sound business step."

Mr. Kennedy, the new owner, was formerly president of the Columbia Trust company of Boston, Mass. was formerly connected with the Bethlehem Shipbuilding company and with Hayden Stone & Company, bankers and brokers of Boston and New York and is a director and trustee of many important New England enterprises.

Twenty New Houses for West Coast

Will Expend $6,580,000 in Construction and Equipment in Adding to Present Chain; Other Theatre Expansion

AS an indication of theatre expansion and reconstruction throughout the country, West Coast Theatres, Inc., announces that at the present time, they are expending over $6,580,000 in construction and equipment, adding 30,700 seats in their present enormous buildings.

The West Coast chain, totaling 168 houses in California is the largest chain in that state, still this group of houses is constantly being added to. At present there are under construction or sites secured for twenty new theatres. Those include eight in Los Angeles, one in South Pasadena, one in Huntington Park, one in Wilmington, one in Long Beach, one each in San Jose, Fruitvale and Taft and two in Oakland.

A motion picture theatre in Portland, Me. to cost in the neighborhood of $700,000 is contemplated by Warner Brothers, according to reports current in Portland. Representatives of the company were in Portland for several days looking over property, particularly two properties on Congress street.

Costen of the Eastern Iowa Theatres Company visited the Premier office last week and announced that the Eastern Iowa Theatres Company is negotiating for the Gem Theatre at Oelwein as an addition to their chain. The Gem Theatre is owned by Ted Bryant who was also in Des Moines last week visiting the theatre exchanges.

The Ideal Theatre, Montrose, Pa., which has been operated by I. B. Thomas, has been taken over by the Comerford Amusement Co.

Purchase by interests allied with the Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, which operates many theatres in the hard coal mining regions of Pennsylvania, of the Hand Estate property at 518-528 Spruce street, in the central business district of Scranton, has revived reports that the corporation will erect a new picture theatre there. It is reported the same interests are seeking to acquire an adjoining property. The purchasers are M. E. Comerford, head of the corporation; E. C. Amerman and Charles Ball, all of Scranton. The plot faces 40 feet on Spruce street and is 150 feet deep.

By purchasing the Coliseum and Alexandria Theatres in the Richmond district, San Francisco, Samuel H. Levin began a new city-wide circuit of neighborhood theatres with a nucleus of seven important district houses. Levin acquired the Coliseum and Alexandria from Herbert L. Rothchild, who bought the two theatres last November.

The new "theatre family" to be known as Samul H. Levin theatres now comprises two theatres under construction—the New Balboa, 38th Ave. and Balboa street to be opened February 20th; the Harding, Devisadero and Hayes streets, to be completed April 15th; Metropolitan, built by Levin with the Daylight Block on Union street, between Buchanan and Webster streets in 1924; West Portal, opened recently at the western end of Twin Peaks tunnel; and the Balboa, in Westwood Park.

Ben Black, musical director at the Coliseum and Alexandria Theatres during the past two years, will be in charge of all musical and stage attractions, according to Levin.

Charlotte is to have two palatial new theatres to cost at least $1,500,000 before the end of the year, according to those having knowledge of the plans of the new theatre combine, the Publix Theatres corporation.

The lease of the Alhambra Theatre operated by the Publix subsidiary, expires December 31, it is said, and will not be renewed. By that time a new first run moving picture palace will have been built in Charlotte and the Alhambra will not be necessary to the company's plans, it is said. It is estimated that the new moving picture house will cost $500,000.

The exact location of the theatre appears not to have been definitely decided even by the company.

Revised estimates are understood to have boosted the cost of the new Keith house at Sixth and North Tryon streets, also a Publix enterprise, from $750,000 to well over $1,000,000, the extra quarter million to be invested in features not considered in the first estimate. Both theatres, it is stated definitely, will be in operation by the new year.

Minneapolis Will Stamp Out "Bicycling"

The Minneapolis arbitration board has issued a warning that "bicycling" will be stamped out in the district if criminal prosecution has to be used to do it.

W. A. Steffes, leader among Northwest exhibitors, declared the practice belonged to the dark ages of filmdom and that it was likely to cause heavy loss to an innocent theatre owner.

Brown Reorganizes F. B. O.'s Publicity and Advertising Department

COLVIN W. BROWN, Vice President of F. B. O., in charge of distribution, announces that in conformity with the company's enlarged scope of activities for the coming season, a reorganization of F. B. O.'s Advertising, Exploitation and Publicity departments has been deemed necessary.

Hyatt Daab, for five years Director of Studio Publicity for F. B. O. on the West Coast, will be placed in charge of Advertising and Exploitation at the New York office. Daab is one of the best-known and best-liked publicists in Hollywood, and is a veteran New York newspaper man. His elevation to the new post comes as a reward for faithful and efficient service. Daab will supervise the elaborate advertising and exploitation campaigns F. B. O. has planned for the coming season.

Edward McNamee, a newcomer to the organization, but recently in charge of Sales Promotion, will continue in his present berth, with the Publicity Department added to his responsibilities as well. McNamee, like Daab, is also an ex-newspaper man, and has served with Fox and First National since coming to films.

New Jersey and Washington Second,
Third in First National Sales Contest

ACCORDING to figures just compiled by the sales cabinet, Oklahoma City has been declared winner of the sales drive inaugurated by First National which extended over a period of eleven weeks terminating January 30. New Jersey and Washington won second and third places with only a fraction of a point separating them.

Oklahoma City jumped into the lead the opening week of the drive and held first place throughout. Right up to the closing day it was a toss-up between New Jersey and Washington, with Dallas close behind, to see who would get second and third positions. During the last eleven days of action North Carolina forged ahead of San Francisco and Atlanta and ended four points behind Dallas.

E. D. Brewer, manager of the Oklahoma City Exchange will receive $700, J. C. Vergesslich, manager of the New Jersey Exchange $500 and Robert Smeltzer, manager of the Washington Exchange $350.

Other awards will be divided as follows: Assistant Manager of Record, first branch $400, second $300, third $200; each salesman, first branch $300, second $200, third $150; head booker first branch $250, second $175, third $125; head cashier or bookkeeper, first branch $200, second $150, third $100.

Other employees in the first branch will receive a sum equal to three weeks' salary, second branch a sum equal to two weeks' salary and the third branch a sum equal to one week's salary.

In addition to the three winners, six other branches came in for a share of the profits because they exceeded their quota. They are Dallas, Leslie Wilkes, manager; Charlotte, F. P. Bryan, manager; San Francisco, Charles H. Muehlman, manager; Detroit, F. N. North, manager; Atlanta, C. R. Beacham, manager and Boston, Thomas B. Spry, manager. In each of these exchanges, one week's salary will be given to the manager and to the members of the staff.

Florida Minister Presents Sunday Pictures

Sebring, Florida, is to have Sunday movies. This move is sponsored by Dr. O. S. Micheal, rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd, who will have full charge of the presentations. The first picture will be "The Little Church Around the Corner," it is stated, and other films of a like character will be presented each Sunday. This is the first time that shows have been given on Sunday in this city. The pictures will be shown in the Circle theatre, but no admission will be charged.

Publix Incorporates in St. Louis

Publix Theatre Corporation has taken out incorporation papers in St. Louis, Mo. with a nominal capitalization of $500. Roland S. Baker, 415 Pine street, St. Louis, is given as the principal Missouri agent for the company.

City Council Sanctions Sunday Shows

The city council of Thief River Falls, Minn., has killed a proposal to prohibit Sunday shows. The argument was that residents would drive to other towns for their pictures.

Winnipeg Exhibitor Loses United Artists Suit

R. Kershaw, owner of the Osborne Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, has lost out in his action against United Artists Corporation in which he sued for $800 damages for alleged non-delivery of "The Thief of Bagdad." The County Court at Winnipeg gave judgment in favor of the defendant company and Mr. Kershaw took the case to the Court of Appeals which has now confirmed the decision of the lower court, dismissing the action.

The United Artists Corporation filed the original contract form which showed that the booking date had been omitted from the signed agreement. A letter was submitted, signed by Manager Charles M. Weiner of United Artists Winnipeg office, in which the dates of the proposed engagement were mentioned but in this same letter there was the printed clause that no verbal arrangement between salesmen and exhibitors would be recognized and that all agreements must be entered on the contract.

The Appeal Court judged that there had been no breach of contract and Mr. Kershaw is out the costs in the two actions, this being over $1,100, it is said.

Cooney Brothers are Out of American Theatre Corp.

Cooney Brothers' houses and other Chicago theatres affiliated with the American Theatre Corporation have severed all connections with that organization, of which Joseph Hopp is president. The local houses mentioned above will continue to be booked by Charles Casanave and will retain the Straus Building offices which have been occupied by the American Theatre Corporation for some time past.

The withdrawal of the Chicago houses from the organization leaves nine out of town theatres as members, and no announcement has yet been made as to the future of the organization.

Invite Canada Owners to Pay Royalty

THE Canadian Performing Rights Society, Limited, with head office in Toronto, Ontario, and affiliated with the Performing Rights Society of London, England, has issued invitations to all exhibitors in Canada to become members of the society for the privilege of paying a form of royalty on all copyrighted music controlled by the Society, which runs to a considerable amount, it is stated.

A great many of the theatre managers in Canada have ignored the invitation, it is said, but this move on the part of the society is only a step forward in its plan to place the music in question on a royalty basis, it is stated. The Canadian Society secured a Federal charter from the Canadian Government some months ago to enable it to carry on operations in the Dominion as an incorporated company. The stock has no nominal or par value, according to the articles of incorporation. The Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada, Toronto, and other film organizations, as well as individual theatre men, are preparing for a fight in the matter.

Ingram Starts Filming "The Magician"

REX INGRAM is ready to start filming "The Magician," his next big picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The opening shots are scheduled for February 15th. Interiors will be made at the Ingram studio in Nice, France, and the exteriors call for locations in England, Germany, Switzerland and Northern France.

Rex Ingram

The cast for "The Magician" will be headed by Alice Terry and Paul Waegner. They will be supported by a number of leading Continental actors and actresses. Miss Terry has been in Paris having her gowns and costumes designed for the picture. Waegner is in Nice and will appear in the early scenes of the Somerset Maugham story.

Fox Plans Houses in Three Cities

Huge Building Plans are Reported Contemplated in St. Louis, Kansas City and San Francisco

ANNOUNCEMENTS from three big cities tell of contemplated building plans of the Fox Film Corporation. These cities are St. Louis, Kansas City and San Francisco. From St. Louis comes the unofficial report that the projected $3,500,000 five thousand seat Fox Theatre and office-apartment building at Grand and Washington Boulevards will go through as originally planned.

During the past week final papers were signed whereby the Theatre Realty Company, a holding company for the Fox interests in St. Louis came into possession of the property fronting on Grand boulevard from Washington boulevard a distance of 244 feet with a frontage of 260 feet on Washington boulevard.

Involved in the transfer is the Humboldt building, two small buildings just west on Washington and the Midway Theatre building fronting on Grand boulevard. The entire deal is said to involve $2,250,000.

The Humboldt building was purchased outright as were the two smaller buildings. The Midway Theatre property and 60 feet of vacant ground on Washington avenue was secured from the Sydney Realty Company under a 99-year lease at an annual rental of $60,000 per annum. This lease expires on January 14, 1925.

The theatre the Fox interests contemplate building will be the largest in St. Louis surpassing by 1000 seats the St. Louis Theatre now the largest in the City. It unofficially was announced in Kansas City

Fox in Big Deal With Hoblitzelle

JAMES R. GRAINGER, general sales manager of Fox, announced this week that, as the result of six months' negotiations, he had secured the signature of Karl Hoblitzelle, President of the Interstate Amusement Corporation, controlling the Majestic theatres in Dallas, Fort Worth, San Antonio and Houston, Texas, the Majestic in Little Rock, Ark., and the Lyric, Birmingham, Ala., to a contract calling for 100 per cent run of Fox product for a period of five years beginning with next season's releases.

This is regarded as one of the most significant of recent developments in theatre movements and booking deals. Fox is assured first run representation for its entire product in the four Texas key cities; in Birmingham and Little Rock, other important key points.

that Fox will build a $3,000,000 theatre, the location of which will be within two blocks of the proposed new $4,000,000 Midland theatre, a Metro-Goldwyn house.

The announcement of the Fox house was made by S. W. Straus of the S. W. Straus & Co., New York and Chicago. Although Mr. Straus declined to name his client it generally is understood among Kansas City real estate men that the theatre is to be built by Fox. The house, it practically is assured, will be at Thirteenth street and Grand avenue.

The theatre, it is understood, will have a frontage of an entire block on Thirteenth street between Grand avenue and McGee trafficway.

Construction of a $1,600,000 theatre in San Francisco to be known as the Capitol and a $3,000,000 hotel building, at Market, Larkin and Hayes streets, will start within the next six weeks, it was announced following the signing of contracts by which William Fox Film Corporation will lease the theatre from the builders, the Capitol Company, for 25 years for an aggregate of $5,700,000.

A. P. Giannini, president of the Capitol Company, subsidiary of the Bancitaly Corporation, and E. M. Milnar, associate of Thomas R. Lamb, of New York, Fox Film Corporation architects, completed details of the arrangements, and the signed lease is on its way back to San Francisco from New York.

The theatre will be a sister house of the famed Capitol Theatre of New York, it is stated and will be one of the finest and most beautiful in the United States. It will have a seating capacity of 5200, of which 2800 will be on the ground floor. This is understood to be the first of a chain of such houses to be built along the Pacific Coast by the Capitol Company and to be taken over by the Fox people.

Important Developments in Europe

German "First National" Likely; Pommer's Plans; Scandinavian and Hungarian Congresses to Discuss Protective Action

VITAL developments of importance in the foreign market came to light this week, some of them definitely directed against American film supremacy abroad and others merely designed to strengthen production in certain countries.

A congress called by the Hungarian Films Association will devote itself exclusively to the problem of forming an all-European producers' alliance to combat American invasion, it is understood. Hungary is not, in itself, an important production centre but has apparently taken the lead in organizing opposition to the American export industry.

The film interests of the Scandinavian countries, Norway, Denmark, Sweden and Finland have taken similar action, and have called a congress for some time in May to consider the question of American competition. The Swedish Parliament has already the matter under grave discussion.

Sweden is likely to be hard hit by the American absorption of the German market, since Sweden obtained a substantial amount of business from German distributors.

China is proposing new import duties on many articles, and while films have not been specifically mentioned, this is indicative of the trend at the moment as regards taxing international trade. Analysis of the Department of Commerce figures shows that exports fell off last year to seven countries, Spain, Sweden, Central America, China, Japan, the Philippines and British South Africa.

Reports from Berlin indicate that leading independent exhibitors may take steps to meet the situation created by the American alliance with Ufa. Some persons feel that Ufa will now be a company for the making of program pictures which will serve to obtain permits for the importation of American films, with little thought to quality. The exhibitor organization has fixed a membership fee of 3,000 goldmarks (about $750) for each member, to provide funds.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS, thanks to a cable from its Berlin correspondent, was first with the news that Erich Pommer, for many years chief of Ufa production, had resigned from his post, on the official ground that he could not make his general production policies fit in with the new standard evidently set for Ufa through economic necessity and the latest American contracts.

Ufa's production will in future be run by Major Grau, who had been formerly head of the "Kultur-Abteilung," a department which he is going to keep under his direction even now when he is running the whole Ufa production. Herr Grau, who will be remembered to have been on an informative trip to New York and California some months ago, enjoys the confidence of the German trade and will certainly be the right man to manage production which, although it won't be as ambitious as it has been under Pommer's direction and will have to be governed by economic rather than by artistic considerations, must needs still contain at least some photoplays of a more or less ambitious character.

Naturally it can be assumed that Erich Pommer, who is not yet 36 years of age, won't sit still now that he is free for another connection. Much speculation has been rife as to his future plans and, although nothing definite has been published yet, we are in a position to predict the most likely course on the strength of trustworthy first-hand information. We are informed that Pommer has been negotiating for quite a long time already with Baron von Lustig (who is one of the wealthiest German financiers) on the one hand and with the newly formed theatre syndicate on the other.

This syndicate, which has been occasionally mentioned in our German correspondent's reports, comprises something like 500 rather important German halls. And the idea underlying those negotiations naturally is to build up an organization very much on First National lines.

A development like this can rather safely be expected for the near future.

Goldwyn Will Produce "Barbara Worth" by Arrangement With Sol Lesser

BY an arrangement made with Sol Lesser Samuel Goldwyn has purchased the screen rights to "The Winning of Barbara Worth," the Harold Bell Wright novel, which, to date, has had a sale of about two million eight hundred thousand copies. The story is a romance dealing with the reclamation of the Southwest.

This will be the first of three productions which Goldwyn will make for release through United Artists for the 1926 schedule. Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky will be featured and Henry King will direct from a scenario written by Frances Marion.

"Beauty and Beast," a George Fitzmaurice production, which has been adapted from the Kathleen Norris serial by Frances Marion will be the second production. Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky will again be seen in the leading roles.

The third production will be a filmization of "The Garden of Allah," to be produced in conjunction with the Joseph M. Schenck organization. Schenck will contribute Norma Talmadge as star and the rights to the Robert Hichen's celebrated novel, while Goldwyn will contribute Henry King as director, Ronald Colman as featured lead and Frances Marion's scenario.

Lichtman Returns as Producer

Harley Knoles Author and Director of "Charley's Niece" for Universal Release

AL Lichtman, well known film executive, has joined the ranks of producers and his first picture, an original story by Harley Knoles, who is also directing it, will be released by Universal.

The initial offering of Al Lichtman Productions is a comedy, "Charley's Niece." Mr. Knoles started work this week at the Tec-Art Studio, New York. Madge Kennedy will play the feminine lead, supported by Ethel Shannon, Little Billy, Creighton Hale, Flora Finch and David Butler.

Mr. Lichtman has been prominent in the progress of the film business for more than fifteen years. He was at one time General Manager of Distribution for Famous Players-Lasky and more recently held the same post for Universal. He retired from that organization eighteen months ago following a breakdown but has now completely recovered his health.

Harley Knoles, author and director of "Charley's Niece," has established a reputation with such films as "Little Women," "Stolen Orders," "Bought and Paid For,"

"Carnival" and "The Bohemian Girl." The latter two were produced in England for the Alliance Film Company.

The final touches have already been given to the script of "Charley's Niece" by Arthur Hoerl who adapted Mr. Knoles' story to the screen.

Immediately following the completion of "Charley's Niece," Mr. Lichtman will make an elaborate screen version of "The Cherry Tree," featuring a well known cast headed by George Jessel. This young actor is a success of the current theatrical season in the title role of "The Jazz Singer."

The office headquarters of Al Lichtman Productions are 1650 Broadway.

Small Town Exhibitors to Discuss Problems

John McGill, owner and operator of the Community Theatre in Port Orchard, Wash. last week began the organization of an "Out-of-Town Club," to be composed of small town exhibitors who will meet once a month in Seattle to talk over the welfare of their group. He is being assisted in the organization process by Clyde Walker, editor and publisher of the Motion Picture Record of Seattle.

Clarence Brown to Direct "Trail of '98"

Through an arrangement with Joseph M. Schenck Clarence Brown has been loaned to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to direct "The Trail of '98" a Robert W. Service novel for which Benjamin Glazer will do the continuity in collaboration with Irving G. Thalberg. Thalberg plans to give this picture an elaborate production.

Lynn Reynolds to Direct House Peters

Lynn Reynolds' next production for Universal will be "Prisoners of the Storm," with House Peters in the starring role. Eileen Percy and Allan Forrest have been signed for prominent supporting roles. Production will start within the next week.

Percentage Contracts Must be Played Full Time

The Philadelphia Arbitration Board in a recent ruling declared that contracts entered into on a percentage basis must be played the full duration of the time stipulated and that exchanges are entitled to a return figured on the basis of business actually done.

Pathe Exchange filed a claim for $472 against Weber Brothers, former owners of the Grand Theatre, Hazelton, because the picture "The Freshman" was played only four days of a stipulated six-day engagement. The contract called for $1000 guarantee and 50% of receipts in excess of $3,000. The receipts were $2,600 in four days. Figuring on a basis of average daily receipts it should have played to $3,900 for the full week, giving Pathe one half of $900. In making award of $362, the Board figured that receipts for Friday of the week, which was the day after Thanksgiving, would be 25% less than the smallest day's business done and that Saturday would be 25% less than Thanksgiving.

Roxy Buys Victor Herbert's Music Library

S. L. Rothafel has purchased Victor Herbert's entire personal library for the new Roxy theatre now being erected at 50th and 51st streets and 7th Avenue, New York City.

The library contains Herbert's own melodies and the symphonic scores, orchestrations, classic and light comedy music owned by him during the many years he served as conductor of the leading orchestral organizations of the country.

Roxy acquired the music from Ella Herbert, daughter of the composer, to form the nucleus of the Roxy theatre library and for sentimental reasons.

Schools Need Not Employ Union Operators

Issuing their decision against the International Motion Picture Operators' Union's demand, the city officials of Seattle, Wash., last week decided that it was unnecessary for public schools or other educational institutions in that city to employ a member of the Operators' Union at $3 per hour for the exhibition of educational or entertainment films in school buildings. The city declared that the machines could be operated for educational uses by regularly examined and authorized principals or manual training teachers, who have passed a proficiency examination in projection work.

Frank Lloyd Signed by Paramount

FRANK LLOYD, who in the past has produced such pictures as "The Sea Hawk," "Black Oxen," "Winds of Chance," and "Ashes of Vengeance," has been signed to a long term directorial contract by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Lloyd will join Paramount at the termination of his present contract, under which he now has his last picture in production. He will be assigned to the production of a big special on the west coast for release in the Fall.

Boston Film Board Names New Officers

Boston Film Board of Trade held its annual meeting early in the week and elected Henry P. Scully of United Artists and a brother of Manager Scully of Educational Films, Inc. as president succeeding Harry L. Asher of the American Feature Film Co.; first vice president, R. C. Croker of Pathe succeeding H. F. Campbell of the Fox exchange; second vice president, I. L. Walenstein of Film Booking Offices, succeeding J. L. Roth of Federated. Joseph H. McConville of Independent Films, Inc. was re-elected secretary; G. M. A. Fetke of Motion Picture Corporation was re-elected treasurer and Miss Martha W. Ferris was re-elected corresponding secretary.

Kansas-Missouri Owners to Plan Meeting

The place and date of the next convention of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri probably will be decided next week. Joplin, Mo., and Wichita, Kas., are among the cities being considered. The meeting will be in April. The formal admission of managers of producer-owned theatres into the organization, but without right to hold office, will be among the routine business to be transacted.

Quebec Empire Suffers Fire Loss

The Empire Theatre at Cowansville, Quebec, was destroyed by fire on February 6 and four families who lived in the apartments over the theatre were barely able to escape, the fire breaking out in the early morning hours.

Milwaukee Exhibitors Name New Officers

At a meeting of the Milwaukee Exhibitor Association held this week Max Krofta of the Idlehour was named president, Bert Fischer, vice-president; Ernst Langemack, treasurer and George Smith, secretary.

Fine Arts Studio Plans Expansion Program

FINE Arts Studio, the only motion picture leasing studio in Los Angeles this week announced an elaborate program of expansion which, it is stated, will cost in excess of $200,000. This is due to the withdrawal of Hollywood Studios from the leasing field since its purchase by Famous Players.

In order to efficiently handle new producing units, one of the largest enclosed motion picture stages in the world, in the point of actual floor area, is now being constructed at Fine Arts and others are projected.

Present plans of the management of this 'lot' include the building of fifty additional dressing rooms, six new cutting rooms, four extra property rooms and work shops and an administration building fronting on Hillhurst Avenue for a length of 115 feet. Bids will shortly be called for and it is anticipated that the entire construction program will be carried out before summer.

Marie Prevost

CHRISTIE PURCHASES FARCE Gets "Up In Mabel's Room"

AL CHRISTIE has purchased screen rights to "Up In Mabel's Room," one of the outstanding farce successes of the speaking stage in recent years. It will be produced on a lavish scale with Marie Prevost in the role made famous on the stage by Hazel Dawn, and will be released through Producers Distributing Corporation.

As a stage farce Al H. Woods was the producer and the play had its premiere in January, 1915 at the Eltinge Theatre in New York. After a long Broadway run it met with success in all parts of the country. The story is the combined work of Wilson Collison and Otto Harbach, who have many successes to their credit. Details with regard to cast and director, other than that Miss Prevost will play the leading role, have not yet been divulged.

Plans Fixed for Music Week Picture Houses and Women's Clubs Will Cooperate With Committee

PLANS for a great national drive to increase appreciation for music in the United States were announced in New York this week by the National Music Week Committee, of which Otto Kahn is chairman.

Under the plan proposed the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the Music Week Committee, representing twenty-four national organizations with a membership totalling many millions, and the motion picture industry will join forces for a musical demonstration in the motion picture theatres of the country, prior to and during Music Week, which is set for May 2-8.

Mrs. Marx E. Oberndorfer, chairman of the music division of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, representing Mrs. John D. Sherman, president, presented preliminary plans for the campaign to C. M. Tremaine, secretary of the National Music Week Committee, and to Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., both of whom promised the full cooperation and support of their organizations.

According to Mrs. Oberndorfer, fifty musical selections which are generally known as popular classics and which are familiar to the ear throughout the country, will be chosen for use in the national music memory contest which is to be the feature of the campaign. Through local organizations, the General Federation will enlist the cooperation of the motion picture theatre managers so that these latter will play the selections during their showings for at least a month in advance of the contest week. In this way millions who attend the theatres will begin to know the music intimately.

At the same time, school supervisors and teachers will be asked to cooperate by having these selections played or sung in the classrooms, so that the children may thus become familiar with them. Other civic organizations, the radio stations, and churches are expected to cooperate.

Independent Films for Army

Report Reveals That No Discrimination is Being Shown in Bookings

THE complaint recently filed with the Independent Motion Picture Association of America by an independent distributor to the effect that the U. S. Army Motion Picture Service was discriminating against the independents, in favor of national distributors, has been taken up by the New York representative of the army service who has assured the association that the charges will be promptly and fully investigated and a report of the findings submitted without delay.

The U. S. Army Motion Picture Service has advised the I. M. P. A., that it is at the present time booking pictures for the army camps with about thirty independent exchanges throughout the United States, and play dates for independent product for February total 141.

Assurance has been given that the motion picture service branch of the War Department Theatres, will cooperate to the fullest extent with the independent and State right exchanges in any territory where pictures are required, with a view to securing those best suitable for exhibition in the camps, and that there has been no thought of discriminating against any independent exchanges. Unfortunately the impression has gained ground that the complaint in this respect was general, while as a matter of fact it emanated from Atlanta territory and not from any other exchange centers.

All Comedy Bill Prospers in Kansas Town

Again the all-comedy bill has met with unquestioned success in the Kansas City territory. The initial attempt at this type of show in this territory was made several months ago. Last week the Photoplay theatre of Ashland, Kas., staged an all-comedy program and billed the town with this line: "Here's a chance to overhaul your giggle apparatus with a whale of a show, sprinting entertainment and laughs." The attendance was big.

Irwin Franklyn Enters Production Field

IRWIN R. FRANKLYN, former picture publicist and exploitation man has entered the independent field and will make a series of twelve two-reelers titled "Carrie of the Chorus," starring Hazele Harmon, and featuring William Kent, former star of "Rose Marie."

The pictures will be adapted from Franklyn's series of stories, "The Memoirs of A Stage Doorman." No plans for distribution have yet been arranged.

Urbana Theatres Again Open Sundays

The motion picture theatres of Urbana, Ill., were open for business as usual on Sunday, February 7, as the result of the decision of Judge Smith in the Champaign County Circuit Court that a city ordinance prohibiting Sunday shows was illegal. He dismissed suits against the managers of the two local theatres.

Pathe to Release Carey Feature Feb. 21

Pathe has scheduled "Driftin' Thru," Harry Carey's first Pathe Western feature for release February 21st. The story is an original by Basil Dickey and Harry Haven, and the picture was directed by Scott Dunlap.

National Cinema Body Formed

American Cinema Association, Cooperative Group, to Produce, Distribute Pictures

THE American Cinema Association, a National cooperative organization for the production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures, has been incorporated under the laws of Delaware with a capitalization of $500,000. Allied in the organization are some of the foremost producers and exchange men and some 2,600 independent theatre owners of the United States.

The members present at the first meeting of the new company, during which its plans and purposes were outlined and adopted were: David Hartford and Edward Leszcynski, trustees of the David Hartford Productions of Detroit; A. J. Moeller and Harry S. Manus of the Moeller Theatre Service, New York; Gene Marcus of the Twentieth Century Film Company of Philadelphia; A. C. Snyder, Dependable Pictures, Boston; Ben Levine, Oxford Film Exchange, New York; William Hurlburt and Jack Saxe, Favorite Film Company, Detroit; Harry F. Crelle, Supreme Photoplay Productions, Pittsburgh; Ben F. Simpson, Pacific Coast Distributors, San Francisco; Joe Stern and M. Stern, Independent Film Company, Des Moines, and representatives of the allied distributors of Chicago, Indianapolis and Milwaukee.

The Board of Directors of the American Cinema Association is comprised of Gene Marcus, Philadelphia; William Hurlburt, Detroit; Joseph Stern, Des Moines and Omaha; Ben Simpson, San Francisco; Edward Leszcynski, Detroit; Joseph P. Wolff, Detroit; Adam J. Blake, Detroit; A. J. Moeller, Detroit, and Harry Manus, New York. The officers are A. J. Moeller, president; Joseph P. Wolff, vice-president; Harry S. Manus, 2nd vice-president; Adam J. Blake, secretary, and Edward Leszcynski, treasurer.

For the season of 1926-27 twenty-six features will be made for the new corporation under the general supervision of David Hartford. Twelve of these are already in course of preparation.

Paula Gould Goes to Universal

PAULA GOULD, for the last four years general press representative for F.B.O. in the east, has resigned, to join the Publicity Department of Universal Pictures Corporation. Miss Gould will assist Nat Rothstein on "The Flaming Frontier" campaign, and will, at its conclusion, be assigned to special work in the Publicity Department.

Paula Gould

Although Miss Gould is one of the youngest of the women publicists in the industry, she made an enviable reputation for herself when two years ago she was placed in full charge of all F.B.O. trade paper publicity, in addition to fan magazines and newspaper work, and acquitted herself creditably.

Miss Gould is well known in the trade, and is a contributor to several popular magazines and newspapers. She has four short stories already to her credit.

Eckhardt is Named Fox District Manager

CLYDE W. ECKHARDT, for the past three and a half years assistant to Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of Fox Film Corp., has been appointed district manager with supervision over the Chicago, Milwaukee and Minneapolis exchanges. His headquarters will be at Chicago.

George Denbow, at present in charge of the Chicago office, has been transferred to the home office as special sales representative.

Brooklyn M. P. T. O. Hold Annual Election

At a special meeting recently called by the M. P. T. O. of Brooklyn, N. Y., officers for the coming year were elected. Very few changes were put in effect, those which occurred affecting the board of directors only. Rudolph Saunders was again elected President, likewise M. S. McNamara as Vice-President, Abraham Phillips, Secretary, Louis Schiffman, Treasurer and Meyer Rosenthal, Sgt. at Arms. Max Pear replaces Harry Bernstein as a member of the Board of Directors and Samuel Fischer will take the place of Jack Blinderman. F. Stein and B. Idsen will serve instead of Messrs. Rubin and Zalkin. Other members of the Board are Elias Bernstein, Louis Rosen and Eugene Zerner. Mr. Zerner is also the business manager.

The installation dinner and dance will be held at the Hotel Bossert in Brooklyn on the night of February 10th. Among the guests of the evening will be Mayor "Jim-mie" Walker, Boro Pres. Jos. A. Guilder, Judge Harry E. Lewis, Dist. Attorney Chas. A. Dodd, Corp. Council Joseph Reilly, Judge James A. Dunne, Commissioner Edw. T. O'Loughlin, R. F. Woodhull, County Clerk Edw. E. Kelly, Joseph M. Seider and Judge A. I. Nova.

U. S. Pictures Dominate in Finland

More than three-fifths of all the motion picture films exhibited in Finland during the year 1925 were American productions, according to a statement just issued by the State Board of Censorship, states Vice Consul Frank P. S. Glassey at Helsingfors, in a recent report just released by the Department of Commerce. A total of 530 films were passed upon during the last calendar year, and 339 of these pictures were of American origin.

King Quits Cinematograph Association

According to announcement from London, William Gavazzi King has resigned as secretary of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association after long and valued service to that organization.

Sanford Productions Names New Representatives

Sanford Productions has appointed Joseph C. Reichenbach as the new eastern representative of the company. He has already assumed his new position.

Reedsburg Owner Wins Award

H. G. Olson of Majestic Takes First Prize for Laugh Month Exploitation

FIRST prize of $100 for the second week of the Laugh Month exploitation contest was awarded by the judges to H. G. Olson, of the Majestic Theatre, Reedsburg, Wisconsin. The second prize of $50 went to F. V. Kennebeck of the North Star Theatre of Omaha, who also won second prize during the first week. Third prize was awarded to David J. Lustig of the Regun Theatre, New York City.

Olson's program at the Reedsburg Majestic included the Educational-Lupino Lane comedy, "Maid in Morocco"; the single reel novelty, "A Ride on a Runaway Train"; the one-reel color subject, "The Voice of the Nightingale"; the Sing Them Again release, "Close Harmony"; a single reel Cameo comedy, "Sweet and Pretty," and a cartoon reel, "Felix the Cat on the Job."

The exploitation tieup with the Laugh Month campaign included a comprehensive lobby display, a ballyhoo consisting of a stretcher with a dummy of a man who "split his sides laughing at the Majestic Annual Fun Fantasy," special slides, numerous posters, a loud speaker device which transmitted laughter from inside the theatre to the street, as well as special music and announcements made by the manager; newspaper advertising and throwaways.

Famous Profits $3,459,862

Statement for Nine Months Shows Increased Earnings to October Last Year

AFTER deducting all charges and reserves for Federal income and other taxes, Famous Players-Lasky, in its consolidated statement, including earnings of its subsidiary companies, reports net profits of $1,408,330.19 for the three months, and $3,459,862.90 for the nine months to September 26th, 1925.

At the last meeting of the Board of Directors the regular quarterly dividend was declared of $2 per share on the common stock, payable April 1, 1926 to stockholders of record at the close of business on March 15, 1926.

The Famous Players profits for the first nine months of 1925, which, as totaled at $3,459,862, show an increase of $538,020 over the same period in 1924. The current profits represent earnings of $12.16 a share on the common, as compared with $10.35 a share in the same period of 1924.

For the quarter ended Sept. 26, 1925, the net profit was $1,408,330, after charges and Federal taxes, equivalent after allowing for dividend requirements on 8% preferred stock to $5.10 a share earned on 243,341 shares of no par common stock. This compares with $695,724, or $2.15 a share in the preceding quarter and $1,571,040, or $6.01 a share in the third quarter of 1924.

Fox Has Dozen in Production

Twelve Features in Work for This Season With Four Started for 1926-27

FOX has started four more productions at the Hollywood studios for this season's schedule. They are "The Shamrock Handicap," "Rustling for Cupid," "Hard Boiled" and "Early to Wed." In addition to these there are four others nearing completion. These include "Sandy," "Siberia," "Hell's Four Hundred" and "Yellow Fingers." "The Johnstown Flood," "Tony Runs Wild," "The Dixie Merchant" and "The Fighting Buckaroo" are in the cutting room.

With this even dozen of productions in work, directors have also been assigned for "Fig Leaves" and "30 Below Zero," two of next season's productions. "The World of Promise" is practically finished for next season, and in New York Raoul Walsh is casting for "What Price Glory."

Among the four pictures that have just gone into production two are original stories by Peter B. Kyne. John Ford is directing "The Shamrock Handicap," a racing drama with Janet Gaynor, Leslie Fenton and J. Farrell MacDonald in the leading roles. Irving Cummings is directing "Rustling for Cupid," with George O'Brien and Anita Stewart in the leading roles.

"Hard Boiled" is a Tom Mix vehicle being directed by J. G. Blystone, and "Early to Wed" will see Matt Moore and Kathryn Perry in the leading roles. The latter is an adaptation from the book by Evelyn Campbell.

Paramount Gets "Nell Gwyn"

Will Distribute British Production in the United States and Canada

PARAMOUNT will handle the American distribution of Herbert Wilcox's production of "Nell Gwyn," starring Dorothy Gish, according to a contract signed between that company and British National Pictures, Ltd. The consummation of the contract followed the trial showing of the picture in regular theatres in three towns.

Following the completion of the document, George T. Eaton, President of British National Pictures cabled the following to his company and other English producers:

"British National Pictures, Ltd., assures British producers that the American public welcome fine pictures and that the market is wide open to British productions of quality."

In commenting on the deal Will Hays said:

"We want in America the very best pictures wherever they are made. True, the American motion picture industry wants only from foreign countries that fair treatment which the spirit of our pictures commands. It is splendid to have our good pictures in every country and it is splendid to have the good pictures of every other country distributed here."

No arrangements were made for the distribution of the series of three Dorothy Gish productions to be directed by Herbert Wilcox for British National this year.

Beery Signs New Two Year Contract

WALLACE BEERY has been signed to a new two-year contract by Paramount and he has already been cast for three outstanding roles of the year. One of these will be in "Old Ironsides," a James Cruze production. Another will be as P. T. Barnum in "The Greatest Show on Earth," and the third will be in "Beau Geste," which Herbert Brenon has gone West especially to direct.

Bess Meredyth to Remain With Warners

Warner Brothers have re-signed Bess Meredyth and she will remain a member of their production staff for another year. Among others of her achievements since joining that company were the scenarios for "The Sea Beast" and "Ben Hur," both now running on Broadway. She is also author and adapter of "Don Juan," just completed by John Barrymore for Warners.

Kenton Will Direct Bebe Daniels' Next

Erle C. Kenton has been assigned by Paramount to direct Bebe Daniels in her next Paramount comedy, "The Palm Beach Girl." He is now on his way from California to handle this original screen story of love and speed boat races from the pen of Byron Morgan, written especially for Miss Daniels.

Barker to Direct Curwood's "The Flaming Forest"

Reginald Barker will direct James Oliver Curwood's "The Flaming Forest" which Hunt Stromberg will produce as a Cosmopolitan production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. With the exception of the fact that Waldemar Young will do the continuity, no production or cast data has been given out on this production.

Fleming Completes "Blind Goddess" Cast

Victor Fleming has completed the cast for his Paramount production, "The Blind Goddess," which features Jack Holt, Esther Ralston, Ernest Torrence and Louise Dresser. The supporting players include Ward Crane, Richard Tucker, Louis Payne, Charles Lane and Charley Clary.

Portraiture Expert is Signed by Fox Films

Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager for Fox has signed Max Autrey, well-known as a camera portrait artist, to a contract to make portraits for Fox exclusively. He has been placed in charge of the special studio fitted for him by the Fox organization.

Virginia Morris Publicity Chief for Lichtman

Virginia Morris has resigned from the publicity department of Fox Films to become Director of Publicity for Al Lichtman Productions.

Brown Completes Cast for "The Big Night"

Melville Brown has completed the cast for "The Big Night," his first directorial effort for Universal, with Laura La Plante in the starring role. Einar Hanson, Swedish film star, who has just been signed to a long contract, will play opposite Miss La Plante. The supporting cast includes Lee Moran, Zasu Pitts, Mack Swain, Tully Marshall, Tom Ricketts, Cissy Fitzgerald, Walter McGrail and William Austin.

Large Cast for Mary Philbin Production

Warner Oland, Caroline Snowden, Roy Bloomer and Grace Darmond have been chosen to support Mary Philbin in "The Star Maker" an adaptation of the Dana Burnett story "Technique" which Lois Weber will direct for Universal. Francis X. Bushman will play opposite the star. Miss Weber is working on the adaptation and expects to start production in a few days.

"Silky Anne" Selected for Constance Talmadge

"Silky Anne," a story by Edward Clark, has been selected as the next starring vehicle in which Constance Talmadge will appear. Initial preparations for the production of this First National release are under way and the cast will soon be chosen. The production will be made at the First National west coast studios under the direction of Sidney Franklin.

DeMille Amplifies Contest

Producer Urges Extreme Brevity and Elimination of Plot With Letters

WHEN Cecil B. DeMille offered prizes last week aggregating $2,100 for an idea for a big motion picture production it was not so much with the thought of interesting those generally identified with the motion picture industry, but the general public.

DeMille's amplified plans stress the fact that he does not want finished stories, plays, or synopses of stories or plays. All he wants is a letter, simply written, with the outline of an idea that might be developed by him or his staff into an acceptable and thrilling photoplay.

In giving a further outline of the conditions of the contest DeMille said: "A plot is not necessary, nor is it wanted. All that is asked is a strong idea in a clear, intelligent manner, just as though you were explaining why your idea would make a fine motion picture. Don't let words, too many words, stifle your idea. That is the reason I've placed the absolute limit for the letters of this contest at 200 words.

"Many people get clever ideas but by the time they've explained them into story form their original spark of real genius is buried in a mass of surplus verbiage. Remember that in contests of this kind the winning thought has, in each case, been expressed simply and briefly."

All letters must be addressed to the DeMille Contest Editor, Los Angeles Times. The contest will close at midnight February 27th.

Paramount Coast Studio Busy

Six Companies Now Working at Hollywood Plant; All Space Being Used

PRACTICALLY every available foot of space on the five large stages at the Paramount studio in Hollywood is being used, by either companies filming scenes or by carpenters and other studio workers engaged in dismantling used settings and building new ones.

Great excitement is being caused at the studio by Herbert Brenon's preparations for the filming of "Beau Geste," the story of the French Foreign Legion in Algeria, Africa, which production will entail the use of thousands of players and technical workers.

Allan Dwan is filming Rex Beach's "Padlocked," Betty Bronson and Ricardo Cortez are co-starring in "The Cat's Pajamas;" William de Mille is directing "The Flight to the Hills;" Raymond Griffith is busy with "Wet Paint;" Victor Fleming is making "The Blind Goddess," and Clarence Badger is finishing Bebe Daniels' "Miss Brewster's Millions" and preparing to start on Gerald Beaumont's race track romance, "The Rainmaker."

The editorial department of the studio has in hands at present "The Lady of the Harem," "The Crown of Lies," and Zane Grey's "Desert Gold."

Sax Completes "Hearts and Spangles" Cast

Sax has completed the cast and actual shooting is under way on the coast on "Hearts and Spangles," tenth of the twelve Gotham productions on the current season's series. Wanda Hawley and Robert Gordon head the cast, which also includes Barbara Tennant, Frankie Darro, Eric Mayne, J. P. Locknoy, Larry Steers, George Cheesboro and Charles Force.

Cody Will Make Series for Associated

P. A. Powers has signed Bill Cody, young western player, for a series of western features to be produced at the new Associated Studios in Los Angeles by Bert D. Garber and released through Associated Exhibitors. Garber has been associated with several of the leading producers and has surrounded himself with a capable organization for the production of the Cody starring vehicles.

Syd Chaplin Denies He Will Quit Warners

SYD CHAPLIN emphatically denies a printed story that he is to quit Warner Brothers to head his own production company. In a wire to Abe Warner at the home office of the concern, the star said:

"Very sorry to hear that an erroneous rumor has been circulated to the effect that I am leaving Warner Brothers. This is entirely misleading and I have never contemplated such a move. Warner Brothers have given me an ideal engagement and this has been proven by the success of my Warner Brothers pictures.

Tourneur Will Direct Verne Story

MAURICE TOURNEUR has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to direct the Jules Verne story, "The Mysterious Island," which will be produced by Hunt Stromberg. Production on the fantasy will begin the first week of March, when Tourneur will proceed with the company to Nassau in the Bahamas.

Dorothy Phillips to Play Lead in "Toto"

Dorothy Phillips will play the feminine lead opposite Lew Cody in "Toto," the Achmed Abdullah stage play, which John Stahl will direct for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer from a continuity prepared by Benjamin Glazer. Virginia Bradford, Carmel Myers, and Antonio D'Algy are in the supporting cast.

"Their Second Honeymoon" Bought by M-G-M

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has purchased for production "Their Second Honeymoon" a novel by Donna Barrel who has also been engaged to do the adaptation and other continuity work.

Elliott Clawson Signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Elliott Clawson has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as a member of the studio scenario department according to an announcement issued by Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production.

Clarence Badger to Direct "The Rainmaker"

Clarence Badger has been assigned by Paramount to direct "The Rainmaker," an adaptation from Gerald Beaumont's story, "Heaven Bent," which ran serially in the Red Book Magazine. Production is scheduled to start next week.

Alberta Vaughn's Sister is Signed by F. B. O.

F. B. O. has signed Adamae Vaughn, sister of Alberta, to a long term contract. She will be featured in Westerns and it is probable she will play Tom Tyler's leading lady in his next production.

Hungarian Beauty Signed by Paramount

Paramount has signed Irma Kornelia, Hungarian beauty, to a long term contract. She only recently arrived in the United States and was signed within an hour after her arrival in Hollywood from New York.

Chaliapin Will Appear With Pola Negri

POLA NEGRI and Feodor Chaliapin, famous bass of grand opera, will appear in a picture for Paramount next Winter. Chaliapin went to the Paramount studio at Hollywood as the guest of Miss Negri two weeks ago and arrangements were then started for his appearance in the picture. He has never before considered the screen as an avenue for his talents. A suitable story for the picture is now being sought.

Highlights of "The Flaming Frontier," a Universal production in which Jack Hoxie is featured.

Metropolitan Has Completed Three Features

Production on three Metropolitan features for release through Producers Distributing Corporation, was completed this week. The pictures are "Paris at Midnight," "Whispering Smith" and "Forbidden Waters."

Among the new pictures that will be put into production immediately are "Shipwrecked," in which Seena Owen and Joseph Schildkraut are starred; a new Priscilla Dean feature, Marie Prevost's first Metropolitan film, and "The Last Frontier," a western epic which Thomas H. Ince conceived.

F. B. O. Completing Current Season's Product

F. B. O. plans to complete the current season's pictures by the middle of April. Three of the Gold Bond specials have still to be made. They are Emory Johnson's "The Non-Stop Flight," "The Isle of Retribution" and "A Poor Girl's Romance."

Among the star features still to be filmed are "Secret Orders," starring Evelyn Brent; Tom Tyler's new Western, "The Arizona Streak;" Fred Thomson's "Hands Across the Border," and other features for Thomson, Bob Custer and Richard Talmadge.

Marian Blackton Prepares Warner Script

Marian Constance Blackton, daughter of J. Stuart Blackton, is responsible for the adaptation of "Hell Bent For Heaven," which is being produced by Blackton for Warner Brothers. Miss Blackton has written thirteen previous scripts under the name of Marian Constance. The cast for the coming picture includes Patsy Ruth Miller, John Harron, Gayne Whitman, James Marcus, Wilfred North, Evelyn Selbie and Gardner James.

Two Added to Cast of Hines' Latest Production

Diana Kane and Ruth Dwyer have been engaged by C. C. Burr for important parts in "The Brown Derby" the next Johnny Hines starring production for First National release. Miss Kane will play the female lead opposite Hines and Miss Dwyer will have the female part of second importance.

"Greater Movie List" New "U" Product

UNIVERSAL has decided to change the name of its 1926-27 product from the Greater White List to the Greater Movie List. The change was said to have been made because of requests from numerous exhibitors.

The Greater Movie List will include three or more super pictures, five or six special Reginald Denny productions, twenty-eight Jewel productions, twenty-four Blue Streak Western features and the lineup of serials, Buster Brown comedies, International Newsreels and other short product made by Universal.

Highlights of "The Black Bird" Lon Chaney's current starring vehicle produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Associated Acquires Features

"The Earth Woman" and "The Big Show" Are Scheduled for Release in March

TWO new features have been acquired for distribution by Associated Exhibitors. They are titled, "The Earth Woman" and "The Big Show." The former is described as an epic of woman's love and tragedy on the frontier. Mary Alden contributes the characterization of a pioneer mother.

Walter Lang directed "The Earth Woman," which has in its cast, in addition to Miss Alden, Russell Simpson, Priscilla Bonner, Johnny Walker, Carroll Nye, John Carr, Hoe Butterworth and William Scott. The picture is an adaptation by Edith Wakeling of the novel by Norton S. Barker. Mrs. Wallace Reid sponsored the production, which will be released in March.

"The Big Show" is a circus story picturized on the Miller Brothers 101 Ranch and is said to contain all the thrills and gaiety of circus life beneath the big tent. John Lowell and Evangeline Russell have the featured roles in this picturization of the L. Case Russell story, "On With the Show." They are supported by Dan Dix, Colonel Joseph C. Miller, S. Serrano Keating, Joe Lewis and Naida Blatherwick. The picture was directed by George Terwilliger and is scheduled for release in March.

Motion Picture News Booking Guide

"I keep my Motion Picture News on file and I find the Booking Guide a very handy index to them. Also for determining star, producer, length and class of picture. I certainly look forward to receiving it."

First National to Start Seven

Productions Starring Colleen Moore and Richard Barthelmess to be Put in Work

JOHAN MCCORMICK, West Coast production manager for First National, has scheduled seven productions to go into work at the West Coast studios of First National during the next week or ten days. They are "Ella Cinders," "Miss Nobody," "Good Luck," "Molasses," "The Wise Guy," "Pals First" and "Ranson's Folly."

Colleen Moore will be starred in "Ella Cinders" which is based on the comic cartoon strip appearing in a number of Metropolitan newspapers. The story was written by Will Counselman and the continuity prepared by Julian Josephson. Al Green will direct.

"Ranson's Folly," starring Richard Barthelmess, is from the story by Richard Harding Davis. It will be directed by Sidney Olcott. "Miss Nobody" in which Anna Q. Nilsson will be featured, relates the dramatic and humorous experiences of a girl, who, in her sixteenth year, finds herself cast upon the world friendless and without money. The continuity for this production is being written by Anthony Coldeway.

"Good Luck," a story by Seymour Hicks and Ian Hay, is to be put in production shortly by E. M. Asher with Conway Tearle in the starring role. Alan Hale will direct this production of the Drury Lane melodrama. M. C. Levee has engaged Al Santell to direct "Molasses" which will be started on February 15.

"The Wise Guy," an original story by Jules Furthman, will be Frank Lloyd's next picture on which filming will be begun in a few days. Edwin Carewe will produce "Pals First" a story by Francis Perry Elliott.

The final scenes of "Kiki," the Joseph M. Schenck production of the Belasco play in which Norma Talmadge is starred, have been shot and the film is now in the cutting room being edited and titled.

Irme Fazekas Starts Pola Negri Story

Irme Fazekas, European playwright signed by Paramount, has arrived in Hollywood to start work on an original film story for Pola Negri. He will also write stories for Adolphe Menjou, Betty Bronson and Emil Jannings. Fazekas is credited with a series of successful plays in the metropolitan cities of Europe. He is the editor and critic of three large newspapers in Budapest.

Two Additions to Cast for "Padlocked"

Two additions have been made to the Paramount cast for "Padlocked," the Rex Beach story in which Lois Moran has the leading feminine role. Allan Simpson has been assigned the leading male role, and Noah Beery will portray the role of Henry Gilbert, the father.

Gotham Productions Sign Ethel Shannon

Gotham Productions has signed Ethel Shannon to a long term contract, largely because of her excellent work in "The Speed Limit." She will start work on a new series of Gotham productions as soon as she completes an engagement to play opposite George Jessel in "The Cherry Tree."

Margaret Morris Opposite Douglas MacLean

Bogart Rogers, general manager of the MacLean productions has engaged Margaret Morris to play opposite Douglas MacLean in the comedian's latest picture for Paramount, "That's My Baby." In addition to Miss Morris the supporting cast includes Claude Gillingwater, Eugenie Forde, Richard Tucker, Wade Boteler and Harry Earle. William Beaudine is directing.

Mae Busch Starts Work at Universal City

Mae Busch has started work at Universal City in the featured feminine role in King Baggot's Universal production, "Perch of the Devil," an adaptation of the novel by Gertrude Atherton. Pat O'Malley is playing opposite Miss Busch, with the following supporting cast: Theodore Von Eltz, Jane Winton, Mario Carillo and George Kuwa.

"Runaway Express" Under Way by "U"

Universal has assigned Jack Daugherty and Blanche Mehaffey to the leading roles in "The Runaway Express," a railroad feature scheduled to go into production late this week under the direction of Edward Sedgwick. The company will leave immediately on location at Caliente, Nevada, where railroad shots will be taken.

Paramount Signs Author to Scenario Staff

Paramount has signed Howard Emmett Rogers as a member of the scenario staff at the Long Island City studios. His first assignment is Richard Dix's next starring vehicle, "Paradise for Two." Rogers has written numerous vaudeville sketches, revue skits and musical comedy books.

"Crown of Lies" New Title for Negri Picture

Pola Negri's new picture for Paramount directed by Dimitri Buchowetzki will be known as "The Crown of Lies." This picture, an adaptation of the original story written by Ernest Vadda, was formerly known as "The Peacock Parade" and "Because I Love You."

Wm. Sistrom Inaugurates Daily Conferences

WILLIAM SISTROM, general manager of the De Mille and Metropolitan studios has inaugurated a system of daily department head conferences as a stimulant to the speeding up of production and avoiding misunderstandings at the studio.

The meetings consist of a technical conference, headed by art director Max Parker, a departmental conference headed by business manager George Volck, and an executive conference, in which William Sistrom, George Volck, L. M. Goodstadt and E. O. Gurney consolidate the information gained from the departmental and technical conferences.

"Kid Gloves" Next Comedy for Johnny Hines

C. C. Burr has purchased "Kid Gloves," a story by C. B. Carrington, as the next feature length comedy in which Johnny Hines will be starred for First National release.

"Kid Gloves" is the story of a young prize-fighter and his girl, a telephone operator who both become famous, he as the champion of his class while the girl becomes a famous dancer. Their success results in a clash of ideas and ideals which estranges them for a time but in the end they are reconciled.

"The Wilderness Woman" to Have Chester Conklin

Chester Conklin has signed with Robert T. Kane to appear in the principal comedy role of "The Wilderness Woman," a comedy melodrama from the Saturday Evening Post story by Arthur Stringer. Conklin will be seen as an old sourdough playing the part of Aileen Pringle's father. The production will be released through First National.

"Men of Steel" Production Near Completion

Production on "Men of Steel," a First National vehicle written by Milton Sills, who is also starred, from a suggestion received from R. G. Kirk's story, "United States Flavor" is expected to be finished within a week. George Archainbaud is directing under the supervision of Earl Hudson.

Columbia Pictures Buys "The Price of Honor"

The screen rights of "The Price of Honor," a Broadway stage play written by James R. Carey and produced by Al Woods, have been bought by Columbia Pictures Corporation. The screen production will appear on Columbia's coming season's schedule.

Gladys McConnell Signs Fox Contract

As a result of her work in "A Trip to Chinatown," Gladys McConnell has been signed to a contract by Fox. She has also had featured roles in "Elsie in New York" and "From the Cabby's Seat," both O. Henry stories, which were the basis for Fox productions.

Paramount Originates Plan for Authors

VERNE PORTER, new editor-in-chief for Paramount will introduce a new policy in dealing with authors. He plans to give writers every cooperation possible, to make them acquainted with picture needs and to assist them in every way he can.

Porter was for many years among the prominent editors in the magazine publishing industry. In that capacity he listened to hundreds of complaints that it was impossible for writers to penetrate the motion picture studios to learn what type of story material is required. His office in future will be open to all authors for the purpose of consulting on any matters the authors deem necessary.

Decries "States Rights" Term

Joe Brandt, President of Columbia Pictures.
Claims That States Right Market is Dead

IN a review of the state right situation Joe Brandt, president of Columbia Pictures Corporation voiced the thought that the term "states righter" should be done away with as there is no longer a state right market. Continuing, he said in part: "In the days past, and now happily buried, when an independent producer made a picture he would turn it over to a man or group of men who knew the 'state rights' buyers in each key city. These buyers, so-called, would pay a nominal sum for the rights and for one or two prints and the producer was lucky to get an even break.

"Into this field, from the distributing and producing end came myself and my partners, Jack and Harry Cohn. We believed that we could find one man or group in each releasing city who could be relied upon to play fair and build for the future.

"So five years ago we started out to test our theories and ideals. The first season we only had six pictures to offer the exchanges. That was not enough to supply the needs of any one local office. The second year we released twelve productions. This gave us a better leverage and the man who handled these could not swing quite so much outside product.

"The third season our schedule jumped again and we released sixteen. In every instance we were testing, trying out and checking results. For the 1925-1926 season we offered our franchise holders eighteen attractions.

"And now we say, after five years of trying that the term 'states righter' should be buried and buried deep. No longer is it possible for the one picture producer to fly around the country with a print under his arm and sell an 'orphan.' There is nobody left to buy product that way. If his picture is worth while the independent producer can find a release through the franchise holders of the independent distributing companies. If it is not worth while no one wants it at all. In other words the 'states right market' is gone forever."

Motion Picture News Booking Guide

"We do appreciate the Booking Guide. We use it entirely as a guide from which to buy, book and date our pictures, and again express our appreciation for the book."

The Princess Theatre, Birmingham, Ala., used a striking frontal flash to exploit Harry Carey in "The Man From Red Gulch," a Producers Distributing Corp. release, as shown by the photo above. A notable feature of the display, which was made from cutouts, was the miniature reproduction of "Red Gulch" in the strip across the lobby entrance.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

"Local Talent" Nights Aid Gold Theatre, Chicago

With the numerous charleston contests, discovery nights, kiddie nights and other similar novelties offered by a large number of Chicago theatres, it is difficult to give something with an original twist to it, but this has been done by Samuel Abrahams, assistant business manager of the Exhibitors Association of Chicago, and owner of the Gold Theatre, and his house manager Al Hicks.

They called in the leader of a local community club to supervise a "local talent contest" every Wednesday night. The contest was open to all and being in charge of the local leader of young folks, the affair assumed a great "community slant."

As it developed Mr. Abraham decided to call a rehearsal and registration hour on Sunday mornings, at the Gold Theatre, at which time entrants for the coming Wednesday night were viewed and advised as to the best way to present their material. He went even further in giving the contest his personal attention by having his daughter, Florence Abrahams, attend the Sunday morning rehearsals in the role of advisor. Miss Abrahams is a finished musician and entertains regularly over the radio.

The idea was given such a whole-hearted community air that few recognized it was the old "amateur night" with the result that some good constructive work is being done for the house, the local club leader, the aspiring thespians, and last, but not least, the old B. O.

Prizes for "Stage Struck" Performers at Victoria

A "Stage Struck" contest to exploit the Gloria Swanson feature of that title proved a popular success at the Victoria Theatre in Harrisburg, Pa.

Amateur entertainers of all descriptions were invited to appear on the Victoria stage in preliminary contest the first four nights of the week, during which selections were made for the final contest Friday night.

Window display by a sporting goods store in St. John, New Brunswick, featuring the First National skating derby to be held there for prizes of skate outfits autographed by the company's stars. The contest was similar to those held recently in Milwaukee, Minneapolis and other cities. The window display was arranged by H. Long, First National Branch Exchange Manager.

Novel Radio Stunt for 'Irene'

Prizes Offered for Best Answer to Question, "Do Clothes Make Girl"

FIRST NATIONAL has instituted a novel radio exploitation stunt in connection with the release of "Irene," Colleen Moore's newest starring vehicle, which will be released for theatre exhibition February 21st. It takes the form of a contest, the first prize for which will be the elaborate toilet set and beautifully carved wooden case that Miss Moore used in "Irene."

The contest was arranged in conjunction with station WJZ of the Radio Corporation of America, New York City, and its subsidiary, Station WRC, of Washington, D. C. The picture, as have several others of First National, will be radioized on February 18th. A week ago WJZ and WRC submitted to their listeners the question, "Do Clothes Make the Girl." Prizes to the value of $2,250 will be offered by Miss Moore for the best 300 word answers to this question.

The first prize will be the toilet set which jewelers have valued at $1,250. Second prize will be $500, third $250, fourth $100 and fifteen minor prizes of $10 each. The only stipulations of the contest are that the answers be limited to 300 words and that they be sent to Colleen Moore at Station WJZ, New York City and received there before midnight of February 28th.

Teaser Window Display for "What Fools Men"

The teaser idea was neatly applied to a window display recently by George Schade, owner of the Schade Theatre, Sandusky, O., in connection with a campaign for "What Fools Men." The displays were made in windows of a vacant store.

Each window was neatly backed with a fabric of plain black, dimly lighted from above and dressed with a picture of a woman, set in a small frame and set up on a miniature easel embellished with a bow of white ribbon.

In the foreground, so placed that it could not be overlooked, was a card neatly inscribed: "What Fools Men."

The windows were exposed to public view four days before "What Fools Men" opened at the Schade. Two days in advance of the opening the fact that "What Fools Men" is a photoplay and that it was to be presented at the Schade, was made known by means of a second card that took the place of the first.

"Our plan worked very nicely," said Schade, passing comment. "The windows attracted a lot of attention."

Striking cut-out display for "The Lost World" (First National) designed by Manager W. A. Crank and used at the Majestic Theatre, Chico, Calif. The cut-outs over the entrance and on lobby stands were made from stock paper. Baby spots, shown in upper corners of the photo, illuminated the display.

Develops Mystery Air for "Phantom" in Davenport

Bill O'Hare, manager of the Garden Theatre at Davenport, Ia., developed a local mystery as an exploitation stunt for "The Phantom of the Opera." The stunt, launched almost two months before the play date of the "Phantom" at his theatre, had the effect of stirring the interest of Bill's townspeople to fever pitch.

He started it all by lettering in red ink the words "The Phantom" on white cards of the regular visiting card size. In order to distribute these in a manner which would keep secret their source, O'Hare obtained the cooperation of two high school girls, who placed one of the cards in the pocket, purse, book or any other personal article of their classmates without anyone else in the school knowing what they were doing.

Next he arranged with several cleaning establishments to insert one of the cards in the pocket of every garment they cleaned, and porters in barber shops were persuaded to slip them into the pockets of the shop's customers.

Before long a real air of mystery was developed. Everyone was trying to discover who this "Phantom" person was. When Mr. O'Hare did announce the showing of "The Phantom of the Opera," the entire city caught the tie-up idea instantly.

To bring the campaign to a rousing finish, Bill plastered every spot in town with "Phantom" paper and was liberal in the use of newspaper space. Then about ten days before the play date, one of the local newspapers started the serialization of the picture.

Record Drive for Gibson Feature in Calgary

As might be expected, Calgary proved the ideal exploitation stamping ground for "The Calgary Stampede," and advantage of every opportunity was taken by the management of the Regent Theatre there and the Universal exploiter assigned to assist Manager K. M. Leach. Working with Mr. Leach and Football and gridiron regalia were the unobtrusive symbols used to feature the showing of Pathe's "The Freshman" at the Palace, McAlester, Okla. by Manager Ralph Noble.

Guy Weadick were the Stampede manager and F. Vaughn, Universal branch manager in Calgary.

They secured the co-operation of Mayor Webster, who gave them permission to cover an entire street car with 24-sheets, 3-sheets, 6-sheets and various other size announcements, and to drive it about town with a motorman dressed as a cowboy.

Window tie-ups were made with the Hudson Bay Company, which also donated a blanket coat as a contest prize; Tom Campbell, the latter, who gave a genuine Stetson hat for the best essay of not over 500 words on the value of "The Calgary Stampede" from a publicity standpoint for Calgary and Alberta; Riley and McCormick, saddlery company, and the Great Western Saddlery Company.

Two reels of film taken in Calgary and not used in the feature, were presented to the city of Calgary by Universal and were shown with the picture. Mayor Webster announced that these reels would also be exhibited in other parts of the province during the screening of Hoot's greatest western.

Mr. Leach started off his campaign with two special showings. One was for the directors of the Calgary Stampede Association. The other was a special children's performance on the Saturday morning before the opening.

Dolle Starts Courtesy Club for "Thank You"

Fred Dolle, manager of the Alamo Theatre in Louisville, had the active cooperation of leading citizens of that town—even the Mayor and Retail Merchants Association assisting—when he started a Thank You League to exploit his presentation of the screen version of "Thank You."

The Mayor issued a proclamation announcing the week starting January 24 as "Thank You Week" as a measure of cooperation with the American Thank You League. The campaign was worked up with exceptional advertising through the cooperation of the merchants, who displayed stickers reading "Member American Thank You League. Do Your bit and see 'Thank You' at the Alamo."

The stickers were also pasted on all delivery wagons including those of the American Express Company and Ward's Bakery. All Yellow Taxis also carried the sign on their windshields.

Most of the merchants included in their newspaper advertisements an announcement of "Thank You" Week and a request that all Louisville assist in observing it.

Tango Number Prologue to "Eagle" at Carolina

An Argentine Tango performed in a garden scene was the presentation number staged with "The Eagle" by Manager Charles H. Amos at the Carolina Theatre, Greenville. At rise of curtain young girl was discovered sitting on a bench alone. A few seconds later a masked bandit enters, and the two do an Argentine Tango. The act was enthusiastically applauded at every performance.

Double Success on Tie Up for Errol Film in Akron

Mutual benefits of extraordinary proportions resulted from a newspaper-theatre tie-up for "Clothes Make The Pirate" in Akron, O., when the Strand and the Akron Times Press got together on a stunt which was no more expensive or extensive than the distribution of the paper pirate hats issued as accessories with the picture.

In co-operation with Arthur Dunlevy, manager of the Strand, in Akron, Walter Lindlar of First National's exploitation department arranged with the Akron Times Press to include a Leon Errol Pirate hat as a special supplement with each copy of the Sunday edition.

The paper carried a page one story of the stunt daily, a week in advance and the stunt scored for all concerned as is shown by a letter from the circulation manager of the paper to the theatre.

"Your stunt in enclosing the pirate hat in each Sunday edition was a Circulation getter and created a lot of good will with our subscribers. Calls started coming in for papers the minute the first paper appeared and have come in daily since that time," he wrote.

On Saturday, before the opening, a special parade of newsboys (more than 600) led by a police escort and a 50 piece band marched through the principal downtown streets to a special show. All of the boys carried banners and wore the pirate hats. And this stunt was given daily page one publicity. Apparently from the way this live showman's organization works there is no page but the front page.

Lindlar also promoted a Pirate Ball at East Market Gardens. The ballroom management took large daily newspaper ads announcing a "Clothes Make the Pirate Ball" and posted more than 200 one sheets. They also strung painted banners announcing the event all over town, besides decorating the ball room a week in advance.

The youthful poster artists crowd about the Empress Theatre, Sapulpa, Okla., to view their handiwork. The event pictured in the photo above was the main advance exploitation feature in the campaign of the Empress for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Old Clothes."

Organizes 'Buster Brown' Club

Harry McClure to Maintain Association of Youngsters as Strand Activity in Emporia

A NEW type of association for the youngsters of the community has been organized by Harry McClure, manager of the Strand Theatre in Emporia, Kansas. The organization, which is to be maintained as a social activity of the Strand, is known as the "Buster Brown Club" and was formed in connection with exploitation for the "Buster Brown" comedies.

The idea of the club was explained to the children at a free show given by the Strand for all patrons under 12 years of age, and registration of all who wished to join the club followed. Seven hundred kids crowded about Mr. McClure to place their names on the list and to receive papers which they must sign to obtain membership. Before any boy or girl can qualify as a member he or she must secure the endorsement of his school teacher, pastor or parent and an adult neighbor, and he must sign the Rules and By-laws. In the latter is a tie-up with the Buster Brown Shoe dealer of Emporia, as the youthful clubman must "agree whenever possible to always wear Buster Brown Shoes which have been tried and tested as the very best shoe for children." For this tie-up, the shoe dealer paid half of the cost of printing the "Rules and By-laws" and arranged a special window display of Buster Brown Shoes every time a Buster Brown comedy plays the Strand.

Each member receives a membership card signed by Mr. McClure and his name is entered in a ledger opposite the number on his card. Each time a Buster Brown comedy is shown, Manager McClure picks 25 of these numbers and announces on his screen and in the newspaper that the holders of the cards with these numbers on them will be admitted free to see the comedy.

Harry McClure intends to make this club an active affair—not merely an exploitation trick—and thereby to convert its members into enthusiastic patrons of the Strand Theatre.

Foerste to Issue Weekly Exploitation Letter

Howard W. Foerste, manager of Warners' State Theatre in Pittsburgh, will issue to exhibitors in that territory weekly exploitation letters covering his complete campaigns on the Warner productions which he presents at the State.

The enterprise is designed particularly for the smaller theatres, which thus will receive the benefits of Foerste's exploitation stunts in Pittsburgh.

Publicity Drive Exploits "Skyrocket"

Campaign in Altoona Built Around Stories of Star, Peggy Joyce

An extraordinary newspaper publicity campaign featured the exploitation which heralded the showing of "The Skyrocket" at the State Theatre in Altoona, Pa. The theatre staff was augmented by a special representative of Associated Exhibitors, distributors of the picture, that organization selecting this showing as a test of the publicity possibilities of their star, Peggy Hopkins Joyce, in the smaller cities.

Dewey D. Bloom, of the Associated Exhibitors publicity department, was sent to Altoona in advance of the opening of "The Skyrocket" at the State. While launching a campaign which covered all angles of exploitation, Bloom centered the greatest attention on newspaper publicity, with the result that as a "starter" he induced the Tribune to publish a story on the life of Peggy Hopkins Joyce, running it in five instalments starting on the day "The Skyrocket" opened at the State Theatre. The serialized story was announced with first-page streamers for three days before it started, and in front-page boxes urged Altoonians to read the authentic story of the life of this famous American beauty.

Meanwhile the Altoona afternoon paper The Mirror had started a series of beauty articles by Peggy Joyce on their Women's Page, publishing the series exactly as given in the press book.

The Penn-Alto Hotel staged a "Peggy Hopkins Joyce Dance." The dance was extensively advertised by them in the local newspapers.

On Monday the Tribune printed a co-operative double truck advertisement on "The Skyrocket" and Peggy Hopkins Joyce. Advertisements of a leading ice-cream manufacturer daily announced "The Peggy Joyce Brick" as special for the week. Confectioners and drug-stores advertised the "Peggy Hopkins Joyce Sundae" with window-stickers. Music stores arranged "Wonderful One" windows and decorated them with records and music.

Other stores had windows of perfume, candy, furs, etc. and the W. F. Gable Company, leading department store, gave over their best window to a display of fashionable ready-to-wear. This store conducts radio broadcasting station WFBG and permitted the Associated Exhibitors representative to give a five-minute talk on Peggy and on motion pictures in general. This proved so successful that the talk was repeated on four occasions.

'Merry Widow' Extensively Billed in Birmingham

An extensive billing campaign and Masked Merry Widow Contest were used to exploit "The Merry Widow" at the Loew's Temple Theatre, Birmingham, Ala.

"Miss Birmingham" (Miss Kincaid) the most beautiful girl in Birmingham, and runner up in the National Beauty Contest for the coveted title of "Miss America," was induced to appear as the Masked Merry Widow.

A tie-up with the Birmingham News, gave the idea a big flash. The object of the contest was to identify the masked girl when she retraced her steps without the mask.

TRIBUNE WILL PUBLISH PEGGY HOPKINS JOYCE LOVE AFFAIRS

LOVE AFFAIRS? READ WHAT PEGGY HOPKINS JOYCE SAYS

Clippings from the Altoona, Pa., newspapers, showing some of the results of the publicity campaign for "The Skyrocket" executed by an Associated Exhibitors' representative for the showing of the Peggy Hopkins Joyce feature at the State Theatre in that city.

There was a double page spread with advertisements from all the stores that the masked beauty visited on her tour about the town, and each ad. made some allusion to "The Merry Widow."

Cleveland Houses Combine Drives for Comedy Series

A "Buster Brown" Drawing contest staged under the combined auspices of the State and Alhambra theatres in Cleveland, was the means of exploiting showings of these comedies at both houses. The contest was sponsored by the Cleveland Times.

A seven-inch high half-tone of Buster was printed in the Sunday edition of the Times with instruction for the young artists. It was to be cut out, pasted on cardboard and colored with crayons or water colors. Three cash prizes of $5.00, $3.00 and $2.00, four paint boxes donated by the American Crayon Company, and twenty sets of tickets to the Alhambra and State Theatre were offered for the best work. The paper used stories on this contest several days in advance, both in the screen department and in regular news columns.

Buzz News of "The Keeper of Bees" Showing

"Buzzing" and plenty of it, both inside and outside the theatre by employees of the house, was responsible for talking up a fine advance campaign for the showing of "The Keeper of the Bees" at the Queen Theatre, Austin, Texas.

Accessories played an important role in the standard campaign. One of the most efficient was A Honey Bee Kiss, the candy being enclosed in an envelope imprinted with appropriate copy on the photoplay. These were distributed on the street and at the theatre several days in advance of show date.

A tie-up with the Federal Bakery resulted in the distribution of 1,000 special circulars in their purchases. Circulars were also given out in office buildings and at the concerts of the Senior High School. Some were also distributed at the local Ford Agency, employing thousands of people.

Newspapers heralded the picture with special stories, which were augmented by the theatre's special endorsement ad and a special showing for the "Gene Stratton Porter Club" of the schools.

Seattle Mayor Proclaims a "Classified" Week

One of the effective exploitation stunts in connection with the showing of "Classified" at the Liberty Theatre, Seattle, was the issuing of a Classified Week proclamation by the Mayor of Seattle. This was in the correct legal form of an official document and photographs of its being signed by the Mayor were taken and used in the news reel. There were also photos of the Corinne Griffith "Classified" Week Contest Editor receiving great quantities of mail.

In decorating the lobby, the idea of a classified page of a newspaper was carried out in every detail. In the easel to the right of the box office, was a cut-out made from the classified section of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer which gave the fullest co-operation in putting over Classified Week. By way of return, screen credit was given the newspaper immediately preceding the presentation of the picture.

Model Drive for "3 Faces East" in Los Angeles

With liberal cooperation from merchants and the active participation of the Cecil B. De Mille, Metropolitan and Christie studios, the Forum theatre, Los Angeles, executed a thorough and comprehensive drive for "Three Faces East" in that city recently.

Twenty-five trucks and sixty passenger machines of the De Mille, Metropolitan and Christie studios, together with a large number of private machines and trucks, were plastered with banners and one sheet ten days in advance.

Ten thousand auto doorknob hangers were distributed at the Forum theatre's free auto park and through the downtown section.

A window display of spy paraphernalia used in the picture was carried for a week each in Two Los Angeles banks. A special illuminated twenty-four sheet, directly across from the theatre, was erected two weeks in advance of the run. The trailer went in two weeks in advance and two very large easels were built and specially painted to give an advance lobby display.

A "Live Wire" display for the First National feature of that title, boosted receipts for the Colonial Theatre, Portsmouth, N. H. Arranged by Manager Edgar Hart, the poster stand was equipped with a medical vibrator with a battery concealed, which gave a "tingle" to all who touched the handles.

A one inch double column underline was carried Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday preceding the Saturday opening with one and one-half double on Friday, five inch double Saturday and Sunday, two inch double on Monday, one inch double Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

The local radio station KFI, Los Angeles, was used the Wednesday preceding the opening with director Rupert Julian and two musical acts, and the Wednesday of the run with Jetta Goudal and the musical act from the theatre. Later on in newspaper campaigns a connection may be drawn between the General Mitchell aviation fight and the air raid in the picture.

Kid Bike Races in Seattle for "Sporting Life"

A series of bike races, sponsored by the Columbia Theatre and the Seattle Star, stirred up a fund of interest for the presentation of "Sporting Life" in Seattle.

The stunt broke four days in advance of play date with a front page story in the Star. The bicycle dealers of Seattle donated the prizes which consisted of a $45 "bike" for first prize and six other awards of bicycle accessories.

Over three hundred boys gathered at the field, each with his bicycle. As they passed through the gate each boy was given a colored ribbon to denote his age division, for the races were divided into two groups; one for the boys from nine to eleven years, and the other for those from eleven to fourteen. Parents or anyone else caring to witness the races were admitted free.

Newspaper cameramen were on the job and two large banners were stretched on the fence opposite the grandstand calling attention to "Sporting Life" at the Columbia.

Every boy participating in the race was invited to attend a special theatre party given that same afternoon at the Columbia and not one of the entire three hundred missed seeing the picture, with most of them bringing their mothers and older brothers and sisters along as cash customers.

Ghost Stories Contest for "Phantom" Campaign

The strongest selling factor of Manager H. C. Farley's customary exploitation for "The Phantom of the Opera," at the Empire theatre, Montgomery, Ala., was a Ghost Story Contest conducted with the cooperation of the Montgomery Journal.

Contest was started ten days prior to opening, and carried on throughout picture's run. Prizes of $25.00 in cash were awarded to those submitting the best stories. Hundreds of answers were received, the contest proving the most popular to any heretofore launched in Montgomery.

One of the best circus fronts for United Artists' "Sally of the Sawdust" was that arranged by Manager Pat McGee at the Criterion, Oklahoma City, shown above.

COOL'S RECORD

L. B. COOL, manager of the Feiber and Shea Grand Opera House, has set a brand new precedent for Canton, Ohio, by bringing back "The Merry Widow" for three successive engagements. The Opera House plays road shows as well as pictures so pictures are always run the first part of the week. Cool opened on Sunday, November 1st with "The Merry Widow." He played it four days and then had to make room for a road show. He brought the picture back again on Sunday, November 8th, and did more business with it than he did during the opening engagement. A road show again interrupted the picture's run, and again on Sunday, November 15th, he brought it back for the third time. He would have brought it back a fourth consecutive week if a print of the picture had been available.

AN EXPLOITATION SKYROCKET

IN a letter to this journal, dated February 6th, Henry Needles, of the Strand Theatre, Hartford, Conn., pays high tribute to the abilities and energy of Ken Hamilton, exploiter for Associated Exhibitors and now specializing on "The Skyrocket," as is clearly evident in the following excerpts from the letter:

"When it comes to real practical exploiting, and new and real honest-to-God ideas, I take my hat off to Ken Hamilton, the exploitation man of Associated Exhibitors who is here in town this week ahead of "The Skyrocket." His musical talents and experience and combined popularity with radio audiences is being used by him, I understand, to get himself (and when I say himself I mean the star of the picture, the story itself and the theatre where the picture is being shown) on as many programs during his stay in the town as possible. Once they hear him sing and realize that he has an ideal broadcasting voice, they are after him to sing every evening, and as was the case here in Hartford, to give talks over the air on Hollywood and Hollywood people and he even went so far one night as to read two or three articles of Peggy Joyce's on cosmetics and coiffeurs over the air and the studio received over 150 letters the next day asking if those articles were in booklet form and if they could get them anywhere.

"This is the sort of stuff that actually means something to an exhibitor. I'll wager there isn't a person in Hartford or within a radius of 500 miles who does not know that Peggy Joyce in "THE SKYROCKET" is at the Strand next week—and listen, he even makes it more certain by appearing in person on the opening night and singing a group of songs, which he will do here tomorrow evening at our opening. Not only that—he has been at it all week pulling stunt after stunt—when he wasn't broadcasting.

"I can truthfully say that this fellow Hamilton is a real honest-to-God exploiter—why—because his entire time is taken up day and night thinking up new ideas and going ahead and carrying them out and I'll say right here that as far as worth is concerned this fellow will be an asset to an exhibitor who has booked or is considering booking pictures that Hamilton exploits."

PRESS AGENT-ARTIST

E. J. ELICKER, a 16-year-old school boy who is showing much aptitude as a press representative for the Victoria and Colonial picture theatres, Harrisburg, Pa., accomplished an effective bit of exploitation for "The Lost World," when it appeared at the Colonial. Obtaining a photograph of Market street, the principal Harrisburg business thoroughfare, Mr. Elicker, painted the figure of one of the huge prehistoric monsters,—an Allosaurus—representing it as having invaded Harrisburg.

The beast was painted about as tall as the highest building and the artist touched up the photo to make it appear that the monster was upsetting trolley cars, smashing in store fronts and putting the populace to flight. The completed picture was printed three columns wide in the Harrisburg Telegraph under a caption which suggested what would happen in Harrisburg should an Allosaurus make an unexpected appearance there, just as it did in London in the photograph.

The day preceding opening the program, which featured "The Gilded Butterfly" (Fox), was revealed by the page of the open book.

Reproductions of ads in the campaign for the New Terminal, designed and executed by Ralph Kettering, head of the Ascher advertising department. This novel campaign was started with "teasers" and worked up to the larger spaces as indicated in these reproductions.

AND OURS

Miniature stage setting in shadow box used for Paramount's "Stage Struck" at the Riviera, Knoxville. It was designed by Manager W. E. Drumbar. Cutouts from scene stills were backed with heavy cardboard and grouped on the stage. Silk fabrics were used as back drop and side drapes on the stage.

EAU CLAIRE CELEBRATES

THE opening of the State theatre, Finklestein & Ruben's new house in Eau Claire, Wis., proved an occasion of exceptional importance in the annals of that city. The theatre itself, bringing to the city the advantages of a thoroughly modern, beautiful and finely equipped playhouse, offered reason enough for the great stir of interest which marked the inauguration of its activities. But—and here's the point of this "idea" of ours—how could the people know just how fine and how important was the coming of the State unless they had been fully informed as to its various excellencies of architecture, construction, furnishings, decorations, the kind of entertainment it would present, etc., unless there had been a highly intelligent and efficient publicity campaign launched well in advance?

That brings us the publicity campaign itself—an especially fine one even for so capable a press organization as Ben Ferriss has built up for the F. & R. theatres. The climax of the campaign was the publication of a special section by the Eau Claire Leader and devoted to the State theatre. The section was in ten pages and carried ads of the builders and manufacturers of the theatre and its equipment, in addition, of course, to feature stories and short news items relating to the State and the F. & R. organization. Special sections for theatre openings have, at this late day, ceased to be an extraordinary occurrence. But it seems well out of the ordinary to "put over" a ten-page special in a city of 25,000 citizens and do it with the style which marks the State theatre section as quite distinctive.

SILVER ANNIVERSARY

JAKE and Otto Wells, heads of the Wells Amusement Corporation and operators of a large chain of theatres in the south, celebrated the 25th Anniversary of their theatrical activities on January 21. It was on that date in 1901 that these showmen acquired the Granby theatre in Norfolk, their initial step as partners in a remarkable march toward prosperity and eminence in the theatrical world.

With the Granby established, Jake Wells, realizing that a successful vaudeville circuit required a string of theatres close together, acquired the Auditorium in Birmingham, renaming it the Bijou. With this added to the Granby and Bijou in Richmond, which Jake Wells began operating in 1897, the circuit continually grew until it became a great factor in the vaudeville world. When vaudeville waned in popularity, the Wells organization turned to other attractions and throughout their career have followed the course of catering to the public tastes in matters of entertainment.

After the Wells organization had acquired practical control of the theatres in the leading southern cities, Jake Wells decided to go to New York. He established offices there, and held a position of dominance because he practically controlled the theatres of the south.

It was at that time that the memorable fight between Klaw & Erlanger, the great booking agency, and the Shubert brothers was on. Klaw & Erlanger would not book shows in theatres where Shubert attractions were played, but Jake Wells threw a bombshell into the booking offices when he declared that he stood for the "open house" policy, and would proceed to book whatever shows he desired, whenever he pleased. Klaw & Erlanger could do nothing about it, so the war with the Shuberts was ended. Then the Shuberts attempted to make war similarly on their old rivals, and Jake Wells as firmly set his foot down upon that. Afterwards the Wells theatres played any show they pleased, regardless of who its booking agent was.

Within 12 years after Jake and Otto Wells had joined hands to work out the destiny of their theatrical enterprise, they owned and operated 42 theatres in cities throughout the south. In 1914 Wells' enterprises formed an alliance with Wilmer & Vincent, operators of many theatres in southern cities. After the war, in 1919, it was decided to sell the great chain of outlying theatres, and they were disposed of to the Carolina Amusement Company. Everything south of Virginia was sold, except two theatres in Hendersonville, N. C., which belong to Jake Wells personally.

The Wells holdings in Norfolk and Richmond have been regarded by the larger theatrical syndicates as a "plum," in every sense of the word, and in recent years some sort of overtures have been made almost continually for the purchase of the Wells interests.

"Our theatres are for sale, all right, if we can get our price," has been the invariable reply of Otto Wells to queries concerning the negotiations.

W. A. CRANK'S ADS

WITH reference to a highly successful campaign, we have the following report from W. A. Crank, manager of the National Theatre, Chico, Calif. A specimen of the excellent teaser ads to which he refers, is reproduced here.

"Our campaign on 'The Iron Horse' included besides a regular outside bill board route together with window cards, a teaser campaign in the papers like samples enclosed which proved to attract much attention and comment. The copy used seemed to give deeper thought and realization that the Iron Horse was of much more importance than one would think just from the reading of posters and ads.

"Our efforts also included the staging of a prologue including eight real Indians in a series of Mask dances. Decked out in full regalia, these fellows whom we secured from an old local tribe here, the Bidwells, gave a wonderful eight minute program just before the fade in of the picture. In their war paint and with their well drilled steps they went over big, as well as fitting the atmosphere of the film. The setting was a wood drop and wings lighted by bunches and borders toned from a night blue to a red sunset. The Indians made their own music with their hum-hum, reed whistles and pow-wow, which started up just before the rise of the curtain."

Warners Stage Model Exploitation

Practical Methods Mark New York Drive for "The Sea Beast"

ONE of the outstanding features of the remarkably effective campaign which the Warner Bros. exploitation department executed for "The Sea Beast" engagement at the Warners Theatre in New York, is the simplicity and practicability of the methods employed to attract the attention and stimulate the interest of the public in this spectacular production. The campaign's most notable items were those which are within the reach of the average exhibitor in the average town and big city.

Changing policy from continuous performance at popular prices to two-a-day at $2.20 top, and getting the new policy over with a bang from the very start, was the experience of the Warner Theatre when it presented this John Barrymore special.

A publicity campaign began two weeks in advance with a billboard campaign on subway and elevated space as well as advertising boards. The slogan of this campaign was "Look Out! The Sea Beast is Coming." The day the picture opened, it was changed to "Look Out The Sea Beast Is Here."

Two weeks before the change of policy at the theatre, "Sea Beast" heralds, announcing the new scale of prices, were distributed at the theatre. A special invitation—not, however, to a free performance!—was forwarded to eleven thousand names in the Social Register and Blue Book.

In connection with the John Wanamaker "Moby Dick Week" which has already been described, a circular was distributed.

Thomas Cook & Son used a similar advance circular making the same mention of the picture. Their Fifth Avenue window display of a miniature whaler and Barrymore portraits "went in" a week before the opening of the picture. This company mentioned the picture three evenings in their radio travelogue on WJZ.

Theatre and hotel ticket agencies were furnished with old ship models and Barrymore portraits. Over one hundred displays were secured in this way.

A corner of the lobby of Warner Theatre on Broadway, decorated with enlarged colored scenes from "The Sea Beast" in an attractive arrangement which drew attention from passersby.

"Hands Up" Has Big Tieup for Memorial Fund

Good results were obtained for both theatre and Stone Mountain Memorial Association, when Manager F. J. Miller permitted one of their members to speak for three minutes before the showing of "Hands Up" at the Modjeska, Augusta, on behalf of their Coin Drive, the proceeds of which are for the benefit of the Confederate Soldiers at Stone Mountain.

The tie-up added greatly to the goodwill already enjoyed by the theatre.

Holds "One Cent" Sale of Theatre Tickets

Scottsbluff, Nebr. saw a novelty in a one cent admission price at the Sun theatre. It was worked on the drug store plan of full price for one, one cent for the second ticket. Sheiks entertaining their shebas for one cent packed the house for the day.

Galveston's Prize Goats Strut for "Annie Rooney"

A goat contest, with prizes for the best looking billy or nanny brought to the "fair" by youngsters of Galveston, Tex., was one of the main items of the exploitation which Manager E. C. Collins staged for "Little Annie Rooney" at the Queen Theatre in that city.

The contest was conducted through slides on the screen, offering five tickets to the youngster possessing the largest goat in Galveston. The contest was the cause of much merriment and word-of-mouth advertising for the attraction.

The day before picture's opening, a private screening was held for all local school teachers, city officials and the press. The result was splendid newspaper write-ups, and announcements in classrooms.

Lobby display consisted of two pieces, one on either side, each depicting Mary Pickford and her 'gang' looking over a fence. Lights concealed behind first section of each display threw the tenement house in background in bold relief.

Spanish Week Celebrated for "Flower Of Night"

H. L. Hartman, manager of the Balboa and Cabrillo Theatres, in San Diego, is credited with one of the most successful exploitation campaigns staged in that city for a motion picture for his recent "Spanish Week" drive.

As an opening gun for the Spanish Week, featuring Pola Negri in "Flower of the Night," and Fanchon and Marco's review, entitled "Mission Bells," Mr. Hartman put on a banquet at Mission Beach Casino, to which he invited the members of the editorial departments of the four daily papers and several weekly papers.

At each place was a combination place-card, attached to which was an exact replica of a Mission bell and a pass for each guest and a friend for the showing of the picture at the Balboa. The menu, too, was quite different from the conventional, and was printed like a theatrical program.

The campaign for "The Sea Beast" at the Warners Theatre in New York developed many outstanding exploitation features. It was dignified and partook of methods of great simplicity and practicability and yet attracted wide attention. Above are shown photos of the window display in the Thos. Cook & Son Fifth Avenue store, tying up with the display at the Wanamaker store; in center, a corner of a book display at Wanamaker's, and at the right an effective window display featuring a ship, made of wood, and about two feet in height.

THE Pathe program of releases for the week of February 21st includes a new Grantland Rice Sportlight, a Hal Roach two-reeler, the second chapter of the serial, "Casey of the Coast Guard" and the usual weekly features.

"The Great Arena" is the title of the Grantland Rice Sportlight, which is devoted to many interesting phases of water and ice events.

"Shots in the Dark" is the title of the second chapter of the serial, "Casey of the Coast Guard." Helen Ferguson and George O'Hara have the leading roles. The cast also includes Coit Albertson, J. Barney Sherry and Jean Jarvis.

Hal Roach's two-reel contribution is titled "Wandering Papas" and is starring vehicle for Clyde Cook, which was directed by Stan Laurel.

Pathe Review No. 8 features another episode in the trip of Knud Rasmussen's three-year pilgrimage through the land of the Eskimos. Also in this reel are "The Cradle of War," Sarajevo in the Balkan Peninsula and "The Book and the Wave," a pictorial interpretation of the verses from Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's famous poem—in Pathecolor.

"The Wicked City" is the cartoon release of the Aesop's Film Fables series.

Topics of the Day No. 8 presents a reel of wit and humor clipped from the press of the world. Two issues of Pathe News complete the schedule.

Roxy Signs for Fox News Reel

Completes Contract for First Unit of Picture Programs He Will Present

S. L. ROTHAFEL (Roxy) has signed his first contract for motion picture product he will show in his new $10,000,000 theatre now in course of construction in New York City. Last week he signed a contract for Fox News, the motion picture news reel produced and distributed by Fox Film Corporation.

The signing of the document took place in Rothafel's office with a number of Fox executives present. Among them were James R. Grainger, general sales manager; Fred C. Quimby, short subjects sales manager, and Truman Talley, managing director of Fox News.

The acquisition of Fox News constitutes the only official announcement to be made thus far by Roxy concerning the motion picture portion of the program he will run in the new picture palace. Regarding it he said:

"My act in making Fox News the object of the first motion picture contract for the Roxy Theatre is my tribute to the value of motion picture news reels."

An office will also be opened in England in April next, the President of the Company going to London for that purpose, as it is the intention of the Company to develop very strongly the foreign end of the business.

"Run Tin Can"

(Educational-Christie—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

THERE may have been other instances where a burlesque of a "dog star" feature has been made but this is the first that this reviewer has witnessed—and it's a corker! Too often, comedies are made along the same old standard lines and this offers something different. Furthermore, while the name of this police dog is not mentioned—it ought to be—for some of its stunts are remarkable and show the effect of careful training. Neal Burns and Vera Steadman play the leads but without deprecating their ability the dog easily runs away with the picture. Robert Thornby directed. The story is by Sig Hertig.

The Cast

"Run Tin Can," Neal Burns, Vera Steadman, Eddie Baker and Lincoln Plummer.

The Story—Neal and the villain Eddie are the rivals for the hand of Mary whose home is out among the oil wells. Neal's pal is "Run Tin Can," a police dog. Eddie discovers that an abandoned oil well belonging to Neal, is in reality a valuable piece of property and seeks possession through an offer of a small sum of money. Neal is inclined to accept the offer but through the efforts of "Run Tin Can" who has taken a keen dislike to Eddie, his signature to the deed is delayed long enough to permit the arrival of Mary who bears the news that Neal's well has "come in." Eddie and his "wild cat" associates tie Mary and Neal to beams in an old shack and endeavor to get to the tax office to buy in the well. "Run Tin Can" comes to the rescue and in a mad race to the tax office, foils the villain and saves the well for his pal.

Summary—A burlesque of "dog star" features that offers something novel in the line of two reel comedies. Is suitable for all houses and should not fail to please.

"Gooseland"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

THIS type of comedy is particularly suitable to Alice Day for it enables this attractive little comedienne to do the kind of work in which she always appears to advantage. It's a lot of slapstick—and that is where Miss Day shines. Mack Sennett is the producer and Alf Goulding did the directing. The supporting cast is very good.

The Cast

Alice Day, Joseph Young, Eugenia Gilbert, Barney Hellum, Sunshine Hart and Mary Ann Jackson.

The Story—There isn't any—unless one can call it the adventures of a Holland farm-flapper. The entire two reels are crowded to the brim with gags and slapstick comedy—with a cast that certainly knows how to produce this type of entertainment. Alice Day is seen in the role of the attractive young flapper at a Holland inn where her hand is sought by local sheiks and visiting tourists. A goose—also part of the establishment—is used to furnish a lot of the fun.

Summary—Two reels of slapstick with Alice Day and a strong supporting cast at their best. It is very fair entertainment.

"Trimmed in Gold"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

BILLY BEVAN and Andy Clyde, two well known fun-makers, are the principal characters in this two reel Mack Sennett comedy directed by Del Lord. Ably assisted by Madeline Hurlock and Kewpie Morgan, they have provided first rate entertainment. The story concerns the adventures of two barbers who, attracted by a customer's tale of easy money out West, seek wealth and the "wide open spaces" with the aid of an old flivver.

The Cast

Billy Bevan, Andy Clyde, Madeline Hurlock and Kewpie Morgan.

The Story—Billy and Andy are two of the barbers and Billy draws, as one of his customers, a big mine man from the West. He tells Billy that money can literally be scooped up from most any place around his home and with this in mind, Billy and Andy fare forth in their Ford to make their fortune. After many adventures, the pair reach the wide open spaces and start prospecting. The manicurist of the shop has also managed to reach the goal. It develops that the big mine man is in reality, a gambler who wins his money by questionable methods. As he rakes in the pots, an assistant pours the money down a chute which leads to a vault. Billy and Andy, in their explorations, find this vault and think they have discovered a mine. Taking some of the money, they go to the gambler's room and sit in the game. Thus, the money continues to circulate—from the mine to Billy—from Billy to the gambler—and down the chute again.

Summary—Good entertainment by a well known cast of fun-makers. Will do well in most houses.

"Accidents Can Happen"

(Universal-Stern Bros.—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is a wild harum-scarum, slapstick comedy featuring Al Alt and Hilliard Karr, which should have landed them all in an emergency hospital. It is one of those wild chases in which furniture is smashed and a general rough house all but demolishes the premises. There are a few good comedy situations, but for the most part it is of the rougher type of comedy.

The Story—Alt and Karr as aviators crash in a tail spin and in their resultant hallucinations hear an imaginary call for help from the girl they both love. The chase leads them to an abandoned house, where they become involved with a mysterious gang and a general rough house is precipitated. It develops they have been participants in a lodge initiation conducted by the girl's father.

Summary—There is not a great deal to recommend in this comedy except for those who like rough, slapstick humor. It fairly abounds in that, with an occasional situation that calls for a laugh.

"Careful, Please!"

(Educational-Hamilton—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

A TYPICAL Lloyd Hamilton comedy with a story particularly adapted to the efforts of this comedian. In spots it is a little slow but on the whole, Hamilton with a good supporting cast has provided pleasing entertainment. The story has to do with the problem of collecting a three dollar furniture debt in a tough neighborhood and the rescue of a fair maiden held for ransom by the toughest man on the street. Norman Taurog is responsible for the story and the direction.

The Cast

Lloyd Hamilton, Marcella Daly, Stanley Blystone, Louise Carver and Dick Sutherland.

The Story—A furniture concern sends a bill collector to bring back three dollars from Tim Riley—the toughest man in a tough neighborhood. The collector fails and Hamilton in the role of a super-collector appears to try his luck. While the gang leader is away, he gains entrance to the house and proceeds to throw the furniture out on the street. Tim Riley returns to receive most of the furniture on his head as it is falling from the upper story. A gang fight is precipitated and the members slowly but surely annihilate each other. Hamilton, alone survives and rescues the poor little rich girl who is being held in the house for ransom. The girl invites her hero to her home and proceeds to vamp him until her guardian appears. Hamilton leaves to talk matters over with his friend who awaits him in his car. They inadvertently become mixed up with a crane and are hoisted high in the air. Some of the best situations follow at this point.

Summary—A typical Lloyd Hamilton comedy that should get by most anywhere. Although a bit slow in spots, it presents on the whole, very good entertainment.

"Big Game"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

A BASKETBALL game between the towns of Paradise and Piperock is the theme on which this comedy western is built, featuring Pee Wee Holmes and Ben Corbett. It is somewhat out of the ordinary lines of comedies and fairly interesting throughout. There are some good comedy situations, some good knockabout stuff and some good hokum surrounded by a western atmosphere that goes to make the whole thing attractive.

The Story—The town of Paradise boasts an unbeatable basketball team, whose challenge is accepted by Piperock. Magpie Simpkins and Dirty Shirt Jones are the stars of the Piperock team. Magpie gets the ball and the boys throw him with the ball for a basket. Dirty Shirt scores the next basket, but for the opposing team when he throws the ball into the wrong basket. Magpie, through a ruse throws the winning goal and the Paradise followers go home sans clothes, money, horses and equipment.

Summary—This is a good western comedy containing more than the usual amount of appealing humor. It has a number of situations that are bound to provoke laughter. All in all it should go well where this type of picture is appreciated.

"The Tiger Hunt"

(Hal Hodes—Short Film Exch.—One Reel)

AN unusually interesting single reel subject that will prove to be a welcome addition to the program of first run theatres and all other houses. It is the story of an Indian tiger hunt and shows the vast amount of preparation necessary to an expedition of this kind. At the risk of his life, the camera man—Richard Cowling—managed to get some remarkable close-ups of one of the man-eating beasts and almost lost his life while doing so. One hundred and fifty elephants and three hundred men were used in this picture.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"The Windjammers"

(Pathe-Aesop Fables—One Reel)

THE contrasting figures of a burly Thomas Cat and a tiny mouse—the latter dragging a huge pair of bellows about—are the principal characters in this cartoon by Paul Terry. The bellows are put to a variety of uses. The mouse swims to the bottom of a fish pond and with the aid of the instrument, blows fish up to the top and into the cat's hands. They then climb to the roof of a farmer's house, force the smoke back thru the chimney and finally drive out the farmer and a large number of rats. This one measures up well to the high standard that these series have set.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Casey of the Coast Guard"

(Pathe Serial—Three Episodes)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

DRAMATIC action, intrigue, thrilling situations and well handled suspense at the close of each episode are all embodied in this new Pathe Serial. During the first part of the opening episode the action is a trifle slow but from this point, the story gathers plenty of speed and the production looks like sure fire serial material.

The story has to do with "Casey of the Coast Guard"—a young officer who is hated and feared by a band of smugglers. Close co-operation from the Washington headquarters of the U. S. Coast Guard Service, loan of equipment, etc., have given this serial a touch of realism that is not usually found. There is a snap and vigor displayed by the "regulars" that rings convincingly true.

George O'Hara has been cast as "Casey" and makes a well groomed officer—perhaps a little too well groomed for a "hard-boiled" role. Helen Ferguson plays opposite O'Hara and does exceedingly well. Others prominent in the cast are Coit Albertson, J. Barney Sherry and Jean Jarvis and their work is entirely satisfactory. Will Nigh did the directing. The story was adapted from the work of Lewis Allen Browne and William Burt.

The Cast

Ensign George Casey.....	George O'Hara
Doris Warren.....	Helen Ferguson
John Warren.....	J. Barney Sherry
Countess Zelina.....	Jean Jarvis
Don Malverni.....	Coit Albertson
James Courteau.....	Robert Craig
The Hunchback.....	James Mack
Deep Water Kelly.....	Joe Marba
Jack Denton.....	Rolland Flander

The Story—George Casey is hated and feared by a band of smugglers under the leadership of Don Malverni and "Diamond Kate." These two with their band have established themselves on an estate near the coast and pose as "Count and Countess." Planning their next coup, they choose for the time, a night when the Cadets of the Coast Guard are to hold a ball in celebration of promotions. They arrange a fake S.O.S. in connection with a fire on an old schooner. They decide to "get" Casey when the signal is answered. Orders are changed and Casey's brother responds to the call. That night Frank Casey receives the bullet intended for George. George arrives on the scene, swears revenge and pursues the killer to a point near Malverni's estate where a fight occurs. In searching for the wounded man, Casey discovers a secret passage which leads to the house. That same night, the "Count and Countess" are entertaining John Warren and his daughter Doris—the latter, Casey's fiancée. The Countess poses as Malverni's sister and soon has John Warren infatuated with her. She plans to use Warren as an outlet for smuggled jewels. Casey suddenly appears from the basement and "Diamond Kate" cleverly allays Casey and aided by her accomplice and the gang, stage a fake fight. In the meantime, Doris confides her suspicions to Casey and plans are made to determine the ownership of the yacht "Sea Spray." Coast Guard cutters and seaplanes scout for her position. Locating the ship, Casey boards her and a struggle occurs when he reaches a cabin where Malverni is seated.

Summary—Any theatre that can handle a serial will find this entirely satisfactory. Thrilling situations, well handled suspense and the splendid assistance lent by the U. S. Coast Guard are the highlights. A well gotten up press book contains some exploitation ideas and the daily newspapers are constantly playing up the activities of the Coast Guard Service.

"Buried Treasure"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

AS A RULE, all these "Gang Comedies" set a high standard in two reel comedy production and this one is certainly not an exception. In our opinion, it's one of the best that Hal Roach and Director Robert McGowan have turned out. A better subject than a search for buried treasure could not be found for "The Gang" and the scene between Farina and the Ape—is a scream! Just that and nothing else would put this one over and Director McGowan is certainly entitled to credit for the manner in which he has handled a difficult piece of work.

The Cast

Mickey Daniels, Johnny Grey, Fatty Joe Cobb, Farina, Mary Kornman and Jackie Condon.

The Story—After reading Treasure Island, Johnny is at once inspired to promote a treasure seeking expedition. His enthusiasm sells the scheme to the rest of the Gang and they proceed to build a boat which, after being completed, resembles a cross between a Ford and a ferry boat. An old sailor gives the boys a chart of a treasure island. In reality, it is an ad for a real estate company. In their strange looking craft they set sail for the island. On their arrival, the correct number of paces are marked off and the hunt for gold begins. A motion picture company is on location and the actors are doing "cannibal stuff." Discovering the kids, they decide to give them a scare. A trained ape, also part of the cast meets up with Farina and they immediately become friends. This part of the picture stands out as one of the best.

Summary—One of the best of the popular "Our Gang" comedies. This one cannot fail to please.

"Pathe Review No. 5"

(Pathe—One Reel)

FURTHER explorations of the Arcturus Expedition are shown in the first part of this issue of the Pathe Magazine—the capture of a huge specimen of the shark family being one of the outstanding features. Scenes of Galapagos Island where a large number of frigate birds make their home, are also included in this part. Love making methods of the male birds are brought to light. They attract their mates by the inflation of a pouch attached to their necks. The rest of the reel tells how a marriage bargain is struck in Korea and Pathecolor scenes of Dresden and the Elbe river are also shown.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Pay the Cashier"

(Pathe—One Reel)

HERE is a short comedy that will serve very well as a filler for the programs of most theatres. The cast is headed by Paul Parrott and the story concerns the rise of this comedian from waiter in a restaurant to cashier of the establishment. The customers of this lunch room have been getting away with a lot more food than they are paying for when, Paul, by a clever arrangement, manages to put a stop to the pilfering and earns the everlasting gratitude of the proprietor.—EDW. ART in Archery" and microscopic studies of the mosquito are the two most interesting features of Pathe Review. During the first part, a description of the different bows and arrows is given. Powell, the archery wizard who was featured in the "Green Archer" serial, gives a demonstration of his accuracy in this art. The piercing power of the modern bow and arrow is also shown. An interesting microscopic study of mosquitoes during their breeding period and American wildflowers in Pathecolor complete the reel.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"All for a Queen"

HERE is a fine little short subject that is particularly suitable for all first run houses. "Pathe Review No. 7"

(One Reel)

THE "Process Camera" is again used in the first part of this Pathe Review which is entitled "Making over the Metropolis." This camera plays a most interesting number of tricks on the buildings and the city traffic. The "Birds Paradise" scenes of Palmyra, Hawaii and the "Stonebound City," Rothenberg, in Pathecolor make up the balance of the reel.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"When Hell Froze Over"

(Hal Hodes-Cartoon—One Reel)

AFAIR Mutt and Jeff cartoon but not as good as most of them for it is rather difficult to tell just what it is all about. The story seems to concern a coal shortage in Hades where Mutt and Jeff are called to preserve the existing fires. During their pursuit of the elusive flames, many troubles arise.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"The Strenuous Life"

(Pathe-Spotlight—One Reel)

ANOTHER interesting Grantland Rice Spotlight showing the vast amount of strenuous work and careful training that enters into the daily life of several professionals. It includes studies of the "strong man," the acrobat, dancers, pugilists, Charleston dancers and other sports.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

New Branch Managers are Named by Pathe

Two new branch managers have been appointed by Harry Scott, general sales manager of Pathe, and a third has been transferred. Roy O. Pearson, formerly salesman in the Chicago territory has been appointed branch manager at Omaha to succeed F. W. Gebhardt, who becomes manager at Kansas City, succeeding J. A. Epperson, who accepts another important position with Pathe.

John R. Mahan, formerly two-reel comedy salesman at New Haven has been made branch manager there. He succeeds W. J. Whyte, who is assuming other duties with the organization.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

High and Handsome

(F. B. O.—5669 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

MELODRAMATIC thrills, comedy and love interest are mixed up freely and with entertaining results in this picture with a big, good-looking cop for hero, the latter being impersonated by that hefty, handsome athlete, Lefty Flynn, who fits nicely in the role and plays it with commendable dash and spirit. The plot is simple enough, offering a straightaway yarn of a flattie who falls in love with a pretty girl living on his beat, has a prize-fighter for rival whom he tangles and mops up at the latter's own game, and so on. Most fans will like the picture because of its elemental appeal, its vigorous action and good work of the cast.

THEME. Melodrama. Patrolman Joe Hanrahan is suspended on account of a quarrel with pugilist Kennedy over a girl. Later he whips Kennedy, gets job and girl back.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Joe's first meeting with Marie. Comedy relief. Joe's fist fight with Kennedy. Romantic developments. The big glove contest scene.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost as love story of fighting cop, with pugilist rival. Play up the comedy laughs and human interest note. Stress prize fight. Feature star.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. as program attraction. Should please wherever they like the rough-and-ready stuff, with lots of melo action and rollicking comedy.

SUMMARY. Hits up a smart pace all the way through. Has melodramatic punches in plenty, particularly fighting scenes. Gets the laughs with comedy gags, star good in scrapping cop role, is well directed.

THE CAST

Joe Hanrahan.....Lefty Flynn
Marie Le Doux.....Kathleen Myers
Mrs. Hanrahan.....Lydia Knott
Jim Burke.....Jean Perry
Battling Kennedy.....Tom Kennedy
Myrt Riley.....Marjorie Bonner
Jimmy Le Doux.....John Gough

Author, Gerald Beaumont. Director, Harry Garson.

SYNOPSIS. Patrolman Joe Hanrahan and pugilist Battling Kennedy are rivals for love of Marie Le Doux. Jim Burke, fight promoter, is warned by Joe to repair the gallery of his arena, but fails to comply. An open quarrel with Kennedy results in Joe being suspended from the force. He meets and whips Kennedy in a glove bout. The contest takes place in Burke's place, the gallery falls, people are injured. Joe arrests Burke for criminal negligence, is reinstated and wins Marie.

Lefty Flynn, star of "High and Handsome," an F.B.O. production.

High and Handsome (F.B.O.). PRESS NOTICE

BIG athletic, good-looking Lefty Flynn, ex-football warrior and present film star, will appear at the Theatre on _____ in "High and Handsome," a picture with a fighting cop for hero.

This policeman role suits Mr. Flynn in every particular. He is seen upholding the majesty of the law on his beat, saving a kitten for a pretty girl, shooing away gangsters, always in action. Fun unlimited, thrills galore, distinguish this production, with a grand finale punch scene when Lefty knocks out a professional pugilist.

Kathleen Myers portrays Marie, the girl in the case, with vivacity and charm. Tom Kennedy is the pugilist chap, others in support, Lydia Knott, Marjorie Bonner and Jean Perry.

CATCH LINES

A dynamic story of destiny, a lovely little Irish romance, a policeman hero, a great prizefight scene!

The Shadow of the Law

(Associated Exhibitors—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

CLARA BOW, who is known principally for her flapper characterizations, is here introduced in a straight dramatic role and proves that her talent is not one sided. In fact Miss Bow, in addition to being easy of the optics, puts over an emotional part in a way that will win her new admirers. The picture is based on Henry Chapman Ford's novel, "Two Gates," and while the plot is cut from familiar fabric, it has action aplenty and succeeds in holding the interest because the producers have wisely kept the footage within reasonable lengths instead of padding it out as it is so often done these days. This is an instance of a good cast putting over an ordinary story. Forrest Stanley is a likable hero and Stuart Holmes is still one of our best villains. Ralph Lewis adds his talents in an appealing part. There is real action in the climax in which the master crook, seeking to destroy the girl who snubs him, is himself caught in a trap.

THEME. Crook melodrama. Master criminal frames girl into jail only to land there himself when her father and other members of villain's gang "get" him.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The robbery of the jewels and the shooting of Eagan's pal. Exposure of crook at reception. Miss Bow's characterization.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost as thrilling crook drama, play up Clara Bow. Get indorsement of police chief after showing picture to him.

DRAWING POWER. Good attraction for program houses.

SUMMARY. A well acted melodrama of the crook type which will entertain patrons of average house. Has been well mounted and carries a punch in its climax.

THE CAST

Mary Brophy.....Clara Bow
James Reynolds.....Forrest Stanley
Carl Lingard.....Stuart Holmes
Charles Brophy.....William V. Mong
"Twist" Eagan.....J. Emmet Beck
The Aunt.....Adele Farrington

Author, Henry Chapman Ford. Director, Wallace Worsley.

SYNOPSIS. Carl Lingard frames Mary Brophy's arrest on a fake jewel theft charge. On her return from jail, Mary is met by Jimmy Reynolds and an old friendship is renewed. Lingard plans theft of valuable paintings, with aid of Mary's dad, but when Lingard at reception declares Mary a jailbird, her father tells all. So do other members of gang. Lingard shoots father of girl, but he recovers. Mary and Jimmy wed.

PRESS NOTICE

CLARA BOW, supported by an all-star cast, including Forrest Stanley, Stuart Holmes, William V. Mong and others of equal note, will appear on the Theatre screen, commencing _____, in "The Shadow of the Law."

The story deals with the machinations of a master crook, who moves in society circles under the guise of an expert on art. Because the heroine rebuffs him, he frames her into jail on a trumped up charge. But in the end she and her father, with the aid of two members of the crook's gang, are the cause of the criminal's downfall. The production is rich in lavish settings especially the interiors.

CATCH LINES

The dramatic story of a girl's struggle against relentless fate and her triumph in the end!

A heated drama of a girl who would not be beaten by the forces led against her by a master crook!

Behind the Front

(Paramount—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

AMERICA must needs prepare for a gale of laughter which is going to sweep the nation from one end to the other when Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton appear on the screens of city, town and hamlet in this rollicking comedy of war days, adapted from Hugh Wiley's amusing story, "The Spoils of War." There isn't the least doubt but that this is one of the most laughable comedies put out in many a day, much of the credit for which, in addition to Messrs. Beery and Hatton's work should go to Edward Sutherland who presided at the megaphone and to Ralph Spence who once again has turned out a peppy set of titles. Folks will not soon forget the antics of the two newly-made soldiers as they clean streets, line up for inspection, insult the general, escape from the hoosegow, volunteer for duty in No Man's Land, invade a German trench and go for a joy ride between the lines in a tank, the mechanism of which is all dark to them.

THEME. Comedy dealing with adventures in France of a thick-witted cop and a pickpocket, vamped into the army by a girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Buddies bungling up dress parade, which lands them in the guard house. Pushed into volunteering for duty in enemy's lines. The ride in the tank.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tie-up with local American Legion posts. Prologue with doughboys singing old war songs. Boost as a real laugh getter.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for the best houses in the land, will please all fans.

SUMMARY. An extremely well acted, exceedingly laughable comedy, mounted with pictorial lavishness. Should appeal to all classes. Rich in amusing incident. A credit to everyone identified with its making.

THE CAST

Shorty McGee.....	Raymond Hatton
Betty Cooper.....	Mary Brian
Percy Brown.....	Richard Arlen
Captain Cooper.....	Hayden Stevenson
Scottie.....	Chester Conklin
Sergeant.....	Tom Kennedy

Author Hugh Wiley. Director, Edward Sutherland. Photographed by Charles Boyle.

SYNOPSIS. Riff Swanson, alleged detective, and Shorty McGee, pickpocket, are vamped into enlisting by Betty Cooper. The buddies arrive behind the lines where they are given menial tasks and the ways of soldiery knocked into them by a bully sergeant. After stirring adventures in the trenches of their own and the enemy troops, comes the armistice. They arrive home in time to see "their girl," wed to the man who sent over Brown's Biscuits.

"BEHIND THE FRONT," a comedy of the A.E.F. comes to the Theatre, commencing —. Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton add new laurels to their comedy record in their uproarious characterizations. No funnier scenes have ever been pictured than those showing the bewildered heroes on the inspection line, in the trenches, in the guard house, in No Man's Land and in a mad ride in a galloping tank. Through the plot runs a romance, with Mary Brian as a Red Cross worker. Others in the cast are Chester Conklin, Richard Arlen, Louise Lorraine and Gertrude Astor. The picture was made under the supervision of military experts

CATCH LINES

The Sunny Side of the War. A riot of grotesque and gorgeous gags. The story of a rough-neck and a sap. They fought the whole German army for a girl! A great human comedy of America at war!

The Handsome Brute

(Columbia Pictures Corp.—4779 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

ANOTHER entry on the long list of recent pictures "glorifying the American policeman," although in this particular instance the bluecoat hero isn't glorified to any extent you could notice until the final reel, for in the early stages of the yarn he shows up in rather a "boob" light, with little outside of his good looks to recommend him. But, as played by William Fairbanks, he is sure a sight to catch the ladies' eyes, and a scrapping hummer with both hands when he steps into action. Fairbank's fight in the big punch scene when he rounds up the three arch-crooks, is a real nifty walloping seance and the star gets a lot of fun out of the comedy situations as well. Virginia Lee Corbin, who played kiddie roles not so long ago, makes a pronounced hit as dainty heroine Nelly, and take it all-in-all, the picture's breezy, romantic, humorous and melodramatic appeal ranks it as a right good program film.

THEME. Comedy-melodrama. Policeman Larry O'Day loves Nelly Eagan, jeweller's daughter, loses job, but gets back through crook capture, wins promotion and girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Hero's comedy blunders. Gradual development of love affair. Acting of Fairbanks and Miss Corbin. Scene where Larry surprises crook trio.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can play this up safely as a picture full of melodramatic punch and surprises, with good comedy and heart interest values. Feature William Fairbanks and Virginia Lee Corbin.

DRAWING POWER. Good card for neighborhood, smaller houses and towns.

SUMMARY. Lively comedy-melodrama with cop hero, played with lots of dash and go by William Fairbanks, gets the laughs, puts over big thrill punch at close. Registers as a likely program attraction.

The Road to Glory

(Fox—5600 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS title is a muddy mystery as regards its connection with the filmed narrative, as nobody in the picture seems to have any hankering for, or attains glory of any sort by any visible ways or means. Briefly, the plot deals with a girl who goes suddenly blind, renounces God and her sweetheart, but regains both when her sight is restored by a sudden shock. It's a draggy, unsatisfactory yarn, poorly directed, unconvincing, with sentimental yearnings developed to the slushy verge of sheer absurdity; perhaps its weepy passages may awaken sympathy in some innocently vacant minds, but critical audiences will hand it the unfeeling horse-laugh. May McAvoy looks as pretty as ever and emotes energetically in the role of the fate-battered heroine, but her talents are wasted on an impossible role. Rockliffe Fellowes gives you the impression that he is laughing at himself in a peculiarly mild villain part, support is adequate.

THEME. Drama. Girl goes blind, loses faith in God, renounces sweetheart. He seeks her out again. Accidental shock restores her sight. They are reunited.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Auto wreck scene. Cabaret episode when heroine goes blind. Situation where she send David away. Storm scene, wreck of house. Climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up May McAvoy. Don't promise much as regards story or there may be a comeback. Bill as pathetic heart drama.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for daily change houses, or half of double feature bill.

SUMMARY. May McAvoy's pretty face and sincere acting the only bright spots in a decidedly dreary drama, which drags lamentably and is totally unconvincing; may get by in places where patrons are patient and uncritical.

The Road to Glory (Fox) PRESS NOTICE

A HEART drama of intense pathos and absorbing interest is outlined in "The Road to Glory," starring May McAvoy, and billed as the big screen attraction at the _____ Theatre on _____.

The story deals with a young girl who while riding in her fiance's car, meets with an accident which later results in blindness. Despair leads her to renounce her lover and defy God, but in the finale her sight is restored and she lives to make happy the man she loves and who remained loyal through her affliction.

Charming May McAvoy is wistfully alluring in the pathetic role of heroine Judith, supported by Rockliffe Fellowes, Leslie Fenton, Ford Sterling and Milla Davenport.

Beyond the Rockies

(F. B. O.—4851 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A GOOD old regulation border tale thriller, with all the excitement and thunder and lightning action one expects in a fast-running Westerner. Also, more than is usually looked for in the line of well-matured and sharp suspense, for director Jack Nelson certainly put a double edge on some of the big punch situations, notably that in which Bob Custer, bound and imprisoned in a burning shack with explosives stowed carelessly around him, makes a getaway by the skin of his teeth, so to speak. There are several other nerve-racking jolts handed the spectators, and it's a cinch that nobody will complain of lack of decisive action wallops in Mr. Custer's latest. The star is as physically energetic and attractive as ever, rides and fights in his customary whirlwind fashion and is well supported, with pretty Eugenie Gilbert a most alluring dance-hall-girl heroine; David Dunbar and Bruce Gordon sharing the villainous honors. Photography and lighting O. K.

THEME. Con Benteen, detective for Stockman's Association, goes to border town, runs down outlaw gang, falls in love with and wins dance-hall girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Custer's riding and gunplay. Scene where he gallops to safety ahead of cattle stampede. His escape from burning cabin. Comedy relief.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can promise an hour's vividly exciting entertainment without fearing a comeback. Play up Custer's stunts. Bill as red-hot melodramatic romance, with great Western backgrounds, laughs and thrills.

DRAWING POWER. Good program attraction, suitable wherever Westerners hold 'em.

SUMMARY. Straight-shooting, fast-riding Westerner, sizzles with action, shows Bob Custer up in strenuous fighting stunts and horsemanship feats. Will score in any house that wants adventure stuff.

THE CAST

Con Benteen.....	Bob Custer
Flossie.....	Eugenie Gilbert
Cottle.....	David Dunbar
Monte Lorin.....	Bruce Gordon
Tex Marcy.....	Milton Ross
Sartwell.....	Eddie Harris
Dave Heep.....	Roy Laidlaw

Author, J. Edward Leithead. Director, Jack Nelson.

SYNOPSIS. Con Benteen has an altercation with bad man Cottle over Flossie, dance hall girl, and shoots Cottle's gun from latter's hip. Cottle is secretly leader of the Cloaked Riders cattle rustlers. Con, who is really an operative for the Stockman's Association joins the gang. After many narrow escapes he is identified by the bandits, bound, and left to burn in a shack full of explosives, but gets free, rounds up the rustlers and wins Flossie.

Beyond The Rockies (F. B. O.) PRESS NOTICE

DASHING Bob Custer, the screen's premier range rider, gunfighter and all-around athlete, will be seen in his latest picture, "Beyond the Rockies" at the _____ Theatre on _____.

In this film Bob appears as Con Benteen, detective for the Stockman's Association, who champions the cause of an abused little dance hall girl, joins the rustlers in disguise, has a medley of narrow escapes, is finally discovered, and left to die in a burning shack by the outlaws, but escapes, rounds them all up and gets the girl.

A great Western feature, with Custer at his best, Eugenie Gilbert as the alluring heroine, Bruce Gordon, Milton Ross, Eddie Harris, Roy Laidlaw in support.

CATCH LINES

A whizzing melodrama of the plains, raiding rustlers, a cattle stampede, love, romance, wild adventure!

The Fighting Edge

(Warner Brothers—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

HENRY LEHRMAN has been eminently successful in packing action into this story of romance and smuggling along the Mexican border. The picture opens with a very exciting chase after some smugglers and the wreck of their car as it plunges down a mountainside. Then we are introduced to the heroine, who in order to get into the smuggler's mysterious ranch house, purposely dashes her car down a cliff and then feigns unconsciousness. Once we are in the ranch house, there is tense suspense as both hero and heroine seek to locate a missing federal agent. Things happen in swift succession, ending in a battle royal and the escape of the two "with their man." However the smugglers still have fight in them and they pursue the trio to a deserted house where the climax comes with more "free for all," mixups. Kenneth Harlan has a colorful role as Juan O'Rourke, Spanish-Irish secret service man. Patsy Ruth Miller, who is co-starred, is also good.

THEME. A melodramatic romance of smuggling activities on the border with the gang being captured and a federal agent rescued by the hero.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The chase after the smugglers and the wrecking of their car. Sequence in which Juan is told to shoot Joyce. Battle in deserted house.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost names of Harlan and Miss Miller. Bookstore displays of Raine novel. Put man on street in Mexican costume as ballyhoo.

DRAWING POWER. Popularity of stars should help. Suitable for average house.

SUMMARY. A fast moving meller which is well acted and keeps the interest intact from beginning to end. It has action-plus. There is mystery, romance, and excitement galore and some of the best auto chases pictured in many moons.

The Fighting Edge (Warner Brothers)

PRESS NOTICE

"THE FIGHTING EDGE," a thrilling melodrama of the Mexican border, with smugglers, a ranch house with dungeons, secret doors and barricaded rooms, Secret Service agents of Uncle Sam and a hero who stops at nothing, comes to the _____ Theatre, commencing _____. Patsy Ruth Miller and Kenneth Harlan make their initial appearance together in this production which is based on the stirring book by William McCleod Raine. The plot deals with the adventures of a government agent sent into Mexico to rescue another U. S. officer and aid in rounding up a gang of desperate smugglers. He finds plenty of thrills but also wins a bride.

CATCH LINES

A melodramatic story of romance and adventure on the Mexican border. A gang of smugglers outwitted by a hero who was Spanish until he got into a scrape, then he was Irish!

Lawless Trails

(B. A. Goodman Pro., Inc—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

FOLLOWS the time-honored Western plot formula, but should amply satisfy the fans who like the galloping hoofs and gun-play action, with romance terminating in a true lovers' clinch at the close. The picture travels along at a rapid clip, getting off to a fast start and maintaining its speed to the end. Right at the beginning of things we are treated to a stage-coach holdup turned off in sufficiently realistic style, and from then on hero Bud Osborne, portrayed by Bruce Gordon, is kept busily engaged frustrating the evil designs of a city crook who insists upon pestering the gal Bruce loves. It's all pretty obvious, but the melo wallops are slammed home with convincing force, there's no letup in the cyclonic rush of events, and the star distinguishes himself by spectacular rough-riding and generally impressive physical stunts. Josephine Hill is O. K. as the girl, the Western types as a whole are good and scenic shots attractive.

THEME. Western melodrama. Crook blackmails and threatens daughter of rancher, her lover shields her at risk of own reputation, eventually clears everything up.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Stage coach holdup. Arrest of Bud. His escape. His pursuit and capture of villain and return with written confession. Sunshine climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as fast Western melodrama, with strong love interest, hard riding stunts, fight episodes, etc. Feature Bruce Gordon, Josephine Hill.

DRAWING POWER. Should suit wherever wild and wooly Westerners are in demand.

SUMMARY. Regulation Western melodrama, nothing new to plot, but plenty of fast action and melodramatic punches. Star rides and scraps well, film doesn't drag at any stage and should satisfy all admirers of straight adventure stuff.

Rainbow Riley

(First National—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THIS one starts out with promise as Johnny Hines starts things off "on high," as he tries to "crash" into a job as cub reporter and also attempts to get arrested in order that he may get his first interview with a man behind the bars whom other reporters have been unable to make talk. The reason being, as Johnny discovers, that he is deaf and dumb. But after these scenes are over and the reporter gets into the Kentucky hills to "cover" a feud, the comedy element doesn't register with much kick, in fact there is too much drama and not enough gag material. However, many fans are going to find much fun in the star's attempts to win favor with each side in the feud, in his efforts to escape the love making of Becky, in the scenes at the old fashioned dance and in Dan Mason and his ancient gas wagon. There are some thrills in the kidnaping of the heroine, in Johnny's leap across a wide chasm to the half-wit's stronghold in which milady is being held and in the battle with the mountaineers in which Johnny uses golf balls.

THEME. Comedy, cub reporter covers feud in Kentucky mountains where he wins bride after thrilling adventure.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Johnny's efforts to land reporter job. The pool game. The barn dance. The leap across chasm. Fight with the clansmen.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Try to borrow old car and have man dress like Dan Mason, drive it about town with banner: "On my way to see Rainbow Riley." Play up Hines' name. Dress lobby front like log cabin.

DRAWING POWER. Star's past accomplishments will aid. O. K. for average house.

SUMMARY. While this offering is not up to past Hines vehicles and does not have the laughs registered in them, it will undoubtedly entertain most folk. It starts off well and there are some fine character types. Well mounted, also.

SYNOPSIS. Steve Riley, known as "Rainbow" gets a job as a reporter and is assigned to cover a feud in the Kentucky mountains. A male half wit at a dance kidnaps the heroine and takes her to his mountain stronghold. Steve rushes to the rescue, subdues the kidnaper, but is surrounded by clansmen. Having sent wire to paper, misinterpreted as meaning "president in danger," all the forces of navy and army come to rescue. Steve and girl saved. Clansmen dispersed.

Big Pal

(Royal Pictures—4700 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THERE'S a very realistic and well-staged prizefight scene in this feature, as well as some effective "kid" stuff that has strong appeal. In fact Micky Bennett, the freckle-faced youngster who impersonates the pugilistic champ's little nephew, not only divides dramatic honors with big William Russell, but at times comes mighty close to stealing the picture. The plot runs largely to hokum and hasn't much to boast of as regards fresh material, but they've managed to get in a couple of surprise twists toward the end that jolt the spectators agreeably and the net result is a very pleasing program attraction. Bill Russell shows up fine as the fighting professional and is with all a pleasing hero Julianne Johnston is a bewitching example of a lass who loves a pug; Mary Carr wins favor in her characterization of the lost child's mother and the support is well-balanced at all times. Direction and photography good.

THEME. Melodrama. To force champion pugilist to "throw" a fight, crooks kidnap his little nephew. Boxer's sweetheart and child appear in time to save him.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The "kid" comedy. Mickey Bennett's clever work in boy role. The kidnapping. Big fight scene. Good work of Russell and Miss Johnston.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as exciting melo, with good prizefight settings, suspense, comedy. Go after juvenile trade strong. Feature William Russell.

DRAWING POWER. Ought to do good business in neighborhood and small houses.

SUMMARY. Mixes up some good kid comedy with melodramatic punches, action rapid, fight scene remarkably well done. Has considerable heart interest. Bill Russell a hit as champion pug. Likely audience picture with especial appeal for boys.

Author, Jules Furthman. Director, John G. Adolphi.

SYNOPSIS. Judge Truscott's daughter Helen is saved from a runaway horse accident by Dan Williams, champion pugilist, and a warm friendship springs up between them. On the eve of a championship battle Dan's favorite nephew, little Johnny, is abducted, and Dan notified that unless he quits in the fifth round of the fight the lad's life will be sacrificed. He decides to lose, but as the fifth round draws near Helen appears at the ringside with Johnny, who has escaped. Dan cuts loose, wins the battle and Helen as well.

Big Pal (Royal Pictures) PRESS NOTICE

A GREAT story of the prize-ring that combines melodramatic vigor with intense heart interest is offered by "Big Pal," the picture starring William Russell, which comes to the ——— Theatre on ———.

Mr. Russell is seen as a champion pugilist whose little nephew is abducted on the eve of a battle for the title. The crooks warn him that he must lose in the fifth round, or the boy's life will be sacrificed.

One of the fastest and most realistic ring contests ever filmed takes place, with a thrilling climax, when the sudden reappearance of the champion's sweetheart and the child, enable him to win. In support are Julianne Johnston, Mary Carr, Micky Bennett and others.

CATCH LINES

Combat

(Universal Jewel—6714 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

IF ever a picture lived up to a pugnaciously suggestive title, this one does. House Peters, as Blaze Burke, the noble roughneck hero, battles his way persistently with smashing effect through every reel, while his tough gang associates constantly stage knock-em-down-and-drag-'em-out side scraps on their own account. It's a logging camp tale, a Westerner with lots of colorful atmosphere and no lack of action very well photographed, offering some rarely beautiful forest glade and water views, and winding up with a forest fire of spectacular dimensions, so realistic that you instinctively shrink back from the red, licking tongues of flame and choking smoke drift. Wanda Hawley is attractive as the shrinking violet type of heroine who learns to love the chap she first despised as a caveman throwback, Red McLaughlin, as portrayed by C. E. Anderson, is a singularly unprepossessing brute. Support and direction adequate.

THEME. Melodrama. Blaze Burke "boss" of lumber camp, is double-crossed by Symmons. Latter's fiancée is saved by Burke in forest fire and he wins her love.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. House Peter's strenuous acting. The fighting stuff, fast action, good photography, romance, spectacular forest fire scene in climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature House Peters and Wanda Hawley. Bill as sizzling action melo of lumber camp region. Play up gruelling fights, hero's willingness to sacrifice self for girl he loves.

DRAWING POWER. Good card for the average house.

SUMMARY. A melo that is packed with furious action, offers forcible physical appeal, star doing some great work in rough-and-tumble fights. Atmosphere of logging camp very good. Photography excellent. Will please adventure loving fans.

QUITE a snappy little Westerner, that delivers the customary quota of strenuous incident, including gunplay, fistic arguments, madly galloping steeds and a cattle stampede, and presents a feminine star who seems to be just as much at home in the saddle as the average girl would be in a rocking chair. Eileen Sedgwick can certainly handle a horse with graceful ease, and as heroine Mary Anderson she is not only a treat to the eye but makes a remarkably vivid impression by her natural work in the emotional situations which fall to her share. Barney Furey does very well as the somewhat mysterious stranger who is at first jailed as a "bad 'un", but breaks loose, rounds up the tough boys and eventually stands revealed as an officer of the law. Nothing particularly new about the plot, but it moves swiftly and there's enough physical action appeal to please the straight Western fans. Support adequate. Photography attractive.

THEME. Westerner. Heroine's father killed by outlaws. Mysterious stranger she at first takes for enemy, runs 'em down, wins her affections.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene where hero saves child in cattle stampede. The jailbreak. Attack by bandits on girl. The rescue. Eileen Sedgwick's good work.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Advertise as quick-fire-action Westerner with feminine star who can hold her own with the best of the men at wielding gun or handling a horse. Feature Eileen Sedgwick big. Promise 'em lots of suspense and thrills.

DRAWING POWER. Good card for the smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Feminine star makes good in this Westerner. Eileen Sedgwick rides like a veteran and acts well. Action fast. Plot of ordinary calibre but holds its interest to end. Not for critical audiences, but will suit average Western fans.

EILEEN SEDGWICK, famous from coast to coast as one of the screen's most daring feminine riders, will appear in her latest picture, "The Web," at the _____ Theatre on _____.

Miss Sedgwick as a star of adventurous Western films, has earned a country wide reputation not only for her riding skill, but as an emotional actress of considerable ability. In this picture she portrays a girl whose father is slain by bandits, leaving her to face fate alone, excepting for her little brother.

Romance, thrills and comedy are freely mingled in this feature. Barney Furey plays the male lead, supported by Ted Henderson, Eddie Barry, Frank Richardson and other popular screen lights.

CATCH LINES

Eileen Sedgwick, the great western star, in a picture alive with romance and suspense, shot through with sparkling comedy!

The Blue Streak

(F. B. O.—4954 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

LIKE all of the Richard Talmadge pictures "The Blue Streak" offers a plot constructed chiefly with a view to putting the agile Dick through his stunt paces at top speed and it fulfills its purpose admirably. But they've also managed to work in some distinctly beautiful atmosphere, Richard and his lady-love keeping tryst in the Mexican moonlight is only one of many charming scenes destined to linger in the beholder's memory; the melodramatic and romantic episodes are skillfully balanced with timely comedy. On the whole it wouldn't be surprising if the star's numerous admirers saw fit to rank this production on a level with the best he has turned out, for the feature has about everything they could ask for in a Talmadge thriller. Very amusing entertainment for fans who like being stimulated by rapid-fire action; supporting cast capable, direction good.

THEME. Melodrama. Dick Manley visits Mexican mine in father's interests, checks operations of crooked superintendent, is kidnapped, escapes, foils foes, wins Spanish girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene where Dick saves Inez from death in smelter. His adventures in mine. Talmadge's fights and acrobatic stunts. Beautiful photographic effects in lights and shadows. Comedy relief. The kidnapping and climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can bill this as a sure-fire-laugh-and-thrill-winner. Tell patrons it's one of Talmadge's best, offering a cracking good love story as well as breathlessly exciting situations. Play up star's astonishing stunts.

DRAWING POWER. Should go big in sections where Talmadge is favorite, and is good card for neighborhood and small houses.

SUMMARY. Another fast-moving Richard Talmadge picture, packed with sensational stunts performed by Dick in his usual daring style, has commendable funny angles, heart interest, fine photography. Pleasing comedy-melodrama.

THE screen's wildest stunt man, acrobat and athlete extraordinary, Richard Talmadge, is billed to appear in "The Blue Streak" at the _____ Theatre on _____.

This is a picture without a dull moment in it, with Dick Talmadge in love with a handsome Spanish girl, battling a bunch of conspirators who are doing dirty work in the El Grande mine, executing some marvelous feats of strength and agility, and incidentally getting a lot of fun out of his role, which is as rich in comedy as it is in thrills.

Louise Lorraine gives a fine performance as the heroine, Inez, supported by Charles Clary, Henry Herbert, Charles Mailes, and several other well-known lights of filmland.

The Speed Limit

(Gotham-Lumas—5940 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS is the sort of picture an exhibitor can ballyhoo briskly without going to much expense, and expect good box office returns from, especially in communities where these auto-racing tales are in favor, and there are many of the latter. When you get a plot that hinges on gasoline track events, it's ten to one that it isn't a wonder of originality, and "The Speed Limit" naturally whizzes within certain defined limits. But it goes over with dynamic force, the action fairly sizzles throughout, the boy and girl love affair and the comedy values are played up and handled with good judgment by director Frank O'Connor; and no matter how often you have witnessed dare-devil driving, you will not fail to respond to the "kick" administered in that headlong, furious racing scene at the close. Raymond McKee is a clean-cut, wholesome hero type, Ethel Shannon cutely alluring as Bess Stanton; James Conley and Inez Ramney are a laughing hit.

THEME. Comedy drama. Tommy, garage mechanic, loves cashier Bess, has invented new tires, gets chance to try them in big race, wins event and girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Comedy shots, Conley and Ramney characterizations; rapid action, thrills, romance. Raymond McKee's and Ethel Shannon's work. Big race.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Safe to boost this as a combined comedy and thrill riot. Stress the tricks of the garage folk, most everybody believes them pirates anyhow. Play up the loves of Bess and Tommy, go strong on the whirlwind race.

DRAWING POWER. Has general audience appeal, a good program picture.

SUMMARY. Will please a large fan majority. The old auto-racing stuff, but very well done, and enough bright comedy jammed in to balance the sensational punches. Big track event a whopper of whirling action. Acting uniformly good.

RACHMIEL and Rinzler's long heralded Ambassador Theatre in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn opened its doors to the public on Tuesday, February 9th. Any delay caused by construction plans, has certainly been entirely justified when the appearance of this new house is taken into consideration. It is another example of the fine type of neighborhood playhouses that are now being built by the leading circuits and Brownsville may well take pride in the new theatre made possible by Messrs. Rachmiel and Rinzler.

Design of the Ambassador is of the main floor and balcony type with the projection room located at almost the highest point of the extreme rear. Although the throw is exceptionally long with a 22 degree angle, the equipment supplied by Joe Hornstein has provided excellent projection. Joe and his gang which includes Dave Solomon, Billy Gluck, Harry Hollander, Jack Wuhrman, Louis Bram and Harry Holtzer were on hand to see that no hitch occurred in the program. Joe Gold will be the regular operator in charge.

Among the guests of the evening were Charlie Steiner (what opening night would be complete without him!), Mayer and Schneider of the M. & S. Circuit; Sam Zierler of Commonwealth, John Mannheimer, Jack Bellman of Renown, Abe Blumstein of Commonwealth, Dave Gross, Ed Schneitzer and Bernard Sholtz from the Fox exchange, George Davis of the Stadium Theatre, William and Harry Brandt, Al Friedlander, Harry Thomas of Chadwick Pictures, Mort Shaw from Red Seal, Max Fellerman of the Pathe exchange, Bill Herman, Dave Brill and Harry Furst of the "Big U," Louis Nelson, Ben Levine of the Oxford exchange and Jack Cohen of the Savoy Printing Company. The latter furnished the well gotten-up program for the occasion.

Last but not least, Harry Gold, Eddie Schmetzer and Al Ruck-of the Fox organization presided over the ceremonies in the reception room. There was some of that "you know what" that would have made a Kentucky colonel shout with joy.

A farewell dinner last Friday at the Astor House was tendered to Gus Solomon in connection with his acceptance of his new post as assistant manager to Harry Bernstein of Red Seal Pictures Corporation. Bernard Sholtz, better known as "The Senator," acted as toastmaster and paid high tribute to Mr. Solomon who joined the Fox organization a little over a year ago and subsequently proved his worth as a top notch salesman. In addition to being a go-getter, "Gus" is one of the most popular men along the row and all his friends wish him success in his new venture. Those present at the dinner were: Eddie Grainger, Assistant General Sales Manager of Fox Film Co.; Harry Buxbaum, Dave Gross, Joe Lee, Charles Kenneth, Bernard Sholtz, Ed Schnitzer, Izzy Schmertz, Frank Walsh, J. Heagney, "Cowboy" Harry Kirschbaum, Morris Sanders, H. B. Guttman and Julius Schwartz.

Two changes in theatre ownership are reported to have taken place recently. H. Raives, who operates the Acme, Lyric and Grammercy, is said to have taken over the New 14th Street Theatre from Steiner and Blinderman and also the Pastime Theatre at 54th Street and Second Avenue. It is further reported that March 1st is to be the date of transfer.

Louis Heiman of Rahway, N. J., has sold his Empire Theatre to a Trenton real estate concern. The reported purchase price is $175,000.

Nathan Vindegrad, who operates the Jamaica Theatre, Flushing, L. I., has recently returned from a trip to Havana.

Another exhibitor who is at present sojourning in the Cuban capital is Morris Needles. Mr. Needles operates the Normandy Theatre.

Harry Harris, well known theatre circuit owner, was observed around the local exchanges on Tuesday when he was attending to some February shopping. It is reported that Mr. Harris will have a piece of news for the film trade in the near future.

One of the largest crowds of movie fans ever seen literally jammed the doors of the Monroe Theatre, 76th Street and First Avenue, Tuesday evening, when the house was officially opened. The theatre, with a seating capacity of 2500, is the most pretentious house on First Avenue at present. It was built by William Salkin, and Gilbert P. Josephson has been installed as managing director.

Josephson deserves considerable praise for the manner in which he staged the opening. A great many of Salkin's exhibitor and film exchange friends were at the opening to congratulate the owner on his new enterprise.

Among them were Sam Schenk of the Superior Theatre, 81st Street; Al Strauss, who has a circuit at Portchester, New York; Grobe and Knovel, Abe and Julius Salkin of Brooklyn, Joe Weinberg, president of the Film Salesmen's Association; Sam Moross, President of the T. O. C. C.; John Dacy and Milton Kronacher of the Pathe exchange, as well as the sales representatives of Universal, Educational, First National, Fox and Associated Exhibitors.

Three changes of management have taken place among the theatres belonging to the Stein and Blinderman circuit. Jack Blinderman has succeeded Dave Lustig at the Regun Theatre. Mr. Lustig recently resigned. Hymie Goldschine is the new manager of the Stadium at 3d Avenue and 119th Street, and Joe O'Neill, who was formerly with the Keeney circuit, will take charge of the New 125th Street Theatre.

Tom Waller, Editor of the National M. P. T. O. Bulletin, is back on the job again after an attack of the grippie.

Max and Harry Pear, operators of the Avon, 16th Street, and Palace Theatres in Brooklyn, will close the Palace for several weeks to permit extensive remodeling. Messrs. Pear plan to substantially increase the size of the house and will also redecorate it.

It is reported that a deal is pending between M. Michaels and an unnamed party for the sale of the Royal Theatre at 42nd Street and 13th Avenue, Brooklyn.

William Atkins, Charles O'Reilly's "big boy" at the 74th Street, Bohemian, 68th, and Rex, is again putting on the "old time movies" which consist of illustrated songs and slides and some of the old photoplays. Mr. Atkins has tried these out a couple of times a year and they have made a big hit with his patrons.

David Weinstock, well known proprietor of the City Hall Theatre, has sold his Arcadia at 59th Street and 3d Avenue, New York City, to Mendel, who was the former owner of the New and Rivoli Theatres at Rockaway.

It is rumored that Chas. O'Reilly has purchased a site in the Yorkville section of New York City and will erect a modern theatre and office building.

Herb Kaufman of the Fox Exchange, who has been on the sick list for the past couple of weeks and underwent an operation at the Lenox Hill Hospital, is again back on the job.

Fred Dollinger, well known manager of the Filmland Theatre at Church and Nostrand Avenues, Brooklyn, is to be the managing director of a new circuit of theatres to be constructed by the Buckley Engineering Company of New York City. Mr. Dollinger is certainly deserving of this new post for according to all reports, he has worked tremendously hard to put Filmland Theatre over. The Belleburton Theatre at Bayside, L. I., the second link in the new chain will open in the near future and will be one of the finest theatres on Long Island. Mr. Dollinger is one of the pioneer showmen of this locality and has often been given credit for his creative ability. His headquarters are at Filmland or the offices of the Buckley Engineering Company, 50 East 42nd Street.

As far as we know there may be some potential Murray Andersons or Fanchon and Marcos in a new theatrical firm recently launched under the firm name of Burns, Moley and Seider. Al Moley and Ed Seider are both well known with the local film trade and their many friends wish them success in their new venture which consists of furnishing novelty acts for the neighborhood theatres.

Central Penn

OSCAR Neufeld of the DeLuxe Film Company, Inc., was the host to a gathering of motion picture exhibitors of Eastern Pennsylvania at the Penn Harris Hotel, Harrisburg, Pa., last Sunday. Mr. Neufeld sent out a letter to every exhibitor in this territory, requesting the presence of himself and wife to meet on Sunday, January 31, and discuss matters of interest concerning the betterment of business conditions in this territory. Moreover, Mr. Neufeld had arranged with the hotel to take care of the meeting without any expense. At the conclusion of the session, he wanted to avail himself of the opportunity to renew old acquaintances and meet, face to face, the new comers among exhibitors. Among those present were: Dr. H. I. Schad and wife, President Motion Picture Theatre Owners, Reading, Pa., Mr. and Mrs. C. Floyd Hopkins, General Manager, Wilmer & Vincent, Harrisburg, Harlan E. Woehrl and wife, Third Street Theatre, Easton, John A. Jackson, Lebanon, Pa., Joel A. Levy and wife, Reading, Pa., J. Y. Petticofer and wife, Womelsdorf, Pa., I. Refowich, Freeland, Pa., J. A. Epstein, Jule Miller, Arrow film player, Lester Wurtele, Eil M. Orowitz, Associate Editor, The Exhibitor, and David Barrist, Editor, The Exhibitor.

The meeting was an interesting one to all concerned and on the completion of the business at hand, someone discovered that the day was Mr. Neufeld's forty-first anniversary. He was called into the center of the room and as a token of the appreciation of the members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, and as a fitting birthday present, every manager present subscribed to a blanket contract, giving to Mr. Neufeld as President of the DeLuxe Film Company, Inc. bookings for open dates that aggregated to thousands of dollars.

C. Floyd Hopkins, head of Wilmer & Vincent theatrical interests in Harrisburg and Reading, has been appointed chairman of the committee of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce to which his been assigned the task of accelerating the construction of the proposed soldiers' memorial bridge.

The Photoplay Theatre, Duncannon, was turned over to the Veterans of Foreign Wars for the nights of February 1 and 2.

The Strand Motion Picture Theatre, Carlisle, was engaged by Carlisle American Legion Post, No. 101, for the holding of its annual play festival.

Anast Belehas, prominent Harrisburg, Pa., hotel man, has announced that he will probably abandon his project to erect a new combination picture theatre and forty-room hotel on the plot he purchased with that intention, in September, 1924, at 114 West High street, Carlisle, almost directly opposite the Pennsylvania railroad station.

Philadelphia

HERBERT HAYMAN, who has been connected with the New York Exchange of Famous Players-Lasky, has succeeded Ben Tolmas as manager of the Philadelphia office of Independent Film Corporation.

Joe Wilson, assistant technical director for Metropolitan Pictures Corporation, was a recent visitor at the local office of Producers Distributing Corporation.

John Gill, who has been connected with Liberty Film Exchange, has joined the sales force of Universal.

A. M. Rosenberg, who has been representing the Advance Trailer Service in this section, has accepted a position as salesman for the Independent Film Corporation.

Fred Beckhart, owner of the Alma theatre, Kensington Ave. and Ontario St., which has been operated for several years under a lease by A. Brown, has taken over the theatre. C. J. Seldenridge will act as resident manager and will have charge of the bookings.

John Evans, who recently sold his Tioga and Drury theatres, and who has been confined to his home for a long time on account of illness, is slowly recovering.

Charles Dutkin, original manager of the Grant theatre, 40th St. and Girard Ave., has returned to that theatre in the same capacity after having spent the past two years as manager of the Astor theatre, 7th St. and Girard Ave.

Building Patronage for a City Neighborhood Theatre

How Personality and Stunts Put a Brooklyn House on Its Feet

An Interview with Fred J. Dollinger

THE Filmland Theatre at 2819 Church Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., located in the central section of Flatbush and therefore practically banketed by competition from houses belonging to chain operators, presented as difficult a problem in showmanship as any manager, courageous enough to undertake the task of making it a "go" on the financial resources yielded by the box office alone, could find in a long tour of investigation—assuming that any theatre man would deliberately go in search of a "tough assignment."

To begin with the location of the Filmland was not the most advantageous, for compared to the sites of the competing houses it was somewhat off the beaten track of the business activities of Flatbush's community life up to that time. It is a well built house with main floor and balcony, and is well equipped to afford comfort to patrons and the means of staging a good show.

The usual difficulties in matters of bookings which confront a theatre in this situation were encountered by the Filmland—a single house in a belt studded with theatres belonging to circuits.

Within the period which Fred J. Dollinger, managing director of the theatre has been in charge, the Filmland has bounded along to an enviable situation as a well patronized and profitable enterprise—despite these great difficulties. The formula which he used to put the theatre on its feet—working, he says, entirely "on the box office returns," is made up of a combination of "personality" and a large bag of showmanship "stunts."

Dollinger is a veteran showman. He has acted on the stage, directed productions and managed theatres of all kinds. For many years he has managed picture theatres, having spent most of his time in pictures directing houses in New York city.

As an active participant in the management of picture theatres, he has observed from this vantage point the development of the "exhibitor's game," from its nickelodeon days up to the present.

"Today," he says, "the people want more than pictures alone. The exhibitor must give his patrons something in addition to straight picture programs, in order to do the business. Even so, the pictures remain the backbone of the entertainment and the biggest problem confronting the showman therefore is that of getting the right kind of features and short subjects.

"But beyond the photoplays themselves there are great tasks for the modern exhibitor to perform in these days of hot competition. Exploitation stunts and novelties staged in the theatre are as essential to the life and progress of the small theatre as to the cinema palace located in the heart of the big cities.

"In the neighborhood houses there is needed the added element of 'Personality.' The manager of the community theatre must be in close touch with his patrons, he must be a familiar figure to them and as much a part of the theatre as the architecture of the house itself.

"My experience has been that the neighborhood theatre manager must work with his patrons. He must make it a part of his job to be in evidence as much as possible, standing in the back of the theatre to meet them, greeting as many as possible with a nod and a 'how do you do.' As often as the occasion will permit, he must go before them and make an address from the stage, suiting his remarks to further the impression of personal acquaintance and the promotion of the community spirit within the theatre."

The list of stunts which Dollinger performed to make the people of his community "get acquainted" with the Filmland, include several ingenious campaign devices. But he employed and is continuing to use the "night" idea to keep his patrons interested. There are "surprise" nights and "Amateur" nights and other novelties in continuous procession at the Filmland. The response to these novelties increases steadily as the word of mouth advertising of the patrons won over to the house widens its circle.

The first sensational stunt

THREE MANAGEMENTS

WE HAVE watched closely, and with interest, the fortunes that have befallen three successive managements of one small theatre. This house is located in a remote suburb of a large city—a fairly typical town having a population of between five and six thousand.

When first our curiosity led us to inspect this theatre, some three years ago, we were impressed with its complete lack of modern appointments and abominable picture presentation. Flicker, a dark unevenly illuminated screen, misframe, breaks, etc.,—these were all prevalent to the extent of practically ruining the entertainment value of the show itself.

The house, at that time, was not paying and soon another exhibitor undertook the task of pleasing the townsfolk who, in the main, were just as ready picture fans as those in any other similar town.

This new owner did contrive to increase the box office receipts, though through no apparent improvement in the quality of the pictures themselves. But the new management sensed that the lack of attractiveness of his theatre and the irritating projection was an insult to his patrons. Accordingly an improvement was made in the projection and the theatre itself was subjected to a superfluous renovation. Whether or not the house made money under this arrangement is problematical, for after operating about a year this second owner sold out to the present management.

When the theatre changed hands this last time it was closed and underwent a much needed re-equipping and general house cleaning. The opening night saw a fresh inviting atmosphere with flawless picture presentation. This management had diagnosed the reasons for the apparent indifference of the townsfolk to picture shows. The success of the theatre from then on may be appreciatively judged when it is known that at this writing there are two influential circuits dickering for control of this house.

And we, for our part, are certain that no item was more responsible for this singular reversal to success than modernized picture presentation.

which Dollinger staged was an aeroplane flight, which followed a ballyhoo campaign announcing that weekly and season passes would be dropped from the plane, scheduled to fly over the theatre at a certain hour of the day set. The effect of the campaign, which depended mostly on hand bills and poster announcements, was counted in the thousands of youngsters and grownups who packed the streets solid enough to stop the traffic.

Dollinger's use of the aeroplane stunt was a working out of the plan "make use of the materials at hand." As he is a pioneer aviator and has a wide acquaintance among the flyers, this was one of the stunts which he could put on at small expense. A former pupil of his made the flight for $35 and the whole cost of the stunt exceeded that by very little, for only a few passes were included in the bundles of paper which were liberated in midair—the balance consisting of hand bills and heralds.

A live mailing list of 2,000 names was built up overnight practically by means of a tie-up with newspaper stands. The tie-up was accepted with the greatest willingness by the news dealers, since it afforded those enterprising merchants to offer their steady patrons a pass to the Filmland. This was done by means of a handbill, the upper portion bearing an invitation to the recipient to come to the theatre and use the bill as a pass, the lower portion consisting of a printed blank with spaces for the names and addresses of those to whom the pass was issued and the signature of the dealer. This of course, meant many free admissions, scattered through the various performances during the week—but a fair portion probably would not have attended the Filmland show at all without such inducement and a portion of these were converted to regular patrons, which Dollinger rightly figures as added advantages of the stunt.

He has put on and consistently improved the quality of each event, a regular program of "nights." Monday night there is usually a "crackers and milk" eating contest, which has scored consistently. Tuesday night is regularly devoted to amateur performers. Thursday, "Surprise" night, at which any form of novelty is likely to be staged. To these he has added from time to time "Bathing beauty" contests; "Bobbed Hair Beauties" contests; Baby Contests; "Irish Night," and a host of others.

The Charleston craze has been capitalized several times at the Filmland. Dollinger's first stunt along this line was a contest which ran for a week and cost a total of $17. This was done by cooperation with a dancing school, which advertised the affair and sponsored the contest at the Filmland. There were preliminary trials each evening of the week, with the winners of all evenings appearing in a finale on Sunday night. "This," said Dollinger, "brought out people from all parts of the city. The entrants brought along their cousins, uncles, aunts and grand parents with the result that the Bronx, Long Island towns, Manhattan and even New Jersey were represented in the overflow audience on Sunday night, at which the prizes of $10, $5 and $2 were distributed to the three best Charlestoners discovered by the week of tryouts at the Filmland.

Dollinger is now at work on an ambitious production to be known as the "Filmland Follies." He has selected several pretty girls of the neighborhood to make up the chorus and ensemble dancing numbers of the "Follies" and is rehearsing them in dances and formations and songs, especially written. A few professional performers will be engaged to do specialty numbers and appear in the production with the local boys and girls.

Since the dance fad is now at its greatest popularity and there is a demand for novelty numbers in addition to the pictures, Dollinger believes that one of the most important tie-ups a neighborhood exhibitor can make is with the dancing teachers. By means of co-operation with dance schools or individual teachers the theatre is in a position to stage acts which will make a great local appeal and at a very small cost.

"Fiddlers" Rage Continues Up State New York

Charles Goulding, manager of Proctor's Fourth Street theatre in Troy, N. Y., is staging a fiddlers' contest. And so is John Garry, of the Empire in Glens Falls; William Benton of the Rialto, in the same city, and dozens of others.

Benton, of the Rialto in Glens Falls, has decided to award gold prizes to winners in a fiddlers' elimination contest. The prize winner of the contest will also receive a silver cup which Mr. Benton has personally selected.

Joseph Hoffman Appears in Concert at Stanley

In the fourth of a series of five Sunday night concerts given by the Stanley Music Club of Philadelphia, two distinguished artists, Carl Flesch, violinist, and Josef Hoffman, pianist, appeared at the Stanley Theatre before an audience of 3,000. While the previous concerts of this organization have occupied a high position among the season's musical events, this program proved to be most remarkable. Both artists were given an ovation.

"Children's Hour" Daily Show at 4 to 5 P. M.

Manager George Swanick of the Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, has established a "Children's Hour" at the theatre, between 4 and 5 P. M. daily, when they are admitted for the small admission of five cents, with the one cent tax extra. The old "nickel show" is, therefore, back once more in Hamilton and the children are swarming to the Lyric, which is a large local house.

Elaborate "Frolic" Show at Strand

America in Denver Moves Jazz Orchestra to Stage

The increasing popularity of the featured jazz orchestra, billed as Henry Trustman's "Americans," decided the management of the American theatre in Denver, to move the musicians to the stage for the presentation of their numbers. The orchestra made its first appearance on the stage in a Musical Presentation in conjunction with the photoplay "The Only Thing."

The Denver picture houses continue to give added prominence to their special orchestras as the popularity of these attractions steadily grows. The Victory features Cavallo's Symphonie Victorians; the State has retained Leon Vavara and his novelty orchestra over a period of several weeks; the Rialto stars Fred Schmitt's Super-Syncopators, playing a series of National songs in a series called "A Trip Around the World," and with the recent presentation of "The Unguarded Hour," the First National feature, the Webber had the Supreme Syncopators advertised as the added attraction there.

"Joy Week" Scores at the Hippodrome, Youngstown

The Hippodrome at Youngstown, O., last week staged one of the most pretentious shows ever attempted at this house when a bill of vaudeville and pictures was offered as a "Joy Week" program.

The acts which played the house included Kenney & Hollis in "The Two Doctors," a satire on medicine; Walter Manthey & Girls, a revue production featuring songs, dances and melodies; Brent Hayes, "The Master of the Banjo;" Billy Kelly & Co. in "Picking a Peach;" Cook and Oatman; Lew Ross & Co., and an afterpiece in which all the performers appeared. The screen version of "The First Year" was the featured photoplay.

Semi-Annual Jazz Revue is Staged at Palace, Dallas

The Palace Theatre, Dallas, Tex., presented the third annual Jazz Revue as the special offering there last week. The revue featured twenty artists including a twelve piece jazz band. Those who appeared in the revue were Kitty McCoy, blues singer; Josephine Hackney, Charleston stepper; Walter Lattimore, blues singer; The Blatherwick Kiddies, jazz time rope twirlers, and the Palace Chorus.

Stars Cabaret Orchestra at Edmonton House

ON Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of each week, Manager Walter Davis of the Empress Theatre, Edmonton, Alberta, makes a special presentation as an added attraction of the Bluebird Orchestra which plays for cabaret entertainments and dances at the Sunnydale Pavilion at other times. The engagement is intended to bolster the patronage on these three days at the theatre. They play twice daily.

Charleston Endurance Champ at Rivoli, N. Y.

JOHN GIORIA, winner of the Champion Charleston Endurance contest held at Roseland dance hall on Broadway, is appearing in the "Charleston Medley" number presented this week by Eddie Elkins and His Melody Mixers at the Rivoli Theatre in New York. Gioria, who Charlestoned for 22 hours and 30 minutes continuously, is being featured by the Rivoli in billing outside the theatre and in newspaper copy.

The Rivoli's presentation for the week is called "The Bughouse Cabaret," a John Murray Anderson production with special music and lyrics by Milton Ager and Jack Yellen.

"Behind the Front" is the featured photoplay and other numbers on the program are "Il Guarany," overture; "Love Nest," a colored pictorial fantasy, Harold Ramsay at the Rivoli Grand Organ; "Sailing," a KO-KO Song Car-tune and "Rivoli Movievents."

"Pianologue Idea" Staged at Loew's State

At Loew's State Theatre the week of January 30 the West Coast Theatre Presentation, a Fanchon and Marco "Pianologue Idea" is quite different than any that have been seen before.

A huge back drop with large arched stained glass window on one side of the stage and a great hanging lamp with amber lighting gives tone to the setting. The presentation opens with Dorothy Keeley playing "Dado" at a grand piano and around the stage are the men in the cast. At the finish of the act the girls enter, giving the impression of a home party. The guests each do their bit to entertain. During Bell and Coats' number they all leave the stage and at the finish of "Those Two Boys" song, they return in a Floradora Sextette number with the girls in purple dresses.

At the close of the Sextette the back drop goes up disclosing six grand pianos on a platform and the six girls from the sextette take their places at the pianos and play. They are Malvina Polo, Dorothy Keeley, Irma Starkling, Madeline Lesh, Marie Per-gone and Ama Lou Barnes. The background is of different colored hangings and in the middle of the number Dorothy Gilbert, Davis Goodman, Carlos Ronero, Jinette Vallon and George Ward, the 'Boy from the Movies' do a buck dance on the top of the pianos, having stepped out of the hangings. The presentation closes with the entire company in one dancing the Charleston.

"Gypsy Follies" This Week at Capitol, Detroit

"Gypsy Follies," third of the Publix stage presentations is playing the Capitol Theatre, Detroit, this week. The number was produced by John Murray Anderson and features a company of 25.

Edna Wallace Hopper, billed as "The 62 year old flapper" is announced as an added attraction. She holds a matinee for ladies only on Friday at 10:30 A. M. The feature picture is Raymond Griffith in "Hands Up."

Revue Number Staged By Plunkett Is The Biggest of Series

IN production and "names" the "New Mark Strand Frolic" which Joseph Plunkett is offering as a presentation feature at the Strand on Broadway this week, is a more ambitious effort than he has attempted so far in the new policy of staging elaborate numbers to supplement the photoplay attractions each week at that house.

The presentation features four well-paced episodes under the titles "Idyll," "Billboard Antics," "Song of Songs" and "The Box of Tricks."

The opening episode has Mlle. Kemova and the Mark Strand Ballet Corps and the Tamara Utgoff Harp Ensemble, with the Misses Cardani, Allen, St. Claire, Hammerle & Pleshkova. George Stickney, of "The Monkey Talks" Co., is the star of "Billboard Antics," and John Quinlan, tenor and Pauline Miller, soprano, are featured in the "Song of Songs" number. Edward Albano, Leonard Workman, Betty Hale and the Melody Saxophone Sextette appear in "The Box of Tricks."

These "Frolic" shows which Plunkett introduced several weeks ago, are continually assuming greater importance from the production standpoint, and their value to the box office is increasing steadily, as greater prominence is given to them in the advertising of the theatre. The banner sign, suspended over the main entrance, which formerly was regularly used to bill the coming week's featured photoplay, now is given over to billing for the current "Frolic."

"Herb And His Bunch" Still Big Draw at State

Fred Stritt with "Herb and his Bunch" continue as big favorites with the entertainment seekers of Detroit, where they are playing this week in a new number at the State Theatre. The current number is called "Heating Up the North Pole."

Taylor & Hawks, Wanda and Seals, Melvin Flegal and other novelty acts are working with the act, which runs 40 minutes. "The Splendid Crime" is the photoplay attraction.

Fritzi Scheff on Bill at "Met" in Boston

F RITZI SCHEFF singing "Kiss Me Again," from "Mlle. Modiste," which she created on the speaking stage, appeared as a stellar attraction at the Metropolitan theatre in Boston last week.

The theatre starred "names," presenting a bill which included Miss Scheff, John Quinlan, tenor; Ruth Brewer, instrumentalist who plays fourteen different instruments; "The American Beauty Revue," the John Murray Anderson presentation with Fay Lamphier, "Miss America" in person; and Adolphe Menjou and Florence Vidor in "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter."

Tea Served In Cedar-Lee Lobby

Cleveland Society Woman Sponsors of Afternoon Affair

DR. B. L. Brody, head of one of the leading theatre chains in Cleveland has introduced a novelty at his new Cedar-Lee theatre. Recently he turned the spacious lobby of the Cedar-Lee over to twenty-four of Cleveland Heights' society leaders for a Russian tea.

The foyer is elaborately decorated and looks like a drawing room in a modern well appointed home. An Ampico player piano adds both beauty and pleasure. Through the cooperation of one of the local decorators, a real Russian samovar was secured. An antique tablecloth of great value was contributed. Waitresses in Russian costume served Russian style tea and tiny tea cakes. The Ampico furnished music. Twenty dancers from a popular dancing school furnished Russian dancing. Following the entertainment, the guests saw the screen program.

It is the intention of Dr. Brody to offer the foyer of his Cedar-Lee theatre for such teas, for the price of regular theatre admission. Possibly the entertainment offered will not always be as elaborate as on this initial occasion. But tea and cakes and some novelty will be presented prior to the picture entertainment. This plan will introduce the Cedar-Lee as a neighborhood center for social entertainment.

At twenty cents admission, ladies can entertain their friends at little expense. The expense of serving tea and entertainment is cheap advertising compared to the advantages accruing to the theatre, according to the management. The first effort was enthusiastically praised by the guests and Dr. Brody is already in receipt of requests for dates for another Russian tea.

Fitzgibbons in Charlotte to Take New Publix Post

J. J. Fitzgibbons, former New York district manager for Publix Theatres, transferred to supervise the Carolinas district, and J. H. McKoy, a graduate of the Publix Theatre Managers Training School, appointed to succeed Thomas Holliday as manager of the Alhambra Theatre in Charlotte, are expected in that city this week.

The transfers of managers in the Publix organization, reported in MOTION PICTURE NEWS last week, are declared to have no significance beyond that of the natural changes in personnel which comes in so large an organization. The vigorous competition being waged in Charlotte between Warner Enterprises and the Publix houses, however, has given rise to much speculation in film circles there concerning the transfers made by the latter organization.

Park at Lehigh, Pa. Will Present Vaudeville Acts

A change of policy at the Park Theatre, Lehigh, Pa., calls for the introduction of vaudeville in addition to pictures. Manager Bayer says this plan will be followed for the remainder of the winter.

The MANAGER'S OFFICE

DAVID J. LUSTIG, for the past year and a half manager of the Regun theatre in Harlem has severed his connections with that organization. Lustig, who has gained a wide reputation for his publicity and exploitation work as well as his managerial abilities, will announce his new affiliations shortly.

JOSEPH CLOUTURE is now managing Notre Dame Theatre at Manchester, N. H. The house recently has changed over to a first run policy. Formerly it operated as a subsequent run straight picture theatre.

HAROLD BISHOP is again the manager of the Metropolitan Theatre in Winnipeg. The "Met" has returned to a straight picture policy. Bishop was appointed manager of the Metropolitan last summer but in a short time transferred over to the Capital Theatre.

CHARLES STRAW, succeeded as manager of the Metropolitan by Harold Bishop, has returned to Brandon, Manitoba, where he has become manager of the Capitol Theatre, replacing E. C. Christensen, who resigned after being manager of this popular house for the past five years or more.

New Philadelphia Opera House Adds Vaudeville

The Opera House at New Philadelphia, O., owned by W. N. and H. R. Skirboll, will change its policy starting Monday, February 8th. On that date a combination vaudeville and picture policy will be introduced, succeeding the straight picture policy. Three high class vaudeville acts will be shown at the Opera House the first three days of the week, in addition to the picture program. The last half of the week, only pictures will be shown.

An advance in admission will be asked for the combination program. An orchestra has been installed in addition to the organ, so the patrons of the Opera House will get a lot more entertainment for their 50c. than they did formerly for 35c. The 35c. will prevail the latter half of the week, however.

This change of policy will in no way affect the class of pictures shown at the Opera House, according to W. N. Skirboll.

Wolf Directs Loew's State Orchestra in L. A.

"Rube" Wolf, one of the most versatile musical personalities of the West Coast, has taken up the baton as director of a new Loew's State Theatre orchestra in Los Angeles, succeeding Gino Severi, who left to take up a new post in the West Coast Theatres circuit.

Wolf has been associated in Faneon & Marco enterprises for the last fifteen years. He was born in Los Angeles and received his musical education there and in New York. In addition to being concededly one of the best cornetists, he is also master of stage dances and particularly shines at the Charleston. In fact, Rube claims to be the first orchestra leader ever to do the Charleston. He also plays a variety of musical instruments.

Showman Fans' Host At Golden Wedding

Johnston Celebrated In His Theatre

All the picture fans of four towns were invited to attend two days of free movies in the Bolivar Opera House, Bolivar, Pa., in honor of the golden wedding anniversary of the proprietor of the theatre and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Johnston.

January 27 marked the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding and on that and the following day, more than 4,000 persons from Bolivar, West Bolivar, Lockport and Garfield accepted the invitation to visit the theatre. In addition to a special program of free pictures, Mr. and Mrs. Johnston provided a light lunch at the opera house for all comers. Open house also was maintained for the two days at the Johnston residence, and all who went there were treated to turkey and all the trimmings.

Almost everybody in Bolivar, and hundreds from the other three towns, partook of the Johnson hospitality.

Mr. Johnston is 72 years old and was born in Fairfield Township, near Bolivar. He has been a justice of the peace for thirty-five years and a notary public for twenty-three years. He also was Bolivar's postmaster for five years.

Mrs. Johnston was Miss Rebecca Hammond, a sister of the late Hon. James B. Hammond, who represented Westmoreland county in the Pennsylvania Legislature. The couple were married on January 27, 1876.

Mr. Johnston has for a number of years successfully operated the Bolivar Opera House as a motion picture theatre.

Ontario Exhibitor Shares "Stage" With Hockey

Manager I. Shulman of the Strand Theatre, Uxbridge, Ontario, has established a co-operative basis with the people of the town with respect to counter-attractions in the form of important local hockey matches which generally excite great interest in the district.

In a recent statement, which was widely distributed, Shulman announced that he would close the Strand Theatre absolutely tight on the night that the weekly league hockey game would be played so that the local hockey club could have the whole stage as it were. In return for this concession, he would expect that the people would extend him good patronage on the other five nights of the week. On his part he promised the best available film attractions to make it worth while for the people to attend the theatre.

Jazz Orchestra Proves Good Card at Suburban House

Deciding his patrons needed a change from the usual daily and nightly routine, Jack Whittam, manager of the Strand theatre, suburban house of Kansas City, has booked a negro orchestra, widely known for its Okeh records. After billing his neighborhood he reports that business shows a marked increase.

Loew's Cameo, Cleveland, which was recently completed and stands on the site of the former Cameo. This view is part of the lobby.

Lowe's Cameo at Cleveland Rebuilt Into Modern and Attractive Theatre

THE Cameo, opened within the past two months, is the ninth and newest motion picture theatre operated by Loew's Ohio Theatres in Cleveland. While all of the other eight houses are modern in every detail, and offer the best facilities for the accommodation of their patrons, unique interest centers about the Cameo because of local sentiment in the house that originally stood in the same location. The Star Theatre, as it was called, was built over forty years ago on what was then "Upper Euclid Ave.," meaning that part of Euclid Ave. which is between the Public Square and East Ninth St. The Star was the home of burlesque and only men were admitted. It was operated by Messrs. Frank Drew and Charles Campbell. It had been a burlesque house from the time of its opening until Loew's Ohio Theatres leased it, tore out everything but the four walls and transformed it into one of the prettiest of the less elaborate motion picture theatres in the city.

The transformation was effected at an approximate cost of $100,000. An entirely new floor had to be constructed, with a moderate pitch. The original proscenium arch was built according to old-fashioned ideas, and to build a new arch, new steel columns had to be inserted and new girders—something unusual in engineering. As the theatre now stands, the auditorium has a floor space of 7,000 square feet, allowing for about 820 seats. The balcony has 1,700 square feet with 430 seats, making a total of 1,250 seats available. The proscenium arch measures 30ft x 27ft. 6in. The stage has been reduced from its original size of 10 feet to 30 feet. The theatre is steam heated, has a modern two fan belt ventilation system, and has standard illumination with emergency lights and telephones.

The decorations of the Cameo carry out the name of the theatre. Cameos prevail everywhere. The centre of the velvet drape under the proscenium arch displays a beautiful cameo. In the lobby, brilliantly illuminated with double bracket lighting fixtures and mirrors, artistic cameos are featured in each panel. The color scheme is tan and rose. The plaster walls are tinted a soft tan. The lights all have silk shades and cast a mauve glow over the house. The heavy velvet stage curtain is a rich brown. The carpets are contrasting, being a pale green. The male ushers and the cashiers are all uniformed and lend dignity to the theatre. A two manual Wurlitzer organ is instituted in the Cameo theatre. May McGraw and Arthur J. Pugsley are the singing organists. Both of them sing their own illustrated songs—a novelty which has proved a popular attraction.

The projection room is entirely new. In fact, it had to be built on extra, so it has both light and modern conveniences. Three Simplex machines with Peerless lamps were installed by the Exhibitors Supply Company of Cleveland. The throw is about 110 feet. Brenkert dissolving stereopticons are also installed. Art Ayres and Joe Grey alternate as projectionists.

Fred Coddington, former manager of Loew's Mall theatre, is now manager of the Cameo. The theatre policy is to show pictures from 9 a. m. until 11 p. m. every day of the week. Admission prices are 15c for children at all times; 25c for adults on week days and 35c on Sundays and holidays.

H. R. Burroughs Appointed Engineer, by "Roxy"

H. Robins Burroughs of New York City, a prominent theatre engineer, has been appointed consulting engineer for the new Roxy Theatre, to be erected in New York by the Roxy Theatres Corporation. This theatre, for which Mr. Burroughs is now designing the structural steel, will be, upon completion, the world's largest theatre with a seating capacity of approximately 6,300 seats.

Apollo Theatre, Winona, Minn. Holds Premiere

The Apollo theatre, built by Beyerstedt Brothers and Hodge, opened recently at Winona, Minn., bringing competition back to the city. The theatre has 1,340 seats and cost $150,000. It will play a combination policy. Beyerstedt Brothers are known throughout the Northwest as musicians.

Exterior of the Victory theatre, Kemmerer, Ia., which recently opened. This house is claimed to be one of the most attractive of its class in the Central West.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Buffalo, N. Y., to Have New Neighborhood Theatre

The South Park section of Buffalo is to have another motion picture theatre. George Hanny, Jr., announces that the South Park Amusement Company will build a $175,000 theatre at South Park avenue and Woodside, work on which will begin this spring. The house, which has been designed by Architect Henry L. Spann of Buffalo, will have a seating capacity of 1,500. There will be a large stage, fully equipped. One of the novelties will be a loge balcony, in which there will be specially designed chairs exclusively.

The theatre, which will be operated in conjunction with the Maxine and Capitol, two other community houses controlled by the South Park company, is in a thickly populated section of the city, residents of which are enthusiastic over the coming of the new theatre, which will be of brick and terra cotta construction. Mr. Hanny's partner, George C. Hall, will be associated with him in the new house. Mr. Hall is president of the Crystal Beach Amusement Company. It is planned to open the theatre to the public late next fall. Messrs. Hall and Hanny have been in the exhibiting end of the business in Buffalo for over a decade.

Mr. Hanny plans to incorporate a number of novelties in the new theatre which he declares will strike a new note in community house construction.

There will be a large orchestral organ and an orchestra. Every known modern device will be in the projection booth on which special work is being done to make it one of the finest in western New York. The seats will be unusually large and deeply upholstered and the floors covered with luxurious rugs and carpets. The interior will be elaborately decorated.

An attractive touch is lent the foyer of the Victory theatre, Kemmerer, Ia., through this fountain.

Capitol, Arlington, Mass., Newest of A. J. Locatelli Circuit

The Capitol Theatre, Arlington, Mass., is the newest of Albert J. Locatelli's playhouses to be opened and is built with the idea of becoming a community center. It is located in a newly developed section in Arlington and draws its patronage from that town, Cambridge, Somerville, Belmont, Lexington, Winchester and Medford. Located on Massachusetts avenue, the through highway running west of Boston, it is easily reached from many other communities.

Secretary of State Frederic C. Cook, Mayor Charles E. Webster of Somerville, Chairman Devereaux of the Arlington selectmen and a host of notables were present at the opening to publicly express their best wishes to the enterprising managing director of the Locatelli circuit.

The house seats 1,200 and the single balcony 525. The Robert Morton organ is one of the largest in New England. The stage is fully equipped to present road shows although the policy is now strictly pictures. The theatre is complete in detail, with two ticket offices in the outer lobby, an inner lobby, reception rooms with divans, hand carved Italian furniture. A matron is constantly in attendance in the lady's room. The entire house is heavily carpeted as well as the stairways. The men's rooms are furnished in black wicker furniture upholstered in cretonne. There is a mezzanine floor with four large divans, attractive floor lamps, mirrors, birds and gold fish. From the mezzanine floor lead the corridors to the balcony. The color scheme is of old rose, gold and gray, the first floor carpeting being of gray with black figures, while the mezzanine carpet is of a soft green. The illuminated sign over the marquee contains 2,000 lights. Back stage are seven dressing rooms, each with separate toilets, bath and hot and cold water.

Exterior of the Capitol theatre, Arlington, Mass. This theatre is the center project around which was constructed the elaborate apartment and business block. The house is the latest addition to the A. J. Locatelli circuit.

Bardy M. P. Machine Co. Reported Bankrupt

A great many members of the motion picture industry in Philadelphia have lost heavily by the failure of the Bardy Motion Picture Machine Co., which spent almost $75,000 in an attempt to perfect a shutterless and flickerless motion picture projector, and which will go into voluntary bankruptcy according to a vote taken by the stockholders at a recent meeting held in the Hotel Vendig, Philadelphia. Optical engineers who have been working in conjunction with Sam Bardy, the inventor, have been unable to correct certain lens defects which, it is reported, prevented the machine from being placed on the market in a compact and practical size. The machine, which also eliminated the re-wind, is too bulky, it is said, for installation in the average theatre.

Several Kansas City Houses Recently Opened

Several openings of new theatres in the Kansas City territory were announced this week. The new Abdallah Temple Shrine theatre has been opened in Leavenworth, Kas., by T. S. Wilson, while in Osceola, Mo., the Paramount theatre has been opened by S. C. Alexander, the house seating about 300 persons and operating on a tri-weekly change of program policy. The Midwest Film Distributors, Inc., of Kansas City announce their new house, the Kennedy, in Kirksville, Mo., will open March 15. The Madrid theatre, a 1,500-seat suburban house of Kansas City, to be managed by Jack Roth, will open about April 1. Another new house is being planned for Osawatimie, Kas., according to reports reaching Kansas City movie row, although the names of those interested have not yet been announced.

Another Large Theatre for New York City

Plans are being prepared for the erection of theatre building and hotel to cost approximately $1,500,000, at 244 to 252 West 52nd Street, just west of Broadway. The plans being prepared by Paul B. LaVelle, architect, involve the unique achievement of a 1,050 seat theatre built upon plot approximately 60 feet by 100 feet, and of a 250 room hotel upon a plot approximately 65 feet by 100 feet.

Perspective Part III

WO properties were singled out by Mr. Young for special mention of which the first was that the mere substitution of one lens for another alters the scale of the picture, but does not alter its form. This elementary truth has been stated in text books, but it has not yet been really assimilated by the average photographer, and its repetition rarely fails to evoke expressions of surprise and incredulity.

Of course, to get an absolutely exact result we must expand our rough statement of the case and lay down precisely the conditions to be observed, e. g., the position of the node of entrance must be absolutely parallel and the lenses must be of high standard. If any difference in form can be detected it is due to some failure to observe these conditions, and does not invalidate the law.

Secondly, if any perspective pictures (whether flat, cylindrical, spherical, or of any other kind) is viewed from an appropriate position, the impression it makes on the retina will be identical, so far as form is concerned, with that made by the original scene as seen from the spot where the lens was placed when taking the picture. In other words, so far as the physical sensations are concerned, the picture so viewed "looks like" the original scene.

Position of Plate Important

Passing on to the second head (see last week's article)—viz., the influence of the form and position of the plate, or sensitive surface on which the image is thrown by the lens—the average photographer need not concern himself with such refinements elements composing the picture agrees fairly well with their appearance as seen by the eye, whereas with the flat picture this is not the case with elements far from the "center." On the other hand, the distortion of an object which covers a large amount of the surface will generally be greater than if taken on a flat plate—the picture of a long building taken in a panoramic camera shows this; while the result of photographing a print or a map with such a camera would be ludicrous. Any system of perspective may cause distortion in some respects; while in every system the picture when viewed from an appropriate point looks like the scene portrayed and appears free from distortion, with some special exceptions.

Direction of Plate Controls Picture

For some special purposes the panoramic camera is useful—e. g., in taking a large group, by arranging them in a circle round the camera, it is possible to avoid the distortion of individual faces, which might occur at the ends of the group if an ordinary plate were used. Much the same result could be obtained by using a telephoto lens; tests such as this, there is no advantage and many disadvantages in replacing the flat plate by a cylindrical surface; and the same remark would apply to a spherical surface—if it were practicable to produce one.

Using the ordinary photographic plates, one of the first things that a novice learns is that by changing the direction of his plate he changes his picture; so if, by tilting his camera, he gets a picture with vertical lines converging, he can remedy this by merely restoring the camera back—and the plate with it—to the vertical.

Fig. 2. Theoretical diagram, illustrating perspective views of spheres at different angles.

Distortion of Pictures

In Fig. 1, ABC is a section of a plate and O is the center or, to be more precise, the node of entrance of the lens. Then the amount of distortion at any point depends on the angle made by the ray from O with the plate: there is none near A, where the ray is at right angles to the plate. Near B there is some distortion which is greatly increased near C.

This "wide angle" distortion—properly so called—is due to the smallness of the angle between the plate and the light ray. The lens had no part in it; indeed, by swinging the plate (stopping down the lens at the same time) it is possible to get wide angle distortion with a narrow angle lens.

The distortion of a tennis ball is very obvious, even at 30 degrees (Fig. 2) while no apparent distortion could be detected in a picture of a building, taken with a Hypergon lens, the top of which was at an elevation of 50 degrees. The explanation is that as cylindrical or spherical perspective. True, if one takes a photograph on a cylinder or spherical surface, the form of the smaller in the ordinary way the eye had no means of judging whether a picture was correct or not, but it at once detected any unnatural distortion as, e. g., when a tennis ball is seen in the guise of a Rugby football. The difference of opinion which exists as to the most suitable focal length for a lens to be used with a given plate, is due to the fact that the apparent distortion depends very largely upon the nature of the subject.

Viewing Position

The third head—the influence of the position from which the picture is viewed—is of paramount importance. As already stated, when a perspective picture is seen from the appropriate viewpoint, it resembles the original scene; if seen from any other point, it ceases to do so; but knowing that the picture itself is unaltered, the spectator generally either fails to notice this effect, or attributes it to some other cause. To appreciate the effect it is necessary to fix the attention not on the actual picture—the counterfeited—but on the reality it represents.

In Fig. 3 is shown one of the diagrams to illustrate this point. ABCD represents an object (e. g., the top of a square box) the outlines of which are traced on a glass screen, the eye being kept in the position E. When the tracing is complete the eye is moved to E', and now the outline abc is what would be obtained if the object A'B'C'D' were traced, with the eye in the position E'.

Egelston Square Theatre Opens at Boston

The Egelston Square Theatre at Washington street, Egelston square, Boston, opened Saturday. The new theatre is owned by Walter Littlefield, who also runs the Everett Square Theatre in Hyde Park. At the opening, F. R. Littlefield gave an address of welcome. The playhouse takes the place of the one destroyed by fire some eighteen months ago. Instead of rebuilding the old house, the ruins were torn down and an entirely new structure erected with a seating capacity of 1222. A. L. Lashway, formerly with the Loew and Gordon chains, is manager of the new playhouse. A program of one feature, short numbers and four acts of vaudeville will be given with two changes of bill weekly. A large delegation of film notables were on hand at the opening.

Wurlitzer Reports Record Sales of Theatre Organs

The first month of the new year has set a new high mark for the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company, so far as sales and installations of organs in motion picture houses are concerned, it is claimed.

Memphis, Tenn. leads the procession with two important installations, both in Loew houses, the State and the Palace. The Denver branch reports three important installations, one in Denver and the other two in nearby cities.

The Cincinnati branch reports the following for that district: Liberty Theatre, Lawrenceburg, Ind.; Colonial Theatre, Dayton, O.; Kentucky Theatre, Lexington, Ky.; Tivoli Theatre, Indianapolis's newest and greatest movie palace; Ark Theatre, Lafayette, Ind.; Linden Theatre, Columbus, O.; Columbia Theatre, Columbus, O.; and the Palace Theatre, Jellicoe, Tenn.

Kelsey to Build Theatre at Chelan, Wash.

Announcement was made in Seattle last week of the purchase of a lot 105 by 120 feet in size, in Chelan, Washington, by R. A. Kelsey, owner and operator of the Ruby Theatre in that town. It is Mr. Kelsey's plan to erect a three story building on the property within the next few months, including a hotel and theatre. Plans for the latter structure, which will cost approximately $35,000, are now being made, and actual construction is expected to begin within a few weeks.

Two New Theatre Projects for New England

Henry J. Steinberg has started the construction of a motion picture theatre on Elm street, Worcester, Mass., which will be one of the largest playhouses in the state outside of Boston and which will cost in the vicinity of $500,000 outside of furnishings and equipment. In connection with the theatre, Mr. Steinberg is to build a 14-story hotel and a business block.

The new Braintree Theatre at Braintree, Mass., is rapidly nearing completion and is expected to be opened within a few weeks. Arthur McGrory, who operates the Weymouth Odd Fellows Opera House will also operate the new theatre, which will have a seating capacity of about 800.

J. F. Cook to Build Theatre at Marysville, Mo.

J. F. Cook, father of C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, will build a $50,000 theatre in Marysville, Mo., it was announced this week. Work on the theatre, which will be 44x132 feet, will start before March 1 and is expected to be completed by July 1. J. R. Cook, another son of Mr. Cook, will manage the house, the name of which has not yet been determined. The house will include every convenience that is possible in a theatre of its size, Mr. Cook said.

New Modern Theatre for Pittsburgh, Penn.

Plans are being completed for the erection of theatre building to be erected at Seventh Street and Penn Avenue by Rowland and Clark. The seating capacity of the new theatre will be 5,000. The theatre will be modern in every respect, and no expense will be saved in trying to make it beautiful.

The collage consists of several individual advertisements for the movie "Infatuation" starring Corinne Griffith. The ads are arranged in a grid-like fashion. Key elements include:

- Des Moines Theatre: "Wonderful—Corinne Griffith in 'INFATUATION'".
- Circle Theatre: "A drama of a woman who dared tell her husband the truth".
- Capitol Theatre: "Corinne Griffith in 'Infatuation'".
- Rival Theatre: "Corinne Griffith in 'Infatuation'".
- Leland Theatre: "Corinne Griffith in 'INFATUATION'".
- Strand Theatre: "Corinne Griffith in 'INFATUATION'".
- Other ads: Mention "Percy Marmont", "Herb and Bunch", "Fred Stritt", and "The Night Club".

A notably good brand of display work has been done by the advertising men of first-run theatres in their newspaper campaigns of First National's "Infatuation." The group of representative ads shown above include displays by the following theatres: The State, Detroit; Circle, Indianapolis; Des Moines Theatre, Des Moines; Allen, Cleveland; Mark Strand, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Leland, Albany; Rival, Baltimore; Capitol, Cincinnati; Capitol, Dallas, Tex., and Colorado, Denver.

FEATURE RELEASE CHART

Productions are Listed Alphabetically and by Months in which Released in order that the Exhibitor may have a short-cut toward such information as he may need. Short subject and comedy release, as well as information on pictures that are coming, will be found on succeeding pages. (S. R. indicates State Right release.)

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Black Bird"—M-G-M., Capitol, N. Y.

American: "Lon Chaney is at his best in crook roles. 'The Black Bird' is not another 'The Unholy Three,' but, it is the same type of story, smoothly directed, well cast. Browning both wrote the story and directed it, an excellent combination. Through a few clever scenes at the opening he plunges the story into the very heart of Limehouse. That little sequence is particularly well done. Limehouse is simply shown as a fog with faces, all kinds of faces, drifting through it one at a time."

Telegraph: "Whether or not Lon Chaney in 'The Black Bird' at the Capitol this week is as gripping as Lon Chaney in 'The Unholy Three' is what people have asked ever since the picture was announced. And, having fallen under the spell of Lon Chaney and his author-director, Tod Browning in that one they will go to see the latest offering of the two without being urged—they will not be disappointed. 'The Black Bird' is a crook melodrama rarefied into something far finer than ordinarily passes for that sort of entertainment by the authorship and direction of Tod Browning, and the art of acting as found in Chaney, not forgetting the flawless performances of Renee Adoree, Owen Moore and Doris Lloyd."

Mirror: "The Black Bird' is a distinctive screen offering that casts credit on the director and every member of the cast."

Times: "Tod Browning strikes the gong again with his new production and 'Lon Chaney's depiction of the two types of crook is one of the finest exemplifications of screen artistry one would hope to behold. Miss Adoree is natural and charming as a French girl."

World: "Miss Renee Adoree that delicately dark and lovely French lady whose amazingly true acting in 'The Big Parade' contributed so much to the general excellence of that masterpiece at the Astor, is to be seen in what was written as a secondary role to a limehouse drama, starring Lon Chaney. To the part, that of Mile. Fifi who has crossed the Channel to perform upon the stage of a London dive, Miss Adoree imparts a vividness which hoists the characterization into a position of beauty and importance. 'The Black Bird' is a drama of menace cast in the symphony of a London fog, suggesting love, grey alleys, danger and greed."

Post: "Another exceptional melodrama."

Journal: "If you like a good crook play you'll stay to see this for a second time."

Gentlemen:-

The Style 49 Pit Unit Organ which we purchased some two years ago, we consider
a wonderful addition to our musical programs.

The instrument has caused us no trouble
whatever and being located where we cannot have the attention of an experienced Organ
Mechanic for repairs and tuning, we found that in a very short time, with just a little experimenting, that we were able ourselves
to keep the organ in first class condition.

We feel confident in saying to the average Exhibitor who wishes to play to capacity, that this is the best musical instrument the smaller town theatre could possible
have.

Yours truly,

not the machine itself but the service it gives—that's the thing!

That's the basis on which you should buy. That's the way we sell. Results count.

Machines are machines but their real value and the true skill of their builders are shown only in their performance.

The Simplex Projector is original in design and in its use of well established engineering principles through a unique arrangement of parts—but what you really buy is the best projection science can produce, great operating economy, unexcelled sturdiness and perfect maintenance service.

The Simplex organization is made up of men with long experience in motion picture work. They know what the exhibitor needs and their big purpose is to meet his requirements.

Individual resources, company policy, collective engineering thinking—these factors aim to accomplish a definite purpose—better business and bigger profits for you.

Know the Simplex Projector and through its representatives learn something of its builders. Then you will understand why more and more exhibitors are turning to Simplex.

When Will It Happen?

THE agreement upon a uniform contract reached harmoniously between the several exhibitor organizations and the Will H. Hays association of producers and distributors is important enough in itself.

In the words of Frank J. Rembusch, who had bitterly assailed the former document, the new contract "is fair and equitable as far as is humanly possible now," and "a year or two of battle is ended."

The fact, we say, is important.

But still more important, much more, is the act of getting together; the two branches of the industry, whose relations in the past have been largely those of civil warfare, were able, through their representatives, to meet amicably and very speedily arrive at a perfectly satisfactory agreement upon a major issue.

That, indeed, is progress.

Assuredly the industry is growing up, getting beyond the rough and tumble belligerency of childhood and into the restraint and intelligence of somewhat mature years.

When the producers and distributors first got together under the Hays banner, a leader remarked: "It even isn't the association itself that counts so much as the fact that we had reached the point where we were minded and able to get together."

Previous to this association of the producers and distributors it was difficult and almost impossible to unite them, even in an emergency, and for any continuing policy for the whole good of the motion picture. Some were scarcely acquainted with each other. There was abundant suspicion and distrust. Things—big things—were at odds and ends when this organization was formed. It was tremendously needed and it has done a lot of good. We hesitate to think what might have happened to the entertainment business if this association of interests and their resulting strength had not been brought about.

It is well, now, to consider some pertinent facts.

When the Hays group was formed the distributors were supreme—in the business. Previously the producers had been. Today the theatre dominates in power. Which fact indicates clearly enough and decisively enough that theatre owners must now form their own group; their organization on a large scale, and so achieve a meeting ground and a union of their interests and their strength.

Not selfishly either; not merely to get fair play with the distributor; not merely to safeguard the huge investment in theatres; but for the good of the whole business, its right progress and construction.

Dominating as they do today, the time is certainly here when the theatre owners have got to think collectively about more matters than bookings, rentals and contracts—about more than their strictly commercial relations with producers and distributors. There isn't a big question confronting the American industry today but that vitally affects the theatre owners. Is he to continue to let the producers and distributors tackle it, unaided by him? Will he let George do it?

What, for instance, is the exhibitors' opinion on international film relations—on film reciprocity between this country and Europe? It will, some day, affect his supply of pictures—their quality and price. He's the man who best can solve the problem. Is he thinking about it at all? And is he content to leave this and other vital issues to the producers and distributors?

What are the big circuits going to do about a national organization of theatre owners? And the thousand smaller ones?

And when?

Speaking Editorially

"TRUTH, THE SALESMAN," an editorial by D. B. Lederman, Western Sales Director for Associated Exhibitors, printed in the house organ of that company, sums up very well the new day in relations between salesmen and exhibitors. Mr. Lederman says in part: "The day was, when this business thrived on lies. Salesmen made all sorts of rash statements they knew their product could not back up. . . . Today, a good salesman does not use so-called high pressure methods to dispose of his product. He merely finds out the truth about his product and tells it to his customer. A customer's recollection of fair and honorable treatment remains indefinitely and holds the door open for the next sale."

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER has attracted wide attention during the past year by a series of publicity stunts and tie-ups, beginning with the Trackless Train, and continuing with the signing of Gloria Gould as manager of the Embassy Theatre; the producing of a Fire Prevention film in co-operation with the international organization of fire chiefs; and other ideas that hit the mark of practical showmanship.

Exploitation is now established as a very valuable adjunct to picture-handling; and M-G-M is right up with the topnotchers in this important line of activity.

FRANK REMBUSCH, President of the Indiana M. P. T. O., speaking: "Perhaps it would be a good idea to hold a National Convention about July and have a lot of politics and hold a Conference just before the buying season opens in February and do a lot of business." An idea worth considering.

QUITE an array of news this week from M. P. T. O. A. National Headquarters, including the creation of a Contact Bureau, headed by E. Thornton Kelly, prominent Jersey theatre owner; announcement of a Speakers' Bureau; a declaration of war by Business Manager Joseph M. Seider on "theatre bootleggers;" plans for the Los Angeles convention; and other items that show continuing activity of an important sort under the Seider regime.

THE Government has now officially designated the motion picture industry as the fourth in rank in the country. This refers to capital invested, and the statement is made on the authority of the President himself, transmitting the recommendation of the Director of the Budget for a film bureau in the Department of Commerce.

"FIRE PROTECTION," the leading fire prevention magazine, in a recent issue gives high praise to the Hays Organization for its work in fire prevention.

"The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., it says editorially, "is now the leading trade organization of the country in point of its efficient supervision of the fire hazards to be found in its industry."

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

W HAT THE T. O. C. C. BALL season was hailed by many as the most enjoyable affair of the season was held last Friday night at the Hotel Astor, New York City—the Sixth Annual Dinner Dance of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce. All of the ballrooms were used, to accommodate the crowd, but the festivities centered about the Gold Room where the parties of Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, Mrs. James J. Walker and the heads of the various state and city departments were seated in the boxes. Vincent Lopez conducted his orchestra in person. Impressive ceremonies shortly after midnight commemorated the birthday of Lincoln. An entertainment program followed, arranged by Lee A. Ochs. The performers included Helen Ford and the "Dearest Enemy" company, Gus Edwards, Evelyn Herbert and others. Prominent film personages in attendance included Will H. Hays, Colvin W. Brown, Adolphe Menjou, William Seiter, John Gilbert, Louise Brooks, Miriam Cooper, Raoul Walsh, Johnny Hines, Dorothy Gish and James Rennie. Many prominent members of the municipal government were also in attendance. The proceeds are to go toward a T. O. C. C. clubhouse.

E MANUEL COHEN, editor of Pathe News, was given a signal honor by Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, the other day when he was awarded the key to the city—a favor extended only to such as Marshal Foch, Dawes, Pershing and so on. Pathe News likewise came in for praise in the presentation. The inscription accompanying the key read as follows:

"Hon. James M. Curley of the City of Boston presents to Emanuel Cohen, editor of Pathe News, the official key of the city, and takes this opportunity to congratulate the great Pathe company upon their 15th anniversary. Pathe deserves well of the age; it has kept faith with it; it has preserved its ideals of art and lived up to its conception of duty, and we can say of it in truth and simplicity, 'Well done, thou good and faithful servant.'"

B "IRENE" GIVEN PREVIEW
BEFORE an audience of some fourteen hundred persons, "Irene" was given a test preview last week at the Playhouse, Mamaroneck's superb new theatre, with unqualified success. Among those on hand for the screening were Richard A. Rowland, June Mathis, Samuel Spring, Balboni, Bruce Johnson, Louis Brock, A. W. Smith, Jr., Ned Martin, Ned Depinet, W. C. Boothby, Joe Fisher, C. W. Bunn, Hugh McCollum and C. F. Chandler. The visiting First Nationalites were entertained later by Ernest Kopp, the house manager, in his apartment over the theatre. Manager Edwin Wheeler predicted great things for the picture.

F AGGRAVATIN' WEATHER
FOX FILMS is having trouble with the weather, and wants some sort of reliable long distance weather forecasting. Much money, effort and engineering was expended in filming "The Johnstown Flood," and no more had the wet ground of the big lot dried out than the California climate staged a rainfall that would have eliminated all the use of city water. Then Alma Rubens went on location with the "Siberia" company in Idaho and the mercury dropped to 30 below zero—and stayed there.

W A GREAT COMBINATION

HAT promises to be a rare combination of talent will be brought to the screen in "Padlocked," the Rex Beach story which is said to have brought the highest price ever paid for a piece of fiction in advance of publication. Lois Moran, the brilliant youngster whose few screen appearances have carried her far, will play the role of the girl, which Allan Dwan says would make a star of anyone chosen to play it. The mother will be played by Florence Turner, one of the screen's real troupers, and a veteran in experience. The combination of Belle Bennett and Miss Moran was ideal—that of Miss Turner and the Pittsburgh youngster should bring to the screen likewise some unforgettable moments. And if "Padlocked" brings Lois Moran stardom, perhaps it will also win back for Florence Turner something of the rightful place which she deserves at the hands of the photoplay, to which she has given so much.

L AL LICHTMAN RETURNS

LOOKING happy and with fully recovered health, Al Lichtman is back in the ring with both feet. (They never stay away long!) Over at the Tec-Art studio the other day we found him busy super-

George McManus, the cartoonist, prepares a special drawing in honor of the contract closed with Stern Brothers to produce a series of comedies for Universal based on his cartoon series, "The Newlyweds and Their Baby." They will not be animated cartoons, but will resemble the Buster Brown series, and there will be thirteen in the first series. The smiling gentleman is Mr. McManus.

Laurence Stallings, engaged as special dramatist on the picture, accompanied Cruze to the coast and will spend a month in Hollywood whipping the story into shape. He is considered a master of telling effects, both on stage and screen, and it is hoped that he can contribute to "Old Ironsides" some of the sincerity and brutal reality which have marked his previous work, as well as powerful drama and a largeness of pictorial appeal.

ART FILM GROUP

ANOTHER group to provide an audience for art films and unusual pictures not suitable for general circulation has been formed with the incorporation of The Film Associates, Inc., with a board including Christian Brinton, Sheldon Cheney, Jane Heap, Friedrich Kiesler, Lawrence Langner, Kenneth MacGowan and Gilbert Seldes. Single showings will commence in March at the Klaw theatre, New York City, with "L'Inhumaine," an unusual French picture with modernist settings by noted artists. Following this will be shown other interesting German, French and Scandinavian films as well as short subjects of an experimental nature.

An interesting member of the cast is Little Billy, the well known Lilliputian, who plays the name role. Despite extended theatrical experience, this is his first picture engagement and he is enjoying every minute of it. He is called upon to portray a diminutive fight manager and to impersonate a small girl.

Another interesting feature is the canine member of the cast, whose name slips our memory. This remarkable dog appeared in "Tol'able David," and the manner in which she carries out the commands of her mistress is little short of uncanny.

J "OLD IRONSIDES"

JAMES CRUZE is back in Hollywood and hard at work preparing to film "Old Ironsides." His offices were enlarged during his trip abroad and he found two old-fashioned 12 pound cannon flanking the doorway, which should lend proper authority to his commands—if the doughty Cruze needed any such. In all, 35 of these cannon and 20 of the 24-pound type have been cast and mounted. Twenty sailing ships have been purchased and will be reconstructed to form part of the American fleet of 1804.

Cruze studied possible locations in Tripoli, arranged for foreign co-operation and took several reels of atmospheric shots to guide the property and wardrobe departments.

T CANADIAN BEAUTIES FETED

THE five girls who won in the recent Canadian beauty contest were given a hectic week in New York. First National gave them a luncheon at Sherry's. At the Fox studio they were guests of Director Raoul Walsh and in addition to being photographed in several hundred feet of film they were permitted to watch tests made for "What Price Glory?" At the Tec-Art studio they were entertained by members of the unit producing "Charley's Niece."

M OFFICER PICKFORD

MARY PICKFORD was made an honorary member of the Los Angeles police force last week, receiving a jeweled badge from the hands of Chief of Police R. Lee Heath in the presence of twenty important police officials. The sympathetic portrayal of a policeman's family life contained in "Little Annie Rooney" had much to do with this honor. The badge is done in four kinds of gold and platinum and bears the seal of the city in colors.

G THE AFTERMATH OF LORAIN

GEORGE SCHADE, the prominent exhibitor and proprietor of Schade's theatre, Sandusky, Ohio, furnishes a curious and striking instance of the after effects of a great disaster. The other day, on a visit to Cleveland, he stated that business in Sandusky had been off ever since the disaster at Lorain, Ohio, more than a year ago. Since that time, he says, people will fight shy of crowds and public places. Only the most exceptional picture will draw the crowds.

B GUS EDWARDS' START

BACK in 1892, a 12-year-old immigrant boy landed in New York and went to work in a cigar factory at $1.50 a week. Three years later he became a singer at clubs and various affairs. One night, in a Brooklyn theatre, his clear voice floating down from the balcony while the audience was joining in on a refrain led to his engagement as a regular performer. From then on it was but a question of time until he had made the name "Gus Edwards" known from coast to coast. But even more demarkable than his own story is the list of others whom he has brought to fame—Lila Lee, Lillian Walker and Johnny Hines on the screen, and on the stage such performers as Eddie Cantor, Eddie Buzzell, Olga Cook, the Duncan sisters, Louise Groody, Helen Mencken, Ona Munson, Betty Pierce, Jessica Brown, Orville Harrold, Georgie Jessel, Gregory Kelly and many others.

Now, for the first time, Edwards is producing picture presentations. The first, "A Garden of Girls," opened this week at the Rivoli, New York, and seemed, to this writer at least, to be the happiest, snappiest and most showmanlike combination yet evolved since the new policy went into effect. Entertainment—singing and dancing—comes first, with costumes and scenery in their proper place as background.

L ANOTHER CANDID ADVERTISER

LAST December C. J. Latta of Shenandoah, Iowa, discovered that "truth in advertising" pays richly. Now another candidate for the Diogenes medal comes forward—Manager C. L. Roser of the Al Ringling theatre, Baraboo, Wisc.—and he, too, has found that frankness is profitable.

Recently Manager Roser had on his hands a picture acquired through block booking and which, according to his best information, was not likely to inspire his patrons with much enthusiasm. So he said in his newspaper ad: "Here's another we cannot recommend. Many professional reviewers fail to have any compliments whatever for this picture—which is one of the group we were compelled to buy in order to secure '.....' and other productions of merit. You might like this one, or you might not—it isn't up to the standard we wish it were."

Expecting a decided falling off for the week, Roser was astonished when he found, after a check-up, that the advertisement instead of reducing the attendance for the week had increased the revenue far above his expectations. It is not unlikely that an ad of this sort stimulates people to go and see for themselves if the attraction in question is really a good picture or a bad one as hinted. At any rate, we now have two converts to the policy of candid advertising expression, and these are likely to lead to many more.

Hal Roach, producer of several series of comedies for Pathe release, caught by the photographer in a jovial mood after closing new contracts.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE DAUGHTER

SAM RORK, the showman-producer, has signed a new star—Miss Ann Rork, his 17-year-old daughter. He hadn't planned a picture career for her, either, but with such a father how could she do otherwise than follow his footsteps in "show business?" When she insisted that she would prefer a film debut to the social one planned for her, Rork consented to a lengthy test. This was taken by Maurice Tourneur and was so satisfactory that Marion Fairfax not only gave her a part in "The Desert Healer" but enlarged the role to provide her a greater opportunity.

Rork still reserved judgment, however, and it was not until her work in the picture had convinced both Miss Fairfax and Tourneur that she was a "real trouper" that he gave his consent to a continued screen career and signed the contract binding him to it.

If Ann's screen performances are as consistently good as Sam's pictures, then we may announce the ascent of a new screen luminary right now. And the photo, shown elsewhere, speaks for itself.

Elenore Meherin, author of "Sandy" (Fox), has a bouncing boy of her own. She married the San Francisco editor who gave her her first job.

K. C. STAR ON CENSORSHIP

THAT worthy publication, the Kansas City Star, took a "fall" out of literary censorship the other day, in commenting ironically on the so-called 'clean books bill' before the New York state legislature, which applied equally as well to picture censorship. The punch line was:

"Herein lies the danger of literary censorship—it gives a political weapon into hands that are too likely to be unfit to wield it. Some legislators are terribly afraid the people won't be governed enough. What they seem to need is the political wisdom to recognize that the best and most effective protection to public morals is public opinion. That will very quickly terminate the life of any publication that persistently offends it."

DOING IT UP BROWN

IT looks as though Clarence Brown has grabbed off one of the directorial plums of the year in "The Trail of '98," which he will direct for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by arrangement with Joseph M. Schenck. Brown has wanted to do this story ever since he first read it, seven years ago. It will be made on an heroic scale, with exteriors filmed in the Klondike on the actual locations of the story. Brown will start work in about three weeks, after finishing "Kiki."

AWARDING THE * * * * *

TWO asterisks were handed out this week by the National Board of Review, according to the current bulletin. The subjects to be favored with this mark of merit were "Felix the Cat in Slumberland," an Educational cartoon release, and Pathe Review No. 5, showing marriage customs in Korea, river boats of Dresden, and the Arcturus expedition.

Canon Chase Meeting Ends in Wrangling and Disputes

Ramsaye and Rembusch Uphold Freedom of Screen

WRANGLING and recriminations marked the Fourth National Motion Picture Conference which held a three-day session at the Congress Hotel in Chicago, starting February 10th, under the auspices of the Federal Motion Picture Council.

The resolutions which Canon W. S. Chase, chairman, and his "blue" followers at the conference, expected to pass had tapered off considerably from the specific indorsement of the Swoope and Upshaw congressional bills calling for federal censorship of motion pictures before a vote was taken and the final resolutions which avoided the use of the word "censorship" read that: "Until there is a sufficient accumulation of evidence of scientific character to show that regulation of the films for minors is undesirable, this conference declares itself as approving an adequate means of local, state, federal, or international regulation of the motion picture industry."

Although partially defeated, Canon Chase, before the close of the conference, besought the delegates to write to Congress asking for an immediate hearing on the Swoope and Upshaw bills and for any other moving picture legislation which, he said, would doubtless result from the Chicago meeting.

Voliver W. Stewart and other delegates who were unable to secure recognition on the floor of the convention, later in the corridor denounced the high handed methods of the convention.

Charges were made that Canon Chase and others sought to railroad legislation commendatory of the Upshaw bill through the conference.

Court Verdict Halts Sunday Pictures

SUPREME Court Justice Abraham L. Kellogg has rendered a decision which may have far reaching effect on the smaller cities, towns and villages in New York state. It permanently restrains the Board of Trustees of Canastota, N. Y., from calling a special election of the voters of that town on the Sunday motion picture proposition.

The Board of Trustees of a village or its governing body may, by passing an ordinance, allow Sunday moving pictures, but to submit such matters to the voters is illegal, declares the court, and is an unwarranted waste of public funds as the vote of the people on the proposition under the law would have no binding force and effect.

Theatres Ignored by Manitoba Council

DESPITE the pleadings of the exhibitors of Manitoba for the past two years, the Manitoba Provincial Government ignored the theatres when an order-in-council was read before the Manitoba Legislature at Winnipeg on February 12 which provided for changes in the Provincial amusement tax. The two changes announced affected other taxable activities, the amusement tax on horse racing being raised and the admission tax on amateur sport events being abolished altogether. No change was made in the theatre admission tax at all.

Mrs. David Ross of Indianapolis, president of the Indiana Endorsers of Photoplays, declared outside the meeting, "From the first this convention has been packed with delegates determined on the final day of the meeting to indorse the Upshaw bill and all talk of deliberative discussion is merely a blind to conceal a predetermined purpose of the blue law advocates," and later from the floor let fly broadsides against the idea of Washington regulation of Keokuk's films on the floor of the convention.

Terry Ramsaye declared that "if the motion picture on the average is bad today then the American public has gone wrong by the largest plurality ever polled. The motion picture of today is made and controlled by the box office." He said, in part: "Nobody is for the motion pictures but the people."

"Nobody cares about the motion picture, for itself alone, except the fifty-five million customers who go to the box office to buy what they want. . . ."

"Realize this: not one of those famous stars was made by the motion picture industry. Not one of them was advertised or even named on the screen until they had become great even though nameless. It is hard to believe it, but it took the motion picture business seventeen years to learn to advertise. It has surely learned it now. D. W. Griffith evolved the foundation of modern screen technique in total obscurity and was the admitted master of the art for nearly five years before his name ever saw type or screen. The motion picture industry probably has never made a star, and likely never can. I recall now two beautiful young women upon whom millions, literally millions of dollars, have been spent in vain in the effort to make them stars. Money and power can make them well known, but it can not make the public accept them or any one else. Publicity helps but it does not create and the masters of the screen are merely servants, succeeding as they serve."

"If the motion picture on the average is bad today then the American public has gone wrong by the largest plurality ever polled. The motion picture of today is made and controlled by the box office. Successively we have seen the domination of the motion picture pass in thirty years from the inventor to the producer to the distributor and lastly down to the retailer, the exhibitor, the man who meets the public at the door and gets its judgment every night. Men who began as producers have had to travel the whole route to keep their places in the industry. The public made them do that.

"If motion pictures in general offend what we may term the old American idealism it is fair to look about and try to find out whose America this is. It is assuredly not the America that the leaders of this movement were born into. It is a new America—not necessarily better or worse than before, but new. The motion picture reveals this new America with extreme clarity. I have heard of people who blamed the mirror for the way they looked, before."

"Miss Jane Addams of Chicago not many weeks ago cheerfully advised that it would be well to keep in touch with youth. America has young ideas. The motion picture has them too."

"I have been hearing this row about motion pictures for about fifteen years. I am reminded of Mark Twain's observation about cats. He said that in his youth the noises in the backyard made him fear that the entire feline race was about to be destroyed by internecine strife, but as he grew older he found that the only result was just more cats."

"Motion picture makers have no larger hand in the trend of life today than other large mercantile interests, the makers of newspapers, silk stockings, perfumery, automobiles and saxophones. The motion picture like other media of publicity can speed up social reactions, but it does not create them. They will all come anyway."

"The motion picture is a strand in the yarn of life. Basic human wishes will have to change before the picture really changes much. If there is a war of motion picture censorship it will ultimately have to be fought out with the public."

Frank J. Rembusch, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Indiana, went still further in his indictment of the Upshaw bill.

"I understand you're talking a lot about censorship at this meeting. I suppose your idea of censoring the movies is that it prevents crime, or something like that. Chicago is a great town to come to, to put over that argument. They've been censoring pictures here for years and it has been so successful in preventing crime that outside of a few instances of boys murdering their friends, and young gunmen and bottleggers running amuck regularly—Chicago is entirely pure."

"Chicago can point in scorn at Indianapolis and Kansas City and St. Louis and say, 'You poor misguided fools. Why not abolish all crime, just as Chicago has done. Get yourself a censor board and chop up the movies and you'll never need policemen. Look what motion picture censorship has done for Chicago in the way of cleaning up public morals."

"Which is a great argument unless, when you say, 'Look what censorship has done for Chicago,' some foolish Indianan should ask 'What?' Then you'd be entirely stumped for an answer. You're in favor of the Upshaw bill which would establish a bureau of high salaried politicians to stick their fingers in the making of the movies."

"That's great! Providing you get me one of those high-salaried jobs."

"I'm for censorship, whenever I can be the censor. If somebody else is going to do the censoring—then nothing doing."

"Nobody wants censorship but a few of you. About 99% of our population doesn't want it, and you can't tell me that you know more about how this country should be run than they do."

Uncensored movies also found a powerful champion in Judge Ben Lindsay, who spoke as representative of the Colorado Parent-Teachers' Association, and despite the opposition of many reformers who were plainly outspoken in their objections to hearing the other side.

"I oppose censorship because it is making for a flabby, spineless, sinful, hopeless youth. Thank God, the youth now coming in will not stand for it, even if their elders try to impose it upon them. Their rebellion is apparent on every hand."

Other highlights of his address were: "How anyone can make the statement that the movies are getting worse instead of better, I cannot understand. I don't believe it, for if they are it is a terrible indictment of our schools and churches, far more than of the movies. It is proof that they are failing."

"The kick that some people get out of reforming often blinds them to the facts about good and evil and how to overcome evil. A man on a jag is always blind to the things about him."

"Nothing in the last fifty years of the most eventful history of all time has done more to reduce sin and crime and add to the happiness, education and progress of the human race than have motion pictures."

"If we did not have any motion pictures at all, we would have far more crime than we have."

"There is such a thing as going too far in our insatiate demand for artificial restraints. They are a greater crime against youth—fostered as they are, by well meaning people who are ignorant of youth—than all the movies, good and bad, put together."

"Artificial restraints, over emphasized in schools and churches and beheld on every hand in demands for more suppressions, regulations, prohibitions, punishments and censorships, are failing."

"And it is our insistent refusal to substitute more of the natural restraints in homes, schools and churches that is the great cause of crime in this country."

"I insist that the great majority of the movies do thus emphasize them in their true light. Vice is ever shown the enemy and destroyer of human happiness, virtue as the only true course to secure real joys of life—the only course that assures victories worth while."

"In the movies, righteousness wins. Sin loses. The hero triumphs. The villain bites the dust. Not only decency but the pocket book guarantees those general averages. And that is the best we can hope for."

Statistics Show Film Export Trend

Department of Commerce Report Indicates Great Increase in Value of Foreign Market Since 1913

SOME idea of the tremendous gain in export business by the American film industry since 1913, the last pre-war year, is given by a recent report made public by C. J. North of the Department of Commerce, although, as he points out, the statistics reveal but a portion of the gain since they deal only with the declared invoice value of the film exported. Since the revenue derived from prints has increased greatly since that time, the ratio between invoice value and income has risen sharply. Even so, however, the gain shown is extremely impressive.

This foreign trade in motion pictures sprang from comparatively small beginnings. In 1913, the last pre-war year, American exports of motion-picture films approximated 32,000,000 linear feet at a declared invoice value of about $2,250,000. The war, which halted foreign picture production, gave an enormous impetus to America's foreign trade in motion pictures which lasted in common with nearly all other manufactured commodities through the two years of inflation following the armistice. Even after the slump of 1921, however, it was found that over 140,000,000 linear feet of film at an invoice value of about $6,500,000 had been sent abroad during that year.

In 1922, the first year that negatives were separated from positives in the Department of Commerce statistical schedule, approximately 8,400,000 linear feet of the former and 125,400,000 linear feet of the latter at declared values of $700,000 and $5,400,000, respectively, were exported. Since that time a large rise has taken place each year in our motion-picture exports. In 1923 there were about 8,200,000 feet of negatives valued at approximately $990,000 and 138,000,000 feet of positives valued at $5,400,000. For 1924 the footage of negatives, about the same as that in the preceding year, was valued at $1,300,000, but there were 32,000,000 feet more positives than in 1923, at a declared value of over $6,000,000.

And this 170,000,000 feet of positives in 1924 has increased to over 225,000,000 feet for the calendar year 1925.

Although these statistics prove the widespread character and tremendous increase of American motion-picture exports, they underestimate by many millions of dollars the value to the American producer of this overseas trade. Government figures for 1924, for example, show the value of American film exports—negatives and positives—as under $9,000,000. However, the lowest reliable estimate places the gross revenue to the American motion-picture industry from their foreign business as at least $75,000,000. The reason for this discrepancy is that the American exporter of motion pictures can not possibly know at the time he exports his film what revenue it will bring him from foreign showings. What he does, therefore, is to put on his export declaration an arbitrary invoice value on his film of 3 to 4 cents per foot and these export declarations, of course, form the basis for the Department of Commerce statistics. The only way, therefore, to secure accurate values on our motion picture exports is from the companies themselves.

American foreign trade in motion pictures has been built up against little or no competition. For while other countries—notably, England, France, Germany, and Italy—are all producers, the limited returns from the comparatively few theaters within their borders—4,000 in England, 2,500 in France, 3,700 in Germany, and 2,000 in Italy, compared with over 15,000 theaters in the United States—has forced their producers to keep production costs much below those of American make.

Foreign producers, in the realization that they can not compete individually with the American "movie," are endeavoring through their Governments to secure legislation that will limit the number of American pictures shown.

To illustrate, for every foreign-made picture admitted for showing in Germany a picture produced in that country must be offered as compensation. This decree went into effect on January 1, 1925, and before that date the American product held over 80 per cent of the German market. Such a system, known as the "Kontingent" or "one for one" system, is now with modification being considered by a number of other important European countries, notably England, France, and Czecho-Slovakia, and has already been adopted though not yet actually put into effect in Hungary on the basis of 1 in 30. Even in Australia a recent law requires the showing of 1,000 feet of British Empire film in each program.

In many other ways, too, foreign Governments are striving to limit the introduction of American pictures. England, for example, besides considering the requirement that exhibitors must show 10 per cent British-produced film based on each three-months' period, this amount to reach 25 per cent by 1929, is talking also of a subsidy to her producers, the creation of a national studio, and other schemes of a like nature.

France has provisionally decreed that after January 1, 1928, the showing of films printed on inflammable stock is prohibited. This would automatically force American pictures to have special prints for the French market—these American pictures being almost entirely printed on such stock as against the French product, which in nearly every case is noninflammable.

Thus, the United Kingdom screens 90 per cent American production; France goes higher than 75 per cent; Germany, up to January 1, 1925, 80 per cent; the Scandinavian countries, nearly 80 per cent. The Latin-American nations show our pictures in similar proportion, as do also the countries of the Far East, Australia being our third largest market with over 90 per cent American pictures. Canada shows practically as many American films in proportion to its theaters as we do in the United States.

Move to Abolish N. Y. Commission

Bill Introduced Similar to That of Last Year, Would Put An End to Censorship in Empire State

ONCE more a move is to be made to abolish the New York State Motion Picture Commission, a bill to that effect having been introduced last Thursday in the New York State Legislature by Assemblyman Frederick L. Hackenburg, a Democratic lawyer of New York City. The bill calls for the abolishment of the commission on July 1, next and the transfer of all books and records on or before that date, to the state comptroller, who will be authorized to work with the attorney general in clearing up any outstanding proceedings instituted by or against the commission. The bill is identical with the one of a year ago, which was defeated.

This year, however, there exists a different situation and one that must be reckoned with as a possibility towards bringing about the abolishment of censorship in the Empire State. Although this year's bill is again introduced by a Democrat, and undoubtedly the companion bill in the Senate will be sponsored by a Democrat, the Republicans, who are in the majority in both houses, will not be so strongly set in opposing the bill as in years past, as there is no longer any Republican patronage to the commission.

In connection with the possibilities of the present Hackenburg bill being passed, it should also be borne in mind that in other years more than one Republican member of the New York State Legislature would have voted to abolish censorship had he been permitted to follow his own personal inclinations rather than the dictates of the Republican leaders. When the Hackenburg bill goes to a vote, it is absolutely certain that there will be more than one break in the Republican ranks.

Committee Named to Sift Charges

AT the regular meeting of the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware a committee was appointed to investigate allegations lodged against certain Philadelphia exchanges which have been insisting it is claimed, that all paper and advertising material be purchased from them at the time of renting film.

Exhibitors are maintaining that by this action on the part of some of the exchanges they are compelled to pay three times what it would ordinarily cost for such accessories and further, that the paper obtained from the exchanges is unmounted and very perishable. A committee consisting of I. Perlin, George Naudascher, Elliott Goldman, H. Meeker and Ben Fertle was appointed to investigate the allegations and negotiate with the exchanges for the abolition of the practice.

The bill as introduced this year, by Hackenburg, would wipe out the commission a little more than four months hence. If it passes the Legislature, Governor Smith will not lose a single moment in signing the bill as he has long advocated the elimination of censorship.

Up to this week, there had been a more or less general opinion that the censorship commission might be abolished by the simple expedient of giving it no place in the reorganization of the many state departments and commissions. Although the Hughes reorganization committee will not make its report to the Legislature until February 22, there is a report around the state capitol to the effect that the Motion Picture Commission will be continued as a bureau and that the Hughes committee will recommend it becoming a part of the State Education department.

On account of the widespread interest in motion picture censorship in New York state, there will be a public hearing later on on the Hackenburg bill. Up to the present time, three bills of interest to the motion picture industry have thus far been introduced at the present session of the New York State Legislature, the three being the bill to eliminate news reels from censorship provisions, the admission of unaccompanied children to motion picture theatres outside of the metropolis at certain hours and under certain conditions, and this last one to wipe out censorship entirely.

Vote to Repeal All Admission Tax

Senate Would Abolish Tax in Entirety; Also Insists Upon Amendments to Revenue Revision Bill

BY a vote of 36 to 34, later ratified by a vote of 40 to 27, the Senate has provided for the repeal of the admission tax in its entirety, and the revenue revision bill, adopted on February 12, has been sent to conference with instructions to the conferees to insist upon the amendments of the Senate.

The admission and dues taxes were thrown out on an amendment offered by Senator King of Utah, who asserted that they savored too much of war taxes and were a constant reminder of the war to the public. He pointed out that the House had agreed to exemption of the spoken drama but had made no change in the present 50 cent exemption for other amusements. The Senate finance committee had given no special relief to any class, but had increased the exemption to 75 cents, estimating that a tax of about $20,000,000 would be secured under that change which, it was declared, the Government needed.

Senator King held that the income and corporation taxes paid by theatre owners would be increased, by reason of the additional business secured on a tax-free basis, to such a point as practically to offset the $20,000,000 loss through repeal of the tax in its entirety, and asserted that the Senate, in repealing the inheritance tax and lowering the rates on income surtaxes, was making excellent provision for relief of the

J. D. Williams Launches N. Y. Corporation

BEFORE leaving for London on February 13th, J. D. Williams and George T. Eaton registered the incorporation of British National Pictures of New York for the transaction of the English company's American business. C. L. Yearsley is president and treasurer of the American concern and will be in charge at the New York office in the Strauss Building, 565 Fifth Avenue.

wealthy but had done little or nothing for the poor people.

The administration is now looking to the House of Representatives to save the Government from a possible deficit of $100,000,000 this year by compelling the restoration of some of the taxes cut out of the revenue bill by the Senate during its tax-cutting orgy, which marked the last hours of its consideration of the measure.

Whether this confidence is misplaced will be learned when the conferees of the Senate and House report back to their respective bodies the tax bill which will represent the final word of Congress. The situation today is very similar to that of a few years ago, when President Harding depended upon the House to rectify tax cuts made by the Senate, only to see the House agree to the Senate's action practically all along the line. And in many quarters it is freely predicted that history is about to repeat itself.

As passed by the House and Senate, many of the tax changes advocated by the administration are assured. The outstanding points of difference between the two bodies, in addition to the admissions and dues taxes, are the surtaxes, estate tax, and capital stock taxes. Other differences are considered of lesser importance. They are in accord on other points, such as increased personal exemptions and lower normal taxes, and repeal of the publicity provisions.

Name Committee to Study Undesirable Pictures

Recommendation that a committee be appointed to study undesirable motion pictures and theatrical performances and recommending city ordinances and state legislation that might bring about any necessary improvement was made by the General Committee on "Our Community and Its Youth" of the St. Louis Community Council. Mrs. Ira L. Bretzfelder, 4738 Westminster Place, is chairman of the committee.

CLAYTON P. SHEEHAN Made Fox Foreign Manager

CLAYTON P. SHEEHAN, for nine years with Fox Film Corporation, has just been appointed manager of the Foreign Department. During his first six years with the company Sheehan was engaged in sales development in the Eastern District, covering Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland and Detroit. He was given charge of the Buffalo office and later became District Sales Manager.

Three years ago Sheehan began an inspection of the Fox foreign offices which dot the entire globe. He visited South America first gaining an insight to the necessities for amicable trade agreements between this country and the sister republics to the south.

The following year Mr. Sheehan made a survey of Europe and the needs for friendly international dealings. After returning to the United States he began a world tour, covering Australia, Japan, China, the Philippines, the East Indies and Egypt. Many offices were established by Mr. Sheehan and he standardized the system of transacting business in all of them.

With such a highly developed working knowledge of foreign requirements Mr. Sheehan is well-fitted to the task of operating the Fox Foreign Department.

Ohio Executive Board Meets

Three Measures of Importance are Discussed Before Large Attendance

THE executive board of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio met at Hotel Statler in Cleveland Tuesday, February 9th. The executive board members of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association were guests of the state executive board.

Three important measures were taken up at this meeting. One of them relates to membership in the national exhibitor organization. Another has to do with the zoning plan, as now in operation, and the third pertains to summer closing. As to the first, the board passed a resolution pledging to turn over $3500 to the M. P. T. O. A. For this sum, all members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio automatically become members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, without being assessed added individual dues. This arrangement holds good for one year.

The summer closing subject was brought up and fully discussed. While some members of the board maintained that it was good to close during the summer, that patrons returned to the movie theatres with renewed interest and that the loss by being closed was fully made up later by added patronage, other members stated that when the movie habit was broken, it was difficult to revive it. So it was finally decided that the organization as a whole do nothing in regard to the summer closing, and that the matter be left for every individual exhibitor to decide for himself.

Dissatisfaction especially in Cleveland and Akron with the zoning plan, as now enforced by the Cleveland Film Board of Trade led to the passage of a motion for the appointment of a committee, composed of Cleveland and Akron members to consult with the Cleveland Film Board of Trade for the purpose of readjusting the present zoning plan.

Members of the state executive board attending this meeting were: Messrs. William James, president; Palmer, Dann, Kelley, Gullier, Beverson, Fenberg, Lind, Smith, Schwalm, Harwood and Dunleavy. The Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association executive members in attendance were Messrs. Schwartz, Scoville, Gusdanovic, Burton, Greenberger, Shenker, Harry Horwitz, M. B. Horwitz, Ptak and Levine.

Iowa Exhibitors Planning March Meeting

A convention of the M. P. T. O. A. of Iowa will be held in Des Moines sometime during the month of March, says B. I. Van Dyke of the Royal theatre, Des Moines who is a member of the directing board of the association. The tentative date set is March 16 but the definite plans have not yet been made.

E. P. Smith of the Strand at Newton is acting as secretary of the association and he will send out notices to the exhibitors as soon as the complete arrangements are made. No united move has been made by the association in regard to the music tax. It will come up for discussion at the March meeting.

Fire Damages Houses in Illinois Towns

Fire started by a short circuited electric motor did damage estimated at $2,000 in the Liberty Theatre, East St. Louis, Ill., on February 12. Patrons of the theatre left the house quietly and the house was cleared when the firemen arrived on the scene.

The Liberty Theatre, Murphysboro, Ill., was also damaged by fire the night of February 6. The projection booth was destroyed and other minor damage resulted. Repairs will be made immediately.

New Organization Joins Kansas-Missouri

An organization to be known as the Friars, and which will become a part of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, will be formed soon, according to C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. K-M. The new body will be composed of ministers, civic leaders and club workers.

The decision to form such an organization, admittance to which will be by invitation only, came after the sentiment of the exhibitors had been sounded. The Friars will act in advisory capacity only, attend all conventions and meetings and co-operate with the exhibitors in every manner possible. Through such a merger, which indirectly would link the exhibitor body with the most powerful civic clubs of the city, it is hoped to be able to cope effectively with any unfair legislation or political encroachment. It virtually was agreed this week that the next annual convention of the M. P. T. O. K-M. would be in Joplin, Mo., early in April.

Ousted Orchestra Leader Sues Union

Archie J. Bott, orchestra leader at the O'Fallon Theatre, 4027 West Florissant avenue, St. Louis, Mo., on Saturday, February 13 filed suit in the St. Louis Circuit to enjoin his expulsion from the Musicians Mutual Benefit Association, Local No. 2, American Federation of Musicians.

The suit which also names as defendants, Clarence H. and Chester Kaiman, owners of the theatre also asks the court to prevent the union from interfering with a contract he is under to furnish an orchestra for the theatre.

Oshkosh Theatre Suffers $20,000 Fire Loss

Close to $20,000 loss was suffered at Charles Bauman's Star Theatre at Oshkosh, Wis., when fire gutted a portion of the building. Bauman had just completed the remodelling of his pretentious apartment located in the theatre building, when the flames completely ruined the effort. He was in Milwaukee during the past week to adjust the loss to local exchange men when three features and an installment of a serial were found to be among the losses of the fire.

Kansas - Missouri Lets Slide Contract

A CONTRACT for $6,000 a year on slide advertising was closed this week between the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri and one of the largest department stores in Kansas City, through C. E. Cook, M. P. T. O. K-M manager.

The slides will be operated in fifty theatres in Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kas. But Cook does not intend to stop with that accomplishment. In a few days he will leave on a trip through the territory and endeavor to arrange similar contracts in all the larger towns of the Kansas City district. The money will be used for general expenses in maintaining the organization's headquarters.

Theatre Building Boom on Increase

Reports From Big Cities All Over Country Show New Houses Under Way or Being Contemplated

FROM Kansas City, Chicago, San Francisco and practically all parts of the United States come announcements of contemplated theatre building plans, which reveal the greatest boom of the kind in the history of the industry.

The Comerford Theatres, Inc., of Scranton, Pa., capitalized at $50,000, obtained a charter of incorporation at the State Department in the capitol at Harrisburg. Of the authorized capital, $5,000 has been paid in, the par value of the shares being $100. The purpose of the corporation is to "own, operate and manage theatres and places of amusement."

The incorporators are M. E. Comerford, of Scranton, who owns 16 2/3 shares and who is head of the Comerford interests which control about one hundred picture or vaudeville theatres throughout the United States and Canada; M. B. Comerford, Scranton, 16 2/3 shares, and Frank C. Walker, of New York city, 16 2/3 shares.

Dispatches from Williamsport, Pa., state that plans for two new picture theatres for that city have been announced. The Chamberlain and Comerford interests, have announced plans for a $625,000 theatre on the site of Hotel Sterling, destroyed by fire a year ago.

The second theatre, to cost approximately $150,000 will be erected by the Lycoming Amusement Company, composed of local men, on the site of the former Williamsport Eagles' Home, opposite the City Hall. Work on both structures is expected to start in the Spring.

The Saxe Amusement Enterprises are well up to schedule in making good their promise of expanding to more than forty theatres before the end of the present year. Already they have purchased the Bijou Theatre at Racine, Wis., from Owen McKivett, and are beginning their program of $50,000 improvement to the house, to make it one of the finest in Racine. Ground is soon to be broken for the construction of a new million dollar house at Madison, the state capital, which will probably be named the Capitol.

Another chain of theatres has been organized in the Kansas City territory—the American Theatres, Inc., with $500,000 capitalization. Jack Truitt and Lee Jones are at the head of the venture. Several deals for theatres are pending, they announced. The houses included in the circuit thus far are: the Sedalia, Strand and Liberty theatres of Sedalia, Mo., the Grand theatre of Moberly, Mo., and another new house being built at Moberly.

Harry Charnas, and Jesse Fishman, president and general manager of Standard Film Service Company, have taken over the chain of Ohio motion picture theatres operated by Howard Frankel. These theatres include the Weber theatre, Dover; Cinderella, Coshocton; Windsor, Canton; Rivoli (formerly called the Zane) Zanesville; Ruble, Logan; and Majestic, Sidney. Charnas and Fishman also own the Southern and Hippodrome at Bucyrus.

Three new theatres are to be built in Joplin, Springfield and Pittsburgh, Kas.

The steel work in the Springfield house has already been put in place.

W. G. Underwood, president of Specialty Film Co., has increased his theater holdings with the purchase of three more houses from L. W. Brophy, including Brophy's Yale at Muskogee, Okla., and houses at Claremore and Venita. Underwood has also bought the Strand, Muskogee, from Dan Myers.

William Epstein of San Antonio and Houston is building a big first-run at St. Mary's and Commerce Sts., in the former city. It is practically ready. In Houston, Epstein who is president of the Main Realty Co. is now receiving bids for a theatre to cost $404,000. Actual construction starts March 6, with nine months set for the building period.

Many Chicago suburbs and near-by towns are included in a theatre building boom. Great Lakes Theatres, a subsidiary of Balaban & Katz, and operating only outside of the "Windy City," will erect three, one each in Highland Park, Lake Forest and Waukegan.

In Lake Forest, a house seating between 1,000 and 1,200 will be erected, and at Waukegan, property has been leased from the Y. M. C. A. for a house.

Michael Clamage and Albert Baskind have purchased the corner site at Main St. and Dixie Highway, Homewood, for a new theatre and business building.

The University Theatre Co., headed by Clyde Elliot, will shortly commence work on a theatre costing $300,000 and seating 2,000 at Evanston.

League Calls Film Congress in June

International Meeting in Paris to Consider Interchange of Pictures, Censorship, Educational Use and Other Problems

MANY problems vital to the international film trade will be taken up at a congress called by the Institute of Intellectual Co-operation of the League of Nations, to be held in Paris in June. The exact date will be announced shortly. Representatives of leading motion picture corporations, important producers and members of various societies working for the improvement of the photoplay will be invited to attend. Particularly important at this time is the fact that the aims of this congress are contrary to the policies and restrictions now threatened in many parts of Europe, and that the Institute desires to work for the free and unhampered interchange of worth-while films.

An organization committee is now working in Paris, preparing for the conference, collecting documents for the official reports. Those invited to take part will be requested to send material to the secretary to be used in making up the program and the reports.

Among the questions to be considered are: the means of encouraging and rewarding the production of good pictures; ways of increasing the circulation of the best films so that they will reach even the smallest villages all over the world; the elaboration of a catalog of scientific films and the organization of their international exchange; a more extended use of films in general education and in the schools; whether film censorship is necessary or whether its abolition is desirable, and if desirable, what form it should take.

Information may be obtained in the United States from Rene Batigne, 247 Park Ave., New York City, and in France from the secretary of the conference, Fred Cornelissen, 2 rue de Montpensier, au Palais-Royal, Paris, 1.

Edward L. Bernays, it was announced this week, has been appointed film commissioner for the United States in connection with the congress.

The French government has given the Cinema division of the International Institute of Intellectual Co-operation handsome, permanent quarters in the Palais-Royal, which is in itself a striking proof of the increasing recognition given the motion picture as an important factor of modern artistic and social life.

While the Institute, like the league itself, suggests and recommends and has no authority to enforce its decisions, it has the power to make influential recommendations to the various governments. The purpose of the conference will be mainly to gather authentic and complete data which may be used as the basis of an intelligent solution of international film problems.

The Institute was formally inaugurated on January 16th in Paris, at which time prominent officials of the League of Nations and of the French government spoke. The program of the Institute embraces all the arts and sciences and their international co-ordination, and the recognition given the motion picture in this group is a deep tribute to the growing power and worth of the photoplay.

What part America will play in the conference is not yet known, but in view of the international situation existing the Institute hopes for full co-operation and participation from the American industry.

Government Officially Declares Picture Industry Fourth Largest

THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT has now stated officially that the motion picture industry "is the fourth largest in the country in terms of capital invested."

This is the first authentic and official statement as to the rating of the motion picture business. In the past, estimates made by various persons have rated it as fourth, fifth, sixth and even tenth.

The Government statement is contained in a communication to the House of Representatives from President Coolidge, dated January 29, 1926, transmitting an estimate from H. M. Lord, Director of the Bureau of the Budget. The estimate asks, among other things, for an appropriation of $26,000 to establish in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce a section devoted to the interest of the motion picture industry, and to provide special facilities for handling legislative and other measures against American motion pictures in foreign countries.

Jersey Gets Insurance Bill

Gives Public Utilities Commission Power to Supervise Fixing of Rates

ASSEMBLYWOMAN May M. Carty, on behalf of the New Jersey unit of the M. P. T. O. A. has introduced into the Jersey legislature a bill which would empower the public Utilities Commission to supervise the fixing of the basic rates of insurance.

In explaining the nature of the bill President Joseph M. Seider of the Jersey association said:

"The New Jersey Theatre Owners have for the past year been making every effort to induce the New Jersey Rating Board to bring the basic insurance rates in line with the rates of other states. This the Fire Underwriters' Association, supported by the insurance companies, has failed to do. In a similar respect for over a period of three years the theatre owners in the City of New York have been waging a campaign for the reduction of the basic rate of insurance. Sometime ago a reduction was granted to fire-proof theatres which have movable scenery. In behalf of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey, I wish to emphasize at this time that the New Jersey Theatre Owners will not stop their efforts for just relief, even if it becomes necessary to appeal to the legislature for an investigation of the methods used by the insurance companies in the State of New Jersey."

The Bill classifies fire underwriters' associations or bureaus engaged in fixing rates for fire insurance as Public Utility Companies and making them subject to the provisions of the Public Utility Law, and giving the Board of Public Utility Commissioners the power to make the necessary rules and regulations.

New Companies Chartered for N. Y. State

Motion picture companies chartered by the secretary of state and entering the business in New York state during the past week, included the following: Battery Amusement Corporation, $10,000, Nathan Sugarman, Lee Rothschild, Stanley Boskoff, New York city; Herab Amusement Corporation, $1,000, Herman Savage, Abraham Shimberg, Mary Wilson, New York city; Cantor Comedies, Inc., capitalization not specified, Lew Cantor, William Brandell, Herman F. Spellman, New York city; Rockcent Realty Corporation, $10,000, Sydney W. Stern, Jacob A. Wolf, Samuel Marks, New York city.

Reade Buys Two Houses in Kingston, N. Y.

Walter Reade, one of the largest individual theatre owners in New Jersey, has purchased from O. S. Hathaway of Kingston, New York, two houses in Kingston known as the Keeney and the Opera house. The purchase price of both houses is estimated at $400,000. Reade intends to start extensive alterations on both theatres and operate them with high class Keith vaudeville. This makes a total chain of thirty houses for Reade in New York and New Jersey.

Paramount Exploitation Men Assigned

Oscar Kantner, manager of Paramount's reorganized exploitation department, has assigned four new men to the field. They are Myron Shellman, assigned to the Charlotte Exchange, with the Memphis territory also under his direction; Carl O. Weaver, Cleveland branch; Elmer R. Burger, Des Moines, with Omaha also in his territory; F. L. Collins, Indianapolis and Louisville.

New F.B.O. Promotion Chiefs

The two men who will head the reorganized advertising, exploitation and publicity department of Film Booking Offices, as announced by Colvin M. Brown, vice-president in charge of distribution; left, Hyatt Daab, director of advertising and exploitation, who has been in charge of publicity at the West Coast studios; right, Edward McNamee, newly appointed director of publicity, who also continues as Sales Promotion director.

Fire Destroys Iowa City Blank House

The Englert theatre at Iowa City, one of the houses belonging to A. H. Blank, Iowa movie magnate, burned on the morning of February 13. The theatre is a total loss. The Englert was one of the three houses owned by Blank in Iowa City, the other two being the Garden theatre and the Past Time theatre. The theatre will undoubtedly be rebuilt at once.

Supple Joins Whitman Ad. Service

ED SUPPLE, recently resigned publicity manager of Pathe Exchange, has become associated with the Whitman Advertiser's Service, 1182 Broadway. While in his new work Supple will engage in several different fields of merchandising, he expects to launch plans for his company shortly looking to motion picture advertising that will mark a departure from methods employed in the past.

Supple was long identified with the picture industry. Before joining Pathe in 1923 he was assistant managing editor of Motion Picture News, on which editorial staff he served for over four years.

Plan Greatest Production Schedule

First National Program Calls for Expenditure of $11,000,000 at East and West Coast Studios

FIRST NATIONAL PICTURES has mapped a production schedule for the east and west coasts which Richard A. Rowland, General Manager, declares will entail an expenditure of nearly $11,000,000 on forthcoming pictures. Approximately forty big productions are scheduled to be made this year in the Los Angeles studios where John McCormick is general manager of production activities.

At the Eastern studios, A. L. Rockett and Earl Hudson will make four pictures each, Robert Kane will contribute four more to the program, C. C. Burr plans two pictures starring Johnny Hines following "The Brown Derby" in which he is now working, and it is probable that Richard Barthelmess will make another production in the East following the completion of "Ransom's Folly" now being made in Hollywood.

"Owing to the building of our new studios at Burbank," said McCormick, "we will, of course, have additional production units which naturally calls for a readjustment of our working plans.

"C. P. Butler has been signed to take charge of the erection of the new studios. His new post in our organization is that of business manager and the building of the new plant to house our productions will be under his supervision. Hal Barter, formerly with the Lasky organization, will be associated with Mr. Butler."

According to McCormick, Dave Thompson will hold the post of production manager with Dan Kelly in the post of casting director. The auditing division comes under the management of A. J. Hughes.

June Mathis will have charge of the making of four features during the coming season. The writer is now in the East preparing plans for the stories she will produce under her banner for First National release.

Also in the East at this time, is B. P. Fineman, formerly general manager at the F. B. O. studios who has been signed to supervise the production of four pictures during the coming season. Fineman is now making all plans for his unit organization and will be ready to take active hold immediately on his return, scheduled early in March.

Wid Gunning, former magazine editor and recently active in studio production, has been signed to be associated with McCormick in the production of the Colleen Moore pictures and "all-star" productions that will come directly under Mr. McCormick's supervision.

The forthcoming season will bring to the screen, through First National, Joseph M. Schenck productions, starring Norma Talmadge and Constance Talmadge. Colleen Moore will provide four big features, the first being "Irene" recently completed. Corinne Griffith will make four productions and Harry Langdon's schedule calls for three feature-length comedies, the first of which, entitled "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," is practically finished.

In addition to the four June Mathis productions, the four to be made under the guidance of B. P. Fineman, four feature-length westerns produced by Charles Rogers and the four features to be supplied by McCormick's own units, there will be the product of producers directly affiliated with First National including Edwin Carewe, M. C. Levee, Sam Rork, Marion Fairfax and others.

The scenario division is separated into various units with many well-known writers and authors working hard to finish stories for immediate production. Among these are Julian Josephson, Winifred Dunn, Adela Rogers St. Johns, Lois Leeson, William Conselman, George Bradley, Jack Fowler, and the scenario staff of the Joseph M. Schenck offices and that of the Sam Rork and Marion Fairfax division.

The First National organization plan is to be housed in their new studios early in June. Work is now being rushed on building activities and laying out the many new stages and buildings that will grace the new property.

Motion Picture News Prize Contest For Branch Managers and Film Salesmen

GREAT interest has been aroused by the offer of a prize of One Hundred Dollars for the best article from any branch manager or film salesman on the subject:

"How MOTION PICTURE NEWS Helps Me in My Contact With Exhibitors."

The competition will close at midnight on July 1, 1926. Articles should be type-written and limited to 1,000 words, if possible. They may be as short as the contestant desires. The judges will be the editorial staff of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

In case two or more articles are deemed of equal merit, the full amount of the prize will be given to all articles so tying. The winning article will be published in full together with a short history of the winner's career. Articles deserving honorable mention will also be printed.

Competing articles should be addressed to the Editor, MOTION PICTURE NEWS, 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City, and the name and address of the contestant should be written on the first page.

All branch managers and salesmen are eligible to compete. Manuscripts cannot be returned. Copies should be kept by contestants. MOTION PICTURE NEWS cannot be responsible for loss of manuscripts in transit. Proof of mailing will not be considered proof of receipt.

Universal's "Flaming Frontier" Premiere at Colony Theatre, New York, in April

UNIVERSAL'S super-picture of the West, "The Flaming Frontier," will have its world premiere at the B. S. Moss Colony theatre, New York City, early in April, the exact date to be announced shortly. The presentation will be one of the highlights of Carl Laemmle's twentieth anniversary celebration. "The Flaming Frontier" is a story of the days of the old-time West; West Point life in the '70s, political intrigue in Washington under President Grant when the "Indian question" was one of the issues of the day, which culminated in "Custer's Last Stand" as shown in this picture.

Thousands of Indians, U. S. Cavalry troops, scouts and plainsmen take part in this sequence. Colonel George L. Byram, U. S. A. retired, who made the original survey of the battlefield for the report of the U. S. War department supervised the battle scenes and military accessories.

Hoot Gibson and Dustin Farnum head the cast of players which include George Fawcett, Anne Cornwall, Noble Johnson, Ward Crane, Kathleen Key, Walter Rodgers and Joe Bonomo.

The story was written and directed by Edward Sedgwick and adapted by Edward J. Montagne and Charles Kenyon. It was photographed by Virgil Miller.

Report Acquisitions by Publix Said to be Planning New Houses in Florida; Linked With Midgley Project at Oakland, Cal.

UNOFFICIAL reports from Miami state that Publix will build additional theatres in Miami Beach and Buena Vista. Information from this source, unconfirmed by officials of the company in New York, is that when the present plans are carried out Publix will have ten theatres in Greater Miami. The Buena Vista house, which will cost $500,000 to erect, and the Miami theatre, the Olympia, scheduled to open this month, are being financed by the organization itself. The Miami Beach theatre is being built by Joseph B. Leach and Ernest W. Patterson, who will lease it to Publix.

It was reported in Oakland, Cal., that Rex Midgley, owner of the American theatre there, will build a 3,000 seat house in association with Publix, the report stating that a downtown site has been acquired.

Publix is operating the Rialto, Sugg and Kozy Theatres in Chickasha, Okla. These houses were acquired by the company some time ago.

Reports that Publix corporation through the Shea interest have leased the theatre to be built at Main street and West Northrup place, Buffalo by Hager-Askey-Forrest, Inc., are denied by a local official of the Shea Operating company. This official, however, does admit that representatives of the North Main builders have conferred with Mr. Shea on the proposition, but to date no decision has been made in the matter. The deal for the new house in Kensington section, where Publix will build this spring, is all set and work will begin at once.

Two Cleveland Houses Have Fire Damage

A fire in the Standard Theatre Building, Cleveland one day last week, filled the theatre with smoke and water, causing a loss of $1,500. Five hundred people were in the theatre at the time, but there was no confusion in emptying the house. The fire broke out in one of the upper floors of the building. Victor Wolcott operates the Standard theatre.

Another fire in the projection booth of the Madison theatre caused a loss of $1,750.00 to the owners, Messrs. Seoville, Essick and Reiff last week. The fire burned up most of a print of "The Merry Widow." No one was hurt. The audience apprised of the fire, left the theatre in orderly fashion.

Erwin is Representative in Georgia Assembly

The picture industry will have a strong representative in Andrew C. Erwin when the special session of the General Assembly of Georgia convenes late this month. Erwin is a former Mayor of Athens and part owner of the Palace theatre in that city. He is Clarke County's representative in the General Assembly.

Tillson Will Manage New Butterfield House

Roy Tillson has resigned as manager of the Fuller Theatre in Kalamazoo, Mich., to become manager of the new State Theatre in Pontiac, Mich. The latter is the newest addition to the Butterfield Circuit, which will open late in February playing vaudeville and pictures.

Yeggs Loot Two Houses in Missouri Cities

Bandits who dynamited the safe of the Columbia Theatre, Columbia, Mo., Monday night escaped with $1,200. The robbery was not discovered until about noon the next day.

Mrs. Pauline England, cashier of the Newman theatre, Kansas City, paid $204 for just a glimpse of a partly concealed revolver this week. Several men were loitering in the lobby of the theatre, when one of them walked over to the ticket window where she was counting out $700 in receipts. As she looked up she was facing a revolver partly concealed in the coat sleeve of the bandit, who threatened to shoot if she screamed. She promptly pushed out $204, whereupon the bandit went on his way.

Hays Will Conduct Health Survey in Industry

Dr. Lee K. Krankel, head of the welfare work of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company is to make a general survey of the health conditions in the motion picture industry in Hollywood at the request of Will H. Hays. While Hays considers Hollywood a health resort at the present time, he also feels there are many ways in which the health and physical well being of employees may be advanced. It is his desire to make conditions absolutely ideal.

Dr. Frankel performed a similar service for the Post Office department when Hays was in charge there and it brought much in the way of beneficial results.

Walpole Ginn Passes Away in Flushing

Walpole E. Ginn, in 1919 associated with the Goldwyn sales forces in the Boston territory, died at his home in Flushing, Saturday, February 6, from pneumonia, after a five day illness. At the time of his death, Ginn was preparing to go to Florida, where he had extensive real estate holdings. He is survived by his wife, and a four year old daughter; also a brother, sister and his parents. He was 35 years of age.

Declares Apathy Over Music Tax

IN a letter to J. H. Michael, chairman of the Buffalo zone of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, Congressman Clarence MacGregor expresses regret at the seeming apathy of those who should be interested in the proposed move to amend the copyright law to eliminate the tax on music now being paid by amusement interests to the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers.

The letter in part says: "The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York state some time since requested me to take some action to the end that the copyright law be amended so as to put a stop to the drastic methods of the society referred to. I myself think that the activities of this organization should be curtailed but it can only be done by active, energetic methods. If all of the amusement interests of the country would combine for energetic action there is no doubt in my mind that the copyright act could be amended limiting the copyright protection to the sale of the music."

Fox Combines Mail Order, Non-Theatrical Depts.

FOX Film Corporation has combined its mail order and non-theatrical departments. The new unit will function under the direction of Aaron Fox, who for the past year has been manager of the sales section using the mails as its means of getting and distributing business.

The consolidation is a natural step. Both departments had much in common and have always occupied adjoining space at the Fox Home Office.

Aaron Fox

Compensation Bill is Again Introduced in N. Y.

A bill amending the New York state workmen's compensation law, to the end that it will include within its provisions all employees in motion picture studios in New York state, who do not receive more than $25 a day or $100 a week, in wages, was introduced in the New York state Legislature, on Tuesday of this week, by Assemblyman Meyer Alterman, of New York city. The bill is identical in its wording with the one of a year ago, which did not get further than being assigned to a committee.

Niagara Falls Theatre is Damaged by Fire

Projection machines, films and equipment of the Queen Theatre, Niagara Falls, Ontario, were destroyed in a fire which broke out in the projection room of the theatre on the night of February 11, while the house was crowded to capacity. The patrons retired from the theatre quietly, however, and there was no panic. The loss was estimated by Manager A. Huttelmeier at $6,000.

Greta Nissen to Play in "Love Thief"

Universal has signed Greta Nissen to play the lead opposite Norman Kerry in "The Love Thief," adapted from the story by Margaret Mayo. It will be directed by John McDermott as one of the special productions of Universal's 1926 program. In the supporting cast will be Nigel Barrie, Borgatto, noted Italian actor; and Charles Puffy.

Receivers Are Named for Vital and Davis

PROCEEDINGS in involuntary bankruptcy were commenced last week by three employees of Vital Exchanges, resulting in the appointment of Matthew B. Sentner as receiver. The court order provides that the business be continued by the receiver for ten days, and it is hoped that within such period arrangements can be made to conserve the assets of the Company and to prevent the loss of the large amount of bookings already secured.

This situation resulted in the commencing of a friendly proceeding in equity in which Louis H. Rowe was appointed receiver for the Davis Distributing Division, which Company is distributing its productions through Vital Exchanges. J. Charles Davis 2nd, president of the Davis Distributing Division, announces that this equity receivership is designed to protect the interests of the various distributors releasing through the Davis Company and also the creditors of that Company. Mr. Davis further states that he is perfecting plans to carry on the distribution of these productions and to secure distribution facilities throughout the entire country; not only in the territory covered by the Vital organization but in the balance of the country where exchanges of Vital had not yet been established. He desires to assure exhibitors that the entire program of the Davis Distributing Division will be released.

Fox Theatre Building Plans are Rumored in Pacific Northwest and Twin Cities

ALTHOUGH no definite information could be obtained at the Home Office in New York, persistent rumors were in circulation this week to the effect that the Fox Theatres Corp. would erect houses in Portland, Ore., Seattle, Tacoma and Salem, as well as Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth. This would carry Fox into the strongholds of two powerful circuits, Jensen & Von Herberg and Finkelstein & Ruben.

According to reports, the Twin City houses would be of 3,500 seating capacity each, with the Duluth house somewhat smaller. Fox had no first run outlet in these cities for three years, but after filing a suit against F. & R. to force fulfillment of contract, James R. Grainger closed an arrangement for one year last fall.

It is understood that the Fox policy will ultimately include the building of high class neighborhood houses to support the downtown first runs, along the lines of the Balaban & Katz Chicago plan.

Meanwhile, it was announced this week that Fox would build a 3,200 seat house in Passaic, N. J., ground to be broken within four weeks. Plans have been drawn by A. Ginsberg. Passaic, with a population of 80,000, has but 7,200 seats at present, all in the hands of the Fabian interests.

It was also reported that Fox had purchased the Clinton Square theatre, a neighborhood house in Newark, N. J.

Contact Bureau in M.P.T.O.A.

E. Thornton Kelly Appointed to Direct Activities and Will Assign Field Men

BUSINESS Manager Joseph M. Seider this week announces the establishment of a contact bureau at National Headquarters of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. Seider has appointed E. Thornton Kelly as the Director of this Bureau. Under Kelly will be a number of field men who will be subject to assignment to all parts of America in the interests of the National Organization.

The establishment of this Bureau has long been contemplated by Seider. Its development, so far as the trade is concerned, however, has been exceedingly rapid since the public intimation of the need of this department was first carried in an editorial by Mr. Seider in the February 1st issue entitled "Locarno, Why not in the Motion Picture Industry?"

A few days after the Official Bulletin had made its appearance came a terse announcement from National Headquarters that Mr.

Seider had designated Mr. Kelly as his envoy to interview Western leaders in the interest of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. Mr. Kelly left New York for Chicago and a few days following his absence matters in the contract situation came to a head, necessitating the appearance in New York of many leaders.

As a result of this conference and the adoption of the contract, practically all of these leaders and Mr. Seider came together. In other words, as Mr. Seider describes it, the ambition of the National Organization to include every exhibitor in the United States within its fold was materially benefited by this contract conference. Thus, the National Business Manager recalled his envoy and promoted him to the leadership of the permanent Contact Bureau which the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America now boasts.

Drive on Undesirables Opened

Des Moines Inaugurates Movement to Stamp Out Unethical Business Tactics

EXCHANGE managers in the Des Moines territory are mapping plans to eliminate all undesirables in the various local sales forces. It is planned to take drastic measures against those using detrimental measures to the good of the industry. The shake-up promises to be far reaching so as to serve as an object lesson to other territories where similar conditions prevail.

It is said that these conditions are destroying confidence between exhibitors and distributors. It has been declared that "bottle of booze" contracts are the rule rather than the exception in the Iowa territory and that side agreements between salesmen and exhibitors are creating havoc in an effort to have contracts enforced.

Among other things it is declared the practice is made of inserting "trick clauses" in the exhibitor's copy of contract with a different form submitted to the company.

The new drive against these undesirables took definite shape at a recent get-together of salesmen as the guests of the Des Moines Film Board when several speakers discussed the subject.

Vilma Banky Again With Valentino

Vilma Banky, Hungarian beauty has again been chosen as Rudolph Valentino's leading lady in "The Son of the Sheik," which goes into production soon for United Artists under the direction of George Fitzmaurice. The engagement of Miss Banky is through special arrangement with Samuel Goldwyn, to whom she is under contract. The coming production will be sponsored by Joseph M. Schenck.

Plans Shaping Rapidly for Los Angeles Convention of M. P. T. O. A.

PLANS are already shaping rapidly for the annual convention of the M. P. T. O. A. to be held in Los Angeles from June 1st to 5th inclusive. Among other reports made by Glenn Harper, Secretary of the California unit, to Joseph M. Seider, business manager of the M. P. T. O. A., was one to the effect that Cecil B. DeMille will serve as a head waiter and all of his stars as waitresses at a banquet and ball being planned by De Mille at his Culver City studio one night during the convention.

The Ambassador Hotel will be the convention headquarters in Los Angeles and local managers are making miles of banners and streamers to properly decorate.

The special train which will conduct the exhibitors in the Eastern and Middle Atlantic States to Los Angeles will be the first transcontinental express of its kind. Reservations are reported coming in rapidly. They should be sent at once to Sam Sonin at National headquarters.

Theatre Bootleggers a Menace

Seider Issues Warning at Annual Installation of Brooklyn M. P. T. O.

TWO warnings were issued by President R. F. Woodhull and Business Manager Joseph M. Seider of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America at the eleventh annual installation of officers of the Brooklyn M. P. T. O. last week. One was to beware of "Theatre Bootleggers" and the other the "Dyspeptic Minds."

Seider described as "theatre bootleggers" and "screen leeches" those temporary exhibitors "whose system of encroaching upon territory already meritoriously and adequately covered by pioneer exhibitors is being done through no other purpose than for the milching of the industry."

The Business Manager said the industry must be purged of those people who become exhibitors solely for the reason of "bleeding our honest members by compelling them for the sake of their very existence to buy up these business-destroying decoys erected by theatre bootleggers."

In sounding the warning against what he described as "dyspeptic minds," President Woodhull said he would inaugurate a speakers bureau at national headquarters to which all forceful personalities and convincing speakers would be eligible. Such a bureau would make it possible for an unjust or unwarranted attack upon the industry to be immediately retarded and stifled at its very source.

Public Favors Bible History

De Mille Contest Reveals Lack of Interest in Love and Sex Themes

ASUMMARY of public opinion so far expressed in the Cecil B. De Mille-Los Angeles Times "Idea Contest" shows the Bible and history are leading love and sex themes by ten to one as suggested ideas for big pictures.

De Mille recently announced he would distribute $2,100 in cash prizes for original story ideas. The latest response shows 80 percent as favoring Biblical and historical subjects. The lives of strong American and early Christian leaders are suggested more often than the contemporaneous events they helped create.

The astounding feature of the report is the very few friends of love and sex themes. Where these are advanced most of the suggestions are that they be used as background or relief for a universally recognized occurrence of fact and history.

"This national canvass of the public will result in a better understanding between producer and public," said De Mille. "It is revealing to me that the public is tiring of the frivolous and nonsensical in their pictures and that it wants, above all, a wholesome educational element."

Arbitration Board Names New Members

New members of the Ohio Joint Board of Arbitration have been announced. They include Max Shenler, Family Theatre, Cleveland; Charles Burton, Lincoln Theatre, Cleveland; Louis J. Frisch, Harbor Theatre, Ashtabula Harbor. M. B. Horwitz, J. J. Harwood and J. Schwartz, all of Cleveland, were chosen alternates.

Fire Chief Injured When Film Explodes

While attempting to put out a fire in the Star theater, Oshkosh, Wis., caused by explosion of film, Edward F. Kelley, assistant fire chief, was burned seriously in a second explosion. An audience of 200 moved quietly out but the theatre suffered $15,000 damage.

Two Hundred Reels Are Donated to Leper Colony

APPROXIMATELY two hundred of motion picture films donated by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Universal and Famous-Players Lasky were shipped last week to the leper colony at an isolated port in Balboa, Canal Zone through the offices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc. Among the photoplays donated are prints of many of the outstanding pictures with many of the best known stars featured.

The films were delivered to the Chief Officer of the Medical Supply department of the United States and were addressed to Colonel W. P. Chamberlin, Chief of the Sanitary Corps in Balboa.

Unique Window Display for "Time, the Comedian"

Exceptional attraction value distinguished the unique window display for "Time, the Comedian" used in St. Louis by Loew's State Theatre there.

Against a colored background of drapes, was silhouetted a figure of the conventional Father Time, while a little to the right of the figure was a revolving globe, representing the world, and bearing on its surface the photos of principals in the picture.

Baby spot lights were used to illuminate the revolving world, a red light on one side, and a green light on the other.

This window was designed by Mr. Maurice Davis, director of Publicity at Loew's State.

Carl Laemmle Off to Universal City

CARL LAEMMLE was not back from Europe long before he departed early in the week for Universal City to supervise production on the Greater Movie List, Universal's schedule of big pictures for the 1926-27 season.

Accompanying Laemmle on the trip to the coast were his son, Carl Jr., Andre Mattoni, European film star who has been engaged to appear in Universal pictures, and E. A. Dupont, noted Ufa director, who is to make pictures under the Universal banner.

Columbia Acquires New Plant

Company Purchases California Studios in Hollywood for Extensive Production Plans

COLUMBIA PICTURES CORPORATION has purchased the California Studios located on Gower Street near Sunset Boulevard in Hollywood. The transaction involves the studio grounds comprising eight acres with a 350 foot frontage on Gower Street; three stages, administration buildings and various producing equipment.

Columbia announces that more than $250,000 will be spent for improvements on the property. A modern stage measuring 150 by 270 feet will be erected and additional equipment will be installed. The name of the studio in the future will be Columbia Picture Studio. The company's production activities were formerly housed in the Clune studios, also in Hollywood, under the name of Waldorf Productions.

With the move to the new plant all production activities will be conducted under the Columbia name and all pictures for the coming season will be under that brand. For the 1926-27 season the Columbia output will be greatly increased.

It is described as a romantic comedy-drama laid against the background of a Florida land boom.

John S. Woody to Engage in Production

JOHN S. WOODY, well known executive in the film industry, announced this week that he would enter the production field and that the first production he will sponsor is a feature based on the exploits of Jesse and Frank James and the Younger boys.

A deal has been completed with Robertus Love, of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, for the motion picture rights to a book "The Rise and Fall of Jesse James" now being printed by Putnam and to be put on the market in the near future. Love, who was a friend of the James family, and whose story is said to contain intimate facts and incidents hitherto unpublished regarding these bandits, has been cooperating with Woody in indicating locations and activities of the James brothers.

Woody has budgeted the cost of the production at $250,000 approximately and intimates that releasing arrangements will be handled through F. B. O. He has announced the intention of maintaining a selected staff to cooperate with the distributor in the handling of product, but this staff will not undertake to make sales or quote prices but will cover the country to screen pictures for the exhibitor and point out their box office value.

Barthelmess With First Nat'l

Star Signs to Make Eight Productions After Expiration of Inspiration Contract

RICHARD BARTHELMLESS has been placed under contract by First National Pictures to make eight feature productions for that company within two years following the expiration of his engagement with Inspiration Pictures. Barthelmess is now producing "Ransom's Folly" for Inspiration and will complete his contract in time to start work for First National in the fall.

This announcement is issued by Richard A. Rowland, general manager of First National, who signed the contract the day before Mr. Barthelmess left for the West Coast to start his new production. The contract is in accord with First National's policy which calls for the expansion of production activities including the enrollment of popular screen players.

During the next few months, every effort will be made to obtain a strong array of stories for the star and although the title is not disclosed, it is announced that the first story, a work of world-wide fame, has been selected.

In commenting on the affiliation, Rowland said in part: "I have always had the highest regard for Mr. Barthelmess, both personally and as an artist. He has gone far in the past few years since his memorable performance in 'Tol'able David.' But I am confident that with the bigger stories he will do even greater things in the future."

"Our relations with Inspiration Pictures, producers of the Barthelmess productions, which we have been distributing, have always been most cordial and continue to be so."

First National Completes "Men of Steel"

"Men of Steel," the First National special with Milton Sills, has been completed after having been in production since the first of November. Sills wrote the picture story from a suggestion received in R. G. Kirk's short story, "United States Flavor." The United States Steel Corporation has co-operated from the beginning with the producing company in the making of the picture. George Archainbaud directed, while in the supporting cast are Doris Kenyon, Mae Allison, George Fawcett, Frank Currier, Victor McLaglen and John Kolb.

Associated Inaugurates Drive

Launches Ten Weeks Campaign to Stimulate Sales of Douglas MacLean Feature Comedies

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS has started a Douglas MacLean drive to stimulate sales and exhibitor interest in the four comedies made by this present Paramount star for Associated. These pictures are "Going Up," "The Yankee Consul," "Never Say Die" and "Introduce Me."

It was largely because of the reception recorded these pictures that MacLean was signed to a Paramount contract. Since the release of their MacLean features over a year ago Associated has received many commendatory reports from exhibitors.

In the present sales campaign a total of $2,000 in prize money will be awarded by Associated Exhibitors to the exchanges and salesmen turning in the largest number of new bookings on the Douglas MacLean features over a period of ten weeks.

E. J. Smith, sales manager of Associated reports that the announcement of prizes in this campaign has already resulted in increased bookings on the MacLean product and he anticipates the demand for the pictures will be so great in the next two months it will be necessary to have additional prints made.

The Special MacLean drive was inaugurated on February 14th and will be divided into two periods of five and six weeks each.

M. G. M. Starts Three on Coast

"Love's Blindness," "Money Talks" and "Lovey Mary" Placed in Production

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER started three productions last week on three consecutive days. Director John Francis Dillon began work on "Love's Blindness," Archie Mayo on "Money Talks" and Harry Millarde on "Lovey Mary."

"Love's Blindness" is an Elinor Glyn story, the principal role in which is being played by Pauline Starke. Antonio Moreno has the male lead and the other principals are Kate Price, George Wagonner and Walter Tennyson.

"Money Talks" is a Rupert Hughes story, whose cast so far includes Owen Moore, Claire Windsor and Ned Sparkes.

Agnes Christine Johnston adapted "Lovey Mary" from the novel by Alice Hegan Rice, who was also authoress of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." Bessie Love has been given a contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to play the title role of "Lovey Mary." In order to secure the full piquancy of Miss Love's beauty and that all the nuances of the filming be faithfully reproduced on the screen, Louis B. Mayer has given a new contract to William Daniels, who was responsible for the fine photography on "Monte Carlo" and other M-G-M successes.

Louis and Conklin Loaned to Fox by Warners

Willard Louis, recently signed on a long term contract to be starred in Warner pictures and Heinie Conklin, Warner comedian, have been loaned to Fox for featured roles in forthcoming productions. Louis will play a prominent part in "The Shamrock Handicap," a John Ford production and Conklin will play the comedy lead in Tom Mix's new feature "Hard Boiled."

Lubitsch's Next to be "The Door Mat"

ERNST LUBITSCH'S next production for Warner Brothers will be "The Door Mat," an American play, whose action is laid in New York City. Irene Rich will have the leading role. The picture is an adaptation from the stage play by Ethel Clifton and Brenda Fowler and was produced on the coast by Louis MacLoon.

This will be Lubitsch's last light comedy or comedy drama before he does his big spectacle for the Warners.

Rayart Secures Good Distribution for Product

Brisk selling of product for the past thirty days is announced by Rayart Pictures Corporation, of which W. Ray Johnston is president. A number of Independent Exchanges throughout the country have bought rights to "The Phantom Police," a serial, Anchor-Radiant comedies, starring Bobby Ray, the Al Hoxie series and eight Reed Howes productions.

Two Original Stories for Canine Star

Two original stories have been written for Peter the Great, the giant shepherd dog star, for release as Gotham Productions next season. They are titled, "King of the Pack" and "The Silent Avenger." The former is an original theme by Ed Faust, one of the brother owners of the dog. "The Silent Avenger" is by Edward J. Meagher, west coast scenarist.

Highlights of "The Scarlet Streak" a Universal production.

Three New Western Stars at Universal

Isadore Bernstein, supervisor of Western productions at Universal City announces three promotions to stardom in two-reel westerns among the Universal ranch riders. The new stars are Curley Witzel, Fred Gillman and King Nestor. Witzel was recently discovered on the Wyoming plains by R. H. Cochrane, vice-president of Universal, while Gillman and Nestor, former cowpunchers, have been with Universal for more than a year.

Andre-Ani Signs Contract With M-G-M

Andre-Ani, costume designer, has been given a new contract by Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Andre-Ani's first assignment under his new contract will be assisting in designing the new gowns which Greta Garbo will wear in the Ibanez story, "The Temptress," the forthcoming Cosmopolitan production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release.

Dorothy Mackaill Signed by Inspiration Pictures

Dorothy Mackaill will play the leading role opposite Richard Barthelmess in the latter's next picture for Inspiration Pictures titled, "Ransom's Folly." It is an adaptation of the Richard Harding Davis story and is now being filmed on the coast. Sidney Olcott is directing.

"Prisoners of Storm" Next for House Peters

The next starring vehicle of House Peters for Universal will be "Prisoners of the Storm," from the novel, "The Quest of Joan," by James Oliver Curwood. Lynn Reynolds will direct. He expects to start production within the next three weeks.

Lawrence Gray Opposite Bebe Daniels

Lawrence Gray, who has just completed his second part opposite Gloria Swanson in "The Untamed Lady," will have the leading male role opposite Bebe Daniels in her next Paramount comedy, "The Palm Beach Girl." The story is by Byron Morgan.

British National Buys "Madame Pompadour"

ONE of the final pieces of business transacted by George T. Eaton, Herbert Wilcox and J. D. Williams before sailing for London last week was the purchase of "Madame Pompadour" from Joseph M. Schenck. Schenck secured this Continental success in Europe several years ago with the intention of making it a First National special with Norma Talmadge starred.

This production will probably be the last of three which Dorothy Gish is to make for the English concern. Miss Gish sails for London the middle of March.

Gotham Plans Twenty Productions

SAM SAX has completed his lineup of stories and subjects for Gotham Productions to be released through Lumas Film Corporation for the 1926-27 season. Actual production working schedules are now being laid out. There will be a total of twenty feature productions.

Six of these will be de luxe productions known as "Greater Gothams." In addition there will be a series of six standard Gothams and eight "Thrill-O-Dramas," featuring William Fairbanks to be produced in conjunction with Camora Pictures, Inc.

"Perils of Coast Guard" in Production

Work has been started on the fourth of a series of feature melodramas being produced by Gerson Pictures for Rayart release. It is a story of the coast guard on land and sea written by J. N. Natteford titled "Perils of the Coast Guard." Cullen Landis, Dorothy Dwan and Jimmy Aubrey are in the cast.

Florence Turner Selected for "Padlocked"

B. P. Schulberg has selected Florence Turner to play the role of the mother of Lois Moran in Paramount's production of "Padlocked." Miss Moran has the heroine role. The production will be made by Allan Dwan from the story by Rex Beach.

Scenes of dramatic intensity in "The Devil's Circus," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production.

Craft to Direct Cody for Associated Exhibitors

Associated Exhibitors have placed William Craft under contract to direct Bill Cody in a series of westerns. The star and director have made many pictures together in the past. Preparations for the first of these Cody features are now under way and production will commence within a few days at the west coast studios of Associated. The title and supporting cast have not yet been announced.

Baggot Completes "Perch of Devil" Cast

Director King Baggot has completed the cast for Universal's "Perch of the Devil," with the addition of Theodore Von Eltz and Mario Carillo. The picture is an adaptation from the Gertrude Atherton novel and has Mae Busch and Pat O'Malley in the leading roles. Others in the cast are Jane Winton, Anna Mae Wong and George Kuwa.

Paramount Junior Star Off to West Coast

Buddy Rogers, Paramount junior star has departed for the west coast to play an important role in Herbert Brenon's production of "Beau Geste." Ralph Lewis also left for the west for the same production. Brenon is scheduled to start work on the picture next week. Rogers and Lewis completed their work in "Glorious Youth" just before their departure.

Joan Meredith Cast for Chadwick Special

Chadwick Pictures Corporation has assigned Joan Meredith, Wampas baby star, to a prominent role in "Winning the Futurity," a Chadwick special now being made on the west coast. It is an adaptation of the stage play of the same name. Cullen Landis and Clara Horton play the leading roles.

"Bar-C Mystery" to Have Feature Version

Pathe is planning to release a feature version of the forthcoming serial, "The Bar-C Mystery," whose ten chapters will be condensed into a feature length picture as well. Included in the cast are Dorothy Phillips, Wallace MacDonald, Ethel Clayton and Philo McCullough.

"La Boheme" to Open at Embassy, New York

"LA BOHEME," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production starring Lillian Gish and John Gilbert, will be given its premiere at the Embassy theatre, New York City, on Wednesday evening, February 24. This picture, which was directed by King Vidor, was adapted by Fred De Grasse from a collection of short stories of "Life in the Latin Quarter," written by Henry Murger, on which the opera "La Boheme" is based. The screen continuity was prepared by Ray Doyle and Harry Behn.

Exhibitors Box-Office Reports

Names of the theatre owners are omitted by agreement in accordance with the wishes of the average exhibitor and in the belief that reports published over the signature of the exhibitor reporting, is a dangerous practice.

Only reports received on specially prepared blanks furnished by us will be accepted for use in this department. Exhibitors who value this reporting service are urged to ask for these blanks.

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Schade Prints "Skyrocket" Heralds on Valentines

George Schade, who owns and operates the theatre emblazoned with his name in Sandusky, O., evolved a timely idea for his heralds on "The Skyrocket." The picture, scheduled to open its engagement at the Schade on St. Valentine's day, was advertised with hand bills or heralds printed on comic valentines, done in color and obtainable in large quantities at a small cost. The backs of these valentines, which are blank, were printed in black with billing for the theatre and "The Skyrocket." The printing was done in two sections, so that the valentine, when folded through the center, made a folder herald of the average size. The valentines, in vivid colors and exaggerated line, bore comic rhymes and attracted widespread notice.

Charleston Contest Billed With "That Royle Girl"

A Ballroom Charleston contest, whereby couples instead of individuals competed for the prizes, augmented the presentation of "That Royle Girl" at the Strand theatre, Seattle, Wash.

Each day different contestants were assigned to the stage, with the audience judging the winners. On Saturday the winners of the week competed for the grand prizes of $40, $20 and $10 in gold.

The contest was held three times daily—3:05, 7:10 and 9:20. The punch of each performance came when all the couples took the stage at the same time, each attempting to speed up and outdo the other, while the audience signified its pleasure in protracted applause.

Band Concert Features the "Merry Widow" Waltz

Manager John Judge of the Victoria, New Smyrna, did some unusually effective advertising for his showing of "The Merry Widow."

He arranged with the conductor of the Sunday concert to have his band play the Merry Widow waltz, just before their regular program. At the same time an announcement was made that the picture would open at the Victoria the following day for a two days run.

Colorful display for "The Eagle" (United Artists) at the Victory Theatre, Denver. Arrangement ingeniously overcomes limits of shallow lobby space. Designed by Manager Hallock.

A special orchestra was engaged to play for the picture and this was widely advertised in all standard exploitation, which was launched three days prior to opening with a truck ballyhoo carrying two six sheets on the attraction.

Story Interest Stressed in "Stella Dallas" Ads

Following a newspaper ad campaign which featured testimonials of eminent actors and writers, the copy displayed for the extended engagement of "Stella Dallas" at the Apollo Theatre, New York, has recently stressed the story interest of this photoplay version of the novel.

The "testimonial campaign," illustrated in a group of reproductions in Motion Picture News of February 13, has been succeeded by displays in which the dramatic elements of the characters and heart interest of the plot are detailed in copy detailing sequences of the action and description of the characters.

"Stella Dallas" produced by Samuel Goldwyn, will be distributed by United Artists and not First National, as erroneously stated in the caption to the reproductions appearing in the issue of February 13.

Dallas Society Girl Sings in "Mannequin" Prologue

A special prologue featuring a local society girl well known for her gifts as a singer, was the main exploitation item of the campaign which was staged for "Mannequin" by Manager Barry Burke at the Palace Theatre, Dallas. Mary Howard, the singer, gave generously of her time and efforts, making several radio appearances in addition to singing in the Palace presentation. She also rode through the town in a motor car, carrying posters for the theatre and the company contributing the auto for the stunt.

All of these stunts were given wide newspaper publicity, with daily stories in the society column of the papers.

Zipper Boots in Tie Up with "Midnight Sun"

A National tie-up for "The Midnight Sun," has been made with the Goodrich Company manufacturing Zipper boots.

Twenty thousand counter or window cards showing the star putting on a pair of Zipper boots have already been distributed to shoe stores throughout the country. A 6-color footwear calendar is now being prepared by the rubber company, to be sent to 500,000 dealers, and they are also using "The Midnight Sun" copy in their rotogravure section ads in newspapers.

Build Cutout of "Buster" to Use With Each Comedy

Drogin and Shiel, who manage the Mermaid Theatre in Coney Island, N. Y., have made a cut-out figure of Buster and Tige, which is stationed in front of the ticket booth whenever a "Buster Brown" comedy is on the bill. Over Buster's head is a slate on which is written one of his famous resolutions, a different one appearing with each comedy.

For the showing of "Buster Be Good," the lobby was decorated with pennants announcing the comedy. One said: "Buster Brown will drive away your frown." Another: "See Bustor and you will roar." In addition to this display, heralds were given away.

First National's "The Lost World" was "circussed" in excellent style at the Central Theatre, Jersey City. Outstanding features of the campaign, which was conducted by David Schaefer, publicity and exploitation director of the Haring & Blumenthal Circuit, operators of the house, are shown in the photos above. The ballyhoo, at the left, stirred up unusual interest, as did the lobby decorations, featuring stuffed animals, borrowed from dealers, and skeletons of prehistoric animals.

Short Subjects and Serials

Sterns Get "You Know Me Al"

Sign Contract With Ring Lardner for Well Known Series of Humorous Stories

STERN BROTHERS, short comedy producers for Universal release, and Ring Lardner, noted humorist, have signed a contract whereby the former secure screen rights to the popular "You Know Me, Al" stories.

It is the plan of the Sterns to adapt these stories into a series of twelve or more two-reelers for release during the 1926-27 series. With the Buster Brown comedies they will probably form the peak of the Stern Brothers output for the new year.

The acquisition of the "You Know Me, Al" stories marks the fifth series planned for the new season. Those previously announced are the Buster Brown comedies, a projected series adapted from the newspaper cartoons, "The Newlyweds and Their Baby;" a Wanda Wiley series, "What Happened to Jane," and "The Excuse Maker" series, being made with Charles King from stories by William Anthony.

The new deal having just been consummated, no arrangements have yet been made by the Sterns regarding a cast or director. An expert scenarist and adapter will be put to work on the stories within the next week or two.

"Shorts" Billed in Vaudeville

Hal Roach Comedies Are Being Played-Up on Program With Headline Acts

THE Hal Roach comedies being released through Pathe are being played-up on the vaudeville programs of the Keith-Albee and affiliated vaudeville circuits according to reports from the Pathe men in the field.

The Charlie Chase comedy, "The Caretaker's Daughter" was given number four spot on the bill at the B. F. Keith theatre, Cincinnati recently and the printed program carried the line "You Will see the famous Hal Roach comedies exclusively at Keith's. They will be shown each week as part of the vaudeville program, as a special extra treat." Also included on the bill were Pathe News, Aesop's Film Fables and Topics of the Day.

The Roach comedies usually draw number three spot at Keith's Columbus, with the Fables, Topics and News holding down number one. And at the Keith Palace theatre, Cleveland they are billed as a regular vaudeville act and with a good position. These comedies are frequently shifted around on the program sometimes occupying a spot near the headline act, it said.

Short Subject Program Opens Ohio Theatre

Dr. B. I. Brody's Cedar-Lee Theatre recently held its formal opening. The Cedar-Lee is the seventh large picture house in which Dr. Brody is actively interested. It is located in Cleveland Heights, has 1,200 seats, and is elaborately decorated and equipped. Earl Ludlow will be house manager of the new theatre.

The Premiere offered a novel program composed entirely of short reel subjects. The theatre foyer was a bower of flowers, emblems of congratulations from Dr. Brody's many friends and well wishers.

Solomon Brothers Signed by Red Seal

Max Fleisher, president of Red Seal Pictures and head of the Inkwell Studios, has signed Marty and Gus Solomon as a part of his plan to build up a large national distributing organization. Marty will serve as special representative in the New York territory and Gus will be assistant to general sales manager, Harry Bernstein. Gus will tour the country at large as special sales representative.

Stills from "Keep Trying," a new Educational-Cameo Comedy.

Martha Sleeper in Two Pathe Comedies

Martha Sleeper has just completed the feminine leading role in two Pathe comedies which have been in production simultaneously during the past three weeks. These were Charley Chase and Glenn Tryon stories directed by Leo McCarey and Fred Guiol. Chiefly by the aid of lightning changes in costumes Miss Sleeper portrayed both roles to the complete satisfaction of the directors.

"The Mad Racer" is Title of Van Bibber Comedy

Work was started this week at the Fox studios on "The Mad Racer," the latest Van Bibber comedy from the works of Richard Harding Davis. The picture is being directed by Ben Stoloff under the supervision of George Marshall. Earle Foxe and Florence Gilbert play the leads and the supporting cast includes Frank Beal, Lynn Cowan, Lawford Davis, Jean Arthur, Frank Cooley and Patrick Rooney.

Will Produce Twelve New Gump Comedies

A third series of twelve Gump comedies will be started within the next two weeks at Universal by producer Samuel Van Ronkle. Hugh Fay will direct and the players will be the same as in former series. Jos Murphy will play Andy Gump, Fay Tincher, Min, and Jackie Morgan, Chester.

Fox Starts New O. Henry Comedy on Coast

"A Social Triangle," another of the O. Henry comedy series was started this week at the Fox West Coast studio under the direction of Bunny Dull, newly appointed director. The cast includes Hallam Cooley, Olive Hasbrouck, David Mir, J. Clifford Rice, Marjorie O'Neill and Clarissa Selwyn.

Barbara Luddy Signs New Contract with Fox

Barbara Luddy has been signed to a three year contract by Fox Film as a result of her work in the "East Side, West Side" series of comedies in which she is featured. Miss Luddy is at present working on the fifth episode of this series titled "A-I Society."

Eva Novak in Hal Roach Two-Reeler

Before departing New York for the coast, Hal Roach announced he had engaged Eva Novak as leading lady for Glenn Tryon in a new two-reel comedy being made under the direction of Fred Guiol. Martha Sleeper and Husky Hanes are also in the cast.

Bunny Dull Made Director at Fox Studios

Fox has elevated Bunny Dull to the rank of director. He started his initial effort this week on an O. Henry two-reeler titled "A Social Triangle." Dull formerly was assistant director to Victor Schertzinger.

Tientsin Fall in Newsreel

International Shows Film Views of World-Important Chinese Struggle

CAPTAIN ARIEL VARGES, newsreel cameraman, is in the thick of battle again for the International Newsreel. His latest exploit is the filming of the Fall of Tientsin, the important warm-water port of China, recently the bone of contention between the Chi-Li forces and the armies of General Feng, until Feng's superiority in numbers and modern equipment forced the troops of General Li to surrender the city.

During the four or five days prior to the evacuation of the city by Li and its occupancy by Feng, Varges went through a series of experiences to secure his pictures. He risked his life continually in order to get a perfect film record of the important events transpiring before Tientsin.

So striking are the pictures that the executives of the International Newsreel considered their release as a special subject "The Fall of Tientsin." It was decided to include them as a part of the regular newsreel service, at no additional cost, however, so they are being distributed in two and three hundred feet lengths, in successive newsreels.

The quality of the pictures and their outstanding value as film records of the important events now taking place in China, is evidenced by the request of the War Department for a print of the pictures for study by the Army General Staff and War College.

Chase Comedy Tops Pathe List

Many Short Features Included in Release Schedule for Week of Feb. 28

A TWO-REEL Hal Roach comedy titled "Mama Behave" and starring Charley Chase heads the Pathe short subject program of releases for the week of February 28th. A number of other diversified features are also included.

The Chase vehicle was directed by Leo McCarey and the cast includes Mildred Harris as leading lady, Vivian Oakland and Syd Crossley.

Paul Parrott will be seen in another Roach comedy, a one-reeler titled "The Only Son," while the serial "Casey of the Coast Guard" reaches the third chapter. In the latter George O'Hara and Helen Ferguson head the cast, which also includes Coit Albertson, Jean Jarvis and J. Barney Sherry. Will Nigh directed.

Pathe Review No. 9 presents a trio of interesting subjects: "Fifty Faces in One," showing Elsie Prescott a marvelous make-up artist in outstanding characterizations; "American Wild Flowers," Pathecolor studies of purple heather, the mariposa tulip, evening snow and the trillium; "The Magic Eye," another chapter of the Tollhurst microscopic studies.

"The Mail Coach" is the release of Aesop's Film Fables from the creative pen of Paul Terry. Topics of the Day unrolls the latest wit and humor from the press. Two issues of Pathe News complete the February 28th schedule.

Sennett Producing Five New Comedies

Ralph Graves, Ben Turpin, Alice Day, Raymond McKee and Ruth Hiatt, and Billy Bevan are heading their own units making five two-reel comedies at the Mack Sennett studios in California for Pathe release.

Graves started his new picture under the direction of Jefferson Moffitt. Ruth Taylor plays opposite the star. Supporting Alice Day in her new vehicle are Eddie Quillan, Danny O'Shea, Joseph Young and Thelma Parr. Earle Rodney is directing.

Highlights of the Universal comedy production "Her Lucky Leap."

"Page Me"

(Educational-Christie—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

HERE is a snappy Bobby Vernon two reeler from the Christie studios which is particularly well fitted to this comedian. Titles and direction are very good and while the same plot has been used in a number of other instances, it is not a hackneyed one. It concerns the efforts of Vernon to dodge payment of a hotel bill and at the same time firmly establish himself in the graces of a charming young lady guest whose favor is also sought by the hotel manager.

Fast action is pretty well distributed throughout the picture with the latter part where Bobby is endeavoring to get a preacher to tie the knot while the rival pursues—standing out as one of the best. Aerial stunts are cut in and out with excellent effect.

The story is by Frank Roland Conklin, directing by William Watson and cartoons by Norman McLeod.

The Cast

Bobby Vernon, Frances Lee, William Irving and Bill Blaisdell.

Summary—A good, fast moving Bobby Vernon comedy which will be well received wherever this comedian is popular. Well titled and directed.

"Pathe Review No. 9"

(Pathe—One Reel)

ELSIE PRESCOTT, a trick make-up artist, is featured in the first part of this Pathe Review and demonstrates just how a few odd hanks of hair and a pound or two of grease paint can change a Howard Chandler Christy countenance to that of an old hag. Other examples of her craft are also shown.

Another chapter of "American Wild Flowers" done in Pathecolor, make up the part and the scenes are from the Yosemite National Park. Pictures of the flowers taken with the time lapse camera include the Evening Snow, Mariposa Tulip, Trillium and Purple Heather.

A study of the ordinary house fly under the "Magic Eye" completes the reel and the minute inspection reveals the peculiar mechanism of this insect. The eye of the fly is particularly interesting, being made up of numerous small lenses. A photograph by a camera using a similar number of lenses illustrates the fly's extraordinary vision.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"The Wicked City"

(Pathe-Aesop Fable—One Reel)

THIS time Cartoonist Paul Terry has chosen well known sections of New York City as backgrounds for the exploits of a particularly burly cat gang leader and his associates. Times Square, Forty-second Street and the Subway are some of the places this criminal Thomas Cat succeeds in terrorizing until finally brought to cover. It is a fairly amusing fable.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"No Woman's Land"

(Hal Hodes-Novelt—One Reel)

HERE'S a fine little screen novelty that will be suitable for most of the first class houses. It has to do with a Grecian Monastery—situated high among some inaccessible cliffs which overlook a small village. Here, a colony of Monks eke out their existence—and without the aid or companionship of woman. The perilous descent to the valley below, is rarely made and is accomplished by the century old method of a hand power winch and a basket which twists and turns on a worn old rope. At their best they are a hard looking crew despite that fact that one of them whom the camera man has featured, seems to look almost human. This fellow gets his thrill out of life from looking through a telescope at the townspeople, many hundreds of feet below.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Keep Trying"

(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

CLIFF BOWES and Zelma O'Neal are again featured in a single reel comedy which registers as fair entertainment. Bowes appears in the role of an employee at a railroad baggage station and is in love with the station agent's daughter. He uses a book of instructions on "How to Make Love" to excellent advantage although his suit is frowned upon by the girl's father. A pair of bad actors arrive in town to put on a show. Absence of two of the troupe allow Cliff and Zelma to get a pass to the show if they can help out the act. The show proves a fizzle but all turns out well for the boy and girl.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Burmah Blues"

(Hal Hodes-Novelt—One Reel)

THAT they have a "Charleston" in the land of Burmah, can almost be proven by looking over this one. It's fairly interesting and could be made more so by a little less repetition of the same brand of dances. A little cutting here and there would help. However, it's an interesting and instructive subject which shows the strange customs and dances of these people.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Ko-Ko Baffles the Bulls"

(Red Seal—One Reel)

This is a highly amusing number of the Max Fleischer series of Out-of-the-Inkwell cartoons featuring the pen and ink Ko-Ko. In this issue, after Ko-Ko has been given life by Fleischer, he runs away accompanied by his dog. Fleischer causes a number of detectives to appear who give chase to the truants. Ko-Ko and the dog disguise themselves and a merry chase ensues until Ko-Ko is finally forced to dissolve into ink to escape his pursuers.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Hair Cartoons No. 3"

(Red Seal—One Reel)

This number of the series of hair cartoons drawn by Marcus shows Lord Astor, David Belasco, Clara Kimball Young, Billie Burke and Larry Semon. As is the usual style the characters are first drawn without resemblance to the original but through the manipulation of tufts of hair the drawings are recognized. It's a clever stunt and should prove of interest to audiences.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Wandering Papas"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

ANOTHER Hal Roach comedy that will pass as good entertainment. Clyde Cook is featured and appears in the role of a cook for a large mining camp. The story has to do with the difficulties surrounding a romance which develops between a hermit's daughter and the cook and the latter's efforts to provide a new menu for the miners who have demanded a change of diet. The chief engineer of the camp completes a romantic triangle.

Two of the best parts of the picture are where the cook embarks on a hunting expedition to secure the prescribed articles for the new menu—and the pursuit along a narrow ledge where considerable aerial work occurs. Stan Laurel directed.

Summary—Good entertainment, well photographed and directed. Is suitable for the majority of theatres.

"Ko-Ko's Paradise"

(Red Seal-Ko-Ko—One Reel)

THE latest adventure of Ko-Ko and his hound-dog is somewhat out of the ordinary and contains some intimate revelations of a clown's after life. Under the impression that he has been the mark for his boss's bullet in a shooting gallery, the clown further imagines himself in heaven where he conducts a halo collecting tour. He finds that halos can be purchased on the installment plan—and also manages to pilfer a few. Riding on a duck, he finally returns. This cartoon appears as though the author had done a bit of straining for effect.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Soul of the Cypress"

(Red Seal-Gem—One Reel)

HERE'S a fantastic creation that is entirely suitable for first run theatres. It has to do with the old "Legend of the Cypress." According to the story, the strains from the lute of a young composer lures forth the dryad soul from an aged cypress tree. The musician pursues this charming creature who longs for his embrace but fears the mortal touch. Unable to overtake her, he plunges into the sea. Some remarkably fine shots of different scenes on an island have been secured and the island trees are startlingly weird.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Fish for Two"

(Red Seal—One Reel)

This number of the Gems of the Screen is a rather tame affair as regards its scenic possibilities but the humorous actions of the two principles will hold the interest of the spectator. A boy of the "Huckleberry Finn" type and his dog go on a fishing trip during the course of which the boy is dragged into the water by a big fish. The dog rescues the boy from the water and then goes in again to retrieve the lad's fishing pole which, when brought back, has a large member of the finny tribe dangling from its end.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Animated Hair Cartoon No. 4"

(Red Seal Pictures—One Reel)

AGAIN Marcus demonstrates his skill with the pen and brush. The process is the same as used in the previous "Hair Cartoons." Parts of hair are used to transform the figure into different countenances. Subjects shown are W. H. Taft, General Joffre, Napoleon, J. P. Morgan, Sessue Hayakawa, Nickolai Lenin, La Follette and Galli Curci.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

Luck and Sand

(Artclass Pictures—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A RAPID-FIRE action Western in which Leo Maloney stars, aided by a dog and horse that can do most anything but talk straight United States, although they certainly create the impression that they converse in a language of their own; and the combination is a winning one. Mr. Maloney, by the way, assumes a double burden in this instance, as he is director as well as the leading player, and has acquitted himself creditably on both counts. The picture makes no pretence of shaping out a subtle plot, the story starts right off with trouble in the air, a killing, an innocent man suspected and the hero on the warpath to straighten matters out. Which he does satisfactorily to all concerned except the bad guys, who get what is coming to them in strong doses at the close.

THEME. Western. Jim Blake intervenes to save brother of girl he loves, when former is unjustly suspected of murder. He also clears his own name and gets his reward.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fast, well-sustained action, melodramatic punches and love appeal. Hero's self-sacrifice. Scene in which he proves villain guilty. Killing of Captain Harris.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Advertise as brisk Western melodrama, with lots of physical action, strong love interest. Play up star, horse and dog. Mention Miss Hill.

DRAWING POWER. Should please wherever they favor fast-rolling Westerners.

SUMMARY. Good regulation Westerner, delivers some forcible melo punches, has the necessary romantic lure and happy finish.

THE CAST

Jim Blake.....	Leo Maloney
Roy Wetzel.....	Homer Watson
Lois Wetzel.....	Josephine Hill
Roy's Mother.....	Florence Lee
Sanger.....	Leonard Clapham
Sheriff.....	Roy Watson
Captain Harris.....	Hal Gilbert

Author, Ford Beebe. Director, Leo Maloney.

SYNOPSIS. Captain Harris, railroad civil engineer, is killed by Sangster and Foote two crooks who try vainly to bribe him into telling where new line is to run. They escape with Harris' map. Jim Blake is unjustly suspected. Sanger wishes to buy land owned by Wetzel family over which road is to be built. Refused, he has Roy Wetzel arrested on murder charge. Jim, in love with Roy's sister Lois, rescues the brother and proves real criminal's guilt. Jim and Lois are happy.

Leo Maloney, star of "Luck and Sand" an Artclass release.

Luck & Sand (Artclass Pictures)

PRESS NOTICE

LEO MALONEY, daring Western star, with his famous trained horse and dog, Flash and Bullet, will appear in "Luck and Sand," a sterling western picture which will be the main screen attraction at the Theatre on _____

The story deals with the murder of the head civil engineer of a railroad by a couple of crooks, who throw suspicion on the brother of the girl loved by the hero. How the latter runs down and convicts the real criminal, is told in a series of flashing adventures that hold an audience spellbound.

Leo Maloney and his four-footed pals win instant sympathy. Josephine Hill a fascinating heroine, supported by a great cast.

CATCH LINES

How a railroad brought strife to a peaceful valley, a tale of greed, crooks, murder, romance!

The Traffic Cop

(F. B. O.—5175 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THERE'S more human interest and sympathetic lure and less lurid melodrama in this production than was offered by "High and Handsome," the other policeman hero picture starring Lefty Flynn as a two-fisted, strenuous member of the force. Also the comedy element is developed and maintained to a much greater extent. The result is a feature which registers as an entertaining program attraction, it gets the laughs continuously, has considerable romantic and sentimental appeal, the latter increased by Lefty's kindly guardianship of a little boy slum waif who has much to do with bringing the lovers together. Thrills are not lacking, however, the big punch scene being a whopper, with the hero executing a spring from an auto to a runaway bus carrying his sweetheart and a bunch of kiddies, which he succeeds in halting on the verge of a towering cliff.

THEME. Comedy melodrama. Traffic cop at seaside resort saves runaway bus from plunging over cliff, woos and wins wealthy girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Meeting of hero and heroine. Flynn's convivial seance with sweetheart's father. Romantic development. Runaway bus scene at close.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as policeman hero picture with good comedy, fine sympathetic touches and swift melodramatic action. Feature Lefty Flynn.

DRAWING POWER. Good program film, suitable for average house.

SUMMARY. Another bright comedy melodrama with big, handsome cop for hero. Moves smoothly, has lots of action, sentimental and romantic appeal.

THE CAST

Joe Regan.....	Lefty Flynn
Alicia Davidson.....	Kathleen Myers
William Radcliffe Davidson.....	James Marcus
Marmalade Laidlaw.....	Ray Ripley
Mrs. Davidson.....	Adele Farrington
Harvey Phillips.....	Nigel Barrie
Tapicoa.....	Raymond Turner
Jerry Murphy.....	Himself

Author, Gerald Beaumont. Director, Harry Garson.

SYNOPSIS. Joe Regan, traffic cop, falls in love with Alicia Davidson at a seaside resort, squares her wealthy father, but gets in bad with Mrs. Davidson. The Davidsons take several children on a picnic trip in a bus. The driver loses control, the bus heads for the edge of a cliff. Joe appears in the nick of time, springs from his own machine to the runaway and stops it on the verge of disaster. He wins Alicia.

Lefty Flynn, star of "The Traffic Cop" an F. B. O. production.

The Traffic Cop (F.B.O.) PRESS NOTICE

BIG, athletic Lefty Flynn scores again in another "policeman hero" picture, "The Traffic Cop," which comes to the Theatre on _____

This is a bright and breezy comedy melodrama with romantic interest strongly developed, in which Lefty appears as the guardian of a little boy waif he has adopted, and while at a seaside resort, wins the love of a wealthy contractor's daughter. The production is rich in humor values as well as sentimental lure and winds into a tremendous thrill climax, when the hero halts a runaway bus in which his sweetheart and several children are riding, on the verge of a precipice.

Kathleen Byers, James Marcus, Nigel Barrie figure in important roles.

CATCH LINES

Laughter, thrills, romance, Lefty Flynn in one of the greatest roles of his career!

Partners Again

(United Artists—5562 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

OUR old friends, Potash and Perlmutter are with us again, this time in the automobile business, and the combined efforts of Messrs. George Sidney and Alexander Carr in the leading roles result in as merry a farce comedy as ever coaxed smiles out of a bred-in-the-bone grouch. It's mostly wildly hilarious slapstick, aided and seasoned by Montague Glass sub-titles that never fail to get the laughs, with a good deal of the film's success as a mirth-arouser to be credited to the skilled direction of Henry King. One of the big hits is the episode wherein the partners give a demonstration of the powers of the Schenckmann Six car to prospective buyers, with disastrous aftermath, another, the airplane chase, when Abe tumbles overboard and is saved by his nightgown catching on a hook. The picture throughout rides on a gale of genial humor, is well acted by all hands and should qualify anywhere as a big box office asset.

THEME. Comedy. Potash and Perlmutter embark in auto business, are nearly killed demonstrating car, get caught in swindling game, but come out O. K. at finish.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Acting of George Sidney and Alexander Carr. Good direction. Fast action and well developed slapstick punches with thrill values. Scene where Abe demonstrates car. The airplane episode. The witty subtitles.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature George Sidney and Alexander Carr. Stress success of stage play from which film is adapted. Go the limit praising picture's humorous appeal. There won't be any disgruntled comeback.

DRAWING POWER. Should get the money in any house, big or little.

SUMMARY. Another great Potash and Perlmutter laughing riot! Slapstick fun, suspense, a bit of romance, thrills, rattling action. A box office winner!

THE CAST

Adapted from Stage Play by Montague Glass and Jules E. Goodman. Director, Henry King.

SYNOPSIS. Potash and Perlmutter are in automobile business. Abe's niece Hattie falls in love with mechanic Dan, sidetracking wealthy suitor Schenckmann. Abe has a tough time in court following an unlucky auto demonstration by himself and partner. He secretly gives Hattie $500 for wedding present. Later Abe, fooled in a stock swindle runs away with Mawruss in an airplane. They are brought back by Hattie and Dan, the latter having made a fortune in chemicals, and all ends well.

George Sidney, featured in "Partners Again" a United Artists release.

Partners Again (United Artists) PRESS NOTICE

THE laughing screen success of the season "Partners Again," a film adaptation of the famous Potash and Perlmutter farce comedy which scored such a Broadway hit will be given its local premiere at the Theatre on _____.

Funny as is this production, there is not lacking a pretty vein of sentimental interest and considerable melodramatic force in its composition. The story deals with the adventures of the partners in the auto business and brings in a love affair between two young folks, just enough romance to offset the laughs and thrills to balance the whole.

Those celebrated actors, George Sidney and Alexander Carr fill the leads, supported by a brilliant cast of noted players.

CATCH LINES

As many laughs as there are parts to a car, as many thrills as can be recorded by your speedometer!

Watch Your Wife

(Universal-Jewel—6980 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

WITH the material at his command director Svend Gade could have turned this picture into out-and-out farce. Instead, he elected to lay considerable emphasis on the heart interest angle. His judgment was O. K., for the result is a film with an unmistakably human touch all the way through, also equipped with humorous batteries that score right on the laughing target without ever making a miss. It's a bully comedy drama, snapping into high speed from the beginning. The little squabbles of the young married Langhams, all over trivial, but none the less exasperating, matters, which finally bring about divorce, screen like a page from real life. The only deliberate farce suggestion lies in the operations of the agency which supplies wives for rent, but this is a matter of phraseology, for the "wives" are merely hired housekeepers. Both Virginia Valli and Pat O'Malley are excellent in the leads, support and photography first-class.

THEME. Comedy drama. The Langhams, divorced, are still in love. He "rents" a wife from an agency, but the separated couple are finally reunited.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Clever intermingling of human interest and comedy values. Moments of suspense, snappy subtitles, humorous appeal. Work of the leads.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as a domestic comedy drama that will amuse and interest everyone through its human touches and irresistibly comic appeal. Play up the "rented wives" idea. Feature Pat O'Malley, Virginia Valli, Nat Carr, Helen Worthing.

DRAWING POWER. Will please any type of audience, suitable for all houses.

SUMMARY. Has universal appeal, a domestic comedy drama of the finest. Well acted, directed and photographed. The characters are life-like, and, while the comedy element predominates, it is beautifully balanced by the heart interest.

THE CAST

Claudia Langham.....	Virginia Valli
James Langham.....	Pat O'Malley
Benjamin Harris.....	Nat Carr
Gladys Moon.....	Helen Lee Worthing
Alphonse Marsac.....	Albert Conti
Madame Buff.....	Aggie Herring
Maid.....	Nora Hayden

Author, Goesta Segercrantz. Director, Svend Gade. Photographed by Arthur L. Todd.

SYNOPSIS. James Langham and his wife Claudia are divorced, Count Marsac woos Claudia. James hires Gladys Moon from an agency which advertises wives for rent, working hours from 8 A. M. to 8 P. M. Gladys is compelled by a storm to remain overnight in James' house. Claudia, repenting, comes to him, but flees at sight of Gladys. James pursues and gets her off the train on which she is about to leave with Marsac. They are reconciled.

"Watch Your Wife" (Universal-Jewel) PRESS NOTICE

VIRGINIA VALLI and Pat O'Malley are co-starred in "Watch Your Wife," the sensation-ally successful comedy-drama which will be given its local premiere at the Theatre on _____.

This picture ranks as a domestic story that combines heart interest and unbounded mirth to an extraordinary degree. Briefly, it deals with the marital troubles of a young couple who quarrel repeatedly over minor matters, are divorced, but retain their love for each other. Through divers complications and a network of misunderstanding they finally force their way back to a reconciliation.

Nat Carr and Helen Worthing are also featured.

CATCH LINES

They quarreled, separated, but he found he loved his wife more than ever after they were divorced!

Mare Nostrum

(Rex Ingram-Metro-Goldwyn—11000 Feet)

(Reviewed by J. S. Dickerson)

"MARE NOSTRUM" which opened an indefinite engagement at the Criterion theatre, New York, Tuesday evening, is grim, stark tragedy, that goes on to its un-compromising end, recalling if not reviving the hates of war and picturizing in startling vividness the ruthlessness of German U-boat warfare.

From a production and acting standpoint, nothing that has been presented can surpass it, even Mr. Ingram's own immortal "Four Horsemen" with which the picture must inevitably be compared.

A carefully selected cast, all but three of which are foreign, give characterizations that stand out like cameos.

Some of the scenes might, it seems to this reviewer, well have been toned down a bit. The heroine is shot as a spy before your very eyes. A little boy is blown to bits as a torpedo explodes amid-ship the Mare Nostrum. The hero drowns, and goes floating down to the bottom of the sea.

THEME. Tragic story of the submarine warfare during the world war in which a sea captain, his Austrian sweetheart, his son, all meet death.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The sinking of the ship by the submarine. The execution of the heroine as a spy. The fine acting of the whole cast, especially Michael Brantford, Fernand Mailly and Mlle. Kithnou.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Is distinctly in the road show class, needing extensive billing that will emphasize the magnitude of the production, its great dramatic values and numberless scenes that carry fine suspense.

DRAWING POWER. Best suited for audiences that appreciate a strong well-told story and who complain of the sameness of the average production.

SUMMARY. A vivid picturization of the Ibanez novel, indicting Germany for its U-boat warfare during the war, with the horrors of war emphasized.

THE CAST

The Triton.....	Uni Apollon
Don Esteban Ferragut.....	Alex Nova
His Son, Ulysses.....	Kada-Abd-el-Kader
Caragol.....	Hughie Mack
Freya Talberg.....	Alice Terry
Ulysses Ferragut.....	Antonio Moreno
Count Kaledine.....	Fernand Mailly

Produced and directed by Rex Ingram from the Blasco Ibanez story of the same name. Scenario by Willis Goldbeck. Photographed by John F. Seitz. Edited by Grant Whytock.

SYNOPSIS—Ulysses Ferragut descended from a long line of Spanish seamen has been taught to revere "Mare Nostrum" (Our Sea). He falls in love with a beautiful German spy and under her influence aids in carrying supplies to German submarines in the Mediterranean. It is not until the U-boat has caused the death of his son that both he and his sweetheart become remorseful and then it is too late. The spy is shot and the sea captain drowns, the victim of the submarine he had aided.

Antonio Moreno, featured in "Mare Nostrum," a Rex Ingram-Metro-Goldwyn release.

Mare Nostrum (Rex Ingram-Metro-Goldwyn)

PRESS NOTICE

TO those who remember the most famous motion picture of all time, "The Four Horsemen," the announcement that "Mare Nostrum," another of the Ibanez novels and also directed by Rex Ingram will be at the Theatre for a days' engagement will carry unusual interest.

"Mare Nostrum" has been hailed as worthy successor to "The Four Horsemen," carrying even greater dramatic values although its story is grim and tragic. Alice Terry is the beautiful heroine, a German spy and Tony Moreno plays the leading role of a sea captain who is tricked into aiding German submarines during the war. The production is hailed as one of the most notable pictures of the year.

CATCH LINES

A mighty drama of the World War by the author and director of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

The Desert Demon

(Artclass Pictures Corp.—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A GOOD buy for the State Rights field. Director Richard Thorpe has done excellent work in turning out this gingery Western melodrama, which swings at once into quick action and maintains high speed up to a rousing climax. They'll like this wherever plenty of combat sequences and the fast riding stuff are popular, with a sufficiently impassioned love affair and comedy relief to make the dramatic balance even. The plot of "The Desert Demon" may occasionally seem to follow the old conventional trail, but the chief point is that it is likely to give satisfaction in the proper market. A sure way of working up sympathy for a hero is to plunge him into a boiling pot of troubles right at the start, and that's what happens to Buffalo Bill, Jr., who has a rough time disentangling himself from the net of complications into which his chivalrous regard for the heroine leads him. The star does good work and is well supported. Photography O. K.

THEME. Western melodrama. Girl saves Buffalo Bill, Jr., from perishing in desert. In gratitude he defends her from foes, and later wins her love.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Buffalo Bill's athletic feats and riding stunts. The scene where Bill saves squaw from Slade. Comedy relief. Episode where Bill clears girl's brother of murder accusation and his final reckoning with Slade.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the star, who has established quite a following with the Western fans. Boost as sensational, swift Westerner, with smashing climax.

DRAWING POWER. Program attraction. Good in sections favoring Western melo.

SUMMARY. O.K. for houses catering to the Western fan trade. Has continuously rapid action, star rides and fights snappily. Story mostly made up of physical thrills, but gets love interest over. Photography attractive.

THE CAST

Bill Davis.....	Buffalo Bill, Jr.
Nita Randall.....	Betty Morrissey
Jim Slade.....	Frank Ellis
Snitz Doolittle.....	Harry Todd
Bugs.....	Jack O'Brien
Dad Randall.....	Frank Austin
The Squaw.....	Margaret Martin

Author, Alex McLaren. Director, Richard Thorpe. Photographed by Ray Ries.

SYNOPSIS. Bill Davis, known as Buffalo Bill Jr., saves an Indian squaw from attack by Jim Slade. Lost in the desert Bill's horse dies from thirst. Nita Randall, whose father is operating a mine nearby, arrives just in time to prevent Bill from suffering a similar fate. Slade plots to get control of Randall's mine. One of the conspirators is shot by Randall, who dies from an injury, thinking he killed his enemy. Bill takes the blame but Nita is temporarily influenced against him. Her eyes are opened later when Bill beats up Slade. Nita and Bill are united.

The Desert Demon (Artclass Pictures)

PRESS NOTICE

A FLASHING romance of the West, starring Buffalo Bill, Jr., is offered by "The Desert Demon," scheduled for the screen of the Theatre on ———.

This is the best up-to-date of a series of strenuous Western melodramas in which this redoubtable hard-riding, athletic star is appearing. He is seen as the protector of the pretty daughter of a mine-owner, Nita Randall, who loses her father and is being cheated out of her property when her lover takes a hand in the game.

It is fast action from start to finish, with a charming love affair included with the thrills and fighting episodes, Betty Morrissey, Frank Todd, Frank Ellis in support.

CATCH LINES

Lost in the desert, his horse dead, it looked like the end, but a girl saved his life!

The Cave Man

(Warner Brothers—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

WHILE the plot of this offering hovers beyond the realms of plausibility one must accept it as fiction and enjoy it as such. Consider a coal heaver being adopted by a young, beautiful and wealthy orphan, who seeking some new whim to pass away idle hours, has him barbered, bathed, tailored and put through the rules of etiquette and then launches the brawny fellow into the inner circle of society. It all starts when the anthracite thrower finds the other half of a bank note which tells him that whole note is his if he applies to the address given on a note pinned to the bill. The address is the fair maiden's apartment. Matt Moore runs away with the honors in his characterization of the hard boiled Smagg. Moore is immense in the early reels. There is much fun in the ball sequence when the lights are dimmed and Smagg starts in to kiss all the flappers present. Marie Prevost good as the jaded orphan.

THEME. Comedy drama. Coal heaver enters society, finds bride in girl who groomed him for new role.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Smagg's efforts to land the half of the bank note. His training for entrance into "400." His return to old haunts "all dolled up." Society reception and dance. Kissing episode. Kidnapping of Myra.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Put fellow on street as ballyhoo, dressed like caveman and carrying appropriate advertising. Boost Marie Prevost and Matt Moore.

DRAWING POWER. Popularity of stars and fun in plot make it O.K. for average house.

SUMMARY. A rather wild idea for a plot but containing much fun. Matt Moore doing some especially good work. Miss Prevost easy on eyes. Will provide entertainment for most fans. Fairly well mounted. Needs exploitation.

THE CAST

Myra Gaylord.....Marie Prevost
Michael Smagg.....Matt Moore
Brewster Bradford.....John Patrick
Mrs. Van Veet.....Hedda Hopper
Her daughter, Dorothy.....Phyllis Haver
Author, Gelett Burgess. Director, Lewis Milestone. Photographed by David Abel.

SYNOPSIS. Myra Gaylord, orphan with $2,000,000, seeking adventure, throws one half $100 note out of window, offering other half if finder will come to her apartment. Michael Smagg, coal heaver, delivers it. Myra decides to groom him and introduce him into society. His caveman methods attract ladies. He balks at obeying Myra, who tells him society will ostracize him if his identity is disclosed. He doubts it, but finds it true. Eventually, after going back to old haunts, he returns, kidnaps Myra and rushes her away on coal wagon to be married.

The Cave Man (Warner Brothers) PRESS NOTICE

MATT MOORE and Marie Prevost will appear on the Theatre screen, commencing ———, in "The Cave Man," a comedy drama from the pen of Gelett Burgess which relates the amusing adventures of a coal heaver, who is "adopted" by a carefree orphan girl of wealth and after being groomed and trained for the part, is introduced into the "400." When his real identity is disclosed he is forced to forego his high hat and walking suit and don once more the clothes of a coal heaver. But he returns and abducts the girl who sponsored him. John Patrick, Phyllis Haver and Hedda Hopper also have important roles in this amusing farce.

CATCH LINES

Drive away dull care by laughing at the brawny coal heaver who is taken up and exploited by a member of the "400"!

From the coal pile to the social heap in one jump!

Dancing Mothers

(Paramount—Eight Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

WE have had a lot of these so-called jazz pictures, but nothing in many moons to compare with this adaptation of Edgar Selwyn's Broadway stage hit which has been transplanted to the silver sheet by Herbert Brenon in an eminently satisfactory manner. Here is a picture packed with incident, a feature in which the director has kept one big scene stepping on the heels of its predecessor. As for the acting, it also is the best we've seen in a long time. Alice Joyce wins new laurels as the mother, Clara Bow scoring in the role of the jazz-mad flapper. Both these actresses are due for some widespread praise. Conway Tearle and Norman Trevor take good care of the leading male roles. There are any number of "big moments," the first of which comes when Kittens finds her father at a night club with "the other woman," the second arriving when the mother is found by the daughter in the arms of the man from whom she is trying to save her offspring.

THEME. Ultra-modern society drama, New York night life, mother trying to save husband and daughter, herself falls in love with "the other man."

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Daughter finding father with another woman. Sequence in which Naughton is discovered by daughter with latter's mother in his arms. Climax, acting, direction, artistic settings.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Arrange Dancing Mothers contest, offering prizes for best steppers. Boost names of stars. Put over style display of gowns and slippers suitable for Dancing Mothers. Might also stage a Charleston contest.

DRAWING POWER. OK for best houses as well as all others.

SUMMARY. One of the best acted features in many months. Contains fine moral. Plot packed with action, climax with a Dempsey-like wallop. Beautifully mounted and skillfully directed. Just what modern fans want.

THE CAST

Ethel Westcourt.....Alice Joyce
Jerry Naughton.....Conway Tearle
Kittens Westcourt.....Clara Bow
Kenneth Cobb.....Donald Keith
Mrs. Massarene.....Dorothy Cumming
Irma.....Elsie Lawson
Hugh Westcourt.....Norman Trevor
Author Edgar Selwyn. Scenario by Forrest Halsey. Directed by Herbert Brenon. Photographed by J. Roy Hunt.

SYNOPSIS. Ethel Westcourt's husband and daughter are rounders. When Kittens, the daughter, discovers her father with Irma, "the other woman," the girl decides to continue her flirtation with Jerry Naughton, man about town. Mrs. Westcourt hears of her husband's wanderings and her daughter's association with Naughton. She decides to do some stepping herself but in appealing to Naughton falls in love with him herself. The climax comes when husband, wife and daughter all meet in Naughton's apartment.

Dancing Mothers (Paramount) PRESS NOTICE

"DANCING MOTHERS," based on the Broadway stage success, will be shown at the ——— Theatre, commencing ———. Edgar Selwyn wrote the story, which is a sophisticated picture of New York life showing a charming matron fighting to save her jazz-mad flapper daughter and night club-habitue husband, but eventually being herself swept into the vortex of fast life. She falls in love with the man from whom she is trying to save her daughter and there is a tremendous climax where husband, wife, daughter and the other man all meet in the latter's apartment. Alice Joyce, Conway Tearle, Clara Bow and Norman Trevor are members of the quartette that makes the leading characters live.

CATCH LINES

Sea Horses

(Paramount—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

HERE is a thoroughly enjoyable offering which stands out primarily because of the excellence of the character portraits painted by the members of a very satisfactory cast. Francis Brett Young wrote the virile tale of romance and adventure and Allan Dwan has transferred it to the screen in entertaining manner. The plot opens in Naples, but the observer is soon taken to sea where there are some tense dramatic sequences developed as well as some choice comedy. Arriving in the East African port we have more colorful backgrounds and more tense moments. While Florence Vidor and Jack Holt are co-starred and do admirable work, much praise is due George Bancroft for his dashing characterization of the role of Cochran, to William Powell for his work as the drunken beach comber and to Frank Campeau and Mack Swain for their comedy efforts. No one will complain of lack of action, human interest and romance. They are all here in plenty!

THEME. Melodramatic romance. Sea captain saves woman from degenerate husband, makes her his own wife.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The acting. The Christmas party aboard ship. The meeting of wife and husband in Panda. The rescue of the wife by captain when former flees into jungle from husband. The tornado sequence. The comedy element.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost names of stars. Bookstore display of novel. Build tropical atmosphere into lobby.

DRAWING POWER. This one should prove business getter in average house.

SUMMARY. A well acted, colorfully mounted feature that packs several punches and puts over something different in a climax—a tornado. There is some fine comedy and an appealing romance running through the action.

THE CAST

George Glanville.....	Jack Holt
Helen Salvia.....	Florence Vidor
Lorenzo Salvia.....	William Powell
Cochran.....	George Bancroft
Bimbo-bomba.....	Mack Swain
Senor Cordoza.....	Frank Campeau

Marx.....	George Nichols

Author, Francis Brett Young. Director, Allan Dwan. Photographed by James Howe.

SYNOPSIS. Deserted by her husband, Helen Salvia decides to try and find him in Africa. Captain Glanville falls in love with Helen enroute. In Panda, she finds her husband has degenerated into a drunken beach comber. Captain buys wife's release from husband. She resents this and returns to husband. Eventually captain saves Helen who flees into jungle from drunken spouse. He is wounded in saving daughter, but recovers and the two start for England to wed.

Jack Holt, featured in "Sea Horses" a Paramount production.

Sea Horses (Paramount) PRESS NOTICE

JACK HOLT and Florence Vidor are co-starred in "Sea Horses," which comes to the Theatre, commencing ———. The plot deals in vigorous and refreshing manner with the experiences of beautiful English girl, deserted by her husband, who finds a new love after some stirring adventures aboard a freighter and in an isolated East African port. The film starts out with action and keeps up a swift tempo to the close, with a series of powerful climaxes interspersed of which a raging tropical tornado is the most thrilling. There are some fine characterizations contributed by George Bancroft, William Powell, Mack Swain and Frank Campeau. The settings are unusually attractive.

CATCH LINES

Far from home, on tropic seas—three gruff seamen and a charming girl Fate had placed aboard their ship. All three fought for her. Which won?

Irene

(First National—Nine Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THERE'S no use in dragging out all the time-worn superlatives in praising this Colleen Moore achievement. They don't mean much in these days. Neither is it possible to go into detail in this short space in telling you about the many good things in this self-made box office bonanza. Perhaps it is best to just say "This is A picture!" It would be a difficult matter to imagine a feature that could offer more entertainment than this. Then again it has many selling angles—a great star, a famous title, a wonderful cast, a splendid story and, to cap the climax, a fashion show in Technicolor that surpasses anything of its kind so far placed on the shadow stage. This style review, alone, will put "Irene," over and there's two solid reels of it. Yes, it cost a fortune and it shows it. Miss Moore IS Irene. She's immense. The nation will soon be talking about her work here. Lloyd Hughes is splendid as leading man.

THEME. Comedy. Little Irish hoyden graduates from demonstrator in store window to mannikin job. Captures wealthy husband.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Miss Moore's characterization. Settings, comedy. "Madame Lucy's" style emporium. Color Fashion Show.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Plaster the town with title and star. Tie-up with store on spring fashion show as prologue. Get local music dealer to put on window display of "Irene" music. Take advantage of national tie-ups described in press sheet.

DRAWING POWER. The finest houses in the land should "clean up" with this one.

SUMMARY. All you will have to do on this one is hang out your sign and start counting the shekels. A picture already sold to the public. Produced in flawless manner. Splendidly acted, directed and mounted.

THE CAST

Irene O'Dare.....	Colleen Moore
Donald Marshall.....	Lloyd Hughes
"Madame Lucy".....	George K. Arthur
Pa O'Dare.....	Charles Murray
Ma O'Dare.....	Kate Price
Mrs. Warren Marshall.....	Ida Darling
Eleanor Hadley.....	Eva Novak
Larry Hadley.....	Edward Earle
Bob Harrison.....	Lawrence Wheat

Based on musical comedy by James Montgomery. Directed by Alfred E. Green.

SYNOPSIS. Donald Marshall becomes partner in modiste shop, insists "Madame Lucy" be male operator, makes Irene O'Dare a successful model. On night of big fashion show for society, Irene arouses "Lucy's" anger and is told to stay and watch shop. Donald arrives and assures her she is to lead show. Irene is sensation, but mother arrives and stops her promenade by taking her home. Donald follows, is forgiven by mother. Overhearing Irene confessing love for him, he folds her in his arms.

Flashing Steeds

(Chesterfield M. P. Corp.—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS is a good average Westerner, with a plot which has some spice of originality, although its principal appeal lies in the combat thrills, daring horsemanship and generally melodramatic action which are the leading characteristics of this type of picture. It's a new departure to introduce a couple of international crooks searching for a fabulously valuable black pearl into a feature with Western settings, but the idea works out all right in the present instance, with the hero, a Government agent disguised as a cow-hand, keeping an eye on the light-fingered gentry and eventually running them to earth. A romance between the detective chap and ranch-owner's daughter is smoothly developed and slips the lovers together in the customary clinch at the close; Bill Patton shows to very good advantage in the leading role, is a gallant figure on horseback and an appealing lover. Dorothy Donald a winsome heroine, support satisfactory.

THEME. Westerner. Government agent, disguised as cow hand, thwarts plot of international crooks to steal valuable black pearl and wins rancher's daughter.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Arrival of fake titled pair at ranch. Scene where attempt is made to get pearl under cover of phony rustling raid. Numerous chases and fights. Patton's riding feats. Bill's thrashing of "Lord" Algernon. The windup.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the black pearl mystery. Bill as Westerner that has odd crook situations, big romantic appeal, startling developments. Feature star.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for any house that has strong demand for Westerners.

SUMMARY. Brings international thieves in quest of valuable black pearl into Western ranch settings, which gives plot original flavor. Picture snaps across some sensational punches, moves swiftly, star registers well. Good Western card.

THE CAST

Bill Swift.....	Bill Patton

Author Not Credited. Director, Horace B. Carpenter.

SYNOPSIS. Bill Patton goes to work on Randall's ranch, is in love with employer's daughter Helen. Captain Randall, formerly a sailor possesses a valuable black pearl. Lord and Lady Rathburne visit the ranch. They are really international thieves, working with confederates to obtain Randall's pearl. Bill gains the crooks' confidence and is enabled to thwart their schemes. He finally rounds up the gang, reveals himself as a Government agent and marries Helen.

PRESS NOTICE

A CROOK melodrama with a Western setting, starring Bill Patton, is the big screen attraction at the _____ Theatre on _____. It is entitled "Flashing Steeds" and offers a plot refreshingly different from the average film dealing with ranch and cowboy life.

Patton is seen as a Government agent, working as a cow-hand on a ranch, whose owner, Randall possesses a lovely daughter, Helen, and a valuable black pearl. International thieves are after the pearl, Bill is after the daughter, and the thieves as well. In the end he gets both.

A wonderfully exciting feature, with Dorothy Donald scoring as the charming heroine

CATCH LINES

An intriguing plot, a great cast, romance, melodrama, snappy comedy, Bill Patton at his best!

International crooks, a black pearl of fabulous value, a Secret Service man who loved a rancher's daughter!

The Tough Guy

(F. B. O.—5455 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

FRED THOMSON and his famous horse Silver King are all to the good in this picture which is made to order for master and steed, giving both due prominence in a story that gets out of the usual rut, sparkles with snappy comedy, is loaded with melodramatic energy and winds up a very pretty love affair happily. Silver King's presence and marvelously intelligent work would alone suffice to lift this film above the level of the ordinary Western production, but in addition we have the athletic prowess and vigorous, clean-cut acting of the star, and the combination is a winning one for the box office. Lola Todd is a pleasing attractive heroine, Bob McKim a fine swaggering villain and the support is adequate. Horse tricks on the screen are quite familiar nowadays, but Silver King's recovery of the lost boy and clever evasion of his pursuers is a specimen of equine sagacity and byplay as amusing as it is surprisingly original.

THEME. Western. With the aid of his intelligent horse Cowboy Fred Saunders recovers little lost brother of girl he loves, defeats her enemies and weds her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The smart action, Silver King's wonderful tricks, Thomson's splendid riding, energetic stunts and acting. The bright comedy and love interest.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the star and Silver King. You can go the limit praising work of both in this film. Bill as combination of laughs and thrills, stress love story. Boost as first-class Westerner.

DRAWING POWER. Should win wherever they want snappy Western comedy melodrama.

SUMMARY. Fred Thomson and his celebrated horse Silver King make a pronounced hit in this well directed, breezy Westerner, which is strong in both comedy and melo values. Excellent entertainment of its kind.

(Artclass Pictures Corp.—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THERE'S the customary amount of rough riding and stunts in "Galloping On" that one expects from a Westerner, but it develops additional interest from two sources—the altogether surprising and decidedly spectacular acrobatics indulged in by Wally Wales, whose stunt work is calculated to make any fan sit up and applaud; and a certain sentimental pressure exerted by the plot in the hero's behalf, which awakens sympathy and has straight human appeal. Taken all around it's a good little picture of its class, and should send Wally Wales' stock up several degrees in the market. Incidentally, the boy patrons are going to yell themselves hoarse over Mr. Wales' agility and scrapping prowess and prove loyal boosters for the film wherever it is shown. The photography is excellent offering a wide diversity of outdoor views, with neat long shots and impressive mountain backgrounds. Jessie Cruzon a pleasing heroine, support capable.

THEME. Western melodrama. Wally Moore serves jail sentence, returns home, pursues bank robbers, recovers loot, clears his name, gets reward, weds girl who loves him.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Spectacular acrobatic and riding stunts performed by the star. Sentimental urge of story, melo, punches. Bank robbery. Bandit chase. Climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tell patrons what a whiz Wally Wales is on horseback and stress his wonderful agility and athletic feats. Bill this as a fast Westerner, with the star's stunts creating extraordinary interest and strong sentimental lure.

DRAWING POWER. If your crowd likes snappy stunt work and western melo, O.K!

SUMMARY. Stunt plays by star help to make this Westerner entertaining. Has considerable sympathetic appeal as well as melodramatic vigor. Star especially good. Is well supported. Picture nicely photographed.

PRESS NOTICE

WALLY WALES in a most amazing stunt melodrama entitled "Galloping On" will be the banner screen attraction at the _____ Theatre on _____.

For sheer daredevil exploits on horseback and in the performance of reckless leaps, etc, this film stands alone. Wally Wales, known as one of the greatest stunt men in the game, outdoes all his previous athletic and acrobatic wonder work. The plot crackles with action and offers a love story of sympathetic interest. Young and old will enjoy this feature, the kiddies especially, as they will go crazy over the star's work.

Jessie Cruzon, Louise Lester, Charles Whitaker and Richard Belfield play important roles.

CATCH LINES

Wally Wales—a hero who sleeps, eats, fights and makes love on horseback!

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

ALTHOUGH its plot is of the lightest gossamer texture and never convincing, this comedy drama ripples along in such lively fashion that it registers as breezy entertainment that will hold the average audience, and gives promise of rolling up respectable box office scores. Charles Ray, forsaking for the present his well-known rube characterizations, appears as a gilded youth who is shocked into a determination to make good in business when his bride skips away from him, and gets a lot of fun out of his role; while Eleanor Boardman, as the young wife, is attractive, but at times a trifle self-conscious and artificial. Dramatic honors really go to Sally O'Neil for her vivacious, piquant impersonation of the village vamp, a performance full of snap and ginger. The feature gets off to a lively start with the hero's whirlwind courtship of a beauty contest winner and maintains a speedy gait to the finish. It is well photographed and directed.

THEME. Comedy drama. Millionaire's son weds beauty contest winner who leaves him at once, and doesn't return until he makes good in business.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Acting of Charles Ray and Sally O'Neil. Smooth continuity and zippy action. Development of four-cornered love affair. Artistic settings. Scene where vamp compromises hero. The dance-fest. Pursuit of Bob by Lanes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Charles Ray, Eleanor Boardman, Sally O'Neil. Bill as laughing success with good heart interest values. Stress the beauty contest.

DRAWING POWER. A likely box office attraction for all classes of theatres.

SUMMARY. Entertaining comedy drama. Plot a bit thin, but good acting, direction, excellent photography, attractive settings and fast action combine to make it interesting and a card apt to have a strong audience appeal.

PRESS NOTICE

ADAPTED from one of Rex Beach's most popular novels, "The Auction Block," which will be shown on the screen of the _____ Theatre on _____, registers as a comedy drama that belongs in the sure-fire entertainment class.

Charles Ray, Eleanor Boardman and Sally O'Neil are the featured players. Mr. Ray appears as the spendthrift son of a millionaire who weds Lory Knight, winner of a beauty contest, is deserted by his wife right after marriage and only wins her back after he has shown that he can make good in business, and a designing vamp nearly shatters his love dream.

CATCH LINES

Charles Ray and Eleanor Boardman in the greatest and funniest picture either has made!

Bob Wharton didn't believe in long courtships, so he married the girl two days after he met her!

Regional News from Correspondents

WILLIAM GOLDMAN has announced plans for a $175,000 motion picture theatre for the Union Boulevard and St. Louis Avenue site.

A farewell party was given to Julius K. Johnson, who has resigned as guest organist at the St. Louis Theatre, and plans to return to Hollywood. Among the speakers at the farewell banquet were

St. Louis

Clarence S. Williams, manager of the theatre; S. O. Wahl, assistant manager; Anthony F. Steuver, treasurer, and Meyer Friedman, musical director.

Harry Saunders, better known as "Hy," has joined the First National's sales organization in St. Louis. He takes the place of J. O'Neill, resigned.

Paul C. Mooney, an executive of Producers Distributing Corporation, and Holly Turner, formerly of the Turner Advertising Agency, were callers on Spyros Skouras recently and while in St. Louis gave a party to Mr. and Mrs. Spyros Skouras, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Skouras and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Weiss.

New York and New Jersey

WILLIAM and Harry Brandt may well be proud of their New Carlton Theatre which held its premiere Thursday evening, February 11th. From a site at Flatbush and Seventh Avenue, Brooklyn, occupied in the past by an unpretentious playhouse, there has materialized one of the most attractive neighborhood theatres in Greater New York. The number of complimentary remarks paid the Brandt Brothers by prominent members of the film trade bear out this statement. At this time we will not attempt to give a detailed description of the construction which according to the owners embodies a number of points entirely new in theatre building.

Many notables were present at the Carlton's opening. Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld conducted the rendition of the National anthem and following this came an address by Boro President Joseph Guider. The famous Motion Picture director, D. W. Griffith, made the presentation "address. Mayor "Jimmie" Walker, also scheduled to appear, could not attend on account of sickness.

Almost the entire T. O. C. C. of New York City might just as well be termed as "among those present." Well known exhibitors and exchange men observed around the attractive reception room included, Clarence Cohen, Sam Schwartz, Hy Gainsboro, Otto Lederer, Charles Schwartz, Louis Blumenthal, George Steiner, Sol Brill, Moe Streimer, Dave Brill, C. E. Lewis, Herman Rachmiel, A. H. Eisenstadt, Charlie Steiner, Bill Herman, Richard Gladhill and Bernard Sholtz.

The staff of the New Carlton will be composed of William Schaeffer as House Manager, Attilio Marchetti, Musical Conductor and Joseph Alter as Chief Operator. All of these men come to the Carlton with a past record of high efficiency.

As usual, Joe Hornstein and his first night staff were on hand to insure good projection—and it was good.

Overheard in the lobby of Brandt's New Carlton Theatre—C. E. Lewis of the A. H. Schwartz Enterprises who thus far has escaped matrimonial woes being interviewed by "Senator" Bernard Sholtz as to the virtues of a certain Barnard College girl. The recent addition of a brand new baby girl to the Scholtz family is undoubtedly accountable for the Senator's enthusiasm along these lines.

At the close of the opening performance last Tuesday evening at William Salkin's New Monroe Theatre, Mr. Salkin and a number of his friends and associates sojourned to a nearby restaurant where the entire dining room had been reserved and a catered supper arranged for the occasion. Salkin, who is a pretty good sized man, was presented by the building contractors with a silver loving cup almost as big as himself. However, this was not to be the entire cause of a catch in Salkin's throat as he later attempted a speech of thanks. Parked in front of the theatre, was a sparkling new seven passenger Packard limousine with a uniformed chauffeur at the wheel—a gift to Mr. Salkin from his theatre associates.

During the almost unprecedented jam at the New Monroe Theatre last Tuesday, rubbers and several other articles of clothing became separated from the owners. It is reported that there is quite a collection which may be claimed by those presenting the proper credentials.

Among the guests of honor at the premiere of the Monroe Theatre were Johnny Hines who acted as toastmaster. Charlie Chase, Pathe Comedian, Burr McIntosh and Bradley Barker.

Another theatre opening scheduled for this week is that of the Laconia, a new house constructed by Bolte Bros. and located at White Plains Road and 234th St., New York City. Bolte Bros. also have another theatre in the course of construction in the White Plains section.

Sam Berman, owner of the Stanley Theatre, 86th St., Brooklyn, will soon open his new playhouse on 18th Avenue, near 75th St. It is reported that the new theatre will have a seating capacity of around 2000.

One more shift has taken place among local film salesmen. Richard Gladhill, who has been associated for some time with the New York Paramount exchange, has recently joined "Buxy and His Gang" at the Fox exchange. Gladhill replaces Gus Solomon who recently became Assistant Manager to Harry Bernstein at Red Seal Pictures Corp.

Walter Reade, of the Walter Reade Enterprises of N. J., is on a three weeks' sojourn in Havana, Cuba.

This is not an Ad for Dinty Moore's restaurant but the beefsteak, etc. must be pretty good to entice Bill Raynor and John Dacey of the Pathe exchange, day after day.

Charlie Stombaugh, Pathe Newark Branch Manager, is still reported as doing plenty of night work—and in addition may be elected to the post of entertaining out of town managers. Mr. Stombaugh has an enviable reputation as a genial host.

Manager Rappaport has recently taken charge of the Hamilton Theatre at Astoria. He was formerly manager of the Sunshine Theatre.

An interesting change of policy is that of Proctor's Newark Theatre which has always adhered strictly to straight vaudeville. It will now add feature pictures to its program.

Joe Lee, big time vaudeville man and Manager of the Fox Newark end of the local exchange, is rapidly becoming a radio fan. He only purchased a new machine a couple of weeks ago and will now trade it in for one about five times as large with a mechanism which resembles a telephone switchboard.

Louis Heiman who recently sold his Empire Theatre at Rahway, N. J. to a Trenton syndicate, will continue as manager of the house.

L. S. Diamond, manager of the Sales Statistical Department of Pathe Exchange, Inc., has received word from 18 Patheites that they intend to try out for the Pathe "five" which will be entered in the bowling tournament to include seven or eight distributing and producing concerns.

According to the "paper" averages submitted, Pathe is going to have a strong aggregation of pin toppers, as most of the aspirants for the team believe they can hit the wood for 150 or better and there are one or two "Red" Granges of the alleys entered.

The following Patheites will enter the try-outs being arranged for by Mr. Diamond:

Pat Campbell, feature sales manager; Ed Kraemer, "Pop" Keuncke, F. Hagetter, John Michel, Arthur Walsh, B. Mondadori, John Pra, Ray Erickson, J. McCarron, Harry DeSiena, F. Dibbins, T. L. Smith, John Level, Irving Wormser, William Marsh, W. H. Baer and J. Billi.

Jos. Stern's Royal Theatre at Bloomfield, N. J. will hold its opening on Wednesday, Feb. 17th.

It is reported that plans have practically been completed by the Fox Theatre Corp. for the erection of a 3200 seat vaudeville and picture theatre at Passaic, N. J. A. Ginsberg is the architect and ground is expected to be broken in about four weeks. Up until this enterprise was put under way, Passaic has almost entirely come under the control of the Fabian Circuit which, it is said, has about 7200 seats in this Jersey community.

Another addition to the Fox Circuit is the reported taking over of the Clinton Square Theatre, a neighborhood house in Newark.

Chester Dormio and Louis Pierotti were in town recently in connection with taking possession of their new theatre project, at Reno, Nevada. The new managers gave a luncheon to the local film boys. Sol Lachman, formerly operator at the Grand Theatre in Reno, will be assistant manager for the new owners.

Canada

THE Toronto exchange of First National Pictures, Inc., is now installed in the Film Exchange Building at 277 Victoria Street. Originally this building had but three floors, being occupied by Regal, Universal and Canadian Educational Films. Three additional floors have been put on.

First National occupies the entire fourth floor, having an area of 4,200 sq. ft. A fire wall separates the general offices from the poster room, and a second fire wall divides the poster room from the film room. Steel shelving and tables form the entire equipment of the poster room, film room and inspection room.

A feature of the new exchange is the screening room which is a miniature of an up-to-date theatre and equipped with upholstered wicker furniture. A ventilating system keeps the air fresh and clear under all circumstances.

The entire film colony of Toronto have expressed their admiration of the new offices, and First National's employees are justly proud of their new home.

Manager M. O. Allen of the Monarch Theatre, Edmonton, Alberta, and formerly of Calgary, departed his bachelor life a few days ago when he took unto himself a wife, the bride being Miss Esther Bloom, popular young lady of Edmonton.

The projectionists of Calgary, Alberta, staged a big party of their own in the form of a smoker at the Labor Temple on February 4, a large number of theatre enthusiasts being in attendance. Fred White was the chairman of the program of boxing and music, while others who took part included Harry Wilson, G. Brockbank, Max Bishop, Jack Bullough, Andy Davison, Joe Carruthers and Harry Wilson.

For the third time the Bourget Theatre, 1278 Notre Dame Street, Montreal, has had a fire and the latest one, which occurred early on the morning of February 4, gave the Montreal Fire Department a stiff two-hour battle.

Buffalo

AN agreement has been reached under which Russell Garrison will retire as receiver for Brown & Abbott from the Corinthian Theatre in Rochester on March 15. The agreement is expected to end litigation pending for some months.

Chicago

JULIUS LAMM is making his headquarters in Moline for the present, in connection with the opening of his recently acquired New Palace Theatre.

The Chicago Film Board of Trade tendered a farewell dinner to George Dembow and L. A. Rozelle, at the Congress Hotel on Tuesday night. The dinner was followed by a theatre party, after which the crowd which included about thirty-five film men, enjoyed a buffet supper. Mr. Dembow leaves for New York within a few days to become special representative of Fox Film Company, with headquarters in New York City. Mr. Rozelle will be in Chicago at least until March 1st, at which time his resignation as exchange manager of Metro-Goldwyn becomes effective. It is understood Mr. Rozelle will have an interesting announcement to make as to his future connection before the end of the month.

The return of Clyde Eckhardt as district manager of Fox Film Company is a source of general rejoicing to his many exchange and exhibitor friends.

Business Manager Jack Miller of the Exhibitors Association of Chicago has returned from New York City, where he went for a conference with Will H. Hays and Attorney Gabriel Hess, of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

George Collins of Pathe has been promoted from branch booker to salesman and assigned to south side territory. Ted Farrand will fill the position of booker made vacant by Mr. Collins' promotion.

District Manager Fred Aiken of Pathe, is on a swing around the circuit this week.

J. W. MacFarland, newly appointed manager for Associated Exhibitors' "Double I" territory, has arrived in Chicago to assume his new duties.

V. A. Nomakis, owner of the Rex and Wabash Theatres, took over the New Regent at 69th and Halsted Street, from D. J. Chrisis, on February 1st.

Many friends of Dan Broderick, manager of the Palace Theatre at 18th and Halsted Streets, will be sorry to learn of his death, which occurred on February 14th. A sudden attack of pneumonia was the cause.

Cleveland

C. A. Young is remodeling his State theatre, Napoleon, Ohio. A thoroughly modern house as to equipment, Young has put in a new indirect lighting system, has redecorated, has arranged hanging baskets containing flowers and has brightened up the place a lot. The State is a 350 seat house, and is operated every night.

Joseph Tittl, a newcomer to the ranks of exhibitors, has just taken over the Park View theatre, 93d St. and Kinsman Rd., from Joseph Fink. The Park View is an attractive neighborhood house and has 300 seats.

Nat Barach was back in the city last week. Barach, has been real estate in Florida for the past six months.

Robert Cotton, division manager for Producers Distributing Corporation, is laid up with lumbago.

Oscar Ruby, manager of the local Pathe exchange, has just returned from his annual visit in the Pathe home office.

The heavy snows have not kept the out-of-town exhibitors away from the distribution centers. Among those who registered in the Film Exchange Bldg. last week were Arthur Denlevy, Strand theatre, Akron; G. M. Jordan, Grand, Newcomerstown; H. C. Williams, Rex and Norka theatres, Akron; Paul Mueller, Palace, Ashtabula; August Ilg, Ohio, Lorain; Charles Mack, Strand, Sebring; Mrs. Mildred Chenderlin, the new owner of the Majestic theatre, Fostoria; and Vincent Czajkowski, the new manager of the Strand theatre, Newton Falls.

The Astor theatre, in Firestone Park, Akron, has come to life again. Harry C. Williams has taken it over, is redecorating it and has renamed it the Rex.

Robert Courson has taken over the proprietorship of the Pastime theatre in Akron. Mike Ratoff was formerly the owner.

The Royal theatre in Akron has re-opened. O. F. Baker, formerly with Allen Simmons of the Allen theatre, is the new manager. John Wolf had it previously.

Once again has the Standard theatre, Cuyahoga Falls, changed hands. P. M. Tracy, the former owner, has sold it to Messrs. Bales and Foldvary.

Des Moines

A. H. BLANK left Saturday for Omaha in order to oversee plans for the construction of a new theatre at Omaha.

Sam Costen of the Eastern Iowa Theatres Company was in Des Moines visiting the exchanges and announced that negotiations have been completed for the taking over of the Gem Theatre at Oelwein. Ted Bryant, who sold the Oelwein house to the theatre company, will remain as manager of the Gem Theatre. The house will be redecorated by the new management and new equipment will be put in.

A lease which holds for two more years is held by B. I. Van Dyke of the Royal Theatre, Des Moines. The site of the building which houses the Royal has been discussed for the location of a new theatre to be built by Alexander Frank of Waterloo who is backed by a New York company.

W. E. Banford has been visiting the key towns for Metro-Goldwyn.

A. H. Blank announces that the Majestic Theatre, Des Moines, will be closed in a few weeks in order to undergo some extensive redecorating and changes in construction. Omar Kenyon, who has been managing the Majestic for Mr. Blank on a sort of partnership plan, will remain at the Majestic as manager.

Jovial Bill Eddy of the Empress always has his name in the paper when he comes to town. He was up from Indianola last week.

Lee Moore has bought the Orpheum Theatre at Centerville. The Orpheum was owned by Doc

Fogarty. Mr. Moore will close the theatre for a few weeks in order to do some redecorating. He is also owner of the Majestic Theatre at Centerville.

Joe Stack of the theatre at Carroll has bought new low intensity arcs for his projection booth.

Frank Shipley, manager of the Rialto Theatre, which closed February 14, will leave Des Moines for a tour of the south before he settles down to his next position.

Atlanta

HARRY FOREMAN, traveling auditor for Film Booking Offices, came in town the early part of this week.

L. Balafos, well known exhibitor of Milledgeville, Ga., spent several days this week in Atlanta booking pictures. He expects to leave for Europe very soon to visit his home in Greece.

C. L. Peavey, manager of the local F. B. O. exchange, returned to Atlanta Friday.

Ernest Morrison, formerly of district representative for Producers Distributing Corporation in Charlotte, has resigned from that position.

Jack Elwell, manager for Liberty's Atlanta exchange, returned to the city last Tuesday.

G. N. Meacham, member of the Office force of P. D. C., is receiving the sympathy of friends for the loss of his father, who died in Atlanta last Sunday.

J. H. Butner, manager of Educational's Atlanta exchange, returned last Thursday from an extended trip through Florida.

Rufus Davis, manager of Liberty's Charlotte exchange, arrived in town last Friday.

Harry Pearce, sales representative in the Alabama territory for Educational, left Atlanta Thursday for an extended sales trip.

R. G. Matthews has been added to the sales force of Pathe in the Tennessee and Alabama territory and will handle the two-reel comedy product.

W. L. Loudy has joined the sales force of Liberty's Atlanta office.

W. J. MORGAN, general sales manager of the Producers' Distributing Corporation, together with Les Weir, Western district manager, and Donald Smith, assistant district manager, visited Manager William H. Drummon's local Producers' exchange last week.

Wesley Sornberger, owner and manager of the Wrangell Theatre, of Wrangell, Alaska, spent the last week in this city.

Jack Rue, former manager of the Portland office of Producers' Distributing Corporation, was a recent visitor in Seattle.

Manager Fred G. Sliter of the First National exchange, last week announced the resignation of Harold Boehme, associated with that office in a sales capacity for several seasons.

Mack J. Davis, a former owner of the Mack Theatre in Port Angeles, last week announced the sale of his house to E. A. Halberg, owner and operator of the Lincoln Theatre in that town, and the new Liberty Theatre in Mt. Vernon.

L. J. Schlaifer, Western district manager for Universal, and former manager of the local office, spent several days here recently on a visit to Manager Reilly's exchange.

Will Starky, general manager of the Will Starkey Amusement Enterprises of Spokane, spent several days here recently.

Reports that Eddie Rivers of the Strand Theatre in Walla Walla had purchased the Colonial Theatre in Eugene, Oregon, were declared erroneous when Mr. Rivers advised that negotiations with Mrs. Laura Payne, the owner of the Colonial, had fallen through.

Joe Bradt, prominent suburban and neighborhood theatre operator of this city, who last week sold his Good Luck Theatre to Mrs. S. Z. Williams, is reported to have purchased the Roycroft Theatre at Nineteenth Avenue and Roy Street from John Danz.

J. N. Randolph, sales representative of Manager Carl Stearns' local Warner Brothers exchange, last week was transferred to the same company's office in San Francisco.

Maurice Oppenheimer, owner and manager of the Hippodrome Theatre in Spokane, last week closed that house indefinitely.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors seen on Film Row during the last week there were George Purvis of the Longview Theatre at Longview, Washington, and A. C. Gwynn of the Jensen-VonHerberg Theatres in Olympia.

P. E. Irving, manager of the Madrona Garden Theatre for the Pacific Theatres Company, last week was held by an armed automobile bandit and was relieved of his satchel containing the day's receipts, but by quick work and sheer nerve recovered the money. As the bandit hopped into his car and started off Mr. Irving jumped onto the running board, snatched away the satchel from the seat beside the driver, and fled around the corner, leaving the bewildered bandit driving down the street.

Seth D. Perkins, recently appointed assistant to Dave Bershon in the Intermountain territory, announced that he had been awarded the management of this Intermountain district, and would supervise the Denver and Salt Lake City exchanges, with headquarters in the former city.

Omaha

HERBERT BLUECHEL has purchased the lease of the Dundee theatre, Fiftieth and Dodge streets, recently erected by A. R. Hanson. Mr. Bluechel, who for 12 years has operated theatres at St. Louis, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Norfolk and other Nebraska cities, is expected to accumulate a string of theatres here.

The Nebraska Theatres Corporation has acquired the Rex and the Palm houses. The corporation, the owners of which are Sam and Louis Epstein and the World Realty Company, already own the Roseland and Orpheum in South Omaha and other theatres.

The Tivoli theatre at Bartley, Nebr., has been bought by W. R. Daniel. The former owner was J. W. Arbogast.

There is a possibility that the new theatre planned by the World Realty Company at Sixteenth and Douglas streets may be a skyscraper to house a modern hotel as well as the theatre.

The Hostettler Amusement Company has increased the capacity of the theatre to be erected at Grand Island, Nebr., from 1,300 to 1,400. John Ebersson has been called in as a new architect.

D. APPLETON AND COMPANY, 35 W. 32nd St. New York City

Albany

HAROLD FILKINS, a former salesman for Merit and F. B. O. in this city, recently passed away following an illness of many weeks. Mr. Filkins was thirty-two years of age, and leaves a wife and one small child. Floral tributes were sent by the Albany Film Board of Trade.

Visitors along Film Row during the past week included William Smalley, of Cooperstown; Lou Benton, of Mechanicville; Len Garvey, of Clinton; Gene Thornton, of Saugerties, and Morris Silverman of Schenectady.

Carl Schwarzwaelder, who runs the social hall at Chichester, gave a special show a week or so ago for the Knights of Pythias.

Herman Vineberg, who handles the Albany and Regent, was in New York during the past week. Nate Robins, of Utica, also visited the big city. The Schine brothers, of Gloversville have returned home after attending the Naked Truth dinner.

George Ames, Pathe manager, was burned out of his apartment during the fire in the Calvary Baptist Church.

Uly S. Hill, manager of the Strand group of houses in Albany and Troy, was in conference last week with Walter Hays, of Buffalo.

The Chestertown Theatre operated by H. Richardson, has just been taken over by Doctor Swan, of that village. The Rialto, in Schenectady, which has been operated by Mike Freedman, was acquired last week by Louis Cappa, who runs Dreamland in Albany.

A benefit was staged last Sunday at the Photoplay Theatre in Keeseville, owned and operated by Peter Gordon, for replacing a bell in the French Catholic church recently destroyed by fire.

Frank Breymaier, manager of the Van Curler in Schenectady, is busy these days in handling all of the newspaper and other publicity of the entire Farash circuit. Mr. Breymaier is also looking after affairs at the Barcl.

The Knights of Columbus of Glens Falls gave a minstrel show at the Rialto Theatre last week. The theatre is operated by William Benton.

C. H. Travis, projectionist at the Barcl in Schenectady, was honored last week by being selected as president of the W. W. Farley Association at a recent meeting at the State Theatre. James Carney was named as vice-president; Joseph Genre, secretary, and Mrs. Helen Heffernan, treasurer.

Although Frank Learnan was a newcomer in the business a few months ago, he is showing great aptitude these days as manager of the Strand Theatre in Schenectady.

When times are bad in Schenectady at the big industrial plants, Miss Betty Feuer, owner of the Crescent Theatre, continues to play to capacity houses, as her admission price is ten cents.

Joe Raymond, who runs the State Theatre in Utica, has a cat which strolls around the house. The cat is known to all the exchange boys.

Claude Fish, running the American Theatre in Schenectady, was busy last week in welcoming the exalted ruler of the Elks and attending a big Masonic gathering in Albany.

One of the cosiest little theatres in the Mohawk Valley is located in Frankfort and run by George Loomis, who has spent considerable money lately in the way of improvements.

James Roach, manager of the Farley houses in Schenectady, makes the rounds of the theatres each night, in order to keep in close touch with the managers.

So long as Alec Sayles is manager of the Leland in Albany, and judging from the manner in which he is handling the house, he will be there as long as he desires.

Edward Hochstim, former salesman for F. B. O. here, received a telephone message from his brother one day last week to the effect that a son had arrived at the Hochstim home in Hudson. The father runs the Star in Hudson.

It now looks as though the theatre being erected by John Augello in Utica will be in shape to open around Eastertime.

Milwaukee

THE Arcade Theatre on Upper Third Street, was seriously threatened by fire last week, when adjoining property was totally destroyed. No damage was reported by the theatre management.

"Benny" Bennie of the Menominee Theatre at Menominee, Mich., spent a part of the past week on Milwaukee's film row.

A. J. Cooper, who operates the Casino and Strand theatres at La Crosse, the Unique at Tona and the Belle at Sparta, and expects to open his new State Theatre in La Crosse, figured in no less than four motor accidents within the past four weeks.

Steve Dorace was in Milwaukee last week to tell of the successful opening of his new Douglas Theatre at Racine, Wis., last Saturday. Dorace also owns the Star Theatre at Racine.

Sam Therion of the Bijou Theatre, Green Bay, Wis., paid his periodical respects at the Milwaukee exchange offices during the past week.

Miss Barbara Gardner, of the Milwaukee office of Progress Pictures, has resigned to join the force of Metro-Goldwyn.

Walter C. Blaney of the Midwest Distributing Corporation and John B. DeLorenzo of Progress Pictures were recently snowbound in the village of Millston, Wis.

Danny Ryan, well known film salesman in the Wisconsin territory, has left Celebrated Players to join the sales force of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Cress E. Smith, general sales-manager for the Mid-west division of United Artists, and C. C. Walis, general manager of the Chicago territory, spent Tuesday in Milwaukee conferring with Lyman L. Ballard.

Sam Pylet has announced the breaking of ground for his new theatre in the fashionable suburb of Shorewood, the northernmost extremity of Milwaukee's gold coast. Pylet was formerly manager of the Hollywood Theatre.

Lyman L. Ballard, for the past six years representative of United Artists in the Chicago territory, and for the past four years head-quartering in Milwaukee, is back in the fold again after a brief sojourn in Omaha, Neb., as manager of that branch.

Henry Goldman, owner of the Colonial and Grand Theatres at Green Bay, Wis., has been spending considerable time in Milwaukee lately. It is rumored that a deal for the sale of his interests in the northern city is pending but no definite statement could be obtained.

Harry Hatfield, who operates the Strand Theatre at Green Bay, was in the city recently. Besides visiting at the exchanges, he made arrangements regarding a home talent production he intends to put on in the near future.

Joe Cullen, well known here as a former manager of the Jackson Theatre and head of the Lobby Display Company, plans soon to open the new Studio Theatre on the East Side. The house will have 600 seats and will be thoroughly modern and high class in every respect.

F. M. DeLorenzo, manager of the local branch of the Producers Distributing Corporation is sporting a new Willys-Overland.

George Huebner, manager of the Crystal and Strand Theatres at Oconomowoc, Wis., visited at Milwaukee during the past week.

Another Oconomowoc visitor was Mrs. "Colonel" Welsh, whose husband operates the Iris Theatre in Milwaukee, but resides in Oconomowoc.

L. H. Guhl, former owner of the Pastime Theatre at Delavan, Wis., is travelling for the Ludwig Film Exchange, specializing on Chadwick productions.

New England

THE Pathe exchange is making extensive improvements to the projection room and is installing a complete new ventilating system.

It's little to ask for, but it's the only reliable aid you can give your musicians to help put the picture over Manager Harry Campbell of the Fox exchange, Boston, is making his semi-annual trip over the New England territory.

Miss Bertha Robbins of the Boston exchange of Independent Films, Inc., was tendered a shower by the entire staff Saturday in honor of her approaching marriage to E. Levine of New York City on March 7. Harry Rogovern, salesman covering Western Massachusetts, is soon to be married and Saul Simons, advertising man of the same exchange will become a benedict a few weeks later, Miss Helen Mailen being the prospective bride.

D. O. Shepard is in charge of Associated Exhibitors' New Haven, Conn., office, succeeding Harry Eskine, now special representative with the home office.

Austin McDonald has been appointed cashier of the Warner Brothers Boston office.

Mrs. Mary McGlue of Boston has acquired the Olympia Theatre at Bristol, R. I., formerly owned by Joseph Mulford. Meyer Shapiro, who was booker under Mr. Mulford, will remain in that capacity under the new ownership.

Harry S. Brown, formerly manager of the Pittsburgh office of Associated Exhibitors, has been transferred to take charge of the Boston office.

Roger J. Mahan has been made manager of the Pathe office at New Haven, Conn.

Minneapolis

PLANs for a new theatre at Berlin, Wis., are said to have been abandoned by Stoddard Brothers since Ed Starkey of the Opera House has obtained control of the city's two theatres.

A pretty building race is promised in Aberdeen, S. D., where Finkelstein & Ruben and the Walker Amusement company both plan new theatres. The Walker theatre will be called "The Mecca" and construction will start at once, according to Harry Walker of the company.

Theodore L. Hays, veteran general manager of Finkelstein &

Ruben theatre chain, is on a vacation trip to Bermuda and the Bahama Islands.

Harold Finkelstein of the F. & R. organization, is on his honeymoon in Cuba.

Ray Peterson has gone to the vaudeville department of Finkelstein & Ruben to participate in the expansion of that department. His place in the advertising department is being taken by Victor O'Brien of the Minneapolis Journal.

A combination theatre to seat 800 is planned at Rice Lake, Wis., by George E. Miner, owner of the Majestic, who also proposes a new house at Spooner.

The Scenic Theatre, Elkton, S. D., formerly owned by Henry Wiecks has been bought by R. H. Pfhangston.

The Orpheum Theatre of Carson, N. D., has been leased by E. A. Holritz.

M. Thiron has leased the Denmark Theatre at Denmark, Wis.

The Opera House at Plainview, Minn., has been taken over by Fred Klampe of Kasson.

C. H. Wise has sold the Bayview theater at Wayzata, Minn., to the I. O. O. F.

Frank Klose is the new cashier at Producers Distributing corporation.

George Cobry, Producers booker, has been succeeded by Joseph Beahen, formerly of Paramount.

B. R. Parsons proposes to build a new theatre at Springfield, Minn., to seat 400. It will be equipped for stage shows.

William Curtis, Peoples' theatre, Redfield, has purchased the Dexter, Ia., Princess at foreclosure sale. V. J. Hudson recently closed the house.

Cincinnati

DON GLENNIE, booker for Warner Brothers in the Cincinnati offices, has accepted the challenge of Frankie Schreiber, booker for Universal, for a bowling match to be held next week.

S. L. Howard, manager of the Metropolitan Theatre, Circleville, O., visited the various film exchanges last week.

A. H. Hesse, manager of the Opera House at Amelia, O., spent several days in the city last week.

W. C. Chesborough, representing the Empire, Royal, Northern and Victor Theatres in Columbus, O., visited film row recently.

The Universal Joy Club traveled over to Charleston last Saturday night and there the members of the club were the guests at a party given them by the Charleston, W. Va., exchange members of the firm at the Kanawha Hotel. Charles Lowenburg rendered a new poem written by Max Margolis of the sales force and also did his usual famous dance.

Al Sugarman, short subjects manager for Universal, spent several days in Cleveland last week.

Lawrence Burns of the Champion Theatre, Columbus, O., visited the local exchanges recently.

John Gregory of the Liberty Theatre, Springfield, O., was another exhibitor to honor the local exchanges with his presence last week.

W. E. Trong, assistant sales manager of the Universal Southern Division, spent several days at the local offices conferring with Fred Strief, the local manager.

Frank Pasker, traveling auditor for Universal, was another visitor.

Ed. Keene of the Oxford Theatre, Oxford, O., bought several college pictures for the students of the Miami University last week.

Among the prominent exhibitors to visit the various film buildings last week were the ever welcome members of the Palace Theatre, Hamilton, O., namely Fred Myers and Harry Silvers.

Associated Exhibitors' Cincinnati branch, under the managership of Otto M. Horwitz, has adopted as their slogan an aphorism recently coined by Manager Horwitz during a sales talk at that busy office.

"Boys," said Mr. Horwitz, "don't wait until your ship comes in—row out to meet it."

That sounded mighty good to the assembled salesmen of the Cincinnati territory and after having their slogan handsomely painted and mounted, it was placed in the administrative offices of the Cincinnati branch, where it serves to identify the spirit of their fast-stepping organization.

Kansas City

A SUITE of three large rooms will be occupied by the Kansas City Film Board of Trade in the new building now under construction at 1715-17 Wyandotte Street. The building will be completed about March 1.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: Blaine Cook, Beatrice, Neb.; J. S. Shortly, Strand,

POWER'S INCANDESCENT EQUIPMENT

GENERAL ELECTRIC PATENTS

Steadiness

The Incandescent Lamp provides a constant source of light and the intensity of illumination on the screen does not change. The intensity of the lamp itself does not vary and it operates in a fixed position always. Continuous uniformity of screen illumination is assured and the possibility of eye strain is reduced to a minimum.

Simplicity

The projectionist has no adjustments to make during operation and after the initial setting no change is necessary during the life of the lamp. This permits the projectionist to give his full attention to the other details of presenting the picture in the most satisfactory manner which is very essential in view of the growing realization that Better Projection Pays.

Cleanliness

The Incandescent Lamp is a hermetically sealed light source and its cleanliness inspires a general cleaner condition in the projection room.

Economy

The 900 Watt Incandescent Lamp compares favorably with the 40 ampere direct current arc and the advantages from an illuminating standpoint are in favor of the former. Assuming an alternating current source of supply the arc requires 60 volts at 50 amperes, and with converter losses, consumes 4 kws. per hour. The Incandescent Lamp (including all losses) requires approximately 1 kw. per hour. The cost of current consumption is therefore cut to about one-fourth.

Utility

The new Incandescent equipment is used most successfully in theatres having a main floor seating capacity up to 1,000 or having up to a 16 ft. picture and a throw of approximately 100 ft. It gives better results than an alternating current arc and is the equal of the direct current arc up to 40 amperes.

Adaptability

The Incandescent lamp operates equally well on alternating or direct current and with equal illumination.

The arc lamp gives a whiter, steadier, more effective light on direct current than on alternating current. Current supplied to theatres is usually alternating and it is therefore necessary to use an expensive motor generator set to convert to direct current.

Reliability

Power's Incandescent equipment represents eight years' development and exacting practical tests in laboratories and theatres. It is therefore offered as a reliable projection device using the Incandescent lamp as the source of light, not only for theatres but also for schools, lodge rooms, community centers and industrial establishments.

IMPROVEMENTS and REFINEMENTS

Moulded Composition Knobs and Handles Thruout, and a New and Superior Vertical Adjustment on the Lamphouse. The slideover Tracks are now Cold Rolled Steel, accurately finished and securely fastened to the top of the base casting.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT EQUIPMENT CONSTRUCTION OPERATION

Popularity of Fiddler's Contests Boon To Picture Theatres

Prove Bigger Attractions Than Professional Acts in Some Towns

THE popularity of "Old Fiddlers" contests has come as a boon to the picture houses, and particularly to the theatres in the smaller towns, where the only practical stunts of showmanship are those which do not involve a great expenditure of money, and where the "local" interest angle of any attraction is at its highest value to the box office.

The "fiddlers," however, have not halted at village and town limits, for the big cities have been invaded by the "Mellie Dunhams" of their locality, and we have reports from theatres in the metropolises telling of tremendous success with an "old fiddlers" contest.

From New England, where the fad had its beginning, the craze for entertainment via the sawing out of old jigs and square dance tunes by old timers has spread to the four corners of the country. And the impetus on which the fad has so rapidly spread may be traced to the enterprise of picture theatre men. For these contests have appeared most opportunely to fill a want for some "added attraction" to give new stimulus to the enthusiasm of the public for the photoplay houses.

Within recent weeks there have been fiddlers' contests at theatres throughout New England; the Finklestein & Ruben theatres in St. Paul; the Strand theatre, Altoona, Pa.; the Whitehurst Theatres in Baltimore; houses in Toledo; the Liberty theatre in Seattle; and among many others the widespread use throughout New York State, where from an original start in Albany the idea has invaded town after town and is supplanting in popular favor, if not entirely eliminating the "amateur nights."

Many of the chain operators in New York State have made remarkably good use of the stunt. The William C. Smalley theatres, for example, are all featuring fiddlers' contests. Smalley operates theatres in Otsego, Herkimer, Montgomery, Madison, Chenango and Delaware counties. The idea has proved so popular that this chain is planning to have the champion fiddlers, as determined by appearance at its houses, for each county meet in a final competition to determine the king of old fiddlers for all four counties.

The contest held at Cooperstown, N. Y., drew tremendous business in spite of cold weather and snow-clogged roads. The stage setting had all the appearance of a real barn and furnished perfect atmosphere for an old fashioned barn dance. The prize awarded was a silver loving cup.

At Fort Plain the fiddlers packed the theatre to the doors and four hundred people were turned away. At this event the list of entrants was so large that another contest must be held in order that all might be given a hearing. At Walton and Delhi the contests also ran up record box office returns for the Smalley theatres.

When the inter-county championship is held there will be offered as prizes a large cash award and an engagement to appear at all the theatres in the Smalley chain. This company, which used "amateur nights" so successfully and made such inroads into the supply of such talent that a special "amateur talent" scout had to be engaged in order to furnish this form of entertainment, now finds that the fiddlers are far out-drawing the amateurs.

The manner in which newspapers have exploited the "old fiddlers" naturally has contributed largely to the increasing interest of the public. Few of the theatres which have staged these contests experienced anything but the heartiest cooperation of the local journals. The idea has been good for page one feature stories in nearly every town and city in which it has been employed, and in many cases the newspapers have exploited the idea so well and thoroughly that there has been little for the showman to do but offer the prize and provide the stage.

In Binghamton, N. Y., for example, the Sun undertook to challenge the newspapers of Utica, N. Y., to an inter-city meet, following the old fiddlers' contest which was staged at the Binghamton Theatre co-incidentally with a similar event in the latter city. The editors of these papers negotiated the competition between the best fiddlers of their respective towns.

H. M. Addison, general manager of the Binghamton theatre, arranged a special "rustic" program for the evening when the fiddlers held forth. A "rube" band and a quartette of locale fame were featured.

Act in Time

THREE months now remain before we can expect summer weather—three months during which exhibitors with foresight will make preparations for combatting their seasonal depression. Perhaps in your opinion this is time enough—and some to spare. But we know differently.

So often have we referred to making preparations for summer depressions that we perhaps too readily assume that our readers follow our thoughts. Therefore, in explanation, let us state that the subject under discussion is air cooling and conditioning—that relatively new phase of showmanship which has made its reputation as a theatre business booster.

As previously stated three months are hardly efficient for making preparations and a thorough study for the installation of air cooling and conditioning equipment. As it must ever be kept in mind that such an installation is costly and, unless of the design best suited for an individual theatre, will fall short of productive results.

We have found that some exhibitors who question the soundness of installing air cooling and conditioning equipment, due to a limited maximum of revenue derivable from their theatre, are guided in making a decision by having an engineering report made. For there are in this country engineers specializing in theatre heating and cooling, who after a thorough study can usually forecast the value of atmospheric conditioning for a theatre.

With the elimination of the necessity of gambling large sums in ascertaining whether or not air conditioning will pay dividends, even greater popularity is in store for manufactured weather. Whether or not you are one of those fortunate exhibitors whose business will show profits next summer depends largely on the advisability of installing this equipment in your theatre—and whether you act in sufficient time.

Gus Edwards' Revue Plays Rivoli

"Garden of Girls" Is Warmly Received By New York Audiences

GUS EDWARDS, head of the Revue, will produce for Publix Theatres Corporation at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, this week. "The Garden of Girls" is the title of the current production, a brisk, tuneful and eye-engaging number in which songs and dances have been expertly blended.

Audiences at the Rivoli found "The Garden of Girls" more sparkling and lively than perhaps any presentation shown to date under the present regime of this Publix theatre. The producer, an experienced and gifted hand at the staging of this type of number, has called upon the "sure fire" tricks in building "The Garden of Girls." The songs cover the range of melodious airs, sentimental ballads and syncopated tunes.

The act opens with a male chorus singing "Every Girl is Like a Beautiful Flower." A garden setting serves as the background for the songs and dances. The old favorite "A Bicycle Built for Two" is sung by the company. This is followed by solo dances. Then there is a "mother" medley, a tenor singing "Mother Machree" for the "carnation" number. Then comes a Scotch song and dance for the "blue bell," with a semi-classical dance by three girls, a Spanish dance, a syncopated dance by a girl in poppy costume to the song "California Here I Come," an Irish interlude, with "My Wild Irish Rose" sung by a tenor with girl, "Mighty Lak A Rose" sung by soprano and contralto, and the finale, in jazz time with the entire company participating.

The number is colorful in its setting and costuming and manages to have considerable visual appeal without getting top-heavy with scenery and trappings. The lyrics were written by Howard Johnson and the settings are by Herman Rosse.

Bernie Orchestra Feature at Mosque, Newark

Ben Bernie and his orchestra were the featured stage attraction at the Mosque theatre in Newark, N. J., last week. Bernie's engagement was from Monday to Friday, inclusive. The featured photoplay was "Soul Mates," with Lupino Lane in "The Fighting Dude" and Hope Hampton in "Marionettes" making up the other screen presentations.

Ballet Presentation for "The Wanderer" at Stanley

An elaborate prologue featuring Hilda Ferguson, former Ziegfeld "Follies" girl with the theatre ballet corps, was staged at the Stanley theatre, Philadelphia, as a presentation for "The Wanderer," offered for the first time at popular prices in that city last week.

Aaronson Heads Jazz Bill at Loew's Aldine

A "jazz week program" was featured at Loew's Aldine, Pittsburgh, last week as a presentation for "Sally, Irene and Mary." The stage numbers were headed by Irving Aaronson and his Commanders.

Prologue for Universal's "The Phantom of the Opera" staged by Jack Arthur, managing director of the Hippodrome, Toronto.

Wolf Makes Debut in "Idea" at Loew's State, L. A.

The West Coast Theatres Presentation at Loew's State, Los Angeles the week of February 6 to 12th, was the debut of Rube Wolf and His Greater Band, in Fanchon and Marco's "Dream Song" idea.

It will be the policy of Rube to introduce a different member in a solo. Another feature of Rube's direction is his use of the cornet in place of his baton. And best of all is his dancing of the Charleston.

As novelties Irma King, late of "All for You" sings and dances. But Nell Kelly, the originator of pep, stops the show.

The setting for the band is a terraced platform with a sloping wall in back of the musicians. For a background there are three scalloped circles of different colors with three great shafts of gold cloth which begin as a line and spread out at the top. A black velvet drop backs this up. It is by far the most novel and effective use of drapes ever designed by Fanchon and Marco.

Girl Trio Presented With "Sally, Irene and Mary"

The 3 Harmony Girls, singers of songs of syncopation, appeared as an added attraction on the stage of the Cameraphone theatre, Pittsburgh, last week in conjunction with the photoplay "Sally, Irene and Mary."

Manager Dick Brown of the Cameraphone theatre announces that the new policy will be a first-run feature picture, comedy and news reel. Also, one or two feature attractions such as jazz bands, small revues, musical acts, etc.

White's Collegians Play Allen in Cleveland

The Allen theatre, Cleveland, offered Allen White's Collegians as the main stage attraction under the new policy of elaborate presentations with feature photoplays last week. The White organization, composed of instrumentalists, dancers and singers, appeared on the bill with "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter," the featured photoplay, and Bernardo De Pace.

Watson in Farewell Week at Rialto, Omaha

Monk Watson completed an extended engagement at the A. H. Blank Rialto Theatre, Omaha, last week. He has been appearing as a featured attraction with Brader's orchestra. Other stage offerings at the Rialto were Henry Dixon, "uke" player, and the Howard Twins, dancers. "The Song and Dance Man" was the main photoplay.

George Billings, Lincoln Impersonator, at Capitol

George Billings, portrayer of the role of "Abraham Lincoln" in the photoplay by the Rocketts, was the featured stage attraction at the Capitol theatre, Des Moines, in an elaborate bill offered there last week.

The program offered "Mannequin" as the main screen presentation; a style show featuring the Parade of the World's Fairest Models, L. Carlos Meier presenting "A Good Time" and Codee & Trigg.

"On South Sea Isles" at Metropolitan, Boston

A varied bill of stage and screen attractions was offered at the Metropolitan theatre, Boston, last week. Featured on the stage were "On the South Sea Isles," with Tandy MacKenzie and Prince Lei Leni; the Six Brown Brothers in a saxophone jam-boree; and Marjorie Dodge, billed as "the great American soprano." Paramount's "The Song and Dance Man" was the feature photoplay.

Music Specialties Staged at Saxe's Wisconsin

Musical specialties of a pretentious make up were presented at Saxe's Wisconsin at Milwaukee, last week. The numbers presented with the featured photoplay, "His Secretary," included Egbert Van Alostyne and his Harmony Boys, selections from "Rigoletto" with Miriam Klein, soprano, and G. Du Franne, tenor, and Sybil Fagan whistler.

In Step with Progress

To satisfy the seating requirements of the modern theatre calls for resources in production, in engineering skill, and in the art of design, such as only years of concentrated industry and experience can give.

In these respects the American Seating Company has, during recent years, kept pace with the rapid strides made by the Amusement industry. Installations, not dreamed of twenty-five and fifty years ago are today "all in the day's work."

Tremont Temple In Boston Bars Films

Was Original First Run In Boston--Debt On Church Liquidated

BOSTON'S original first run motion picture house and a pioneer in the showing of motion pictures in New England will no longer have motion picture programs. Now that the mortgage indebtedness on Tremont Temple has been paid off, trustees of this Baptist house of worship have decided that no more motion picture shows will be given.

History of this liberal Baptist organization dates back to pro-slavery days, when Timothy Gilbert, taking several escaped slaves to sit with him in his church pew, aroused so much dissension in the congregation that he forthwith bought the old Tremont theatre and turned it into a house of worship with free seats. That was the beginning of Tremont Temple. Today it is the largest Protestant church in the whole of New England, not only in membership but in attendance at its Sunday church, Sunday school and allied services.

F. F. Plimpton, manager of the property for the church, determined to develop its commercial possibilities and with the advent of the first moving pictures, secured the assent of the trustees to show them in Tremont Temple. For nineteen years motion pictures have been shown in the auditorium where on Sundays worshippers gathered.

Double Features Saturdays at Schenectady Theatre

Double features are being run each Saturday at the Lincoln Theatre in Schenectady, by Alex Feldman. While Mr. Feldman generally runs a change each day, he has decided to extend some of the larger pictures booked to two days. The house is a residential one and Mr. Feldman is reported to have paid $70,000 for it at the time he took it over from the Farrells.

Anniversary week was celebrated at the Empire Theatre in Glens Falls last week, when two features were given each day by Manager John Garry. The house is owned and operated by C. H. Buckley of Albany.

Free Cloak Room Service Feature at Calgary

Manager John Hazza of the Capitol Theatre, Calgary, Alberta, has provided a free cloak room for all patrons of the theatre during the winter months. The check room is open from 1 p. m. to 11 p. m. daily. This is merely a service convenience arranged by Mr. Hazza to add to the attractiveness of the large house.

Hilda Butsova in Return Engagement at Capitol

Major Edward Bowes has reengaged Hilda Butsova, ballerina, to appear in the program surrounding "The Auction Block" at the Capitol this week. Miss Butsova will be remembered as the protegee and understudy of Pavlowa, and the prima ballerina of that company.

The MANAGER'S OFFICE

J. A. McHENRY has returned to New Bedford, Mass., as manager of the Capitol Theatre. S. Bezerofski is now taking active charge of the former Allen & Charette Circuit.

MITCHELL GARFINKLE has been made assistant manager of the Pastime Theatre, Lewistown, Pa., owned and managed by Ike Berney.

J. L. McCURDY has severed his connection with the Hammond Theatres Company, Chicago, to accept a position with the Boston 63rd Street Theatres, in that city. Mr. McCurdy will have supervision of the houses and for the present is making his headquarters at the Buckingham Theatre.

E. T. WATERBURY has been appointed as manager of the Strand Theatre, at Shenandoah, succeeding Mr. Taylor, who resigned and has gone to New York City.

JAMES KEOGH, who a few months ago left the Saxe organization to become general manager of the Silliman chain of neighborhood houses in Milwaukee, has again felt the urge to change his field of endeavors, and has gone to New York, where he is understood to be negotiating for a responsible position. He has been in Milwaukee for a total of nine years, and was one of the best known figures among the exhibitors of the city and state.

JOE O'NEILL has been appointed to manage the new 125th Street Theatre, New York City. He formerly managed the Keeney Theatre in Brooklyn.

JACK BLINDERMAN is now managing the Regun Theatre, New York. Blinderman succeeds Dave Lustig, who recently resigned as manager of the Regun.

ED COLE, well known in Cleveland film circles, has been appointed manager of the Garden Theatre. This is one of the newest picture houses in the chain operated by the Ohio Amusement Company. Cole formerly managed the Lorain Fulton, also belonging to the same circuit.

Local Boys and Girls in Lockport Presentation

When he presented "The American Venus," at the Palace Theatre in Lockport last week, Manager George T. Cruzen arranged with Miss Elmore Wicker to present thirty-five Lockport boys and girls in an elaborate prologue of Beach Pajama Girls and Boardwalk Boys. He also held a contest to find Lockport's "American Venus." The show attracted much attention as well as received a lot of word of mouth advertising.

Repeats "Jazz" Program at Regent, Harrisburg

The "Jazz Week" that was put on at Loew's Regent Theatre, Harrisburg, early in January, went over so big that Manager Russell A. Bovim repeated the experiment the week of February 15. The feature of the second jazz program was the Mae Murray film, "The Masked Bride."

Ushers Signal Board Installed at Shea's Records Location of Vacant Seats

THE last word in ushering has been installed in the new Shea, Buffalo. This consists of a flash-board which is just inside the main entrance and shows at all times just how many available seats there are in the theatre and in what section they are located. The boys in the theatre report to those who have charge at the aisles. The boys at the aisles have electric push-button boards. They flash to the main board what seats are available. The patrons as they come in may then be directed to the particular aisle on the main floor where seats are available, or to the mezzanine or balcony floors as the case may be. At all times the floor director inside the entrance knows just where the seats are. Crowds are continuing to flock to the new house to look over its magnificence, to enjoy its entertainment and to listen to the splendid music.

Managers' Conference Held by Blank in Des Moines

A conference of the managers of the larger theatres of the A. H. Blank chain in Iowa was held at Mr. Blank's office in the Iowa Building on February 11. The managers were invited by Mr. Blank to come to Des Moines to discuss matters of mutual interest to the managers, means of publicity and presentation, and in general to exchange ideas and profit by a little get-together.

The managers present were Homer Gill of the Princess at Sioux City, H. B. Wallace of the Rialto at Omaha, R. Cummings of the Fort Armstrong at Rock Island, J. D. Howard of the Broadway Theatre at Council Bluffs and N. L. Overman of the Capitol Theatre, Davenport.

Specifies Essentials for 100 Per cent Usher

Miss Irene Smith was the winner of the recent contest among the Eastman, Rochester, ushers, inaugurated by House Manager John J. O'Neill. The subject was "The Duties of an Usher." Essays which received honorable mention were submitted by Louise DeMatteis, Winifred Van Roo, Ruth Hampton, Eleanor Dylewski and Ida Wisnower. In her winning essay, Miss Smith said: "The duties of an usher are not difficult. Merely combine three very simple essentials, courtesy, service and ordinary intelligence, and you have the 100 per cent. usher."

Novel Costumes Feature Strand Charleston

As an original angle on the popular Charleston contests, Manager Al Finkelstein of the Strand Theatre, Seattle, recently presented an International Charleston contest, in which the costumed contestants demonstrated the manner in which this latest dance craze would be exhibited in various European and Asiatic centers.

Inquiries and Comments

Perspective Part IV

HE appearance of an object changes with the position from which it is viewed. This is an obvious fact and requires no explanation. Yet it is strange to observe that when photographs of objects are taken the distance from these photographs are later often viewed is at a distance very much different from that at which the picture was originally taken.

The result can only be that a picture is seen different from that originally seen by the camera. This accounts, in some measure, for the unnatural appearance of many pictures.

This error, and its correction is described by Mr. Young in his paper on "Perspective" which appeared in the Photographic Journal (English) parts of which we are reprinting in the hope that some phases of this important subject may be made clearer.

Distortion of Picture

Once realize that the appearance changes with the change of view-point and the effect will continually thrust itself to notice in a surprising way, like the hidden forms in a puzzle-picture when they finally have been detected.

It may be said that the effect of moving the picture directly towards or away from the eye is to shut up or open the apparent screen in a concertina fashion proportionately to the change in position of the eye; this is the cause of the well known "distortions," which are commonly attributed to the use of a short-focus lens on the one hand or a telephoto lens on the other. A picture held in the hand is viewed usually at a distance of 10 inches to 12 inches.

Taking the latter figure the effect is to exaggerate apparent distances "into the picture" four times if a 3-inch lens was used, and to diminish them to one-quarter if a telephoto lens was used with an equivalent focal length of 48 inches. By enlarging four times in the first case and reducing in the second, this effect could be eliminated.

This distortion, due to change of position, is constantly lumped together with wide-angle distortion proper, under some such term as "wide angleism." What wonder that perspective seems to be the sport of capricious chance.

It is really somewhat curious that this part of the subject has not received more attention, seeing that some of the consequent phenomena are well known, e.g., the way in which the eyes of a person—looking straight out of the picture—appear to follow the spectator wherever he moves; the way in which the reflection of the sun or moon on water, which is rightly shown as a vertical band directly below the luminary, always appears, as in nature, to stretch from the horizon directly towards the spectator, etc.

Distortion from Plate Position

As brought out in last week's article, the position of the photographic plate with reference to the object being photographed is of the utmost importance.

As an example, consider the sketch in Fig. 1 where ABCD represents a rectangular object such as the base of a pedestal. Point O marks the position of the camera lens; CA and C'A', the position in which the photographic plate is placed for taking a picture of the pedestal.

It will be readily evident that two entirely different photographs will result since, with the plate in position CA, point C on the plate will be the image of point C on the rectangle; point A will be the image of point A on the rectangle, etc.

When the plate is placed in position C'A' the same points are imaged but in an altogether different fashion.

The result is really the same as that found in a "keystone" effect on a motion picture screen when the projection angle is heavy.

Position for Viewing Pictures

The correct distance for viewing the finished photograph is also of importance. This distance can be easily formed from the rule that it must bear the same ratio to the distance from which the photo was taken as any dimension in the picture bears to the real dimension. The length of the face in the pictures of the bust shown in Fig. 2, is about one inch, the length of an ordinary face is about nine inches.

The correct distances for viewing are then:

For 3 ft. 6 in. (42 in.) photo: $42 \times 1 \div 9 =$ about 4 2/3 inches.

For 7 ft. 6 in. (90 in.) photo: $90 \times 1 \div 9 =$ 10 inches.

In these photographs, the left hand one was taken at 3 ft. 6 in. and the right hand one at 7 ft. 6 in. The distance from ear to ear is the same in each case.

Of course the face is a rather complicated object, and the apparent modelling depends on many factors, such as lighting effects, etc.: still it is a fact easily verified that in many cases fake effects are produced by failing to view the photograph from the right position, i. e., under the same angle as the face before the lens.

Effect of Viewing Position

First it will be noticed that the lens have been so placed that at the longer distance (7 ft. 6 in.) the tops of the ears appear higher relatively, to the eyes than in the other case. This factor alone contributes greatly to the difference in appearance, and it would be equally in evidence, even to binocular vision.

Again, the perspective of the face, as if every other object, is altered considerably by changing the distance from which it is viewed; e.g., assuming the front of the face to be about four inches more forward than the tips of the ears, its length is exaggerated approximately as follows, as compared with the breadth between the ears, viz:

At 3 ft. 6 in. (42 in.) $\frac{42 \times 100}{4} =$ say 9 1/2%

At 7 ft. 6 in. (90 in.) $\frac{90 \times 100}{4} =$ say 4 1/2%

With a wide lens, or with binocular vision, these figures will need some correction, but still there will, in any case, remain an important residual effect under his head.

A full investigation would involve inquiry into the exact position of the lens, relative to the bust.

Schine to Rebuild Strand at Salamanca, N. Y.

The Schine Theatrical corporation will build a bigger and better theatre on the site of the Strand which was destroyed by fire in Salamanca, N. Y., the other day. Plans under consideration, according to Manager W. L. Trass, call for a three story building of steel and concrete, providing for a 1,500 seat theatre on the first floor and a dance hall on the second. The theatre proposed would be twice as large as the Andrews theatre in Salamanca, also controlled by the Schine interests. It is expected that the Andrews theatre will be closed when the new house is opened to the public.

Announce Two Theatres for South Florida

Two more theatres have been announced for Florida. J. G. Attanasio is building a new house in La Belle, the little South Florida city. Attanasio says La Belle is growing so rapidly that he believes it will support another theatre. The new house will be called the Columbia and will be ready early in the year.

Will Stringer had a large building in Avon Park. There was no negro theatre in that city, so he is re-modeling and making a theatre of his building which will be given over to negro patronage only. His house will bear his name and will be open for business in about two weeks.

Station W. J. R. Uses Marr & Colton Organ

Starting in January, Reginald E. Webb, the well-known organist of the Martha Washington Theatre at Hamtrank, Michigan, has broadcast an organ concert every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday.

Webb has broadcast directly from the Martha Washington Theatre through Station WJR at Detroit—playing the new 3-manual Marr & Colton organ recently installed in this theatre.

Webb was born and raised in Orillia, Canada, and his early instruction on Organ was received from Dr. J. H. Pierce, organist of the Episcopal Church, Orillia, Canada.

In 1915 Webb came to Detroit to take up Theatre Organ work and has been playing and teaching ever since. Webb has successfully trained and placed over one hundred players during the past six years.

Music Collection for Motion Picture Organists

D. Appleton and Company, the well-known music and book publishers, have just issued a collection of standard pipe-organ music designed especially for the use of motion picture organists. This work contains 114 classic, modern, sacred, operatic, march and characteristic compositions arranged for pipe-organ, employing three staves, the pedal bass being written on a separate line.

The American Organist, in a review of the book, says "theatre organists will have an unequalled source of supply, and might be expected to pay double price for having so much available at so little cost." The title of the work is "Standard Organ Pieces the Whole World Plays."

An Amazing Difference!

Pictures that on the average screen are dull, shadowy and tiresome, snap out clear, lively and bright on a Super-Lite Screen.

That is because practically all the light that falls on the silvery surface of a Super-Lite Screen is reflected.

Super-Lite Screens give the equivalent of higher intensity light sources at a fraction of their cost. They are made from fine, sturdy material and last for years.

Theatre Construction Reports Show Greater Activities for Many Sections

THE construction of new theatres goes merrily forward regardless of rumors of over-seating in many large cities. In fact by inspecting the list of new theatre projects that are listed below it will be seen that a large proportion are for big centers of population. And furthermore there are good grounds to believe that this tremendous schedule that is now under way is in a way of being materially increased rather than curtailed. The condensed construction information that follows permits a comprehensive grasp of the trend of building as reported during the last three weeks. It will be noted that there are changes in the amount of activities in various parts of the country over those given in our last survey.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Partners Again"—United Artists, Strand, N. Y.

American: "Those fifty-fifty partners, Abe and Mawruss, take a flyer in automobiles this week. Before they're done, they've experienced the joys and miseries of airplane riding and the Mark Strand audience has chuckled away an afternoon. Henry King, whose tear-inducing production, 'Stella Dallas,' is still at a nearby theatre, went after laughs in 'Potash and Perlmutter,' a Samuel Goldwyn picture. Yet he gives a yank at the heart strings here, too. Funny as are the gags and hilarious as are Montague Glass' titles, it is George Sidney's characterization of that sentimental jackass, Potash, which dominates the film."

Evening World: "Samuel Goldwyn's Potash and Perlmutter films are familiar enough by this time so that it is only necessary to record that 'Partners Again'—With Potash and Perlmutter—is at the Mark Strand. George Sidney and Alexander Carr are the partners, and the rest of the cast is adequate. Henry King directed and got in a full allowance of laugh situations which are bolstered and amplified with Montague Glass subtitles."

World: "In its first two reels 'Partners Again' is as uproarious as any comedy-burlesque film which I have seen in a year. The team, Potash and Perlmutter, played by George Sidney and Alexander Carr, comes out as dealers in automobiles. In the early episodes they are found demonstrating the Schenckmann Six to a family of sceptical but interested prospective buyers. What this car does to and for its owners on that frantic, terrifying ride through Los Angeles, up hill and down and finally into a tombstone yard, where it crashes, is a matter not to be written about but only to be seen."

Journal: "Abe Potash and Mawruss Perlmutter are 'Partners Again' at the Mark Strand this week. This time it's an automobile agency, and every one steps on the gas. The story is a riot, and Montague Glass's sub-titles are worth the price of admission in themselves. The fifty-fifty partners, played by George Sidney and Alexander Carr, try to sell the Schenckmann Six — 'everything makes a noise but the horn.' They demonstrate the car, with Abe taking his wife Rosie along as ballast, and the only thing flat about the scene is one of the tires."

Telegraph: "It is good natured fun, rambling along from one unimportantly humorous situation to another without much thought of the laws of logic. The partners themselves are too well known to need description; in this film they do business at the same old stand in the same old way. They are, of course, the whole cheese—story, supporting characters, everything else in the background."

Herald-Tribune: "Sidney appears as Potash, the sentimental member of the partnership, and Carr is the sardonic Mawruss Perlmutter. With a high degree of pantomimic skill, with unflinching sense of team-work, these two comedians do marvels with their material."

Daily News: "If you like Abe and Mawruss at all, you will like them better than ever in this new chapter of their experiences. It is a hilarious lot of foolishness, with George Sidney and Alexander Carr fitting perfectly into the roles of Potash and Perlmutter. The illusion of the airplane scenes is wonderfully carried out."

Telegram: "It should make money for Samuel Goldwyn and Henry King, it's director; it pleased the audience at the Strand, and it should please more provincial viewers even more, for it is honest, openfaced, unobtrusive comedy, with much of it slapstick."

"What Happened to Jones"—Universal, Colony, N. Y.

Telegram: "Comedy that brings the laughs. Replete with gags. Makes the audience laugh often and loudly. A wow!"

Evening World: "Denny has made himself constantly entertaining. A rollicking bit of foolery. Denny has something about him that makes him enjoyable."

Mirror: "One simply sits back and shouts with amusement. If you like an hour and fifteen minutes of merriment, don't fail to go to the Colony."

World: "Denny has scraped a place for himself high among the meager band of comedians who are gloriously funny. The comic moments dash high upon one another."

Times: "A wild uproarious narrative. Makes one feel as if one were in happy company."

Herald Tribune: "Even we did not realize how tremendously popular he was until we tried to force our way into the Colony. We cheerfully recommend it."

Sun: "A success. The audience laugh. Every bit as funny as 'Charley's Aunt.' Mr. Denny carries it off well."

American: "A rollicking farce. There's snap to this. Something doing every minute. The newest and one of the funniest Denny farces."

Daily News: "A mirth bomb. You're a crab indeed if you aren't amused by it. Extremely comical. A sure cure for the dumps. Audience hilarious."

Telegraph: "A fast firing farce that should riddle any audience, with a rain of hearty laughs. A sure cure for all aches, pains and ailments. Madly merry."

Graphic: "Serves to provoke considerable laughter. Spontaneously funny. You'll like the extremely good-looking star."

"Lady Windermere's Fan"—Warners Forum, L. A.

Examiner: "Lady Windermere's Fan' at the Forum this week brings a new triumph for Lubitsch. With the general release of this picture Miss Rich will become one of the outstanding personalities of the silversheet, while her histrionic standards, too, will be measurably elevated."

Times: "Cleverness! Ultra—Cleverness! 'Lady Windermere's Fan!' The diadem of praise goes to Ernst Lubitsch for making a picture production—that to all intents and purposes is going to prove a surpassing attraction for film-going audiences."

Illustrated News: "It should attract capacity crowds. Unmindful of the rainfall, capacity crowds turned out yesterday at the Forum to pay tribute to Oscar Wilde and Ernst Lubitsch. The production 'Lady Windermere's Fan' is more than another triumph for the Polish director."

Herald: "The subtleness of Oscar Wilde—and the deftness of Ernst Lubitsch; these mark the Forum's offering. 'Lady Windermere's Fan,' which crowded the theatre both Saturday and Sunday for all performances is both a graceful and satisfying performance."

Express: "Capacious as the Forum is, it was impossible for all who wanted to see Lubitsch's new offering to gratify their desire. This is the essence of Lubitsch direction; he trusts his audiences, and the rise to popularity of the Warner Bros. director proves that his confidence should not be lost upon others who make pictures."
